It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

NEWS ITEMS.

In the Training School for Sunday School Workers, held recently at Lake Junaluska, N. C., three hundred and sixty-three persons were enrolled, and ninety-four took credit work. In the awards of Junaluska Certificates of Honor the States were represented as follows: South Carolina, 15; Georgia, 11; Arkansas, 9; Mississippi, 8; Florida, 6; Alabama, 5; Tennessee, 5; Kentucky, 4; North Carolina, 4; Virginia, 4; Louisiana, 2; Oklahoma, 2; West Virginia, 2; Texas, 1.

Dr. E. B. Chappell, Sunday School Editor, left Nashville last week to enter upon his duties at Washington as Chairman of the War Work Commission of the Sunday Schools of America. In response to an appeal from Mr. Herbert C. Hoover, Food Commissioner for the United States, the Sunday School Council and the International Sunday School Association, through their executive committees, have appointed a Joint Commission charged with the duty of securing the co-operation of the Sunday schools of the country in a nation-wide campaign for food conservation. The Commission met in Washington August 1 and, after outlining a general plan, requested Dr. Chappell, who is at present President of the Sunday School Council, to undertake the task of working ont the details and putting the plan into practical operation.

Neglected Wounds Troublesome.

Did you ever notice how a small wound often festers and produces pus? That is a sign that the wound is becoming infected—it is the danger signal of blood poison. Don't neglect small wounds. Slight bruises, skin abrasions, sores, cuts, burns, pin pricks, etc., often cause blood poison which may prove fatal. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately to the affected part. It allays pain, heals the wound and prevents the serious and common after-effects. It has been used almost daily for ninety-six years by a multitude of families. Isn't that enough proof of its merit? Only 25c a box at drug stores. For FREE sample, write W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

HAND TOUCH.

A man fell through the ice into the river one bitter cold day. A fellow-workman came to his assistance with a plank, one end of which was covered with ice. The struggling man grasped it again and again, but every time his hand slipped off. At last he cried, "For God's sake, man, give me the other end of the plank!" I fear many of our so-called efforts for the salvation of men are performed with the icy end of a plank. Put out the other end. Better still, throw the plank away and reach down your hand to these struggling ones, and by the power of grace divine you shall save immortal souls from the icy waters of sin.—The Passion for Souls.

CHOOSING GOD.

A man who might carve statues and paint pictures, spending his life in making mock flowers out of wax and paper, is wise compared with the man who might have God for company and yet shuts God out and lives an empty life.—Phillips Brooks.

To Drive Out Malaria And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 60 cents.

"GO AND DO IT."

If you ever find yourself where you have so many things pressing upon you that you hardly know how to begin, let me tell you a secret. Take hold of the very first thing that comes to hand, you will find the rest all fall into file and follow after, like a company of well-drilled soldiers; and though work may be hard to meet when it charges in a squad, it is easily vanquished when you bring it into line. You may have often seen the anecdote of the man who was asked how he had accomplished so much in his life. "My father taught me," was the reply, "when I had anything to do, to go and do it." There is the secret—the magic word, "now."—Helpful Thoughts.

PATIENCE.

Courage, I dare say to you, and patience. No one ever carried Christ's cross without coming near to Christ himself, and where Christ is, the light is sure to break. No sacrifice you make, no service you render, but is bringing you nearer to the heart of things, for the heart of the universe is love.—John Watson.

Recommended by Doctor Cothram

Dr. T. E. Cothram is a well known pharmacist of Alexis, Ala. And when he gets bilious or needs a purgative medicine, what do you suppose he does? Out of his whole big stock of liver medicine he selects and uses Granger Liver Regulator. He says "There is none better." That's a pretty strong endorsement, don't you think, from a man who knows all about the merits of the different medicines on the market? Granger Liver Regulator is purely vegetable, does not gripe nor irritate the delicate lining of the stomach and bowels and always gives quick and pleasant results. It is the best system purifier known. Your druggist can supply you—25c for large box. Accept no substitute.

I CAN TRUST HIM.

I may be sure of the right road, sure I am on it, and yet be in doubt whether I shall reach the goal. Unto such I commend the words of an old darkey whom I once met. I asked him how long he had been serving the Lord. "Fifty years," he replied. "Well, uncle," I said, "after keeping the faith so long, you must feel pretty confident of holding out to the end?" "Ah, Massa," he replied, "it's only a question of whether de Lord can hold on, and I reckon I can trust him."—P. S. Henson, D. D.

The Root of Skin Troubles

Skin diseases are caused by parasitic germs, and unless these germs are killed your skin trouble will last indefinitely, growing worse each day. These parasitic germs may be killed and without any injurious effect by simply applying Tetterine, a fragrant salve. It is commended highly by the best physicians. Sold by druggists. 50c a box, or by mail from

A HAPPY PASTOR.

There are several things that combine to make this pastor happy just now. Six weeks ago, under the advice of our local physician, I carried my wife to the Baptist Hospital at Jackson, Miss., for an operation for appendicitis. Under the skillful hand of that expert surgeon, Dr. E. H. Galloway, son of our lamented Bishop Galloway, and his untiring attentions afterwards, she was able to return to our parsonage home at Bay Springs, Miss., this week, with a good prospect for a complete recovery in due time.

We recently held a meeting at Louin, in which Rev. J. S. Purcell did the preaching, to the delight and edification of all. The Church was greatly strengthened, and two new members were added to its roll.

On last evening the Bay Springs Epworth League, led by Rev. W. N. Ware, L. P., marched up to the parsonage after the service and proceeded to give the preacher and family a good, sound "pounding." For all these blessings, we give thanks to god.

J. H. GRICE.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER PORTER.

Dear Brother Meek: We have had two good meetings this year: one at Clayton, and the other at Pine Hill. At the former place Brother George Fox, of Waterproof, did the preaching, and the Church was greatly revived. The building there was erected about sixteen years ago during the ministry of Rev. Martin Honeycut, and was damaged by a wind this year, and we hope to repair and paint it and have $61.00 in cash and subscriptions for that purpose.

Brother Bamburg assisted me at Pine Hill, and the meeting will doubtless be remembered for years to come. I have been informed that under the joint ministry of Brothers T. H. McClendon and T. J. Upton, in 1857, the erection of Pine Hill church was begun, being completed in 1858, but it had been abandoned as a regular preaching place when I took charge last year. I wish you could have been with us the last Sunday of the meeting and heard a great sermon on the Church, from the text, "How much owest thou?" At the close of the service, I stated that $100 was needed to pay off the balance due for repairing and painting the church, which had been completed the day before. I asked for it within five minutes, but it may have taken seven before we rounded up with the last dollar and sang the doxology and repaired to an old-time dinner on the ground, or outdoor table. The physical feast was fine, but nothing to compare to the sermon, and song—the Little White Church in the Pine Hills—and the pleasure of that collection to pay for rejuvenating the sacred building.

LAYMEN'S CONVENTION IN ATLANTA.

On invitation of Bishop Candler, a number of representative laymen of our Church met in Atlanta, August 22, to see what had been accomplished at Emory University and to consider the future plans of the institution. The statement issued by these laymen says in part:

"It is time the South had at least one institution as strong financially as any university in America, and we are able to raise Emory to that level.

"The Southern people were never so prosperous, and the Methodists among them own much of the wealth of the South. They are in a position now to give our section a genuine university; and this they should do, not as a mere matter of denominational agrandizement, but rather as a matter of highest obligation to our God and country and the world. The South has borne in the past a great part in the making of this nation, which now affects so mightily all mankind, and in the future it should not be less influential. But it cannot maintain its position nor fulfill its mission without greater institutions of learning than it now has.

"Our section loses much financially because Southern students go in such numbers to universities in other sections of the country. But our want of educational institutions of the highest grade works consequences more damaging than the loss of money. It is both hurtful and humiliating to have our sons and daughters educated away from home, for it tends to the denaturing of our civilization.

"If anything is to be done to protect our section from such a denaturing, it must be done soon.

"Other things can wait, but this great matter cannot be safely postponed. Our people can wait to make more money; they can wait to enjoy more luxuries; they can wait for almost anything else; but this interest must be cared for now or never.

"Steadfastly believing that such an institution as is proposed in Emory University is urgently needed by both our Church and our country, and having seen how much has been accomplished in the last three years, and being convinced that what more is needed is within easy reach, the members of this convention pledge themselves to do all that is in their power to assist the authorities of the institution in carrying to speedy fulfillment the great and wise plans upon which Emory University has been projected; and they call upon all the Methodists and their friends in the region east of the Mississippi to rally to this important enterprise with the most generous liberality and the most ardent zeal.

"We verily believe that the building of Emory University marks the beginning of a new era in the educational history of the South, and that the men and women who help to make it will occupy a high place in the esteem of all the generations of the future. Best of all, they will render a great service to humanity, honor God with their substance, and promote the cause of Christ."

SUNDAY TABERNACLE DEDICATED.

The big tabernacle in which will be held the Los Angeles meetings, under the leadership of Billy Sunday, was dedicated on Sunday, August 26. A chorus of 5000 has been organized and has been drilling for weeks. An army of 1000 personal workers is being trained by experts.

"To meet a really good man for only a few moments is to get a blessing of inestimable value."

"To doubt the final victory of good is to dishonor God."

Skin Diseases

such as Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter, Itch, Acne, etc., are caused by parasites. To properly treat these diseases, you must kill the parasites. Tetterine is extensively prescribed by the best physicians because it kills these parasitic germs, thereby putting an end to skin troubles. It is a fragrant salve and is absolutely harmless. Ask your druggist for it. 50c a box. By mail from

JAPAN.

In magnitude China may be the great mission field, but in urgency Japan comes first. This is due to many different causes: in part, to the more effective social organization of Japan, which makes it possible to influence the whole country more rapidly and more effectively; in part, to the relative strength and independence of the native Church, which has in Japan a power which the Church in China does not possess; but, above all, to the strategic position which Japan holds in the political world both with reference to China and to Korea. Like all the countries of the world, Japan faces a crisis in her political fortunes, and her decision both in questions of domestic and of foreign policy will have momentous consequences not only for Christianity within her own borders, but in the world. Nowhere, in my judgment, is Christian leadership more needed than in Japan today, and nowhere will the next ten years count for more.

In Japan the problem of the missionary is to co-operate with the leaders of the native Church in creating a public sentiment strong enough to affect the life of the nation as a whole. In view of the strength of the anti-Christian influences now at work in Japan, this is a task as important as it is difficult; and it would be unfortunate if the recent emphasis in missionary appeal upon the needs of China—an emphasis not greater than the facts warrant—should obscure even for a moment the equally important, and, as I believe, even more pressing need of Japan.—William Adams Brown, D. D.

RESIGNATION OF MISS MABEL HEAD.

We announce with regret that Miss Mabel Head, Administrative Secretary of Foreign Work, has been compelled to retire from the service of the Woman's Missionary Council. Miss Head has been an official in the Woman's Missionary organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for eleven years, having served as Associate Secretary in the Woman's Home Mission Society and Educational Secretary and Administrative Secretary of Foreign Work in the Woman's Missionary Council. Her retirement from the work will bring real sorrow to the many friends that she has made during her years of efficient service.

Miss Esther Case, who has been for many years a missionary to Mexico and who during her enforced absence from that country has completed a course of study and taken a degree at the George Peabody College for Teachers, in Nashville, is temporarily attending to the affairs of the Foreign Secretary's office.

A TRIBUTE TO MISS RICHARDSON BY MISS BELLE H. BENNETT.

Another great leader in our Israel has fallen. A cablegram from Miss Waters, Secretary of the Woman's Work in the Shanghai District, bears the brief message: "Helen Richardson passed away in Shanghai."

We can know nothing more until the letters come weeks hence telling us the cause of her death, something of the last hours, and of the shock to the missionaries and to the Chinese friends who loved and trusted her as one sent of God to build up a great Christian school and to develop a Christian motherhood for China.

As a young mission school teacher, she gave herself to the work twenty-seven years ago. She overcame the opposition of devoted and dearly loved parents with an unshakable faith in God's call to her for fellowship in service with him in the Orient. Strong in soul, mind, and body, her faith never faltered, nor did her courage fail. China's people became her people, and her God found a channel in her through which he could pour his love and truth into the hearts and lives of these people. For twenty-five years she worked and wrought as the Principal of our McTyeire School, in Shanghai, China, making it the best-known Christian girls' school in that great republic. Now God has taken her; and we, her fellow workers in the homeland, staggered by the loss of one whom we have loved and trusted, can only look upward and with hearts full of grief say: "Lord, who can take her place?"

SAILING OF OUR MISSIONARIES TO AFRICA.

Reservations have been made on the steamship City of Manchester, sailing from New York on August 30, for our three young women who go to Africa. This party includes Misses Kathron Wilson, Etta Lee Woolsey, and Etha Nelis.

Let the prayers of the women of Southern Methodism follow these three consecrated lives that they may arrive safely at their destination and be permitted to labor many years in that part of their Master's vineyard.

THE NEW MEXICO.

Rev. S. G. Inman, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Co-operation in Latin America, who has been making an extended tour in the countries to the south of us writes:

"One notices immediately on getting to Mexico these days that the country is in the hands of a very different class of people from those who ruled it in the old days. The 'intelectuales' are no longer in evidence. The common people are having their day. Will this last? Quien sabe? What will probably happen is that the best of these intelectuales will become more democratic, and in the years to come there will develop a combination of these elements that will make the best and most efficient public servants that Mexico has ever known. This will take time. I only hope that the people of the United States realize the necessity of this time element, of giving the Carranza government strong backing in dealing with the tremendously difficult and multitudinous problems confronting it. Sympathetic understanding on our part will encourage our friends in their long period of reconstruction, which will be as trying for them, no doubt as were our days following the Civil War. Meantime it will help wonderfully to challenge every sensational report about Mexico seen in the newspapers.—Missionary Review of the World.

A PHILANTHROPIC ACT.

We saw a man step out into the street the other day and remove a pebble from the car track. When asked why he did this, he modestly replied that he thought it might jolt some one, and so he ought to remove it. That was true philanthropy. The act was a very small and insignificant one. But there was a big heart behind it. He knew not who would be benefited by it. And perhaps no one would ever know what this man's kindness had saved! Would that there were more like him!—Presbyterian Journal.

WHERE DRUGS FAIL.

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from Shivar Mineral Water. If you suffer from chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer as printed below. His records show that only two in a hundred on the average have reported "no beneficial results." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful spring. Simply sign the following letter:

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. ● It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it."—Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 525 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a pure remedy containing the extractive properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, meets the needs of woman's system at this critical period of her life. Try it.

If there is any symptom in your case which puzzles you, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

MIXATED IRON

The Power behind the Strong Vigorous Iron Men of Today

Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York City physician and medical author says: "There can be no strong, vigorous, iron men nor beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women without Iron—Nuxated Iron taken three times per day after meals will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time in many instances. Avoid the old forms of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach, and thereby do more harm than good. Take only organic iron—Nuxated Iron." It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Field

Pope, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Brother Collins, assisted by Rev. S. L. Pope, closed his meeting here on August 5. Brother Pope preached with such power that seven young men, namely: Mr. Rhew, our depot agent; J. D. Smith, Dink Pratt, Lum Shinn, Chess Robertson, Henry Robertson, Jr., and Clarence Hentz were happily converted and joined the Church. Four others joined by letter. The whole church was wonderfully revived, and we all rejoice that Brother Pope came to us.—Mrs. H. E. Robertson.

Mangham, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed three good revivals. We began our first meeting at Baskin, La., on the second Sunday in July. We borrowed the use of the Baptist Church there. We closed Saturday night and organized a Methodist Church with 15 members.....We then went to Little Creek beginning there on the third Sunday and running until the fourth Sunday at 11 a. m. We began on the fourth Sunday at a. m., at Mangbam and closed on the fifth Sunday night. We had 7 accessions at Little Creek, and 9 at Mangham. Rev. A. C. Searcy, of the West Texas Conference, did all the preaching except four sermons by myself. Brother Searcy is a good preacher and is a splendid help in a revival. He preaches a pure gospel in a clear and convincing way, and the people accept it. He is sound in theology and a very earnest preacher. He did not compromise with sin among the church members, but denounced it in strong terms. He is the easiest preacher to raise money for, we have ever had. All told, I think, we had three good meetings.—R. H. Bamburg. P. C.

Water Valley, Miss., Main Street.

Dear Doctor Meek: The recent revival meeting held at the Main Street Church in Water Valley, Miss., was exceedingly interesting and great beyond ordinary. The number saved were sufficient to awaken commotion in heaven and to produce chagrin on the part of Satan, and a vast deal of good resulted aside from this. The splendid congregations were principally church people, almost everyone of whom was surprisingly benefitted. One lady affirmed, "I am a thousand miles nearer to heaven than when this meeting began;" and a Baptist gentleman said, "I love these Methodist people; you may know, therefore, that I am in a good religious condition." Conversions outright, no doubt, occurred among the people of the membership; and a Main Street layman said, "This meeting is laying the foundations for a great church." Two adult young people were received by profession and baptism, and several were added previously by certicate and baptism. Spontaneous contributions easily met all expenses, and the payments for church purposes by this congregation have been much above common during the year 1917. The other churches were generous and usefully fraternal and the meeting was many times mentioned with appreciation. Kind things too were remarked of the convenient and newly arranged church auditorium. The whole company of the Water Valley people in attendance were greatly pleased with the Rev. E. R. Smoot, pastor at Holly Springs, who assisted in the meeting and did all the preaching after Monday, except as incidentally by others in word and example. His sermons were up to the best from the first unto the finish, and more than once approximated the sublimely captivating and swept all upon the tides of greatest interest and benedictions. The gates of heaven were well-nigh pushed ajar and the impulsive St. Peter element of the congregation were ready to say, "Let us build here three tabernacles." The finest hospitality prevailed and the conditions are encouraging at the Main Street Church.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste products be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver failing to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the action of the liver and the bowels, and with careful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular action.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, constipation and indigestion: Because they do not cause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Because their use does not derange the stomach, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

A DILIGENT WORKER.

Dear Brother Meek: For the past 35 years I have visited the Prison Gate Reform, and I find that there is much to do in this wicked city. What is needed badly is a great revival—one like they had in England many years ago when people came to inquire about the way of salvalton, crying aloud, "What must I do to be saved?" Since I entered the field I have visited the sick and poor and have bought medicine for them; have put mended shoes upon my brother's feet, and have visited the parish prison, going about doing good as the Savior did when he was on the earth. Since my conversion my first thought has been to labor for God and for the salvation of souls. The Lord let me open the Union Gospel Mission at the Keller Market. There I labored 16 years, and souls were converted. I had H. W. Harrison, Hazet Bein, and Robert Wing to assist me, and the Lord blessed the work there. We did slum work: distributed tracts, and started missions in different parts of the city. A Baptist evangelist from the North asked me to assist him in the work. I conscented to go with him for the summer months, and we labored in Texas and other places. During the past 35 years I have labored in 21 places, and the Lord has blessed my work. I wish to state that during the 16 years at Union Mission a young girl was converted there and went to the foreign field to labor for God and for the salvation of souls.

A GREAT INCENTIVE.

"The nearer we are to Christ in both spirit and life, the more we will see things as He sees them. The confident expectation that we shall at last be fully like Him, seeing Him as He is, stirs us to renewed effort to make that approach more complete. 'He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure.'"

Editorial

"No tongue of mortal can express,
No pen can write their blessedness;
He only who hath proved it knows
What bliss from love of Jesus flows."

If doctrines are of little value, why did God give us the written Word? There is no such thing as being led of the Holy Spirit in a way that is contrary to the teachings of the Scriptures. Any such notion is a delusion and a snare.

Nothing is more potent to win men to Christ than a genuine and deep spirituality; and nothing is less so than a mock spirituality that is feigned. There is an instinct in people that enables them to discriminate between the true and the false to a far greater extent than most of us imagine.

The habit of reckless and unguarded speech is a great weakness. The usefulness of many is much impaired by it. Especially does it ill befit a Christian minister. There are few who would not do well to pray the prayer of the Psalmist: "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips."

Dorothy Dix, in a copyrighted article in the secular press, emphatically affirms that if the pathetic loss of girls in American cities is to be stopped, not legislation (though that may help some), but the mothers who rear them, will have to do it. The Nation's biggest problem is that of the home. Yet, strange to say, there are women who seem to think that almost everything else is of more importance than the training of the children whom God has given them.

What are you doing for the Master? You may be assured that there is a work for you—that you can aid in speeding the coming of his glorious Kingdom. Find out how you can best assist the cause in your community, and set your hand faithfully to the task. Don't be a "slacker." And remember that it is in the deeper spiritual ministries that enlistments are most needed. In nearly every congregation there are dozens who will work in a bazaar or in some other material form of service, to one who will really labor to win souls and lead believers into the richer experiences of grace. The scarcity of toilers of this loftier type is the weakness and reproach of the Church in this day.

One of the times of greatest danger in life is when one is stung by defeat and disappointemnt. Men will do things then that they would not have thought of doing before they were upset by such an experience. Examples of this are almost constantly before us. Indeed, the disaffection that comes from failure to achieve what is desired is quite equal to politics in making "strange bed-fellows." We ought to pray for the beaten ones in a struggle in which their feelings were strongly enlisted. Master strategist that he is, satan is quick to seize the opportunities that come to him on such occasions—it is his way to tempt people when they are weakest and most susceptible to his malign influence.

A GREAT CHURCH GATHERING.

The Greek Catholic Church of Russia met in an Ecumenical Congress—the first held in two hundred years—in the city of Moscow on August 31, amid imposing ceremonies. The sessions are being held in the Temple of the Savior, which was built to commemorate the war of liberation against Napoleon, and the members of the body number 500. It is stated that the Congress will continue in session for about two months, "completing its labors before the convocation of the Constituent Assembly," to which body the proposals of the Congress for the future inter-relations of Church and State will be submitted for confirmation." It is thought that the Church will remain established and receive monetary support from the State, while becoming entirely autonomous. It is expected that it will maintain its present priority and official position in relation to the family: that its registration of births, marriages, and deaths will be legally valid, that its divorce decrees will hold good, and that it will consecrate marriage in which only one of the contracting parties is orthodox. There is also talk of re-establishing the all-Russia orthodox Patriarchate, which has been in abeyance since the days of Peter the Great. In view of the extraordinary fact that a new Russia seems to be coming into existence, the future work of this great Church will be watched with a keen interest throughout all Christendom. Let us pray that the Master may bless and guide its communicants in their efforts to usher in a better day in this latest-born of earth's republics.

METHODISM'S DOUBLE DEBT TO MARTIN LUTHER.

In common with all the Protestant Churches of the world, Methodism is indebted to Martin Luther for his brave and noble stand against the corruptions of Roman Catholicism and his effective setting forth of the great truths of Scriptural Christianity. But, besides this, Methodism owes him a special debt, in that it was his enlightening message on the printed page that led John Wesley, groping in the dark, into the blessed experience of a conscious salvation. Rev. Lovick Pierce Winter, in his interesting life "of the mighty monk who shook the world," thus describes this then little noticed but epochal event in Church history:

"On the 24th of May, 1738, John Wesley, almost heartbroken because of a sense of sin, went to a Moravian meeting (in London) late at night. In this little gathering some one, whose name is not recorded, read from Luther's preface to the book of Romans. As the reader read Luther's words about the nature of faith, and its necessity as the only condition of salvation, Wesley listened and wondered; and he tells us his experience in these memorable words: 'I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation; and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death, and I testified openly to all there what I then first felt in my heart.'

"And so the great reformer led the great revivalist to the understanding of the doctrine of justification by faith, and to an experience he himself had obtained two centuries before. And the two, being dead, yet speak. And thus this doctrine, the despair of the Pharisee, the puzzle of the formalist, and the joy of the children of God, was the key that opened the kingdom to Paul the apostle, Luther the reformer, and Wesley the revivalist."

In such an experience did Methodism begin, and by the unceasing multiplication of it can it alone continue to exist in purity and power. This one simple truth is worth more than all the boasted discoveries of the so-called "new theology."

SHALL OUR BISHOPS BE "DISTRICTED?"

Some among us who are given to desiring to trail after the Northern Methodist Church are advocating staking off our territory into episcopal districts and stationing a Bishop at a certain point in each of them, with the understanding that he is to remain for four consecutive years. After having given this question careful thought, we venture to express the hope that nothing of the kind will be done by our General Conference. We are opposed to such an arrangement for the following reasons, briefly stated:

1. The Church does not dictate to any other class of ministers where they shall reside. A pastor is assigned to a charge, but no order is given him as to where he shall live; nor is any given to a presiding elder when he is appointed to a district. The presumption is that these men may be trusted to take up their residence at the places which they adjudge to be best for them and their work. Why should a Bishop be discriminated against and refused this privilege which is accorded to all others?

2. We do not believe that the proposed arrangement is calculated to yield the best results for the Church. Few men are elected to the episcopacy until they are past fifty years of age; and, being as a rule ministers of more than ordinary ability, they have usually acquired in the States in which they reside an influence and a leadership which, in our opinion, are too valuable to throw away. Think of what a loss it would have been to have taken Bishop Galloway from the State of Mississippi and to have put a man unknown to the people of that commonwealth in his place, to remain for only a short time! Or think what a weakening it would be to Methodism in Georgia and to our great University east of the Mississippi River to transplant Bishop Candler to some other field, where likely he could not accomplish anything like as much, and settle a stranger in Atlanta, with no grip upon the country surrounding it.

3. Such an arrangement as that of the Northern Church is in effect violative of the scheme of an ITINERANT general superintendency, since it at

DO YOU EVER THINK?

Do you ever think as the hearse drives by,
That it won't be long till you and I
Will both ride out in the big, plumed hack,
And we'll never, never, never ride back?

Do you ever think, as you strive for gold,
That a dead man's hand can't a dollar hold?
We tug and toil, and pinch and save,
And we'll lose it all when we reach the grave.

Do you ever think as you closely clasp
Your bag of gold with a firmer grasp,
If the hungry hearts of the world were fed,
It might bring peace to your dying bed?

BIBLE GETS COVERED.

A reason for our neglect of the Bible itself is our absorption in the ephemeral literature of the time. We stack our tables with papers and magazines, and litter them with the last novels, which we say we never have time enough to read. And, naturally, the Bible gets covered over with the mass of daily print, and we say still more regretfully that we can not find time to read it. The remedy for this is a simple one. Take time to read the Bible, and let the daily "literature" have the scraps of time. It is the remedy which will be applied whenever we come to a genuine desire to taste the divine Word again.—The Presbyterian.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER'S WORK.

Rev. N. F. Duncan.

The teacher's chief aim and purpose must be to bring every member of his or her class into personal, vital touch with the Lord Jesus Christ, to make clear to each child the way of salvation—so to teach and plead with the children that, at the last, when called to render an account of stewardship, the teacher may not have to bear the responsibility of the loss of any one of the precious souls committed to his or her care in the Sunday school class.....Next to this chief, supreme aim, and in concord with it, let your purpose be to lead the children to a better acquaintance with God's Holy Word. See that they know the way about the Bible. Let them see that you have a deep reverence for it yourself, and that you know its contents. Aim definitely at leading the children to become Bible lovers and Bible students. Be careful to show them that the Bible, in all its parts, points to the Lord Jesus, and how the Blood of the Covenant is the scarlet thread running through the Book of God and uniting it in one great revelation of Divine mercy to sinful man.

LIVING AT OUR BEST.

Rev. F. B. Meyer, D. D.

Do not try to do a great thing; you may waste all your life waiting for the opportunity which may never come. But, since little things are always claiming your attention, do them as they come, from a great motive, for the glory of God, to win His smile of approval, and to do good to men. It is harder to plod on in obscurity, acting thus, than to stand on the high places of the field, within the view of all, and to do deeds of valor at which rival armies stand still to gaze. But no such act goes without the swift recognition and the ultimate recompense of Christ. To fulfill faithfully the duties of your station, to use to the uttermost the gifts of your ministry, to bear chafing annoyances and trivial irritations as martyrs bore the pillory and stake, to find the one noble trait in people that try to molest you, to put the kindest construction on unkind acts and words, to love with the love of God even the unthankful and evil, to be content to be a fountain in the midst of a wild valley of stones, nourishing a few lichens and wild flowers, or, now and again a thirsty sheep, and to do this always; and not for the praise of man, but for the sake of God—this makes a great life.

IS THERE ANY DIFFERENCE.

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

In what respects does the modern saint (or Christian) differ from the saint (or Christian) of the early Christian era? This is not an idle or useless question, I trust, but one of importance and helpful interest. We have an idea advanced by some modern teachers and writers, that there is a difference in the characteristics of the two—the ancient and the modern Christian. Those who hold such views, believe in what they call "progressive Christianity." They hold to that "fad," evolution, borrowed from Darwin and Huxley, who adhered to it concerning the origin of man, and they want to apply the same vagaries to religion. Then they want to place the development of the Christian life along by the side of science and material things.

But is there really any difference in the characteristics of the early and the modern Christian? There is not. The modern, or the Christian of to-day, may know more about science and material things, hut he does not know more about spiritual things. The true Christian of this age, is just like the true Christian of the apostolic age. He has not "progressive" beyond that stage. Ever since the day of Pentecost when the disciples were visited hy and filled with the Holy Spirit in the upper room, where they waited for the promise of the Father, where they were engaged in supplication with one accord and received the enduement of power, the Kingdom of God has been (and will continue to he as long as time shall last) righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." Like its everlasting Author, it is the same "yesterday, to-day, and forever." Thanks he unto God that it is this way, and not after the vagaries and theories of men. We do not have to evolute into the Kingdom, nor be educated into it, but hy a simple act of faith, we are, in an instant, in a moment of time, inducted into this blessed Kingdom, which is "righteousness and peace and joy." It has not "progressed" beyond that. And when you see a modern, true disciple of the Lord, you will see one just like the earlier disciples of the Master. He is traveling the same "good old way" in which our fathers and mothers trod. And he is going to get into the Celestial City the same way that they did. The greatest and most effective revivals we have to-day are where the "old-time gospel" is faithfully preached. The greatest preachers of all ages have heen those who have held to the unadulterated gospel, the simple story of the Cross.

"Faith of our fathers, we will love
Both friend and foe in all our strife,
And preach thee, too, as love knows how
By kindly words and virtuous life.
Faith of our fathers, holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death."

A HISTORIC MEETING.

Bishop W. A. Candler, Chancellor of Emory University, invited a number of laymen—men who have vision—to meet him in the chapel of the Candler School of Theology building on the 22d of last month. This invitation was responded to by nearly two hundred men who love the Church, and who are interested in the university.

Bishop W. B. Murrah conducted the opening service, and he was very felicitious in selecting the Scripture lesson, and equally so were the prayer, and the hymns which were chosen by Bishop Candler. Bishop Candler stated the object of the meeting, and emphasized the fact that he would not take a collection. A committee of fifteen was appointed by Judge McCullough, of South Carolina, who was elected chairman, to draft a report after a thorough investigation of the plan in all its details. This committee spent about two hours looking over the grounds and buildings in order to get a full view of what has been accomplished in a little more than a year in actual construction. Pending the adoption of the report in the afternoon session, many of these choice laymen spoke out of their hearts (and their hearts throbbed with pride) of what they had felt and seen in the magnificent beginning of what Southern Methodism proposes to do in building a great university.

Hon. Asa Candler, Mayor of Atlanta, and president of the Board of Trustees of the University, delivered an address of welcome to this gathering which was frequently applauded because of his large confidence in the Church's doing what needs to be done at this critical time in our history. He spoke with a large view of what can be accomplished when he said that we would not be satisfied until we have builded a university the equal of Oxford, England. The applause was enthusiastic, and those of us who were there confidently expect this big vision to be realized. God grant that it may be so!

Some of the men there, who have large business connections and who have had wide observation in all parts of the world, pronounced the buildings of Emory University the equal of any in all the world for beauty, adequacy, and stability for generations to come.

Those of us who know Bishop Candler, and who appreciate him as our great leader in this enterprise of tremendous possibilities, were happy to see his face so radiant as he spoke of the result, in one particular, of this gathering, which was the profound conviction that came to him that these brethren are to he depended upon for accomplishing what his heart is so absorbed in as to the expectation of the Educational Commission being able to turn over to the General Conference next May a plant that will represent at least five million dollars. This is an achievement to be desired, and one that we may accomplish if we will.

This was an epoch in the progress of our Church which, I feel, will he talked about by our posterity as one that marked the opening up to the leading men of our Church of the greatest opportunity we have ever had to establish Southern Methodism for far greater usefulness than we had ever dreamed of before.

God grant that every hope inspired in the heart of every man from Bishops throughout, including a number of the Commissioners, may be realized in the near future! To me it was one of the great benedictions to my life, and I shall go out to the people with a fuller message of the facts and possibilities of the institution to which I am glad to give my best and largest strength.

Jackson, Miss. ROBT. SELBY.

UNIFICATION AGAIN.

Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

Suppose we get away from the provincial standpoint, and look at the subject from its larger aspect, and in the light that streams upon it from the future. The thing that divided the Methodist Church, North and South, and that will continue to keep us divided in spite of all the Commissioners may do, is not a difference in doctrine, or in polity, or, let us hope, in religious experience. We could agree on all those things. But that which divides us is a fundamental and irreconcilable difference in our policy of dealing with the Negro problem. It is a race problem, and it would be the same thing with us if it were the Chinese or the Malays who were here instead of the Negroes.

This race problem is the greatest problem with which American civilization has to deal. Whoever thinks it has been solved is a profoundly deceived person. The war swept away the institution of slavery, but left the larger question of the Negro's place in America untouched and immensely complicated. We have no precedents to guide us in dealing with this problem. The institution of slavery existed in other countries and was abolished; but the slaves, as a rule, were not people of a different race from those who had been their masters. The fair-complexioned Plato, biggest brained man of his generation, was sold as a slave, and but for the kindness of a friend who bought him and set him free, would have had a ball and chain on his leg delving in the mine in Sicily. Epictetus had nobler blood in his veins than Nero himself, but he was a slave, and was lame for life with a broken leg received from a cruel beating by his master. When slavery was abolished in the Roman Empire there were probably very few Negroes in Europe. The same blood that flowed in the veins of the Russian Emperors ran redder in the veins of the serfs who were liberated. But our Negroes are a different race from the white man. How are we to deal with them? We are all anxious to settle the question right, for if we know anything about such matters, we know it will never be settled in any other way. It may be temporarily laid to rest; but it will not stay quiet until it is settled in accordance with truth and the purpose and plan of Almighty God, who created both the white man and the Negro, and who is "no respecter of persons."

There are two ways of dealing with this problem; one is the way of the Northern Methodist Church and the other the way of the Southern Methodist Church. The way of the Northern Methodist Church is to abolish all distinction between the races and treat the Negro just as we do the white man; admit him to our homes on social equality; entertain him in the same hotels; let him ride in the same cars and sit on the same seat with the white man; let his children attend the same public school with the white children; have the same churches for both to use together. Of course that means intermarriage of whites and blacks, with all the social consequences of miscegenation. That is what the Northern Methodist Church stands for. It is the plain logic of their contention that there is no difference between the white man and the black man but the accident of color. Some of their Bishops have honestly admitted all of this and held that the true solution of the great Negro problem is the mixing of the races. Mr. Carnegie is not a Methodist, but he stands squarely on the Northern side of this question, and he was reported as saying in a speech at Hampton Institute that the only solution of the race problem was intermarriage of the whites and blacks. That is the Northern ideal which now seeks to root itself in the South under a policy called "the unification of Methodism." Let there be no mistake: this is what it means.

The Southern Methodist Church deals with the Negro problem in another way. It holds that the distinction between these races is a real distinction; that the Negro is entitled equally with the white man to justice and fair dealing in all his relations to society, and to the fullest opportunity to do the best possible for himself, and attain to the highest there is in him. It does not concede that the Northern Methodist, or anybody else, feels a deeper or more kindly interest in the welfare of the Negro than the Southern Methodist. But it holds that it is best for the Negro to give him all his rights as a separate race, and keep both the Negro race and the white race pure. So we have separate churches, separate schools, separate hotels, separate cars, and run the principle of separation through the whole system of our social life.

Of course, the Northern Methodist says this policy is the dictate of the old slave sentiment and the prejudice against the Negro because of his alleged inferiority. I am a pretty fair sample of the Southern man, and I declare that I cannot find a trace of such a feeling toward the Negro in my own heart. The policy of our Church in dealing with the Negro had no such ignoble origin in race prejudice; but in an intelligent and deep knowledge of the results of the intermixture of the black and white races, and a profound desire to maintain racial integrity as the condition of race progress. Over against the superficial sentimentality of Northern Methodists on this subject, we set the stern facts of experience. It is a fact which no one but either a fanatic or an ignoramus will challenge that mixing the blood of the white man with the blood of the black man improves the Negro, but deteriorates the white man. It is a question whether we want America to have a pure white race, or become a race of mulattoes. This is the simple issue. Remove the barriers the South has set up between the two races, adopt the Northern Methodist policy of mixing the races on terms of equality in all the relations of life, and that is what you will have. All the European peoples can blend here in America, and to advantage, without the dangers from inbreeding, because they are from a common Aryan stock. And this white race, from the ancient Greeks to the modern Americans, has been the progressive race of the world. Look at the difference between North America and South America. In some respects the natural resources of South America surpass those of North America; but South America is centuries behind North America in progress. There is one universal blight on that fair continent, the blight of mixed blood. The policy of the Northern Methodist Church with regard to the Negro would reproduce the same result here, and to satisfy a lop-sided idea of the "brotherhood of man" sacrifice the splendid future civilization may expect from the continued progress of the white race in all the arts of life.

I must stop this paper here, but I am coming back to the subject next week; for the proposition to unite the Churches involves tremendous issues. Keep the point I have made here clearly in mind: that the policy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in dealing with the Negro as a separate race is best for the future civilization of this continent, and of the whole world.

MISS HELEN LEE RICHARDSON.

(Reprinted from the August number of the China Christian Advocate.)

Miss Helen Lee Richardson, the greatly esteemed principal of the McTyeire Girls' School, Shanghai, was called to higher service on the evening of Thursday, July 19. To most of her friends the news of her death came as a great shock, for few had heard of her illness. On Monday morning she appeared to be in the best of health, and in the family circle of prayer she said she knew not why, but felt constrained to ask for the singing of the hymn, "He giveth his beloved sleep." Before night she was stricken down. At her funeral service Saturday afternoon Miss Olive Lipscomb sang with impressive beauty the hymn Miss Richardson had selected, the words of which were so significant and true.

Miss Richardson was fifty-three years old, a native of Louisiana, and had been for twenty-seven years a member of the China Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Most of that time she had been principal of the McTyeire School which was founded by Miss Haygood. During these years she had touched the lives of many and made an impress on the characters of a generation of Chinese schoolgirls, the blessed influence of which will be felt through other generations.

The funeral services which were held in Moore Memorial Church were conducted by the Rev. W. B. Nance of Soochow University and Pastor Lee Dzongdoen. The services were most beautiful and impressive and the large number of mourning friends, Chinese and foreign, who gathered with the members of the McTyeire School was an eloquent testimony to the esteem in which Miss Richardson was held by those who knew her best. The final services were held in Bubbling Well Cemetery.

The following tribute to the life and work of Miss Richardson is from the pen of one of her associates:

"Thus has passed to higher duties one of the noblest heroines of the mission field: a great-hearted, magnanimous woman, dominated by the divine spirit of self-sacrifice.

"Miss Richardson was born during the close of the Civil War in America. Her heritage from that conflict seems to have been an iron endurance and the capacity for self-sacrifice. One sees this manifested in the heroism of her youth, lived during the reconstruction period of the South in which her father's great fortune suffered the common lot of the Southern planters.

"Having a hunger for knowledge that amounted to a passion, she nevertheless commenced life as a teacher at the age of fifteen, that her younger sisters might obtain the education she coveted in vain.

"Miss Richardson arrived in China in 1890 and has been at McTyeire School helping Miss Haygood lay the foundations, being herself a master-builder. The school stands to-day with its high ideals and relentless standard, the projection of the personalities of these two women. One reason for its success was Miss Richardson's administrative ability; and no detail was ever too small to receive her closest attention. Again, she was remarkable as a financier. It is safe to say that no school in China has been managed with wiser economy.

"The keynote of her whole character was self-sacrifice. She offered herself to God in service for humanity and to-day the memory of her stands before the awakening young womanhood of China as 'The Lady with the Lamp,' making bright the path of service, a type of heroic womanhood."

THE GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

The war of the past three years has stirred, as never before, the evil passions of men. It has bred prejudices and kindled animosities that only a new preaching of the Golden Rule and a new emphasis upon kindness, brotherliness, and humanity can allay. Never was the need of humane education so great. The man who would put a million dollars into the training of the youth of this land in the fundamental principles of justice and kindness to every living creature would deserve a place in the Hall of Fame. To give this humane education to a child should be universally deemed as vital as to teach him to read.

With the ending of this war the United States will doubtless be in a better condition than any other nation to respond to the needs of a suffering world. Our institutions and the causes of our successes will be more widely studied than ever. Humane education in every school would be one of the noblest object lessons to which the attention of visitors from other lands could be called.

Who will give the million dollars? With it we would agree to reach every public school of the land. Humane education means the doom of war. —Our Dumb Animals.

THE SOUTHERN YELL IN FRANCE.

Rev. J. L. Greenway.

"I want to hear the Southern yell in France."
—General Leonard Wood.

They are coming, they are coming from the Southland by the sea;
Worthy sons of noble fathers, men who followed General Lee;
And upon the soil of Europe, 'mid the crash of shot and shell,
They will give the honored slogan, called by men, "the Southern Yell."

Loyal sons have not forgotten why their fathers wore the gray,
And upon the fields of battle bravely fought to win the day;
Faster beats the pulse of Dixie, and their hearts with pride do swell,
When they hear the war-time slogan of their father's Southern yell.

Gone the cause for which they battled; gone the malice and the hate;
Loyal sons of this Republic, for her good their lives they stake;
They have rallied to the banner with a love no tongue can tell,
And the Stars and Stripes are honored with the famous Southern yell.

They will bear the flag of freedom to the sunny plains of France,
And upon the deep, blue ocean with the brave will take their chance;
In the trying hour of danger when the tides of battle swell,
They will cheer each other onward with the old-time Southern yell.

So in the world's great struggle for the freedom of the race,
The loyal sons of Dixie are sure to find their place;
And when the notes of triumph upon the breezes swell,
They'll give the old-time slogan—the famous Southern yell.

Lucedale, Miss.

Church News

Bishop W. A. Candler recently assisted in a revival meeting at Talbotton, Ga.

Dr. W. F. McMurry, our efficient Church Extension Secretary, has lately dedicated several churches in Missouri.

Mr. Thomas B. King, a well known layman of Memphis, Tenn., has been elected Field Agent for the Methodist Hospital of that city. So says the Nashville Christian Advocate.

The Baltimore Methodist quotes Dr. H. M. DuBose as saying: "Evolution is true, but Darwinism is a lapsed philosophy." The proof of evolution has not yet come under our eye.

Pope Benedict's peace message does not seem likely to produce any immediate effect toward stopping the war, but it is bringing him some attention from the heads of governments, and possibly some additional prestige.

Dr. Elmer T. Clark, pastor of Shaw Avenue Church of St. Louis, Mo., is at home again, after spending some weeks in Europe. The St. Louis Christian Advocate says that the British authorities deprived Dr. Clark of his "Diary" before permitting him to embark for the United States.

Bishop J. H. McCoy held the recent session of the Illinois Conference for Bishop Waterhouse. It convened in the town of Odin, where our Church is said to have about 200 members—more than the Methodist Episcopal Church has there. Bishop Waterhouse's many friends will regret to know he is still not strong physically.

Writing from memory last week, we erroneously stated that Dr. W. E. Boggs, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, had died in Texas. It was in Fayetteville, Arkansas, that he passed away on August 24, following a stroke of paralysis received while conducting a union Church service on the preceding Sunday evening.

In an editorial discussing unification, the St. Louis Christian Advocate, which has long been a supporter of it, among other things, says: "We do not believe, or scarcely even hope, that the breach will be healed and the line of separation removed from our divided Israel at this time, or in the near future, but we do rejoice and believe that a more fraternal and considerate spirit is being developed and manifested. * * * And this may be more important than the other."

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate of last week reproduced Judge H. H. White's able article, in which he discussed the propaganda of the so-called Nashville Laymen's Committee. Judge White's utterance has attracted wide attention throughout the Church and has been generally commended. The following papers have spoken out against this movement: The Texas, Wesleyan, Southern, Alabama, Raleigh, and Florida Christian Advocates and the Arkansas Methodist. The Midland Methodist also strongly dissented from the proposal to have laymen in the cabinet. Nearly everywhere this junta is being severely condemned. Though the movement has been on since the first of last March and an effort has been made to use the Laymen's Missionary organization in its interest, only about 200 names have been secured up to this writing. Two hundred signers, out of more than 2,000,000 members, after six months' correspondence throughout the Church, is, we think, a very poor showing.

SEGREGATION OF NEGRO TROOPS OPPOSED.

The following press dispatch is from The New Orleans Item of last Saturday:

"Washington, Sept. 1.—A protest against the segregation or distinctly different treatment of negro troops in training camps was made to President Wilson and Secretary Baker yesterday by a committee of negro and white educators. After the conference at the War Department, it was said that Secretary Baker would shortly make an announcement concerning the treatment of negro soldiers. The negro leaders promised to cooperate in eliminating, as far as possible, danger of race riots near negro concentration camps. They made no definite objection to the movement of negro troops to Northern States, where this danger probably would be lessened, other than to object generally to different training or treatment of the negroes. The committee included Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of New Orleans."

SOUND REASONING.

Dr. Bradfield, of the Texas Christian Advocate, anent a matter somewhat widely discussed in our Church—this, however, is no new thing in American Methodism—says: "Of the limitation of the authority of the Bishops in making appointments, we unhesitatingly say that such a change would destroy our Episcopacy." Dr. Bradfield is correct in that statement, and to reinforce his position he quotes the following from Bishop McKendree—a man who in his day and since with many very intelligent Methodists—understood our form of government. Bishop McKendree said:

Take this prerogative from the Superintendents and there will remain with them no power by which they can oversee the work, or officially manage the administration; and therefore the (General) Conference must in justice release them from their responsibilities as Bishops. * * * But such a change in the government would deprive the General Conference of an important, perhaps an essential, part of their authority, and put it out of their power to enforce and carry our system of rules into effect. This will appear from the peculiar relation between the Bishop and (General) Conference, or the connection between making our rules and enforcing them. The Superintendents are chosen by the General Conference, are the respositories of excutive power, and are held responsible as overseers of the whole Church. By calling upon them, the administration, in every part of the work, may be brought under the inspection and control of the General Conference. But if the power of superintending the work were taken from the Bishops, they must be released from the responsibility; and if they should be released, there would be no person or persons accountable to the General Conference for the administration; and consquently, the connection between making rules and enforcing them would be dissolved. The legislative body would then have no control over the executive, no power to enforce their rules or laws. The several Annual Conferences are under the control of general rules, enforced by responsible Superintendents; so that, if a preacher should depart from the Discipline or doctrine of the Church, it is the Bishop's duty to correct, remove from office, or bring him to trial, according to the Discipline. Should an Annual Conference dissent from the doctrine or Discipline of the Church, the Bishop should enter his protest and bring the case before the ensuing General Conference. Should the Superintendent join with a Conference in such a departure, the next General Conference will call him to an account for it; and by this medium the General Conference takes cognizance of the facts of Annual Conferences; so that while the Superintendents serve as a center of union and harmony among the Annual Conferences, they (i. e., the Annual Conferences) become responsible to, and are brought under the inspection and control of the General Conference. ("Life and Times of William McKendree," pp. 356, 357.)—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

FOLLY OF THE FADS.

Among the fads which promise little is the fad in the teaching profession for radical and striking changes. At the National Teachers' Council, in Chicago, one of the high school professors is reported to have said that the time spent by American youth in the study of grammar is wasted. He said: "A man may be able to parse to the queen's taste, but that won't help him to speak English correctely." There is enough of truth in this to give it a flavor. Parsing will not insure good English, but it will make one intelligent as to what constitutes good English. Here, as elsewhere, the science calls for the art, and the theory for the practice. Both are necessary. To omit either is to weaken the result. The value of parsing is not simply the effect upon correctness of speech; there is a mental discipline, in nimbleness with details, which is of first value all through life. Those who have children to educate have suffered much by worthless innovations and experiments, and when they hear of such statements as this from those who have influence in school work, it causes anxiety and unrest. There is a proper place for all solid improvement. But the human soul is too important to be made the object of experimentation.—The Presbyterian.

EDITORIAL JOTTINGS.

A substance that cannot be chemically dissolved is "insoluble;" a problem that baffles the intelligence is "insolvable." This is a distinction worth noting if a person cares to express himself with precision.

How is this for a figure describing a minister's preaching: "His living word soared with an eagle's flight; he basked in the sun, carried his young ones on his wings, and seized the prey for his Master." This was written concerning the saintly Fletcher, the great vicar of Madeley.

Dr. John A. Kern, of Raudolph-Macon College, has given to the public four excellent books: "The Ministry to the Congregation," "The Idea of the Church," "Christianity as Organized," and "Vision and Power." It is doubtful whether any Southern Methodist has produced four volumes of more merit than these.

There was a time when Church loyalty was considered a virtue. Our benighted fathers even put it in the Discipline that it was the duty of members "to keep our rules, and not mend them;" and they wrote in the order for the reception of new communicants a provision requiring a promise to "support the institutions" of the Church. Let us not be too hard upon the fathers for holding such notions as these. They lived before the day of "world relations" had come and men had begun "to think in terms of continents and planets."

It is quite the fashion nowadays to decry John Fletcher's famous argument to prove human depravity, entitled "An Appeal to Matter of Fact and Common Sense;" but it is rather noticeable that none have set out his points in order and undertaken directly and fully to refute them. There are some things that it is the part of discretion not to come squarely up against, and this well known discussion seems by general consent to have been placed in that category. The trouble with most modern theories of depravity is that they are wholly inadequate to account for the widespread prevalence of evil.

When a thing comes to pass, men not infrequently imagine that they effected it, when in reality the influence of what they did amounted to little or nothing. Judge Wiley P. Harris, the noted Mississippi lawyer, is said to have illustrated this point by telling of a woodpecker that struck a tree with his bill just as the wind blew it down. The rap of the bird, he said, of course had nothing to do with the falling of the tree, but that one could never convince the woodpecker that he did not send it crashing to the ground. We have a number of times recalled this illustration when listening to some brother not noted for modesty recount his achievments.

The talk in some little coteries to the effect that our Bishops are cold and heartless despots going about over the Church unfeelingly afflicting the preachers in their appointments is balderdash. A Bishop can only give the ministers belonging to a Conference such charges as it has in it. And the fact of the case is, 90 per cent or more of the appointments are made by the presiding elders, with the Bishop being only indirectly involved. It would be well for the brethren to remember this when an effort is made to capitalize their disappointments and to stir up a feeling of prejudice against our Chief Pastors. It has been our observation that most of the preachers would prefer to have the Bishop to take a large hand in making the appointments, for the reason that he is usually an outsider and is more apt to have a judicial and impartial mind in weighing matters. There is a feeling in some Conferences that there is need for more, rather than less, episcopal authority.

THE HOUSTON RIOT.

A few days ago a hundred men or more of the regular army, of a regiment stationed at Houston, Texas, "shot up" the town, killing fifteen persons and wounding many more. Two of their own number were killed, making seventeen deaths. They were Negro soldiers. The riot began from some alleged grievance against the city police. The attempt of their officers to control them was futile. This is the second time within a few years that such an occurrence has taken place in Texas. It shows, among other things, that it is a criminal mistake to quarter colored troops in Southern towns, and that when the matter of discipline and self-control is considered, it is very problematical whether there should be colored contingents at all in the army to which the country looks for protection. All who had any part in this case should be dealt with with special rigor, not only because they committed murder and mutined against their own officers, but because they violated a most sacred trust.—Presbyterian Journal (New Orleans).

one stroke stations a Bishop and fixes the principal part of his work for four consecutive years. To be sure, a Bishop may be sent elsewhere to hold Annual Conferences, and another Bishop may come into his area and hold Conferences in it; but under the rule the visiting Bishop has control only for a few weeks preceding and following the time of the Conference session, after which it goes back under the jurisdiction of the resident Bishop. So about five-sixths of his work is determined by his one quadrennial assignment to a district, and is unchangeable. The spirit of our itinerancy is, and has always been, that every man, from the Senior Bishop to the worker in the humbiest mission, should receive his appointment to service in any field ANNUALLY. Thus it will be seen that this Northern scheme strikes a blow at a vital principle of our itinerant system, and might mark the beinning of its destruction. The itinerancy, in its true sense, is already largely gone in the Northern Methodist Church.

3. From our observation of it, we do not believe that the plan of the Methodist Episcopal Church is more effective than ours. if a Bishop is assigned to a far-away field, and his sympathies and interests are somewhere else, he is not apt to remain in it any more than a vigorous and conscientious Bishop would be in his field in our Church. We write this, having been where we could note what takes place under the workings of the plan of the Northern Church. There are also these two important considerations that should not be lost sight of: 1. When a Bishop goes out of his own area to hold Conferences, with only a very brief jurisdiction over them, he does not have sufficient time to familiarize himself with the work to be abie to administer wisely, nor does his leadership have in it the elements of strength that it would if it were known that his supervision would continue for a year, and possibly for a longer time. 2. If a Bishop is a misfit in his district, his jurisdiction must necessarily continue five-sixths of the time for four years. Would it be wise to fasten upon our Church such an inflexible regulation as this? We hardly think so.

4. It is our conviction that we may trust our Bishops to scatter themselves about over the Connection so as to take pretty good care of the interests of the Church. Note, for instance, their places of residence at present: Bishop Hendrix is in Missouri; Bishop Morrison, in Florida; Bishop Candler, in Georgia; Bishop Hoss, in Oklahoma; Bishop Atkins, in Southwestern North Carolina; Bishop Denny, in Virginia; Bishop Kilgo, in West Central North Carolina; Bishop Murrah, in Tennessee; Bishop Lambuth, in California; Bishop Waterhouse, in the Holston Conference (he was in the Far West until the failure of his health); Bishop McCoy, in Alabama; and Bishop Key and Bishop Mouzon, in Texas. This is not by any means a bad showing. True, there are some States without Bishops now, as for instance, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Kentucky; but these had Bishops in the past when some of the States that now have them did not; so, on the whole, the thing evens up pretty well. If a continuity of episcopal service is thought to be needed in any particular field by our College of Bishops, it can be provided for under our system without adopting this quasi-dioccsan plan of the Northern Methodists.

It might be a good thing for some of the brethren who are so much given to depreciating pretty nearly every feature of our system of Church government, and glorifying the governments of other denominations, to meditate for a time upon the fact, that when the last Ecumenical Methodist Conference, embracing all branches of Methodism throughout the world, met in Toronto in October, 1911—only six years ago—it was discovered that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had by far led the entire procession in the percentage of its growth since the last assembling of such a gathering. This certainly did not look as if our polity and methods of operation were inferior to those of others. Dr. W. L. Watkinson, the eloquent British Wesleyan minister, in one of his sermons, tells of a cow standing knee-deep in clover and looking over the fence, fancying that it would be vastly better to be out on the bare commons. May God help Southern Methodists in this time of confusion and all kinds of foolish clamorings to have sense enough to know when they are well off!

While we should be ready to consider suggestions rightly made from any quarter, we confess that we are becoming a little weary of the constant croakings of some of our insistent brethren who have tarried a little while at schools in the North, or participated in a few interdenominational junketings across the Ohio, and who have come back dissatisfied with substantially everything in the South, and with a desire to Northernize it in a promiscuous and wholesale fashion. And we sometimes wonder why they do not betake themselves permanently to the section that seems so perfectly to suit their tastes and ideals. We feel sure that Southern Methodism could spare a few such without being plunged into a state of bankruptcy.

The preachment that the Southern Churches are now antiquated in their methods of Christian activity and are lagging in religious progress has, as we have intimated, little to sustain it. Touching upon Church conditions in the two sections a short time since, Billy Sunday, the world's greatest evangelist, made the following striking utterance: "Sixty-eight per cent of the men of the South are in the Church. Why? You may not like it, hut the truest, the purest, the finest men and women in America are south of the Mason and Dixon line. That's the reason it took thirty millions to lick six millions. There are more pure-blooded Americans south of the Mason and Dixon line than anywhere else in this country. That's why so many of them are Christians. I say that, even if my old daddy was one of the boys in blue and fought against them. They were hard to lick because they were real Americans. South of the Mason and Dixon line they have got the North licked to a frazzle in religion and morals."

SOME TEACHER-TRAINING STATISTICS.

From the annual report of Rev. John W. Shackford, Superintendent of the Department of Teacher-Training of our Church, made to the General Sunday School Board at its meeting at Lake Junaluska last month, I glean the following statistics relative to the work in the seven Conferences composing the Gulf Division (the report covering the period from July 1, 1916, to June 30, 1917):

Number of classes and students enrolled:

Conferences—	Classes.	Students
Alabama	38	506
North Alabama	68	1047
Mississippi	32	351
North Mississippi	28	236
Louisiana	20	267
Little Rock	31	276
North Arkansas	9	91
Totals	226	2774
Percentage of whole Church	35 2-3	35
In whole Church, units	634	7978

Examinations have been given as follows on papers covering units 1 to 5 of the Standard Course:

Conference—	No.1.	No.2.	No.3.	No.4.	No.5
Alabama	47	57	39	20	24
North Alabama	29	10	18	10	10
Mississippi	78	35	47	36	33
North Mississippi	31	24	24	9	10
Louisiana	25	9	9	..	..
Little Rock	50	28	19	3	3
North Arkansas	..	..	..	..	..
Totals	260	163	156	78	80
Percentage of whole	27	25	32	55	42
In whole Church, units	962	654	488	141	191

Examinations have been given as shown below on papers from colleges in the Gulf Division, the total number of units being given for each college instead of number of individual students and the units for each, which would take up more space than the items would warrant:

	Units
Woman's College of Alabama, Montgomery, Ala.	179
Henderson-Brown College, Arkadelphia, Ark.	27
Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.	6
Meridian College, Meridian, Miss.	139
Pt. Gibson Female College, Pt. Gibson, Miss.	6
Ensley Bible School, Ensley, Ala.	5
Total	362

Percentage of whole Church, 65 per cent.
In whole Church, 589 units.

Diplomas have been granted to students in the Gulf Division, by Conferences, as follows:

	Courses. Old First.	Old Adv.	New Standard.
Alabama	6	1	20
North Alabama	1	..	9
Mississippi	..	..	3
North Mississippi		1	8
Louisiana	11	..	.
Little Rock	..	..	3
North Arkansas	1	3	..
Totals	19	8	43
Percentage of Church	21	14	44¾
In whole Church, units	91	57	97

Considering the fact that it is only one and two-thirds years since the new Standard Training Course was introduced into our Church this is a splendid showing, and augurs well for the future of the Church.

A. L. DIETRICH.

ATTETNION!

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference.

It is the earnest desire of your Conference Sunday School Board and myself that just as far as possible you all attend the District Sunday school institute for your district. On the second afternoon it is planned to have a pastors' conference, at which a representative of your Conference Board and I shall have some things to talk over with you.

A. L. DIETRICH.

Meridian, Miss.

NOTICE.

To Sunday School Superintendents and Pastors of the Louisiana Conference.

If you have not already ordered your programs for Rally Day, you may combine the Rally Day service with the "Go to Sunday School Sunday" on November 4, which is the day fixed by the International Sunday School Association of the United States for gathering the people of America into their Sunday schools in a rally. Programs will go out from the Conference Field Secretary's office to all Southern Methodist pastors for this day, and will be free. You will not even have to write for them. We will send you one program for each five you have in your schools, as there are a number of children who are too young to read. Look for further announcements, plan to have the biggest day of the year for your Sunday schools on November 4, the Nation-wide "Go to Sunday School Sunday." Write Rev. Clyde V. Breithaupt, Alexandria, La., for any information you may desire concerning this day.

NOTES.

It is reported that intoxicating liquors were responsible, in part, at least, for the rioting of the Negro soldiers at Houston, Texas. There are very few evil occurrences in which John Barleycorn does not get mixed up.

Keep in mind the Eighteenth National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League, which will convene in Washington, D. C., on December 4 and close on December 6. It promises to be the greatest gathering of the kind ever held in the United States. Make your plans to go, if you can.

What are you doing to help the prohibition movement in Louisiana? Do you ask what you can do? You can procure some good literature and distribute it; you can agitate the question and organize the forces in your community. Write Rev. A. W. Turner, Shreveport, La., and invite him to visit your town, assuring him that you will take care of his expenses. This is a time when every friend of the cause needs to be up and doing.

The Yearbook of the Anti-Saloon League is now out. It is said to be the most complete and up-to-date survey of facts pertaining to the prohibition movement ever published. It contains maps showing the progress of the cause and a vast amount of other helpful matter. Every pastor ought to have a copy of this volume, that he may be ready for the great battle for National constitutional prohibition that is ahead. The price is: paper-bound, 50 cents; cloth-bound, 75 cents. Order of New York State Prohibition Headquarters, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

We take the following from The Times-Picayune: "That Superintendent Mooney (the Crescent City's new police head official) desires to have a police department composed of men not too fond of intoxicating liquors was demonstrated when he issued an order (a few days ago) that policemen, on or off duty, in uniform or plain clothes, must not enter saloons unless their business calls for it. 'I want no boozers in the department,' said Mr. Mooney, 'for a man who drinks cannot properly attend to his duties.'" Good for Mr. Mooney! It will mean much for law and order in New Orleans if he can enforce this regulation.

THERE ARE OTHER KINDS.

Commenting upon the action of the United States Senate in voting to submit the national constitutional Prohibition amendment, Mr. Barnes' Albany Journal, still intent on "preserving" the Constitution, says:

"There is much loose thinking about the constitution nowadays."

There is considerable "tight" thinking about it, too.—American Issue.

DRYS WON IN KENTUCKY.

The submission of a dry constitutional amendment to the voters of Kentucky was abundantly assured by the outcome of the primaries held on August 4. Much more than the necessary three-fifths majority of the Legislature favorable to that action was assured on both the Democrat and Republican tickets. These men are pledged to submit a bone-dry amendment without compensation or other obnoxious features. The Legislature meets in January and an election pursuant to its action will be held in November, 1918.

LIQUOR MAKING TO MEET ITS DOOM ON SEPTEMBER 8 AT 11 P. M.

Washington, August 16.—The food administration to-day ordered that the distillation of all liquors cease at 11 o'clock on the night of September 8. This action was taken in pursuance of the Prohibition section of the food control bill, which provides that, after 30 days following the approval of the law, no foods, fruits, food materials or feeds shall be used in the production of distilled spirits for beverage purposes.

The 30-day period named will expire at midnight September 9. As this date falls on Sunday, and as the internal revenue law prevents the operation of distilleries after 11 o'clock at night on Saturday until the following Monday at 1 a. m., it was ruled by the food administration that the provisions will become effective at 11 p. m., Saturday, September 8.—New York Tribune, August 17, 1917.

WILL CUT STRENGTH OF BEER.

Reduction Expected to Save 35,000,000 Bushels of Grain.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Reduction to 2 per cent of the alcoholic content of beer is expected to be Herbert Hoover's next grain conservation step.

Following his order to stop distillation of spirits after 11 p. m. September 8, Mr. Hoover is said to have decided beer strength must be reduced from its present 3½ to 4 per cent alcohol to save 35,000,000 bushels of grain.

Such action would not mean a revenue loss to the government, but should it be found necessary to reduce the alcoholic content further a loss of $170,000,000 would result. England has been forced to reduce beer strength.

Though the 2 per cent alcohol maximum will not remove the new $3 a barrel beer tax it will remove exhilaratory features. The treasury taxes as alcoholic beverages all drinks that contain more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol . Mr. Hoover's action, however, will place the country on a so-called "near beer" basis.—New York Evening Sun, August 17, 1917.

"DEMOCRATIZING THE CHURCH," "CANDIDACIES," "PLATFORMS," ETC.

There is much thoughtless talking upon the part of a certain class of men concerning what is called the "democratizing of the Church."

The men who are most fond of such talking, we have observed, belong to a certain class of preachers, although they assume to speak for the laymen and attempt to array bitter opposition to the Episcopacy upon the part of laymen.

Do these misguided brethren really wish the Church to be "democratized?" We doubt it.

The General Conference is composed of an equal number of clerical and lay members. But in our Church there are less than 8,500 traveling preachers, while there are over 2,100,000 lay members. Thus eight thousand preachers have in the General Conference as much voting power as two million laymen. Is that democracy?

Do the brethren who wish to get elected to the General Conference so badly that they denounce our Episcopacy as an "autocracy" in order to conciliate the favor of some of the voters, really wish the clerical representation in the General Conference reduced to a democratic basis, so that 8,000 preachers shall no longer have a voting power equal to that of two million lay members? We doubt it.

And why should they denounce our Episcopacy as an "autocracy," when they surely know the bishops are responsible to the General Conference? An autocrat is responsible to nobody, but are our bishops irresponsible lords over the Church?

The clerical delegates to the General Conference, with their disproportionate power to the power of the lay delegates, come much nearer being an irresponsible and autocratic power, when they vote, than our bishops ever do, or ever can do.

A bishop can not vote in the General Conference, nor can he so much as address the body without its consent. But to whom is a delegate responsible for the way he votes?

We deplore this covert attack upon our Episcopacy under the cry of "democratizing" the Church. We especially deplore the attempts to array the laymen against our bishops, and we predict the unworthy effort will fail. Most of our laymen—an overwhelming majority—are far too wise and too religious to be led astray by such specious appeals to prejudice.

The form of our Church government is not "medieval." It was framed by Mr. Wesley in 1784, and has been amended in some features by every General Conference that has met during the existence of American Methodism. It is well adapted to achieve the success of the Church, as is proved by the unparalleled growth of our Church.

And let us emphasize the fact that Episcopal Methodism is the form of Methodism which has accomplished most in the world. O'Kelly and his followers attacked Asbury as an autocrat in his day. They denounced him as "Pope Franky," and demanded then, as some are doing now, "the democratization of Methodism." But what has been the meagre results achieved by the Methodist bodies which have adopted the principles of O'Kelly as compared with the Episcopal Methodisms which have followed the principles of Wesley and Asbury?

Now some are suggesting that the "democratization of Methodism" be made an issue in the election of delegates to the next General Conference by having candidates committed to a platform of that kind.

We hope that no methods of "candidating" and "platforms" will be introduced into our Annual Conferences. Such methods are out of place in the Church, and, heretofore, they have been held as discreditable.

But if we must have men of revolutionary ideas seeking votes by "platforms," etc., let us have no "still hunts" for votes. Let men with radical ends to serve say so openly.

We apprehend radicals will not abound in the next General Conference—the most important since 1844. Certainly they will not, if the brethren know when they vote that revolutionary schemes are proposed by the men who seek election to the General Conference in order to cast our polity to the winds.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A WORD FROM BROTHER BROWN.

Dear Brother Meek: After a month's confinement in the Infirmary at Winona, Miss., following a serious operation, I came home last Saturday afternoon. The doctor says it will be at least six weeks yet before I can resume my work. Will the many friends who wrote me while I was in the Infirmary accept my hearty thanks for their kind letters of sympathy? I am not strong enough to write each one of them. S. A. BROWN.

Kosciusko, Miss., August 30, 1917.

YOUNG PREACHER WANTED.

There is an opening in the Hattiesburg District and a fine opportunity for a sprightly young preacher who wants to go to an Agricutural High School, and at the same time have an opportunity to preach. There will be free board and lodging and free tuition. The salary will be meager for the present, but the charge will pay more next year, it is thought. If any one is interested, write to the undersigned at Hattiesburg, Miss. The session of the school opens soon.

W. B. JONES, Presiding Elder.

ONE REASON WHY.

Dora M. Hepner.

God knew the sort of tenderness
Our wayward hearts required;
God knew the sort of kindly love
Our lonely souls desired;
God knew the need of friendships strong,
The need above all others;
God knew our need of "tuckings in"—
That's why he made our mothers.

THE IDEAL MAN.

Rev. W. S. Harrison.

When we the royal purpose rightly scan,
In trend of things in this domain of earth,
As nature climbs the rungs from cell to man,
The truth unfolds at each successive birth,
That men are flow'ring sheen in Heaven's plan—
The richest fruit of earth is perfect man.

'Tis clear to all who have the eyes to see
That Jesus set for man this type of life;
And while the will is left forever free,
Each man his own true freedom gains in strife,
Till human choice is one with Heaven's drill,
And all life's pleasures blend in Heaven's will.

To reach this type of life the very best,
Is task that God has set for human skill;
Each man must plant the truth within his breast;
Train body, disposition, soul, and will;
Restrain the native selfishness of heart,
That each may love his kind and do his part.

Let each on self enforce the holy law,
Instill ennobling principles of right,
And build the life without a rotten flaw,
With honor, truth, and love, in Heaven's sight;
A life correct and true, without a stain,
An honest, open life of noblest strain.

The man complete, forseen by Nature's eye,
Has form that progress clearly proves to be the best;
A mind enthroned to compass earth and sky;
A soul that glows like light on highest crest
Of life, inspired by Heaven's bounding grace,
And shows the gleams of God in human face.

Plead not the lack of strength to reach this type;
In God we live, and ere our thoughts are born,
He knows the sense, and stands with mercy ripe
To blend with every good desire, a horn
Of strength to give us all the needed aid;
He strengthens every wish for virtue made.

MOLLY AND THE BOB WHITES.

"Do little birds do just as their fathers and mothers do?" questioned Molly, as she leaned close to Aunt Elinor, and looked across the field to where "Bob White" and his family had established a summer home.

"Not always," replied Aunt Elinor, slipping her arm about the little girl. "Sometimes they learn by their own experience to have more confidence in men and women and children than their parents had."

"What is confidence" questioned Molly, who always wanted to know the meaning of things.

"Well, it's just the feeling you have when you lean up against me," explained Aunt Elinor, with a little laugh. "You are sure I won't hurt you, and you feel safe as though you were protected."

"Oh, yes," responded Molly. "And do some birds feel that way when they are near people?"

Aunt Elinor nodded. "In countries where children are taught to be gentle and friendly with birds they become very tame."

"Would those little Bob Whites ever have confidence in me?" asked Molly.

"Yes, indeed," said Aunt Elinor. And that very day Molly went across the field to where Mrs. Bob White was perched on the low fence, talking to her little family.

Molly did not go very near. She sat down on a big stone, where she could see them plainly; but Mrs. Bob White fluttered off the fence and joined her family, and they all scuttled away in the tall grass. Molly sat very quietly, and scattered the little bag of wheat she had brought all about the rock. After a while, as the birds did not come back, she went home.

The next day she started down to the field again, for Aunt Elinor had told her that she must be very patient with all small wild creatures, and that it would take many visits before the quails would know that she was a friend. As she came near the rock where she had sat the day before, there was a flutter of wings, and Mother Quail flew off to her perch on the fence, and Molly heard a low, plaintive "Quoi-i-hee!" from the little birds; but they did not follow their mother very far. Molly sat down in the grass, and saw the little birds pick up the sweet grains of wheat; and Mother Quail, after a few scolding notes, came back to her family. But she hopped about nervously or made little upward flights.

Molly was sure that the birds were beginning to know her. This time she left some pieces of cake near the rock; and every day for two weeks she came faithfully to visit the Bob Whites. By this time they began to look for her, and these wildest of wild birds had learned what their parents had not known—confidence in human beings. Aunt Elinor would sit on the porch and watch Molly go across the field, and see the little Bob Whites come almost within reach of her little niece's hand. Sometimes they would even follow Molly a little way toward the house in the most loving and fearless manner, although their doubtful mother called warningly after her family, as though she had not conquered all her fears, or as though she would teach them not to be too ready to trust.

"They have learned something their mother doesn't know, haven't they, Aunt Elinor?" Molly declared, happily, as she looked back toward the birds, and remembered what Aunt Elinor had told her of the meaning of the word "confidence."—Southern Churchman.

WHAT THE CHILDREN LEARNED.

"I don't want to wear my rubbers!" Ethel grumbled.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The duck puts its little red rubbers on when it walks in the soft, cold mud."

"I don't want to practice my music!" complained May.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The locust has worked hard at the scales ever since it was old enough to know how. Now it can sing from low z to high z and back again without an uneven note."

"I don't want to stop to wash my hands," said Ned.

"Why-ee," said grandpa. "The ant stops and cleans up whenever it gets soiled. Its feet are covered with hairs that make a good brush, and it lets not a bit of dust stay on its body."

"I don't want to help in the garden!" and Ray pouted.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The worm helps Tom every day, for as it crawls along, it turns the bit of dirt over and over with the queer little hooks on its body, and that keeps the ground nice and soft."

"I don't want to fill the wood-box full of wood," declared Ted.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The bumblebee goes steadily from one blossom to another, and never stops until its honey bags are quite full of honey."

"I don't want to take this note to the village," said Jack.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The pigeon carries messages for a long, long way; they are tied beneath its strong wings."

And what do you suppose those little children did?

They sat right down beside the lilac bush, and promised each other that they would not grumble any more; they were so much ashamed to find that the duck and the locust, the ant and the worm, the bumblebee and the pigeon were all better natured than they.—Gertrude W. Fielder, in the Youths' Companion.

IS YOUR BOY DOING HIS BIT?

One of the formidable problems before the Government is that of securing an adequate supply of farm labor. There are thousands of rugged boys of school age who might fill the places of able-bodied men needed elsewhere.

The Department of Labor has been organizing for the last three months a National Boys' Working Reserve for boys who are unfamiliar with farm tasks. The Department of Agriculture has organized similarly a Boys' Agricultural Reserve for farm boys.

Is there a Boys' Reserve in your town? If not, there's a chance for you to help Uncle Sam. Communicate with your country agricultural agent, or with the nearest employment office of the Department of Labor, or send your boy's enlistment to the Personal Service Bureau at Elgin, Illinois.—Mother's Magazine.

WASN'T SHE RIGHT?

The lesson in natural history had been about the rhinoceros, and the teacher wanted to know how well the lesson had been learned. "Now, name something," she said, "that is very dangerous to get near to, and that has horns."

"I know, teacher, I know!" called little Annie Jones.

"Well, Annie, what is it?"

"An automobile."

A LITTLE TOO MUCH.

A lawyer died in an American provincial town, and fellow-lawyers wrote over his grave:

"Here lies a lawyer and an honest man."

Not long after, the governor of the province visited the town, and among other places inspected the cemetery. When he came to the lawyer's grave he stopped, read the inscription, and, turning to the head inspector, said:

"Look here, my friend. We wink at a good many things in this province, but I do object to your burying two men in one grave." Christian Guardian.

THE LEADING ELDER SPEAKS.

By the late James Boyd Hunter, Jr.

Don't send us no revival, Lord—
Why waste Your grace on us this year?
I don't see how we could afford
To have the meetings—coal is dear!

The Church is pretty busy, too—
There's something doing ev'ry night.
We couldn't spare the time for You
To come. Of course we want what's right.

The young folks have to be amused
Or else they'll leave us flat and cold.
(A minstrel show's the way we've used
To shepherd them within the fold.)

The Men's Club supper's coming on—
(Please don't forget the ladies' fair)—
Why, one big doing's hardly done
Before another, I declare.

Card parties, dances, billiards, pool,
With movie shows and teas between—
We aim to do things as a rule
To keep our jealous rivals green.

We're set upon this modern way,—
Reviving's old stuff, don't you know!
We've got too much to do to pray,
I hope You're glad how fast we grow.

What's that? You aren't satisfied?
I beg your pardon,—"Feed my sheep?"
With what we've spent, put all aside,
Salvation free? O that's too cheap!

—Christian Intelligencer.

To recognize with delight all high and generous and beautiful actions, to find a joy even in seeing the good qualities of your bitterest opponents, and to admire those qualities even in those with whom you have least sympathy—be it either the Romanist or the Unitarian—this is the only spirit which can heal the love of slander and of calumny.—F. W. Robertson.

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

WANTED: A WORKER IN EVERY CONGREGATION.

Our Publisher is now making a remarkable offer looking to the circulation of the Advocate. Read carefully his statement which appears on another page. If the pastor of a church does not himself care to solicit subscriptions to the Advocate on the terms announced, we trust that he will kindly call attention to the Conference organ and mention the prizes promised. We want to secure a capable worker for our paper in every congregation in Louisiana and Mississippi. If a preacher has more than one church in his care, we hope that he will kindly endeavor to secure an efficient solicitor at each of his appointments. It is our desire to have the Advocate reach every nook and corner of the two States that it serves, that it may speak for Southern Methodism. The country is being literally flooded with all kinds of vicious literature, and we certainly need to get the Church paper into the homes of our people. We must inform and indoctrinate them if we would safeguard them from being led astray. Especially do we earnestly request the active assistance of each of the twenty-two presiding elders in our three patronizing Conferences in carrying forward this campaign. WILL YOU NOT HELP US, BRETHREN?

THOROUGH READING THE BEST.

In this day of the making of many books there is prevalent an idea that if one is to be scholarly one must familiarize one's self with the constant output of the printing-houses. Of course, it is well for one to keep abreast of the important developments of current thought; but by far the larger portion of the publications streaming forth from the press, and flamboyantly advertised by enterprising publishers, are of little value—so time devoted to them is thrown away, and possibly worse than wasted. There is need for careful discrimination in determining what one will read. Here, as well as in most other matters of life, a wise use of time yields rich results, while the misuse of it leads to harmful consequences. It is not an extensive, superficial reading that most enriches and develops the mind; on the contrary, it is the reading that is thorough—that grasps, digests, and assimilates what is gone over. Intellectual, like material, wealth, comes as a result of what one lays up and keeps. The wisdom of concentration in reading was once thus impressively set forth by James Russell Lowell:

"One is sometimes asked by young men to recommend to them a course of reading. My advice would always be, confine yourselves to the supreme books in whatever literature—still better to choose some one great author and grow thoroughly familiar with him. For as all roads lead to Rome, so they all likewise lead thence, and you will find that in order to understand perfectly and weigh exactly any really vital piece of literature, you will be gradually and pleasantly persuaded to studies and explorations of which you little dreamed when you began, and will find yourselves scholars before you are aware. If I may be allowed a personal illustration, it was my own profound admiration for the Divina Commedia of Dante that lured me into what little learning I possess. For remember that there is nothing less fruitful than scholarship for the sake of mere scholarship, nor anything more wearisome in the attainment. But the moment you have an object and a center, attention is quickened, the mother of memory, and whatever you acquire groups and arranges itself in an order which is lucid because it is everywhere in intelligent relation to an object of constant and growing interest.

"Thus as respects Dante, I asked myself: What are his points of likeness or unlikeness with the authors of classical antiquity? In how far is either of these an advantage or defect? What and how much modern literature had preceded him? How much was he indebted to it? How far had the Italian language been subdued and supplied to the use of poetry or prose before his time? How much did he color the style or thought of the authors who followed him? Is it a fault or a merit that he is so thoroughly impregnated with the opinions, passions, and even prejudices not only of his age but his country? Was he right or wrong in being Ghibelline? To what extent is a certain freedom of opinion which he shows sometimes on points of religious doctrine to be attributed to the humanizing influence of the Crusades in enlarging the horizon of the Western mind by bringing it in cantact with other races, religions, and social arrangements? These and a hundred other such questions were constant stimulants to thought and inquiry, stimulants such as no merely objectless and, so to speak, impersonal study could have supplied."

THE PRESENT-DAY CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

There has been considerable talk within recent years of a drift in the Congregational Church toward liberalism, and of late it has been charged that it has been tending more and more toward unitarianism in its views and teachings. This question has interested us considerably because of the disposition of some of our Church agencies to enter into pretty close cooperation with the Congregationalists in religious activities, maintaining jointly wth them theological schools and Church publications. Perhaps scarcely any man in the country is more competent to speak as to the trend in the Congregational Church than Dr. Lyman Abbott, who belongs to it; and in The Outlook of August 22 he enlightened the readers of that periodical by printing the following question and his answer, which seem to indicate that the ministers and members of this denomination have pretty well cut loose from any standard of belief:

"'Is there any belief that the Congregational Church as a body stands for? * * * Is there any creed or code of belief that a young Congregational minister must sign or agree to when being licensed to preach in a church of his own?

A. G. P.'

"In theory, each Congregational church is a wholly independent organization. The term 'Independent' is often applied to it in England. In this organization all members of adult age stand on an equal footing. The minister is simply one of the number chosen to be their teacher. In practice, however, the Congregational churches are in fellowship, and it is not usual for a Congregational church to call a minister to be its pastor without inviting a council of neighboring churches, who examine the minister and the church and give their advice as to whether the church had better call the minister, and whether the minister had better accept the call. In many cases, however, a minister remains practically the pastor of the church without any such council being called. He is then termed in ecclesiastical circles 'stated supply,' but his relations are in all respects those of a pastor. At different times Congregationalists have made a formal statement of their common faith, but these statements are not binding on either the church or the ministry. Neither church nor minister is under obligation to accept them or any one of them. I believe that a minority of the Congregational churches, though perhaps an increasing number, are dispensing with the creed altogether and going back to what was a custom of the early Puritan churches and requiring as a condition of admission simply subscription to a covenant, not to a declaration or definition of faith."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Epworth League of the New Orleans District will hold a meeting in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of this city, on September 22 and 23.

Rev. E. H. Cooley, of Walnut Grove, Miss., says: "We are glad to report that the affairs of the church at this place are in a good condition, and that the Lord is blessing us in many ways."

Rev. W. W. Drake, pastor of the Noel Memorial Church at Shreveport, La., continues to have gratifying success in his work. The indications are that his congregation will send a record-breaking report to the Annual Conference.

The prospects in the Shreveport (La.) District point to a great rounding out of the year's work, as the last lap comes into sight. Rev. C. D. Atkinson is as hard a worker as a presiding elder as he is as a pastor. This is saying much.

Rev. R. W. Tucker, our consecrated pastor at Crowley, La., is preaching some heart-searching and helpful sermons to his parishioners. Those who wait upon Brother Tucker's ministry are not apt to want for the strong meat of the Gospel.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, pastor of the Louisiana Avenue Church of New Orleans, has the prospect of a fine Men's Bible Class in his Sunday school. Brother Gearheard has a choice body of young people in his congregation and his Sunday school keeps up to a good standard.

There is talk of Hon. Murphy J. Foster, who represented Louisiana in the United States Senate for a number of years, entering the race against Senator Ransdell for a seat in that body. Mr. Foster has a wide acquaintanceship and many friends throughout the State.

We are indebted to the following friends, whose kindness has not been elsewhere mentioned, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. W. Faulk, Boyce, La., 3; Rev. J. W. Dring, Ringgold, La., 4; Rev. Eugene Johnson, Hernando, Miss., 3.

Dr. John T. Sawyer reports that he was with Rev. W. A. Mangum at our McDonoghville Church last Sunday, where he preached at 11 o'clock a. m., and at the close of the sermon conducted a delightful communion service. Brother Mangum is making a good record in his field over the river.

Rev. L. A. Darsey, of Gulfport, Miss., has our thanks for two subscriptions to the Advocate, forwarded within the past few days. He has the interests of the Conference organ at heart and is ever ready to lend it a helping hand. Brother Darsey is one of the growing men of the Mississippi Conference.

From a personal letter from Brother James H. Ramsey, a layman in the Houlka (Miss.) charge, we extract the following note: "Rev. A. J. Beasley is our pastor. He is doing a fine work and is highly appreciated by our people." We thank Brother Ramsey for his kindly commendation of the Advocate.

Monday was "Labor Day," and we had no mail at all at the Advocate office. This will explain why some things that were perhaps expected to reach us in time for this issue of the paper do not appear in its columns. Our final forms are closed Tuesday at noon, and we can set up but little type on Tuesday morning.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, writes as follows: "Rev. Olin Ray, of Tunica, is the second man in the Greenville District to send in a remittance to cover his educational assessment." Good for Tunica and Brother Ray! Who next?

On Sunday afternoon, August 26, the Sunday schools of Amory and Aberdeen, Miss., presented each soldier in Company D of the Second Mississippi Regiment with a pocket Testament. The exercises were held in the court-house at Aberdeen, and the presentation speech was made by Rev. J. M. Bradley, our pastor in that city.

One who signs her name "A Friend" writes us as follows from Meadville, Miss.: "Mrs. Barry, the wife of our pastor, Rev. A. B. Barry, has been seriously ill for the past ten days. We request the prayers of all for her recovery. She is a most superior character." We trust that this stricken "mistress of the manse" is decidedly better ere this.

Mr. H. H. Elmore, of Lexington, Miss., to whom reference was made in the Advocate last week in connection with the Circuit Judgeship of his district, has since that time been appointed to that office by Governor Bilbo. This was a most admirable selection. Mr. Elmore, in every respect, belongs to the type of men who ought to be placed on the bench.

Bishop W. B. Murrah, of Memphis, Tenn., was in New Orleans last Tuesday and brightened our sanctum with his presence. He had been to Pelahatchie, Miss., where he dedicated a church last Sunday. The Bishop was looking well and was in his usual cheerful frame of mind. He left the city at 3 o'clock p.m. for Jackson, Miss., where he had an engagement.

From the St. Helena Echo of August 31, published at Greensburg, La., we take the following: "The good Methodist people of the Pine Hill neighborhood are having revival services there this week, which they are holding in their pretty little 'church in the wildwood,' of which they are justly proud. The pastor, Rev. Q. R. Henry, is being assisted by Rev. Bennett D. Watson, of Pine Grove."

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., is winding up a successful quadrennium in his present field of labor, which is one of the most important in the North Mississippi Conference. Prior to coming to Greenville, he wrought for four years at Clarksdale, where he left behind him an excellent record. He belongs to a family of preachers, having a father and four brothers who are members of the Mississippi Conference.

In a business letter to our office, written from Minneola, Texas, on August 29, Rev. M. G. Jenkins, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, says: "On account of ill health, in company with my daughters, I recently went to Houston, Texas, for medical treatment, and I am now quite unwell." We are sorry to know that Brother Jenkins' health is not good and we hope that his condition will soon be much improved.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, Superintendent of the Mississippi Orphans' Home at Jackson, reports everything as moving along nicely in that institution. Brother Randolph expects to take a charge in the North Mississippi Conference this fall, which means that some appointment will be blessed with the services of a most capable and faithful pastor. He is an A.B. graduate of Millsaps College and a B.D. graduate of Vanderbilt University.

The many Mississippi friends of Mr. W. F. Murrah, of Memphis, Tenn., the son of Bishop W. B. Murrah, will be interested to know that he has been made Captain of Company M of the Second Tennessee Regiment, which company he was largely instrumental in organizing. He has shown great aptitude for military training and is taking a great deal of interest in getting his company, which is soon to leave for Greenville, S. C., in form for effective service.

Rev. W. W. Woollard thus reports concerning the work in the Columbus (Miss.) District, on which he is closing his quadrennium as presiding elder: "The prospects are that the year will wind up better with us than heretofore. We have had a number of gracious revivals and a large ingathering of members. The brethren in the district have done earnest, faithful service for the Master, and will go to Conference with a good record behind them."

We have on our table a phampiet, entitled "Faith—Its Occurrence, Uses, Meaning, Sources, Importance, and Power," from the fruitful pen of Dr. I. L. Peebles, of Meridian, Miss. This discussion is Scriptural and informing, and is, in our opinion, calculated to do much good. It covers twenty pages and is attractively printed and neatly bound. Write the author for a copy; the price is ten cents. This publication is multum in parvo, and deserves a wide circulation.

A correspondent informs us that Sister Duren, the wife of Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, Miss., and Sister Bahb, the wife of Rev. D. W. Bahb, of Crawford, Miss., have both been seriously sick, but gives no particulars concerning their illness, except to state that both expect soon to return to their homes. We regret to know that these faithful servants of the Master have been thus stricken, but are pleased to be informed that they are making progress toward a recovery.

A card from Mrs. Helen P. Woodward, of Starkville, Miss., dated September 2, conveys the following sad information: "Mr. J. W. Hoyle, of Tupelo, Miss., died suddenly yesterday morning. He will be buried some time Monday, the obsequies being deferred to await the arrival of his son, Robert, from Colorado." Mr. Hoyle was the beloved husband of Mrs. Vic Thompson Hoyle, who is known all over North Mississippi and in other parts of the Church for her good works. Following her own serious illness, this is a severe shock to this noble woman. Let her and the other stricken ones be earnestly remembered at the throne of grace!

We are sorry to be informed that Sister McCullough, the wife of the late Rev. W. D. McCullough of the North Mississippi Conference, has lately been quite unwell physically, but are gratified to be able to report that her health is now improving. The members of Sister McCullough's family are considerably scattered now, but her several sons are giving a fine account of themselves in their various fields of work, thus illustrating anew the fact that to be reared in a parsonage is a good training for the activities of life.

On another page we are carrying an account of the recent McIntosh revival at Iuka, Miss., taken from a local paper. Rev. L. A. McKeown, our pastor there, in a personal note to the Editor, thus refers to this gracious season of spiritual refreshing: "It was truly a great meeting. As a result of it, I received 56 members into our Church, and about 50 went to other churches in the town and surrounding country." Iuka is Brother McIntosh's home town. It is not every evangelist who can kindle the revival fire in the community in which he resides. We have known and highly esteemed Brother McIntosh for many years, and we rejoice in his success.

We are in receipt of an attractive card, which reads as follows: "1867-1917. Rev. Samuel M. Thames and Miss Mary E. De Loach—Married Wednesday, Sept. 5, 1867, at De Sotoville, Alabama—Fiftieth Anniversary. 1123 N. West Street, Jackson, Miss." This announcement will awaken much interest throughout North Mississippi, where Brother and Sister Thames are widely known and greatly beloved. We pray heaven's richest blessings upon them as they pass the fiftieth milepost of their married life, and we trust that they may yet have on earth many more anniversaries of the happy day when their fortunes were linked together. Nobly they have lived and wrought, and bright is the way that stretches out before them.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Aberdeen (Miss.) District, has wound up his third round of appointments, with the work in a most promising condition as compared with former years. At his last quarterly conference a church which had not paid in full by half for many years reported $20 in excess of his assessment. Brother Lipscomb says: "We are over $500, in cash, ahead of this time last year on our country circuits, and the outlook is most encouraging. I have been kept very busy, but I have greatly enjoyed the work. I am trying specially to build up the waste places." We like the ring of this message. In our opinion, Brother Lipscomb is directing his energies wisely. The presiding eldership furnishes a great opportunity for service, if one will make the most of it.

The Magnolia (Miss.) Gazette of August 29 contained the following reference to the revival meeting that Rev. N. B. Harmon, the pastor, had in progress there: "That Rev. W. B. Hogg has aroused the interest of the community is evidenced by the large congregations which are filling the Methodist Church at the revival services now in progress. The preacher has the gift of pulpit eloquence, and to this are added a sincerity and an earnestness in his presentation of gospel truths which hold his hearers in rapt attention. It is of special interest to note that Mr. Hogg has been appointed a chaplain in the regular army, and is daily expecting his official assignment to duty." While in Magnolia, Brother Hogg received a telephone message that his little four-year-old daughter had been struck by an automobile on a street in Laurel, but happily her injuries were stated not to be serious.

According to the press dispatches, Hon. W. W. Magruder, of Starkville, Miss., is being encouraged to make the race for Congress in the First District of that State. Mr. Magruder is a grandson of Rev. R. Abbey, D.D., who for many years was a leading minister in the Mississippi Conference, and a nephew of the late W. T. J. Sullivan, whose name is "as ointment poured forth" all over North Mississippi. He is an able lawyer and excellent business man, and, what is better still, a stainless Christian gentlemen. He has for many years been a steward in our church at Starkville and the faithful superintendent of its Sunday school. The Advocate takes no part in politics, but we are gratified whenever we see that a man of so high a type as Mr. Magruder may possibly be available for public service. This is not meant to disparage others who may aspire to serve this district, and who, for aught we know, may also measure up to a high standard of fitness.

NOT ON EARTH.

Very apt was the reply made by an American Bishop to a vestry Committee who had told him the qualifications needed for their rector. The man they wanted must be tactful, eloquent, a builder-up of the Sunday school, conciliatory to the various factions, winning the community's respect, a bringer-in of increased income, a good visitor among the people, etc., etc. "Gentlemen," was his quiet answer, "you had better visit Paradise; for such perfection as you seek has never been known this side of the grave."—Southern Churchman.

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Write a post card to Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., for Rally Day Sunday School Hints, an eight-page paper, giving hints and helps for Rally Day, Promotion Day, and other useful information.

If you want to increase the interest in your school and secure a larger attendance, observe Raliy Day. Do not be afraid of spending a little money and of doing a little extra work.

Take the full program of a first class school and you will be troubled to find room to care for them. Look at the standard of efficiency and do all those things, one at a time, and you will have all the interest you desire.

Most Sunday schools meet and do but little else except "hear lessons." There is a difference between "hearing lessons" and really teaching a fine group of young people the way to Christ and the joy of service for him. If we would teach, we must first learn; and when we cease to learn we are no longer able to teach. The institute is a good place to learn more about how to teach.

The big days in September will be from the 20th to the 30th. Miss Minnie E. Kennedy will help conduct a series of institutes in the Conference that will be worth more than anything that I know to our workers. Miss Kennedy is a truly great teacher. If I could make the teachers of our young people believe me, we would have at least five hundred teachers to hear her. Get up two automobiles and bring all your teachers to the nearest institute.

The title of the Raliy Day program for this year is "Flags and Freedom," arranged by Mr. E. E. French, price $2.50 per hundred, 40 cents per dozen, Smith & Lamar, Nashville. It may be best to give the purpose of the program in the language of the compiler: "The purpose of this program is patriotic. Our nation is passing through a crisis. More important than all other issues is moral preparedness. No institution in the land can do more to raise up a generation which is Christian in all its ideals and conduct than the Sunday school. This year is notable, however, not only because of the present crisis, but as the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Protestantism. It is fitting that we also celebrate this great movement for religious freedom, which was the necessary prelude to every other form of freedom.

"This program, 'The Flags of Freedom,' is planned for the use of the entire Sunday school and the public congregation. It may be used by the smallest school, and at the same time offers opportunity for more elaborate presentation. If carefully prepared, it should inspire love for God and country, gratitude to Luther, and to all others who have made our present-day era of freedom possible, and zeal for the Sunday school as an agency of the Church for leading the world to far higher Christian achievement."

If you have failed to secure your offering for the Sunday School Board as assessed by the Conference, this will be a good opportunity to get that amount.

TEACHER-TRAINING ENROLLMENT.

Cleanliness.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." We are too prone to think that "cleanliness" refers only to the exterior of our bodies. But unless your bowels are kept open and your liver active, you cannot expect to keep your body clean. The perspiration through skin pores is forced to carry off more than its share of the body's impurities. Do not allow constipation to poison you. Cleanse your entire system with Van Lax, which contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to the taste and produces pleasant results. For sale by the best dealers everywhere. In bottles—price 50c. Manufactured by the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

A LETTER FROM HAWAII.

Dear Doctor Meek: The third month of my stay in the islands has been a busy one. My superior officer, Major H., was ordered back to the mainland, and the chief Surgeon of the Department left me the surgeon of this big post—the second in size out here. When I tell you that we have over 3000 physical examinations each month as one detail, you may readily guess the rest. I am writing this letter in the intervals of work, so it may not be quite so artistic as I could wish. It is a great pleasure to me to know that in all Mississippi, I was the very first doctor called to the colors. Some of my friends asked me if I intended to go, as I am past the age of 45 years, and could not be required to go. They were surprised when I stated that I could not afford to refuse, as my people had been in every war since 1777, when my great-great gransire was commissioned a captain in the Continental Army. I am glad to do "my bit," even though it imposes some peculiar harships. But enough of this, and we will proceed to the more interesting section.

I have been attending the men's Bible class at the Methodist Church (North) and have been intensely interested in a certain trend that the discussions take. It is typical of the intensity of feeling that is lying underneath the surface everywhere. I am quite sure it would easily spring up anywhere, if an opportunity occurred, and would be an eye-opener to a certain class of preachers who feel that a weak exhortation and a long prayer constitute the spiritual food these great days demand. Men are very slow to voice the deep things of the heart—too slow in fact—but there is such a cry going up from the heart, as never before in the history of the world. As did the poet-king of Israel, in the forty-second song, cry with his whole heart for a touch of the living God, so are men crying now. Forms and ceremonies are passed over, but the heart cries out for the touch of the unseen hand—the comforting presence of the blessed Master. I noticed this all last year, when as lay leader of the Seashore District, I often touched on the personal presence of the Master, and instantly the quickened interest showed me that I was speaking of the thing most interesting to their minds, and which was what might be called, the unvoiced prayer. This is not confined to the Methodist Church only, but twice in a Presbyterian Church came the same response. I would be delighted to know that every pastor in Mississippi and Louisiana had preached this year on the presence of the Comforter, and the power of the personal Savior in the lives of his children.

The summer here has been more than pleasant. It rains a great deal—showers lasting only a few minutes, and frequently the sun shines right through the rain. It is so suggestive of His presence, bright shining sun, and rain dripping intermittently. The mountains rise at the back of the post to the height of about fifteen hundred feet, and the cool breezes blow from them all day, and practically all night. It makes the climate almost ideal, in spite of the frequency of the showers.

There are many small missions here for the various elements of this most mixed popnlation. There is a Filipino Y. M. C. A. and mission, where gospel services are held daily. The Japanese and Chinese Y. M. C. A.'s are each conducted for those peoples, and there are two others—one for the enlisted men of the Army and Navy, and another for the young men of the city proper. Both are handsome affairs, and well organized. I have not had the time to attend their meetings yet. The Epworth League of the Methodist Church seems to be very much alive to the duties and responsibilities of this wonderful era. They frequently have a fellowship lunch at 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, and follow it with a regular devotional meeting. It is needless to add that their meetings are well attended.

That the Church is not meeting the great opportunity now offered, is apparent. The ony service held here since I came—and there are almost 2000 men in this post—was at the quarantine camp, more than a month ago. There is no chapel in the post, but the moving picture "air-dome" is available any Sunday afternoon, and it is the intention of some of the officers to arrange with the pastors of the city churches to come out occasionally and at least give the men the chance to hear the gospel.

I hope that the Methodist Church, South, will not let this golden chance pass. Hattiesburg will have many soldiers, and so will Alexandria. Wise preachers can do their bit right at home, and leave an impression that will last.

There are many other things that I should like to mention, but this letter is already too long.

With the prayer that the Church will see this GOD GIVEN OPPORTUNITY and make haste to utilize it, I am,

Fraternally,
J. C. BALLARD,
Captain Medical Reserve Corps.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

A GOD-SENT REVIVAL.

I speak of the revival at Oak Ridge that was held August 19-30. In the beginning of the year I engaged a certain preacher, but later felt the Lord would have another (I wanted both of them, but didn't think we were able financially to have them), so I engaged the second preacher for Oak Ridge and made arrangements to use the first preacher at another place. The time for the revival came and the Lord peculiarly blessed us from the initial service. We only had six days to run, having so many other places calling for meetings; but when these days were up the general opinion was that the meeting should continue. We had the other meeting and preacher on hand, so we consulted the people at the other place, and they reluctantly but willingly gave way for the Oak Ridge meeting; so we had both the preachers I at first wanted at the places I wanted them. It is just like the Lord to arrange for our meetings if our hearts are burdened for souls. So we continued the meeting six days longer than we at first intended, and the time at which the people who gave way for Oak Ridge want their meeting just suits the first preacher. The Oak Ridge meeting proved a blessing in a general and definite way. Some professed to be converted and others professed to be sanctified, and we do not doubt their testimony; we had 8 accessions on profession of faith (one man 70 years of age, and some children and young people); three came to us from the Baptist Church, and many members were lifted to higher heights, and the whole community felt the influence of the revival. Will it all last? No! But, thank God, some of it will; and the cause of Christ received an impetus that will gather momentum and power as the days go by. Amen! Revs. A. S. Oliver and W. W. Nelson were the human leaders in the meeting, Brother Oliver doing all the preaching except two sermons (Brother Nelson preached twice), while Brother Nelson ably assisted in song and prayer. These brethren worked heroically and faithfully, and their labors and influence will last long after the revival is history. They were sent to Oak Ridge as Barnabas and Saul were sent on their missionary tour (Acts 13:2). I want to say that the people of the community did not forget their pastor during the meeting. They remembered us with such things as butter, eggs, milk, sweet and Irish potatoes, canned fruits, syrup, lard, cake, peas, corn, ice, and chickens. We are grateful indeed to all who remembered us in this way, and pray God's blessings upon them abundantly. The people also responded liberally in a financial way. To God be all the glory for the blessings that have come this way!

In His Name, J. A. WELLS.

Watch the Baby!

If he is fretful, restless and out of sorts, you can trace the cause to his stomach and liver. If the bowels do not act regularly there is a possible danger of serious illness. Constipation, if allowed to continue, may produce self-poisoning or auto-intoxication, and this condition should be promptly rectified. The best general tonic for the baby or for the older folks is Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, a purely vegetable compound. It contains no Calomel or other injurious drugs. Highly recommended for babies and growing children. It excites and invigorates sluggish livers and puts you on your feet again. Buy a bottle and keep it handy. Price 50c. For sale by the best druggists. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

OXFORD CAMP MEETING.

The 46th Camp Meeting was held the first week in August at the historic Camp Ground, three miles east of Oxford, Miss. Rev. J. J. Baird, of Ripley, did the larger part of the preaching. Rev. J. H. Mitchell, of Indianola, was present and preached once. Rev. Alonzo Robinson, of Sheridan, Arkansas, was also in attendance. Revs. R. P. Goar, J. G. Lord, and Mr. Daniels, the Presbyterian pastor at Pontotoc, rendered effective service. Congregations were large, especially on Sunday. Heavy rains and threatening weather interfered very much the last two days. Twenty people were present on Sunday morning who were in attendance upon the first meeting ever held here 45 years ago. This Camp Ground is a sacred spot to multitudes of our people. The old people recall with keen appreciation the labors and toils of Rev. J. W. Poston, who secured the ground, helped to erect the first tabernacle, and preached the first sermon 45 years ago. The name and fame of Dr. J. J. Wheat, who served as pastor of the Oxford Church for ten years, first and last, are forever secure in the minds of these camp-meeting people. His memory is like some sweet aroma upon the evening air, fresh and delightful. The older people never tire of relating how he used to climb upon the front seat or table and cry out with streaming eyes for the lost to seek Jesus Christ.

The visit of Rev. Alonzo Robinson, who was reared in that community, was greatly enjoyed. His preaching was most acceptable, as was the preaching of Brother Baird. Our Ripley pastor is a young man of splendid attainments. His future is most promising. Rev. R. S. Lawson, the local pastor, is in high favor with his people.

THE WORK AT BROOKHAVEN.

My Dear Doctor Meek: We will begin our revival meeting here Sunday, September 16, with Dr. Shade W. Walker, of Johnson Memorial Church, Huntington, West Virginia, doing the preaching, and Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Boyd, of Atlanta, Georgia, conducting the music and singing. We are preparing for and expecting a great meeting. We have been having great success since moving into our beautiful new building. Several grown persons have come into the Church on profession of faith. On Sunday evening we received a young man nineteen years of age who will prepare himself for the ministry.

The District Sunday School Institute will convene in our church on Monday, September 10-11. Much interest is being shown in this Sunday school meeting.

Yours sincerely,
CHAS. W. CRISLER.

A SUCCESSFUL MEETING.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our revival meeting at Marvin closed last Friday night, August 24. The preaching was done by our splendid pastor himself. Everybody is pleased with him, and the love of the people for him is greater after having heard him preach for a week. The revival began on Sunday, and on Wednesday Brother Armour preached a fine sermon to the children from the twentieth Chapter of Ecclesiastes. On Thursday night a flower service was held, and I am sure that those who responded to the proposition at that service were greatly blessed. Much good was done during the past week, and the church was revived spiritually. Thirteen joined the Church and nine were baptized, while five infants were also baptized. On the Friday night that the meeting was to close, Brother Armour was called to the bedside of a very sick son. We hope and pray that he will soon recover.

THE NEW CALOMEL IS DELIGHTFUL IN EVERY WAY.

All of the Sickening and Dangerous Qualities Have Been Removed and the Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved—Calotabs the New Name.

You have heard of smokeless powder, colorless iodine and tasteless quinine—now get acqainted with nausea-less calomel—a calomel tablet that is wholly delightful in its effect, yet retains all of the system-purifying and liver-cleansing qualities of the ordinary, old-style calomel.

Your doctor will tell you that calomel is the best and only medicine for biliousness, indigestion and constipation, and now that it is pleasant to take everybody is taking Calotabs—the improved de-nauseated calomel tablet. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, a swallow of water—no taste, no nausea, no danger. Next morning you wake up feeling fine, your liver thoroughly cleansed, all biliousness, constipation and indigestion removed. Eat what you please—no danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, twenty doses for thirty-five cents. All druggists are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

WINTERSMITH'S CHILL TONIC

Sold for 47 years. For Malaria, Chills and Fever. Also a Fine General Strengthening Tonic. 50c and $1.00 at all Drug Stores

DOING GREAT GOOD AT THIS SEASON

A superlative blood-purifying medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, combined with a superlative iron tonic like Peptiron Pills, makes the ideal all-round treatment. No other medicines possess such curative properties as these two working together.

Two dollars invested in these two medicines will bring better results than four dollars spent in any other course of treatment or attendance.

It will be wise to get them today.

MENTORUM, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: It has been quite a long time since Mentorum has had the pleasure of appearing on the pages of the Advocate. Will you now please give us a little space in your valuable paper? As Dr. Holloman of Crawford Street, Vicksburg, would say, "We are still at it." We are drawing near the close of our second year's work on this charge, during which I can truthfully say the Lord has graciously blessed us. After Bishop Murrah and our beloved presiding elder saw fit to return us to this work, we came with a full determination to do our best for our Lord and Master. The people whom I have the pleasure of serving received us with open hearts and arms. They proved their faithfulness to the pastor and family by appearing on the scene one evening with buggies and baskets well loaded with the necessary things of life, of which we have shown our appreciation in trying to serve them faithfully this year. In July of last year, we had the misfortune of losing two of our churches in the storm. One of those churches was rebuilt before the close of that year. This year we have painted it, lighted it, and secured an organ, and have no indebtedness on it. We have also rebuilt the other at a cost of about $1400, including furniture, organ, and lights, and have on it an indebtedness of about $150. Here I take the liberty of repeating an expression coming from my presiding elder, "It is the prettiest and most convenient country church I know of in the Mississippi Conference." Our parsonage is in a much better condition than when we came to it. We have had it screened and painted, and some new furniture placed in it, and an indebtedness of $50 has been canceled. We have held our meeting at each church in the charge. We began on the fifth Sunday in July, at Alexander Memorial, with Brother J. L. Selis, our pastor at Wiggins, doing the preaching. On the first Sunday in August, at Pine Grove, we held our third quarterly conference; and during four days following our presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, remained with us in a series of revival meetings. On the second Sunday in August, Rev. Robt. Selby, commissioner of Emory University, was with us. Not only did he deliver his magnificent educational address, but he also preached a powerful sermon in the afternoon from the text: Math. 6, 19-20. We were very glad indeed to have Brother Selby with us. On the Monday following, Brother Sells, of Wiggins, joined us again for a few days' meeting. On the fourth Sunday in August, we commenced the last of our revival meetings for the year at Antioch, with Brother Claude P. Jones, our pastor at Long Beach, doing the preaching. As a whole, I have never had better and more effective work done than these three brethren did. As a result of our year's work thus far, we have had the pleasure of receiving into the Master's Church 28 members. Allow me a word more in reference to our presiding elder: We find him just as efficient in preaching Jesus to lost souls in a series of revival meetings as when sitting in the presiding elder's chair. We are praying that the close of the Conference year may show the best year's work that this pastor has ever done and that the Mentorum charge has ever reported to an Annual Conference. Yours in the Master's service. PAUL H. GRICE, P. C.

MONTPELIER, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: We recently had a fine meeting at Woodland, Miss., on the Montpelier charge. Rev. O. L. Savage, of Webb, Miss., did the preaching. He gave us a series of most excellent sermons, delighting and edifying the congregation. We had with us also Rev. C. A. Churchill, of Hickory Flat, Miss., who contributed to the success of the meeting by his splendid leadership in the song services. He is a spiritual and successful worker. Those who need some one for such a service would do well to secure him.

EXCHANGE YOUR OLD BODY FOR A NEW ONE.

You can do it in three weeks and thereby renew your health. This article is written by a physician who has seen it demonstrated in numerous cases and explains how it is done.

Listen: If your weight is one hundred and thirty-three pounds your body contains eighty pounds of water, for according to standard medical books, the human body contains sixty-seven and one-half per cent of water. Now disease is invariably caused by impurities which we call poisons, and these are readily dissolved by the right kind of natural mineral water. Drink ten gallons (eighty pounds) of Shivar mineral water (use no other water for twenty-one days), and you will have exchanged your old body for a new one, so far as the soluble part of it is concerned. The impurities will be dissolved and pass away. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other curable conditions due to impure blood, accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer which appears below. Read the following letter carefully; then sign and mail it:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-J, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

FROM THE BROOKHAVEN AUXILIARY.

Mrs. Bowen, of the Brookhaven auxiliary, writes: "We are enjoying our new church very much, and our missionary society is much alive. We have ordered for our reading during this month and next 'An African Trail.' We expect to present it to the public in some program form after we have finished reading it. Then we will take up 'The Two Americas' for serious study through the winter.

"We have had only two meetings each month during the hot yeather, but beginning with September we expect to go back to the every week meeting."

The women of this auxiliary conceived the idea of having a "kitchen shower" to furnish their new kitchen with its needed utensils; so on the afternoon of July 31 the missionary society was hostess for a most delightful, social event. The friends from the Church, as well as from other religious organizations, gathered in the spacious auditorium at the appointed hour, and after a pleasing program, consisting of devotional exercises, a welcome address, and exquisitely rendered songs and music, all were invited to the sub-story, where many lovely and useful gifts were displayed, attesting the generosity of the friends of the society. Dainty refreshments were served, which added much to the enjoyment and sociability of the hour.

DEFINING A STUDY CLASS.

A Mission Study Class is:

Meeting weekly
In some home or chapel
Seated around a table
Studying together
Inspiring facts and stories,
Opening session on time,
Not extending over one and one-half hours.
Sessions brimful of True enthusiasm,
Used to stir up the "gift of God,"
Devoted to enlarged efforts to encourage Youthful spontaniety to form.

Concerted plans for extending Larger and broader knowledge to
All church members, that Such may aid in Strengthening the army of the Great King.

—Mary A. Gildersleeve, in "The Home Mission Monthly."

AN ENCOURAGING NOTE FROM ANGUILLA.

Miss Dora Crockett writes from the Auguilla auxiliary to tell of an interesting meeting recently held there.

It has been some time since we have had a report from an auxiliary in the Port Gibson District, and, living in this district, we are naturally anxious for it to "appear well." We have a splendid band of women but they are very modest and do not like to "sing their own praises." We have digressed a little, but it is pardonable, we are sure, for it was such a pleasant surprise to hear from Anguilla and to learn how very much alive it is.

The meeting was held in the home of one of the members and the subject for the afternoon was "Prayer." Scripture reading, talks, and the songs selected, all bore upon this wonderfully vital subject, or the life that is the outcome of fervent and constant intercourse with the Source of all power. Miss Crockett writes that it was a helpful meeting and was enjoyed by a goodly number, and it could not be otherwise when we consider that, "They never sought in vain that sought the Lord aright."

MEDICAL WORK IN LOS ANGELES.

"Our Medical Department has been most encouraging the past quarter. We have had two Christian doctors added to our forces. One of our Mexican mothers said a few days ago: 'I wish I could slip some money to that doctor without his knowing where it came from; he has been so kind to me.' When I interpreted to him what she had said, he answered: 'I would surely know where it came from, so you had better not attempt it. Would you like to know how to repay me? Bring some one who does not know Christ over to the service next Sunday.' To another he said: 'Your body is in a hopeless condition, but your face tells me you are a Christian. Am I mistaken?' You can imagine my joy over the privilege of interpreting for such a doctor."—Miss Alfter.

NOTES FROM ST. MARK'S HALL, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The new trained nurse, Miss Vogel, has arrived, and Miss Gibson has returned from her vacation, thus making a complete staff of resident workers for the first time this summer. The new workers are very enthusiastic about St. Mark's Hall and some very definite results are expected from the work during the coming year.

The laboratory for the clinic has been equipped and is ready for service. The assistance of Dr. Pitkin has been secured for general clinic work.

Some improvements have been made in the home, such as papering of the chapel and giving the clinic a coat of calsomine. The missionary society of Shreveport donated two bed-room rugs, a piano scarf, and nine children's books.

Several outings have been enjoyed. Sixteen of the Camp Fire Girls were entertained at the summer cottage of one of the girls at Milneburg. Bathing, boating, stories and Camp Fire songs were the order of the day. The girls have promised to take the 2nd precinct for Woman's Registration Day.

The Junior and Intermediate girls' class had a hike to the woods, and the meal cooked over the camp fire was a jolly occasion. The Scouts were not neglected, for weekly hikes to places of interest have been indulged in by them.

An Incident of the Work.

A Central American woman with an operation pending went to the Italian service and asked for prayer. The people gladly responded. She came through the operation successfully, and her gratitude knew no bounds. In repay for the services of the surgeon, she is helping him with Spanish. Who can tell the influence of these services upon her life? May they transform her into a "vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the Master's use."

Statistics.

Two hundred and ten visits were made during the month and 265 were received; 57 books were loaned; 105 shower baths were taken; an average attendance of 10 for the Camp Fire meetings, and 30 at the vacation school.

Number of general clinics held, 7; old patients treated, 284; new patients, 127; prescriptions filled at Sickle's Drug Station, 1,011.

SHORTAGE OF MEDICINES.

"Will the next steamer bring the necessary medicines?" is the daily question in Africa these days. Dr. H. L. Weber, writing from Efuleu station, tells of a 14-year-old boy who brought his sick mother to the hospital. She was very ill, and they had walked a hundred miles to reach the medical aid she needed. But there was no medicine, and the missionary was forced to turn them away. The boy broke down and cried, for the mother will probably die before the needed drugs arrive. This is just one of the heartaches the missionaries suffer in these troubled times.—The Continent.

"My Daughter!"

In these words is reflected a mother's pride. In the joy behind them is her reward for the pain and sacrifice she so willingly gave and the loving forethought she so wisely exercised.

Her daughter—now a woman—noble in character, pure in heart, charming in personality, sensible in mind and cultured in her accomplishments.

Scientific Treatment For Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a salt combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists; price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN

Winnsboro, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: On the night of July 16 my meeting at Crowville started and continued for eight days, resulting in much good and in six additions to the Church. The congregations were very large and appreciative. The singing was led by Brother Paul I. Templeton, and the preaching was done by myself. The people showed their appreciation of Brother Templeton's singing by a really nice contribution. The pastor was also remembered.....On August 7 my meeting started at Boeuff Prairie, and continued six days, resulting in several conversions and in 19 additions to the Church. Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe District, did the preaching and did it well. As a token of appreciation, the Church presented him with $102. Brother A. C. Searcy had held a week's meeting at the Extension School, a few miles from Boeuff Prairie Church, which added much to the meeting held by Brother Lutz. At the close of my meeting in Winnsboro the Woman's Missionary Society presented the pastor with a beautiful palm beach suit, which was highly appreciated. All things considered, we are moving along fairly well. The work is considerably behind with the pastor's salary; but I am sure that the officials will look after the financial side between now and the meeting of the Annual Conference. Should any brother need help in a revival, I shall be pleased to aid him. The Lord bless the Advocate.—S. D. Howard, P. C.

P. S.—The Woman's Missionary Society at Winnsboro has raised nearly $200 for the Red Cross. They are a splendid set of workers.

Live Oak Church, La. Conf.

Former pastors and the many friends of Live Oak Church who have moved to other parts of the State will be interested to know that the Lord is still blessing us who remain. We have closed a most successful revival this evening, August 24. Seven bright young persons were added to the membership on profession of faith, and the church members were drawn closer in the bonds of Christian fellowship than they perhaps ever were before. Our pastor, Brother P. S. Carpenter, was absent on account of the serious illness of his wife, but Brother J. L. Evans, who did all the preaching, seemed very much at home among us in the Master's work and won the love of every one at his first service. His sermons were pointed, plain and intensely practical. At the beginning of the service on the last night of the meeting the usual order of things was reversed: instead of the pastor or one of the stewards taking a collection for Brother Evans, that good man spoke of the pastor's condition to the congregation and they responded in a manner that was a credit to them and which will be a blessing to Brother Carpenter. A committee of young ladies looked after Brother Evan's interests. I cannot close this report without mentioning our splendid Sunday school. Mrs. Conelin Easterly has a class of 26 earnest workers who are bringing things to pass. They are holding devotional services on Sunday evenings, and are looking after the sick, the poor, the neglected and others, and have bought and paid for the paint to freshen up the church, so that we will soon have "a little brown church in the vale." The other teachers, Mrs. Laura Hunstock, Mrs. Nettie Coxe, Mrs. I. D. Easterley, and Mrs. B. A. Underwood are all faithful and efficient. They know God, their Bibles, and how to teach. We thank God, and take courage.—W. H. Underwood.

Foxworth, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: We closed yesterday afternoon the last one of our meetings on the Foxworth charge; so perhaps it will not be amiss to let you know what we have accomplished this year. I had received prior to the beginning of these meetings 18 members—4 on profession of faith and 14 by certificate, and had baptized 3 adults and 15 infants. So I had a pretty good start.....Our first revival was here at Foxworth. Brother W. M. Sullivan did the preaching; Brother A. C. Watson, Jr., led the singing, and Miss Ruby Walker played the piano. We had a corps of as earnest and consecrated workers as one need want. There was a great deal of good accomplished. We had two accessions.....The next meeting was at Sandy Hook, with my classmate Rev. J. Loyd Decell assisting. Brother Decell is a princely, good fellow and made full proof of his ministry. We also had two accessions here.....The next meeting was at Summer's chapel where, on account of Brother Bennett's going to Laurel, the pastor did the preaching. We had a really good meeting. The people gave me very earnest support and we had 3 accessions.....Last came our meeting at Hopewell. Brother A. B. Barry, a man of God and a fine fellow, did some splendid preaching, and we had a real old-time revival

I have already spoken to these brethren about returning next year, and they have very kindly consented to be with me then. I have always had a pretty hard time getting a man for the first time, but I am glad to say that they are willing to look over my shortcomings and come again. I forgot to say that the people at Sandy Hook, in addition to pledging the pastor's salary and the Conference collections in full, told the pastor that a nice Conference suit was awaiting the day of its need; and at Hopewell they added to the Conference outfit a hat and shoes. So look out! Some preacher is going to want my place. Thank God for a people loyal and true. God is with us.—Hugh K. McKee, P. C.

STOP THAT PAIN!

The few misguided people who argue against the relief of pain as a first step in treatment, either have never suffered from any pain themselves or else they do not know what they are talking about.

It is all right to realize that pain may be the danger signal for some more serious complaint and it is well to look deep into the reason for pain, but the first step is to gain as speedy relief as possible in a safe way.

Pain is the greatest ally that disease has. Pain is the artillery, it batters down the nervous defenses of the body so that disease can safely take hold of the body.

But not only does pain do physical harm to the body, but it also does moral harm which may be tremendously far-reaching in its effects.

The nagging effect of pain is such that it will change the disposition of a person to such an extent that they will become a burden to themselves and to everybody else. The person who has normally the sweetest temper may be readily turned into an irritable crank by a succession of unrelieved headaches or pains.

Stop that pain by using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills according to directions. They are effective, safe and harmless. They can be purchased at any drug store, and the druggist is always willing to return the purchase price if the pills fail to relieve pain. You are the judge yourself. It will cost you nothing to try.

All Traces of Scrofula Eradicated from the System

By the greatest of all purifiers.

A common mistake in the treatment of scrofula has been the use of mercury and other mineral mixtures, the effect of which is to bottle up the impurities in the blood, and hide them from the surface.

The impurities and dangers are only added to in this way.

For more than fifty years S. S. S. has been the one recognized reliable blood remedy that has been used with highly satisfactory results for Scrofula. Being made of the roots and herbs of the forest, it is guaranteed purely vegetable, and absolutely free from all mineral ingredients.

You can obtain S. S. S. from any drugstore. Our chief medical adviser is an expert on all blood disorders, and will cheerfully give you full advice as to the treatment of your own case. Address Swift Specific Co., Dept. F Atlanta, Ga.

Editorial

"Learn how sublime a thing it is To suffer and be strong."

He who would set others afire spiritually must have his own heart aflame.

"Salvation by character," one of the new teachings that has sprung up, would not have opened the gates of Paradise to the thief dying on the cross.

The rapidity of one's growth in grace depends in part, at least, upon one's faithfulness in feeding and nurturing the spiritual life in the soul; but the discipline that comes through the years, under God's providential direction, also has much to do with it. "The perfecting of the saints" is not the work of a day. It takes many and varied experiences to make a really great Christian.

If you are a Christian, you are one of Christ's representatives in the world. What do your character, life, and service testify in your community concerning him? Do they witness to his power to save? to his love for sinners? to his deep concern for all unfortunate and needy human beings? It is no little responsibility to be a disciple of Jesus on earth. Much depends upon the extent to which you are faithful.

There is no mistaking the influence of good and bad reading. From a book on our desk, we take the following: "There is an account of two girls, one of whom read all about the wicked and licentious court of Louis XVI; her cousin read all about Joan of Arc—her noble doings and life. The first, after a time, fell and became an abandoned woman; the second became one of the noblest women in America, widely known for her good works."

Christ came not simply to save men from the grosser forms of immoratity, but from all sin. We fear that there is not now enough preaching against what Mr. Wesley called sin in believers—pride, envy, selfishness, uncharitableness, ill temper, covetousness, ambition, and such like. Even ministers may be afflicted with "these vices of the virtuous." Let us hold the standard high, brethren, and be certain to measure up to it ourselves. God wants his people to be a holy people.

Any field is large enough to furnish an opportunity to win a fadeless crown. A spiritual ministry to a single soul, whatever men may think of it, commands the attention of the shining hosts of heaven. What was more striking in the earthly career of our Lord than his readiness to labor in the smallest circles—to preach even to a lone auditor the glorious truths of the Kingdom? The lowliest man is of inconceivable worth, and to save such an one is a greater achievement than to win the proudest honors of the world. Is there not need for a deepening of this conviction among us?

THE BIBLE DOCTRINES INDISPENSABLE.

There is no saving power in the Bible itself. The transforming forces of redemption are LIVING AGENCIES that are outside of the written Word—the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Well has the poet sung—

"Beyond the sacred page
I seek thee, Lord;
My spirit pants for thee,
O living Word."

But it must not be inferred from this statement that the glorious pages of the Divine Revelation are not of inestimable importance. They unfold the unvarying laws of the spiritual Kingdom, showing us the way, and the only way, by which we may reach the Living Agencies that can regenerate us and deliver us from sin.

Electricity has its laws, and, by acting in accord with them, we can find it, accumulate it, and harness it for the service of man; but if the books that disclose these laws should be flung aside and men should seek to gather and utilize electricity in other ways, they would seek in vain. It would be to them a hidden and undiscoverable force, flashing no message, lighting no city, turning no wheels.

So, when men turn from the essential truths of the Scriptures and strive for salvation in other ways, they are doomed to failure and disappointment—never can they find God and conscious peace and pardon and the spiritual strength to live a holy life. These may be found only by the Bible process of conviction, repentance, faith in the divine and crucified Christ, and a new birth. Hence, if these cardinal doctrines, and the important facts that undergird and cluster about them, be forsaken, Christianity is forsaken. Churchanity may be left, and may be built up, but not CHRISTIANITY. Thus we see that the maintenance of sound doctrine is absolutely necessary to save men and extend the Kingdom. Without it, there is no path to God, and no method by which his power may be brought to bear upon human hearts and lives.

BISHOP GALLOWAY'S VIEW.

In 1886, when Bishop Galloway was the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, a spirited discussion arose concerning the question of having Missionary Bishops, and in the course of the debate the question of assigning our Bishops to residential areas in the homeland was also raised. Bishop Galloway opposed both of these propositions on the ground of undesirability, and ably, and we think convincingly, argued that neither of these changes could be put into operation except by amending the Constitution of the Church. If we can find the space to do so, we may reproduce in the near future his masterful utterance in support of this view. For the present, we can only make a brief quotation to show how perfectly we were in accord with the Bishop's convictions in taking the position in a recent editorial, that to assign a Chief Pastor BY ONE ACT to an episcopal district, with almost continuous and unchangeable authority, for four years, would be violative of the principle of an "ITINERANT general superintendency." Bishop Galloway said:

"The principle of the itinerancy rests upon two things: an appointing power, and a statute of limitation. As a matter of fact, appointments are made ANNUALLY, and have been during the entire time of organic Episcopal Methodism. And the rule of ANNUAL assignments to work applies to Bishops and all names on the roll of any Conference. If this rule is violated by one class, it requires no prophet to foretell the downfall of the itinerancy. The Bishops wisely put themselves under the rule of annual assignments." (Italics ours.)

MAY IT NEVER BE RESUMED!

Last Saturday night at 11 o'clock the making of whiskey in the United States ceased, nor can any now be imported. It is estimated that as a result 40,000,000 bushels of grain will be saved annually for worthier uses. It is claimed, however, that the stock of distilled liquors now in the country amounts to 230,000,000 gallons, but some of this may be used for other than beverage purposes. Still enough will be left to do incalculable harm. This stopping of the manufacture of liquor was a war measure; but let us pray and work for the prohibition cause with the hope that it may never be resumed; or, if it should, that it may be only for a brief time. If liquor-making is a curse in the time of war, it cannot be other than a curse in the time of peace.

OVERDONE.

The following utterance by our able and admirably poised confrere, Dr. George Summey, of the Presbyterian Journal of this city, is so sane and timely that we are minded to pass it on through our columns:

"The religious press has of late been giving almost too much attention to the theological vagaries of Mr. H. G. Wells, the English author. This is due, perhaps, to the speed with which many rushed to the judgment, from his 'Mr. Britling,' that Mr. Wells had come to an evangelical faith, a fact which some hailed as showing that war can do some good things. But 'Mr. Britling' was not carefully read. Its author showed belief only in a finite God, in that striking work. He has utterly repudiated the idea of his acceptance of evangelical views. He is only one of many who are trying to depreciate the faith. He is not of enough importance to receive the attention which is being given him."

Motive is a most important factor in religion. A man may fast, and pray, and preach, and give alms, and yet have such a purpose as to strip all these actions of any value in the sight of God, so far as he himself is concerned. There is need for a frequent reading by most of us of our Lord's wonderful utterance recorded in the first part of the Sixth Chapter of Matthew.

IT'S AT THE BOTTOM.

This poem takes one of the torpedoes of Dr Charles L. Slocum, in the recent submarine exercises of the Flying Squadron. No punctuation marks are used, but whether it refer to this or that it is Dr Slocum's own composition, we do not know.—Editor of Advocate.

If I could put within my mind
The manner Jesus wrought,
Not all the gold in all the mine,
Nor jewels countless as the sand,
All in the balance flung,
Could weigh the value of that thing
Round which his fingers once did cling.

If I could have the table He Once made in Nazareth,
Not all the pearls in all the seas
Nor crowns of kings or kings to be
As long as men have breath,
Could buy that thing of wood be made—
The Lord of love who learned a trade.

Yea, but His hammer still is known
By honest hands that toil,
And round its table men go down
And all are equals, with a drive
Nor mill nor pearls can sell
The shop at Nazareth was bare—
But Brotherhood was builded there.

NOT YOUR OWN.

Never say "It is nobody's business but my own what I do with my life." It is not true. Your life is put in your hands as a trust for many others beside yourself. If you use it well it will make many others happy. If you abuse it it will harm many others beside yourself.—James M. Pullman.

THE SOUL'S AMBITION.

Happiness is not our being's end and aim. The Christian's aim is perfection, not happiness, and every one of the sons of God must have something of that spirit which marked their Master—that holy sadness, that peculiar unrest, that high and lofty melancholy, which belongs to a spirit which sorrows after holiness in which it can never attain.—F. W. Robertson.

PATIENCE IN PRAYER.

We have need of patience in prayer for God does not always give a speedy answer to the petitions of his children. George Muller tells of continuing in prayer ten, twelve, and even twenty years for some specific blessing that eventually came. The Psalmist says, "I waited patiently for the Lord, and he inclined unto me and heard my cry."—Unidentified.

LIKE THE MASTER.

When Felix Neff undertook the pastorate of the High Alps, a neat cottage was built for him, in the pleasantest spot in the parish. But, his anxiety to reach all the people was such that he never spent more than three days in a month there. With a staff in his hand and a wallet on his back he traveled from this point twelve miles westward, sixty eastward, twenty southward, and thirty northward. While his strength lasted he never slept three consecutive nights in the same bed, nor allowed himself a day's repose. The land of which this man is the flame is the victory that is overcoming the world.—The Earnest Worker.

A "STRONG" CONGREGATION.

"Is it a strong congregation?" asked a clergyman respecting a body of worshipers.

"Yes," was the reply.

"How many members are there?"

"Seventy-six."

"Seventy-six! Are they so very wealthy?"

"No; they are poor."

"How, then, do you say it is a strong church?"

"Because," said the gentleman, "they are earnest, devoted, at peace, loving one another, and striving to do the Master's work. Such a congregation is strong, whether it is composed of five or five hundred members."—Selected.

IN THE EASTERN HEMISPHERE—A TRAVEL LETTER.

By Rev. John Paul.

In sure, the Sado Maru in which we crossed the Pacific is called an interminable ship. There are ships vastly larger, but it is large enough as to burn a thousand tons of coal between the two landings—Seattle and Yokohama. It is an old ship, but thoroughly seaworthy. During the Russo-Japanese war it was attacked and supposedly sunk by a English cruiser, but they pumped her out, escaped through a heavy fog, and reached port. The Japanese fleet afterwards destroyed the same cruiser, and our ship has one of its old enemy's life-buoys as a relic. That is like carrying in one's pocket a disk of the bear that ran him up a tree. It is a little matter of human interest to say that I was not sea-sick while crossing the Pacific, though we were near the track of a small typhoon for a day and night. Of course it took caution to escape the influence of such a serious environment, when, as a rule, so many people are deeply moved.

From the standpoint of evangelism, I have learned that a ship is a hard field. I observe from Paul's experience that only when dire calamity lends its influence may the preacher hope to call mourners or open the inquiry room. But I have learned from my latest experience that a few clean-cut Christians on a ship can create an atmosphere which will suppress the audacity of the wicked and greatly restrain the forces of evil. The Japanese ships are supplied with old Church of England hymnals and manuals, and the purser invites some one whom he deems a proper person to conduct a Sunday morning service for the first and second-class passengers. I suppose as less the steerage passengers, who on our ship, were in the majority, take pot luck or have it out with the devil. I had the honor of being selected for this pastoral responsibility on our ship, and preached on the first Sabbath of the journey, requesting Rev. F. H. Jeffery, a Congregational missionary to India for the American Board, to preach on the second Sabbath. To bring in the educated Japanese, I planned to open the service with the Japanese national anthem, having rounded them up personally beforehand and got their promise to be present and sing the song. Under I John 1. 1. I explained that all the world was seeking consolation, pleasure, and a good time, though many were seeking joy in curious and contradictory ways. I told them it was a demonstrated fact that peace and joy could be found only in a fellowship with the God that made us, that we could not have this fellowship, hence could not have fullness of joy, without a cleansing from all sin, and that only in the blood of Jesus Christ could this cleansing be found. The Spirit of God was present in the service and applied the exhortation.

In the steerage or third class we had a horde of Russians, some of whom were Jews, who had evidently run in the United States for shelter from the old tyranny, and who were now returning to Russia because the revolution had put them out of danger of punishment for their political views. The ship officers informed me that for many weeks every ship from America had brought a load of these peasants and Jews. They play the accordion and sing and dance like the Negroes of the South. Their features are similar to the better type of American negros. But bitter experience in Russia has set most of them against the Church, and some of them have drifted into the most blatant and hostile infidelity. Many have developed abnormal ideas of liberty and idealistic theories of government. Not many of them are educated, but most of them do considerable reading. The pity of it is that their minds have been fed on the pabulum of socialism and infidelity while in America, so that they are unconscious even of the existence of the best things we had for them. Numbers of them are returning from the sweet shelter we have given them, forgetting the virtues of our government and cursing it because of an aggregation of real and imaginary faults with which they charge us. I have learned to admire some of the ideals and sentiments of socialism, but on running their points against their system of philosophy one thing would assure me that it is not an immoral passing that is the major part of its advocates as I have known them come to be hearty workers in many movements. and they are zealous in practice, if not in speaking terms.

It was among these people that I was compelled to hold two services in the third-class dining room. I popularized the service from the start by opening up for questions at the close of the sermon, although I nursed bedlam when I got it. I listened patiently to the most maiming strictures against the ministry, the Church, and Christianity, and undertook in my turn to answer them all in a way that I hope may prove fruitful. The first service was received with such satisfaction by my most outspoken opponents that I was invited back on their own motion and told to speak on any subject I might choose, and open the meeting for discussion. I spoke next on experimental Christianity and told my experience. I told them that argument never led any man's soul and no argument was ever produced so strong that it could not be answered, excepting the one argument of experience. If a man has the blessing of love, joy and peace, and lives the life, bearing consistent testimony to what he has felt and seen, this constitutes the one unanswerable argument, an argument which no other movement outside of the gospel can produce. They were reminded that no other movement had its Mary Magdalenes, its Jere Macartys, and its other redeemed wrecches to its credit. Their arguments turned upon the war as a count against Christianity. I explained the righteousness of war so far as it is in defense of the weak and for the suppression of criminal nations. At this point the air became pretty hot, but I believe it entirely immoral to tolerate anything that would tend to weaken the hands of a government when pouring out blood in defense of a principle for which our nation is laying its manhood on the altar at this time.

I mention these situations at length because they are the straws which show the way the wind is blowing in the eastern hemisphere. I think the great bulk of Russians are of a larger caliber, so I am informed by some higher class Russians, who assured me that the peasantry would send up delegates to a convention and that a successful constitution would be framed. I learn from some aboard that the Zionistic Jews in Russia are quite busy, and quite hopeful that the war will eliminate the Turk from Palestine as well as from Europe and give them back their country for development, that they may rebuild their temple and restore their worship under the protection of one of the great sympathetic and benevolent world powers such as Great Britain or democratized Russia. Many Bible students believe that while the prophets of the Old Testament have written largely as to exposing the sorrows of Zionism.

Soon my ship is to land in Yokohama, and before I begin work in the great English-speaking mountain conference at Karuizawa, I must preach through an interpreter five days in an interdenominational convention for the "deepening of the spiritual life" among native Japanese preachers and teachers of all important denominations. This begins two nights from the time I write. Already the mountains of Japan rise in the distance to the right of our ship, the sailboats of Japan's great army of fishermen are in every side of us, and the flocks of small birds are following us in search of food.

AN ADDRESS.

Chattanooga, Tenn., August 28, 1911.

Editor New Orleans Advocate, New Orleans, La.

Dear Brother: In behalf of about two hundred laymen, whose names are signed to the inclosed "Address to the Church," I am sending you a copy, with the request that it be published in your paper next week, if possible.

This movement is a matter of public interest, and as you will see from the address, we desire nothing better for it than the widest publicity in Church circles. The Church press is the natural medium for all matters of this character, and we feel sure you will gladly accord the desired space

Bespeaking for the movement fair treatment and open-minded consideration on the part of our editors and confidently expecting no less, I am

Yours very truly,
B. F. FRITTS, Vice Chairman.

To the Preachers and Laymen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Brethren: The undersigned laymen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, loyal to the fundamental principles of the Church and desiring with all our hearts to promote its best interests and highest usefulness, believe the time has come when the Church should face and act upon certain issues that we are convinced are vital to its welfare. Times change, and all human institutions must change with them or be left behind. The issues we have in mind do not affect the principles of Methodism, but have to do solely with the adaptation of its policies to changing conditions.

Methodism had its origin in the days when absolutism in government was all but universal. The great democratic movement which in later years has swept over the earth had but just begun. The State was a monarchy, the Church a close clerical corporation. Methodist polity, framed under these conditions, inevitably and rightly adapted itself closely to the ideals of the times. That of our own branch of Methodism has changed very little from that day to this. The American Revolution woke the world to the ideal of democracy, and thrones and kingdoms have been tottering ever since. The divine right of kings has given way to the acknowledgment of the divine rights of the people, even in conservative China and despotic Russia. In the last one hundred and fifty years the world has gone forward an age. Our Church must keep pace or lose its crown to other denominations more in harmony with the democratic ideals of the times. Some of the changes that we believe to be imperative are here suggested:

1. The development of a greater degree of democracy in the government of the Church. This would involve not only additional lay recognition in the councils of the Church, but a greater degree of liberty for the ministry also.

2. The limitation of the authority of the episcopacy, both as to term of office and as to the making of appointments, and the limitation of episcopal functions to executive duties only, whereas at present the Bishops are vested also with legislative and judicial powers, thus combining in one small group the three functions of government.

3. A clearer definition of the relation of the episcopacy to the Church, and to the General Conference Boards especially.

In view of the above, the undersigned laymen and others of the same mind have united for three specific purposes:

1. First of all, for an investigation along the lines suggested above, to be conducted in the light of public records and indisputable facts. We intend that this investigation shall be wholly unbiased and free from personal interest. Its purpose shall be solely to discover the facts and to reach only such conclusions as the facts may warrant. The following are some of the subjects to be dealt with:

The problem of conflicting authority between the General Conference Boards and the Bishops.

The need for adequate lay representation in the Annual Conferences and for larger lay responsibility in general for the welfare of the Church.

The influence of the episcopacy on the ministry of the Church, growing out of the Bishops' absolute and arbitrary appointing power, from which there is no appeal.

The attitude of the episcopacy toward unification, social service, and other questions of the day.

The Constitution proposed for the Church by the College of Bishops, wherein they claim for themselves authority co-ordinate with and independent of that of the General Conference.

2. In the second place we wish to develop a program of publicity. Investigation will be fruitless unless the Church at large is given the facts. The Church is entitled to the facts. The rank and file of preachers and laymen are as much a part of the Church and as thoroughly devoted to its interests as are those in authority. Indeed, there can be no just authority in State or Church that does not center in and serve the rank and file. We propose to publish to the Church, therefore, in a series of carefully prepared articles the result of our investigations, that the Church may have the facts and form its own conclusions. These articles we will offer first to the Church papers, in the confident hope that they will publish them. Too long the discussions of these important questions has been shunned or suppressed. The time has come for facing the issue and for the frank expression of vital convictions.

3. But investigation and publicity will be useless if no permanent result is registered in legislation. We think, therefore, that we should keep before ourselves and the Church certain fundamental things as the goal of our efforts, to be realized, some of them at the next General Conference, others as soon as possible. Some of these aims are:

(1) The enlargement of the powers of the laity in our Church by increasing their number in the Annual Conference and by giving them representation in the cabinet. These changes will insure greater democracy throughout the Church and will bring about a far greater degree of lay interest and activity in all departments of its work.

(2) The limitation of the powers of the episcopacy by restricting its functions to the executive phase of government alone, the General Conference taking over the legislative and judicial functions.

(3) The limitation of the areas over which the Bishops operate, by assigning them, through a committee consisting of preachers and laymen, to certain districts which shall be large enough to have them touch the real life of the Church as general superintendents, and at the same time small enough to render effective service possible. As it is, the Bishops assign themselves, having the whole connection as their area of operation, making inevitably for less efficient service than the Church has a right to expect.

(4) The limitation of the tenure of office of Bishops hereafter elected to a term of years, subject to re-election or not as may be determined. As our Church holds the episcopacy to be an office, and not an order, life tenure is an anomaly. It runs counter to all sense of democratic justice and tends to make the office autocratic to a degree that is out of harmony with modern ideas.

(5) The effecting of such legislation as shall do away with the unit rule and secret session of the episcopacy. These we feel belong to a bygone order and can have no proper place in the program of the modern Church. The Bishops are the servants of the Church, and the Church has a right to know what they do and why they do it.

As the first of the series of articles mentioned above, we are sending you the statement of Dr. Ed F. Cook, late Foreign Secretary of our Board of Missions, dealing with the conflict of authority between the Bishops and the Board and throwing valuable light upon the general topic under discussion. The other articles will be forthcoming as fast as they can be prepared.

All who desire to keep in touch with this movement or to register themselves as favorable to any or all the changes suggested above are requested to send their names at once to Chairman Creed F. Bates, Chattanooga, Tenn. We particularly desire to get in touch with all laymen and preachers who find themselves in sympathy with the general purposes outlined above and who are willing as far as they have opportunity to assist in carrying them out.

Signed by 186 laymen.

THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT.

By Rev. W. W. Holmes, Presiding Elder.

We come to the last quarter of the Conference year with hopefulness and with a spirit for hard work. The preachers have all been faithful and progress has been made. The "one-to-win-one" campaign in the spring, followed by our Methodist Union Revival, in which all of our city churches participated, resulted in much good. The union revival was an experiment, and yet the good work accomplished through it surpassed our most sanguine expectations. The experiment showed that with the right leader and with an efficient organization a great Methodist union meeting can be held in New Orleans that will be far-reaching in its influence for good.

In our fall campaign we are emphasizing three things:

1. A Church Extension organization that will make New Orleans in the future a stronghold for Methodism by wisely and definitely occupying the field now—"and growing as the city grows."

2. An Adult Bible Class organization that shall be a vital force in every church in the city.

3. All financial obligations of our churches fully met.

A word about the different churches:

Algiers, with a building, dingy and dilapidated, looking more like a country store than a church, wholly inadequate to house the large Sunday school and rapidly growing congregations, is probably the livest church in the district. Not only has Brother Wier succeeded in building up a large congregation, but he has been successful in raising money for the new church. Here is an opportunity for a good investment. The present building is crowded to overflowing, and yet we haven't sufficient money, owing to the increased cost of building materials, to go ahead with the new church. More soldier-boys attend this church than any other of our churches.

Carrollton Church is maintaining its record of continuous progress. It is only a question of a short time when it will be the leading "family church" of the city. Brother Vaughan is in high favor with the people. I believe this is the only one of our churches that bought a Liberty bond.

Epworth Church is increasing slowly in numerical and financial strength. Brother Morris has laid great stress on evangelism this year. He held continuous revival services running through several weeks, which resulted in large good. A most splendid missionary society has been organized. An adequate equipment in the way of a new building is badly needed.

Felicity Church is located on "Vatican Hill," and, for that reason, a large Sunday school seems to be an impossibility. The church is well organized and is doing a splendid work. Brother Brown had Dr. E. C. Moore of Montgomery, Ala., to assist him in a revival service early in the spring, and several joined the Church. Brother Brown is making some very definite and aggressive plans for the fall work.

First Church continues to be a center of religious activities. It is the meeting-place for nearly all the large religious gatherings held in New Orleans. It ministers to a large transient population. The bulk of the membership live from three to five miles from the church. Even the parsonage is four miles away. If any church in our Connection needs deaconesses and helpers, this church surely does. Dr. Werlein is in a position now to render his largest service to the church, but unfortunately this is his fourth year.

Louisiana Avenue Church had a good revival meeting, is gradually reducing the debt on the parsonage, has organized a large Men's Bible Class, and is all the time doing something. Brother Gearheard is pastor.

Mary Werlein Mission, while it has had to eliminate some of its social features on account of limited resources, continues to be a spiritual force in the community. The regular services are held as usual. The Sunday school is larger than it has been for a long while. Brother Thomas is the "Father Confessor" to the soldier boys. He has given them hundreds of Bibles, and has ministered to the boys in many helpful ways.

McDonoghville Church, while small in membership, is active in all good works. It had a ten days' revival service in the beginning of the year, with Brother H. T. Young doing the preaching. The cottage prayer meeting is a feature of its work. Brother Mangum is a hard worker, and has a good helper in Brother Black, the District Lay Leader.

does not center in and serve the rank and file. WE PROPOSE TO PUBLISH TO THE CHURCH, THEREFORE, IN A SERIES OF CAREFULLY PREPARED PAMPHLETS THE RESULTS OF OUR INVESTIGATIONS that the Church may have the facts and form its own conclusions. Too long the discussion of these burning questions has been shunned or suppressed. The time has come for an honest facing of the issue and for the frank expression of vital convictions."

Let it be noted that, while Mr. Eleazer said something about offering matter to the Church press, this original formal address does not say one word about having any such end in view. For three months it was circulated with the quoted paragraph exactly as it appears above, and it was upon this statement, along with some other features of the movement, that Judge White based his utterance and that we predicated our recent editorial, entitled "Worse Than Okelleyism." But since this movement was exposed in the public prints—and even since it was formally sent out a few days ago with the first 42 names attached to it—the following sentence has been inserted in the paragraph given above: "THESE ARTICLES WE WILL OFFER FIRST TO THE CHURCH PAPERS, IN THE CONFIDENT HOPE THAT THEY WILL PUBLISH THEM." Think of this after the campaign has been carried on for six months, after this address has been going the rounds since the last of May, and after Dr. Cook's notorious pamphlet has been scattered about over the connection for an equal length of time! Did they offer that pamphlet to any Church paper for publication or review? Nay, it has been well nigh impossible for conservative people to get a copy of it, though we have heard of a Vanderbilt professor forwarding numbers of them for distribution to Methodist congregations. Nor was this "Address" offered for publication until it was unearthed and attention was focused upon the methods that were being employed in the fight against the Bishops. But for the fact that it was turned up, how long the movement would have been worked at privately, there is no telling.

In the light of the foregoing facts, we make the following observations:

1. This scheme, as has been seen, was hatched in the putrid atmosphere of Nashville, Tenn., where the Vanderbilt influence is dominant, all of the eight originators of it being Nashvillites, and four of them belonging to the Church with which Chancellor Kirkland has long been connected, and which is within a stone's throw of where the famous "Bishops' Squirm" was danced when the robbery of the Church of her university was being publicly celebrated.

2. The moving spirit in setting this agitation in motion was Mr. R. B. Eleazer, Editor of the Missionary Voice, an official publication of our Church, who capitalized his position in its interest, and who sought to carry the project forward through the Laymen's Missionary Movement, a part of our Church machinery. Many Lay Leaders were somewhat disaffected because they were not made ex-officio members of the Annual Conferences, a movement that was backed by the Board of Missions, and which would have given it a large influence with nearly one-fourth of the men who would have elected lay delegates to the General Conference. Mr. Eleazer knew this and took advantage of it, a thing that his connection with our missionary organ enabled him to do. (This "Address" to the Church is very largely signed by Lay Leaders.) This, so far as we know, is the first time in the history of our denomination that one organization of the Church, instituted for a high purpose, has been sought to be used for making war upon another department of our Church government—and this the department that was considered so important by the makers of Methodism that in the beginning it was safeguarded by a restrictive rule, and the only one that was. This effort to prostitute to unworthy ends a part of the machinery of the Church in a manner so disloyal and underhanded is really the worst feature of this Jesuitical procedure.

The Animus of the Movement.

3. Though we have not the space to go into the matter now (we may do so later), we do not hesitate to express the conviction that the refusal of the majority of our Bishops to stand for a policy of making our foreign missionary work interdenominational, instead of Methodistic, surrendering largely in doing so what we have been years in building up, and their unwillingness to see our Church in the homeland swept into an obliterating form of organic union with the Northern Methodist Church, together with the prejudice born of the Vanderbilt imbroglio, are what have brought on this effort practically to destroy our episcopacy. Note the declaration in the so-called "Laymen's Address" that one of the things to be investigated is "the attitude of the episcopacy toward unification." What is this but a threat to penalize and an effort to intimidate the Chief Pastors of Southern Methodism respecting the question of union? And Dr. Cook's pamphlet, the first document that has been sent out, is aimed principally at Bishop Hoss and Bishop Candler. The pro-union and pro-Vanderbilt Bishops are therein extolled. Bishop Hoss bore the brunt of the battle for the Church in the Vanderbilt contest, and his present physical condition is believed to be largely due to the indignities that were heaped upon him, and what he in consequence suffered, in that fierce struggle; Bishop Candler stepped into the breach in the gravest period of the crisis and has taxed his energies almost to the breaking-down point to rescue our prostrated and imperiled educational system; yet these are the men who are chiefly brought under fire by these agitators, Bishop Candler being specifically criticised for his services to Emory University in the distributed Cook brochure. Is this the reward that is to be meted out to these two majestic leaders for their unwavering fidelity to the Church and their unselfish and heroic labors in her behalf?

4. These few Nashvillites and Vanderbilters assuming to speak for the more than 2,000,000 laity of Southern Methodism—they were doing this before they had any signers other than the original eight—is certainly a remarkable spectacle. We do not mean to reflect upon ALL of the nearly two hundred signers of the "Address," that in the course of six months the Nashville leaders have been able to muster. There are some good men among them, but we do not believe that they realized the true animus of this movement when they consented for their names to be used in connection with it. It should be remembered that not all of the signers saw all of the letters that we are publishing in the Advocate. Some of them were circulated very guardedly. For instance, we know a prominent Conference Lay Leader whose signature is affixed to the paper who was not aware until a few days ago of Mr. R. B. Eleazer's part in launching this propaganda, and one of the most prominent men who has figured in it wrote a friend of ours recently that he had never seen the Cook pamphlet. It is truly a pity that such well meaning brethren should have been caught by the artful cunning of these schemers.

Not a Memorial or Petition.

5. Let it be carefully noted that this movement has not been an effort to petition or memorialize the General Conference in the usual manner—a right that belongs to all. It has been an attempt to organize by guarded and secretive methods a political machine throughout the connection, for the purpose of "investigating" certain things oracularly affirmed to be harmful and to issue and circulate publications with a view to revolutionizing the government of the Church. It is not a respectful inquiry as to the wisdom of the features of our polity objected to that has been proposed, but many of them have been sweepingly condemned in advance. And it should be observed that this widespread agitation has been precipitated at the most inopportune time conceivable—at the time when the grave question of unification is pending, and when, by every consideration, our people need to be united and harmonious. Various disintegrating forces are at work and the situation is the most acute and perplexing that has existed since 1841. It is difficult to see how any man who really loves his Church, if he is informed as to the true significance of this movement, can gain his consent to give it encouragement under the conditions now prevailing even if he believes in more democracy. Certainly any man ought, if he will think, be able to see that this is no hour in which to be tearing up the foundations of Southern Methodism and trying to make them over. A Nashville-born and Vanderbilt-inspired movement to democratize the Church, while the extreme Church unionists among us are striving to pull Southern Methodism into an alliance that would mean its absorption and extinction (as will be shown when what was done at Traverse City is made known), is surely, it seems to us, out of place and should, we think, awaken a feeling of resentment, instead of commanding support. If we are to have a democratic movement in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, let us insist that it shall come with better credentials and have about it a better odor. Vanderbilt leadership is the last thing that we need. It robbed, and outraged, and insulted us in the past, and it is unworthy of our confidence now.

The General Organ's Strange Course.

A few words more pertaining to the recent editorial utterance of the Nashville Christian Advocate. No paper, so far as we know, has had the least intention of refusing to print the address of these agitators. Indeed two of our Advocates printed it in full and others printed portions of it before they were requested to do so. We have good reason to believe that Doctor Ivey has had in hand for some time a copy of the orginal address and most, if not all, of the letters pertaining to this matter that we are giving a place in our columns this week. We doubt not that he is quite as familiar with the origin and course of the movement as we have shown ourself to be. But, though a number of our papers have condemned the tactics that have been employed, not a single clear statement in disapproval of them has he made.

Dr. Ivey, among other things, says: "If the laymen purpose to supplement the discussion of the questions involved through the private circulation of pamphlets and thus forestall a free, open discussion that all may hear or read, they purpose that which is un-Methodistic, unfair, and inimical to the best interests of the Church. All that is said should be through the regular channels of Methodist public opinion. Pamphlets on Church legislation are sadly out of place in Methodism. So we assume that the laymen's purpose is to use only the regular channels."

"If the laymen purpose to supplement the discussion with pamphlets!" Does not Dr. Ivey know that they have already circulated the Cook pamphlet throughout the connection, thus making themselves sponsors for it? And upon what does the Doctor base his assumption that only the Church press will be used? It is true that within the past few days the promised "series of PAMPHLETS," to follow that of Dr. Cook, has been changed to a "series of ARTICLES," and that it is stated that they will first be offered to our papers, but there is no pledge that discussion and agitation will be confined to the Church press. Is not an organization to be effected? Are not the names to be registered at headquarters, and are not the workers, apart from the public, to keep in touch with one another, after the manner of politicians? Read the last paragraph of the address. Where can any parallel to this program be found in the history of American Methodism?

We respectfully submit that, in view of the injustice that has already been done our Bishops and the harm that has been done the Church by this extreme agitation, characterized as it has been by an unfair spirit and by wrong methods, it is hardly a thing to be glossed over and dismissed with a complacent amiability; nor is it just to the men who uncovered it, as for instance, did Judge White, to speak of the movement as if it had started right and had been conducted throughout upon proper lines. As we have stated, the worst feature of this regrettable procedure has been the attempt by one of our official editors to organize quietly, if not secretly, a faction in the Church to achieve revolutionary ends, and that an effort has

The Great Battle

NOTES

Gov. L. E. Pothman, of Hawaii, has announced that liquor will be excluded from the menu of all official banquets given at the capital of that country.

Hon. E. D. Fowling, the Attorney-General of Oklahoma, holds that the prohibition law of that State forbids the use of wine for sacramental purposes. We have never been impressed with the merits of the fight against using wine in administering the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, but we think that the Churches, if necessary, can afford to treat the question in the interest of the temperance cause.

An inquiry into the cause of many cases of homicide in New York by the State Board of Health showed that in instances in which complete information was available intemperance were responsible for the act only. In 36 out of 128 cases even the coroner's verdict declared that liquor was to blame for the tragedies. Yet there are many comparatively good people who now will tolerate upon the saloon regime. How in the sight of God can they do it?

SALOON MUST PAY WIDOW $500.

The liquor traffic in Philadelphia received a body blow recently when, for the second time in little more than a year, a jury in the Common Pleas Court held a saloonkeeper responsible for injuries received by a man who had been sold too much liquor. The evidence showed that the decedent was a mill-worker who was ordinarily sober and industrious. Having accumulated a below-zero jag in a saloon he was refused to drink it excess and falling upon the street fractured his skull and died. The widow was awarded $500 by the jury.—The Presbyterian.

JOHN WILKES BOOTH'S LAST DRINK.

A Washington saloon has in its window the following sign: "In This Saloon John Wilkes Booth Took His Last Drink." Booth went with that drink in him to kill a President. If every saloon whose drinks have hurt men to crime would confess it, as does this brazen saloon in Washington, there would hardly be a one in the land that would not be bulletined with the badge of some heinous offense. And yet some so-called Christians will vote to retain these dens of iniquity. Alabama has shut them up. Let the patriots not to say Christians, of this State see to it that they stay shut.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

THE COST OF DRINK.

We do not mean simply the financial cost. That is great enough, but it is only a small part of the total. We ran across a little record of fact in one of our State papers the other day that seems to us a good concrete example of the cost of drink. The correspondence was from New Bern, N. C., though similar ones might come from many another town in any of our States. We pass it on to our readers as we found it: "There died out at the county home this week a man who at one time owned at least seventy-five thousand dollars worth of real estate in this city, was a prominent merchant and who was respected by all who knew him. When he answered the call of the Grim Reaper he had not a cent to his name, had no friends and was dependent upon the county for his daily bread and a place to sleep. Booze and dope cost this man his home, money, friends and health, sent his wife to an insane asylum where today she is a raving maniac and blasted a career that otherwise might have been a brilliant one. Before he drew his last feeling breath the poor wretch asked that as one last favor these words might be inscribed on a tombstone to be placed over his grave: 'Here lies the body of ———. Whiskey and drugs were his friends for awhile, but they deserted him in the end. He died a derelict. Beware that this fate does not befall you.' And yet men will resort to more extreme measures to defend liquor than any other one thing we know!—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

UNIFICATION AGAIN.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

In my last paper I showed that the real barrier to the unification of the two branches of the Methodist Church, North and South, is their different policy of dealing with the race problem. The Northern Methodist Church contends that there is no other difference between the Negro and the white man except that of color, and that it is inconsistent with the spirit of Christianity to treat the Negro as a separate race. They hold that the Negro is entitled to worship in the same Churches, attend the same schools, live in the same localities, live side by side with us, and be received into our homes as our social equals; and that if we do not treat them in this way we are not living in the "Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." That is the doctrine and platform of the Northern Methodist Church, proclaimed from their pulpits and practiced by them—in the North. When the Conference of Unification met at Evanston, Ill., the colored delegates were entertained in white homes, and at Saratoga Negroes mixed with white delegates at the Detroit Conference. When they do not mix with Negroes in this way in Atlanta or New Orleans they are guilty of the very same discrimination for which Paul gave Peter such a memorable rebuke among at Antioch. And if we were to do not as Paul is demanding that people live up to their professions there would not be a Northern Methodist Church from the Potomac to the Rio Grande.

I showed further that the policy of the Northern Methodist Church if it should be adopted would mean a mongrel population, and that all experience proves that when white blood was mixed with Negro blood it improved the Negro but debased the white man. In other words, that the mulatto is an inferior type to the pure white man. And as the white race has led the progress of the world in the past, so it is essential to the progress of civilization in the future to keep the white race separate from the black race here in America. I showed that the position of the Southern Methodist Church is not based on the Northern people's idea of prejudice against the Negro growing out of the former relation as a slave, but on the facts of experience and scientific knowledge.

Now I want to show in this paper that it is best for the Negro to deal with him according to the Southern plan, treating him justly and kindly and giving him a square deal, but keeping him racially separate from the white people, letting him have his own Churches and schools and separate social life, prohibiting the intermixing of the races and thus keeping both races pure.

When the war ended, with great wisdom and foresight, our Church organized the Negro members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, into a separate branch of the Church, called the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. We gave them such property as was properly theirs, helped them to start their work, and have continued until now in the most friendly relation to them. We collect money to aid them in their work, their officers visit our Conferences, and are treated with all the courtesy of white men. They have made good and now number nearly 200,000 members, with their own churches and schools and multiplied agencies of work. Some of our strongest men have been Presidents of their principal school, and one is now at the head of that institution. These Negroes understand us, and there is no danger of any friction between the races. A pastor of one of these Colored Methodist Episcopal Churches recently invited me to speak to his young people. When I met him at his Church he said: "Doctor, you ought to feel at home here. These are your 'niggers.'" Imagine one of these Northern Methodist Negro preachers, trained in their "a Negro-is-as-good-as-a-white-man" schools, saying that. And he is as brainy and as cultured as any man they have among the Northern Methodists. But he is animated by a different spirit. I would share my last loaf with such a Negro; but I have no time for the Negro of the other type.

Now we are the guardians of these Colored Methodist Episcopal Negroes, and it is not right to turn them over to the control of a Northern majority that is hostile to them. And they are not hostile to them. I know of no antagonism to that of the Negroes of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have imbibed it from their leaders and it has been inspired by the Church to which they belong. We have helped their Churches—Southern Methodists have contributed thousands of dollars to aid their work—but I never heard of a Northern Methodist giving a dollar to the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. Let us stand by those Negroes in this crisis who stood by us in the war and see that they have their rights. They are in sympathy with our way of handling the race problem. The Northern Methodist Negroes are not. We will never have any trouble with the Negroes of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. We are certain to stand with the other race.

The horrible affair in Lincoln, a State where Negroes were murdered in cold blood and their bodies burned to ashes by ruthless white men, is the inevitable and direct result of the Northern Methodist idea of dealing with the Negro. It is all unnecessary easy to treat the Negro as a white man. If one has no better sense when there are only a few of them around, but it is a superficial and artificial sentiment. It is only sentimental. Let the Negroes appear in large numbers and come in competition. In other words, get in the white man's way, and then the real spirit of the Northern man manifests itself in riot violence against not individual offenders, but the whole race, and this indiscriminately men, women, and children. Here in the South millions of Negroes work peaceably side by side with white laborers. We had such affairs as the massacre in Lincoln's State here in the South during the Reconstruction era, when they were trying to force the Northern idea of dealing with the race problem on us by the bayonet, and we will have them again, whenever that idea is adopted. But we never have had, and it is safe to say we never will have, such horrible affairs in the South dealing with the Negro on the Southern plan of the separation of the races. Therefore our plan is infinitely better for the Negro. The Northern Methodist ideas about the Negro are like the character I took in the old legend of Cadmus: they spring up armed men, and precipitate strife that destroy themselves, until they see their mistake.

Whether we regard the welfare of all parties, white and black, at the present, or the vast and vital interests of future civilization, the Southern idea of dealing with the Negro problem is the best. The unification of the two Methodisms on any plan yet suggested would mean our abandonment of that plan. "A house divided against itself shall not stand." We cannot be in one Church with the Northern white saying the Negro is the equal of the white man, and there must be no discrimination between them, and the Southern white saying they must be kept separate.

I have no prejudice against our Northern brethren. No man among us has received more kindly courtesies from them than I have. I have been in their homes and preached in their pulpits from Boston to San Francisco and addressed their Conferences and enjoyed their fellowship. But I am sorry to be frank, they have no business in the South and with their doctrines about the Negro. They are a menace to our peace and happiness. I am in favor of driving them out, not by the bayonet, as they drove us out of our churches during the war, but by the irresistible force of public opinion, or compelling them to be consistent and practice what they preach about Negro equality, by showing them up in their true colors, and making them "mind their own skillet." The Southern people are not going to stand for these doctrines and have no use for people who propagate them.

It is now in order for some little mollycoddle sentimentalist to exclaim against me as a "reactionary," lacking a "vision of the larger things," and such tomfoolery. But facts are facts, and they can't sweep them away with buckets of molasses. But they can spoil the carpet and make a mess, and if they are not careful that is just what they will do with this unfortunate business.

LESTER'S REWARD.

By Cousin Joan.

It was Children's Day, and the girls and boys
Were passing in line before
A famous preacher with silv'ry hair,
Who stood by the great church door.

He took ev'ry hand, as the line passed by,
And smiled in each earnest face—
Till presently Lester Gray approached
With his tiny sister, Grace.

The boy had heard of the minister's fame,
And wanted to touch the hand
Of one who had labored in Africa—
That far-away wonderland.

But just as his turn came he helped wee Grace
To reach up her hand—so high!—
And never remembered about himself
Until he was almost by.

As he turned, a hand was laid on his head,
And he heard the great man say:
"The boy that puts others before himself
Is walking in Christ's own way."

THE FIGHT.

It was Bobby's very first day at school, and really he didn't quite know what to do. It seemed to him it was a very important day; the day, in fact, when he had definitely started toward the greatest desire of his heart—being a man.

His curls had been cut short; he'd a full-size handkerchief, exactly like his father's, and a brand new cap that didn't in the least resemble a baby cap. He had, in short, if his own feelings were anything to judge by, stepped clear of babyhood. Even his mother, when she had kissed him at the gate, had said, "Good-bye, little man," and dad had done even better, calling, with sort of an off-hand nod, "Wish you luck, young man."

At the gate he joined Tom Matthews, and together they marched toward the great brick building which was to mean so much hereafter to both of them.

"Tell you what," said Bob, and he appeared somehow about an inch taller as he spoke, "it makes a fellow feel good when he knows he's going to be a man."

Tom nodded. "Bet yer boots," he agreed. "I 'spect we'll get into 'bout forty-'leven fights before night."

"What-t-t?" Bobby's eyes widened.

"Course. If a chap's going to be a man he's got to be one," declared Tom emphatically.

Bobby tucked the thought away in the back part of his mind. He was no coward, but somehow that wasn't quite as he had been taught. Yet, after all, most likely his mother didn't really know, because she was a woman, and maybe women shouldn't be expected to know what men had to do.

As the two lads reached the school-yard gate the master of the building came briskly from the opposite direction and stepped in just ahead of them. Their eyes followed him up the walk. "I'd like," said Bob, watching the swinging stride, the broad shoulders, the keen, alert face, "to be that sort of a man."

Tom nodded. "Bet yer life," he said, "he can fight."

Next instant the gong sounded, and a moment later school had begun.

As the day wore along Bobby's eyes grew very bright and his cheeks very red. Often he glanced from his work to the bright-eyed teacher who, next to Master Wardwell, seemed the very embodiment of wisdom.

He liked to watch the little glints in her eyes, and he wondered once or twice if he were to fight a great fight some day if she would not be proud of him. He felt quite eager to try, and then and there a sudden resolve came to him that he would make her proud of him some day.

His eyes shone a little brighter at the mere thought, and then, just as Miss Archer turned for a moment to the window Tom caught his eye and twisted his face into such a queer knot that before he knew what was happening he had snickered outright.

Miss Archer turned. The room was very still. "Who was it laughed?" she inquired.

Tick, tick, went the clock. The song of a bird floated in, but otherwise there was not a sound. Bob's eyes were fixed steadily on his book.

Yet again the teacher spoke. "I asked," said she very distinctly, "who it was that laughed."

As the silence continued she turned away. "Very well," said she, and there was no more light in her eyes.

Slowly the hands of the big clock crept around toward four. Bobby's head was bent low over his work. His cheeks were scarlet. He wished there were no such thing as school. "Course," he said to himself, "'twas all right. I didn't tell a lie. I just kept still." And his mother's voice seemed to answer, in the very words he had so often heard her speak, "You can tell a lie, my son, as much by action as by words."

A few minutes before four Master Wardwell came in.

With keen eyes he looked searchingly into the forty boy faces before him. "I've just time to greet you as coming men, boys," he said heartily. "You're headed toward the up-grade, and I hope you'll all make the top without a single break. But not many of us do. Yet if we all stand together and pull together we'll get there in time."

The short hand of the clock lacked just a minute of four, and suddenly Bobby was on his feet.

He didn't understand why, but he knew that unless he told he could never face his mother. His face was very white; a great lump was in his throat. The teacher's face and the master's tall form seemed to waver in a mist, "Please, Miss Archer, "I laughed."

Behind him some one tittered. Then all was very still.

He sat down, thinking drearily that he'd have to give up making that great fight after all; that most probably they'd tell him he couldn't come there to school any more. Then, very clearly, the master's voice went on:

"There are a great many ways," said he, "of winning a fight, and a great many kinds of fight. But the biggest fight of all is the light a boy has with himself. And when he wins that he proves, beyond a doubt, that he's a man."

Turning, he spoke in low tones with Miss Archer, and the very next moment walked down the aisle and stood, hand outstretched, before Bob. "My lad," said he, "I want to shake hands with a boy who won the good fight of a man. You and I are bound to be chums." And as Bob slipped his hand into the big, firm one his eyes met Miss Archer's, smiling once more, and full of light."—Lucy D. Sterans, in "The Congregationalist."

ENVY THE RIGHTEOUS.

The older I grow, the less I care for the distinctions of men; indeed, I hold absolutely as valueless any distinction which wealth or influence gives. But I envy the man who knows more about God than I, and who lives in closer communion and fellowship with him than I do.—Pickell.

NOT AFRAID OF DEATH.

The Christian fears not death, for he knows that it will be his happiest day, and his bridge from woe to glory. Though it be the wicked man's shipwreck, it is the good man's putting into harbor, where, striking sails and casting anchor, he returns his lading with advantage to the owner, that is, his soul to God, leaving the hulk still moored in the haven, to be new built again, and fitted for an eternal voyage.—Feltham.

SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT FUND.

Believing that a great many members and friends of our Church are not fully informed concerning the organized movement known as the Superanuate Endowment Fund of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, it will be the endeavor of the present article to furnish such information.

This connectional fund was originated by the General Conference of 1902. Does one one inquire why? The answer is as simple, as it should be startling:

The superannuates, widows and their children had never been properly supported and this fund was meant to supplement their support.

This is a permanent fund, that is, the principal is not to be used, but invested, the interest only being available for distribution to claimants. For illustration, should one pay in $100, and should five per cent net interest be obtained, then at the end of one hundred years he would have paid $500 to the support of Conference claimants, and the original sum he gave would still be on hand and drawing interest. Making the safe assumption that proper pensions are due the veterans of the Cross, and that paying into this fund is even better than giving to a mere charity, how could one make a better contribution than to this fund?

The preachers have subscribed and paid liberally, some of them lavishly, considering their ability. But as a rule, however, the preachers are not aggressive workers for the fund. The first plan for creating the fund by taking up collections yearly in the Churches failed, and the fund was in danger of collapsing.

To prevent this, the one per cent assessment was fixed on all the Conferences, except Foreign Mission Conferences, as a safety expedient. So that it is now a law that each Annual Conference shall endeavor to collect for this fund one per cent of the sum paid for ministerial support the preceding year. Strangely enough, some of the Conferences have not yet adopted this assessment in full. So, it transpires, that only about $35,000 was collected last year on this account, whereas it should have been from five to ten thousand dollars more. Will Joint Boards who need to, please give heed to this?

The making of bequests to this fund is most appropriate and very important. The last bequest made is recent and liberal. We suggest to those intending to make bequests to confer with us before doing so.

We close this article by inviting attention to the purchasing of Annuity Bonds. No more important suggestion has been made here. In this connection we can make you a good business proposition.

CENTENARY COLLEGE

SHREVEPORT, LOUISIANA

Fall term opens Sept. 19. Full College courses leading to degrees; also High School preparation for College entrance. Military instruction offered. Comfortable dormitory, steam heat, hot and cold baths, good board at moderate cost. Faculty with university degrees. Health conditions unsurpassed. Christian influences.

R. H. WYNN, President BOX 6

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

BEFORE BIBLES FOR CHRISTMAS.

The fall is really passing and Christmas will soon be here. Perhaps you will then desire to give a nice Bible to some relative or friend. The Publishers' premium offer found on page 4 furnishes you an opportunity to secure excellent Bibles without their costing you a cent. The patrons are the Advocate's salesmen again, but this offer is not confined to them. Any one desiring to do so is invited to avail himself of this fine opportunity. If he does not, you may rest assured that in so doing YOU ARE NOT LIKELY TO HAVE MORE ANOTHER WITH CHANGE AT THIS. We are anxious to have a worker in every community, but would much prefer to have you be the worker. Get the Advocate, clear yourself and at the same time help yourselves. This offer will not extend beyond the meeting of the Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi.

WHAT HENRY GRADY SAID ABOUT IT.

Occasionally we hear of some preacher saying that there is no such thing as a Negro problem in the South. The brethren who talk that way very widely from such men as Lamar, Walthall, George, Ben Hill, John T. Morgan, A. H. Garland, M. C. Butler, Vance, Preston T. Nicholls, John W. Daniel and many other men of distinction, would, by long odds, that we might mention. Of these, some perhaps had a more kindly heart or a more analytical and constructive mind than Senator L. Q. George, of Mississippi the builder of the famous Constitution of that State, and we have heard him say many times that he regarded it, in view of all the complications involved, as by far the most serious and perplexing problem that had ever confronted the people of any section of the American union. Nor did he by any means think that it had been permanently settled: on the contrary, he held the view that the handling of it would tax the intensity of Southern statesmen for generations to come.

Our Church did not consider this disturbing issue as one to be lightly brushed aside when two great General Conferences—those of 1866 and 1870—saw fit, after the most careful deliberations, to go forward with the work of gathering its colored membership into an entirely separate and independent ecclesiastical organization. Some of the greatest men that Southern Methodism has produced sat in those assemblies and such was the course that they, in the fear of God, felt it wise to pursue.

But possibly it may be said that these men had come through the Civil War and were living in the time of Reconstruction, or the years immediately following, and that they magnified the negro problem out of its due proportions. This can hardly be said of the late Henry W. Grady a Georgian about whom there was certainly no trace of the "fire-eater" and whom many regard as the most forward-looking son that the South has had since the mighty struggle in the sixties. And here is his estimate of the gravity of the race problem given in an address in Boston—the last speech that he made—delivered a few days before his sudden death and soon after published in book form:

"No people * * * are so beset with the problem that they carry existence painful in its acuteness. Nor are they widely to blame for its presence. The race came under their care—our forefathers' inheritance—the darkest curse of the darkest century. No other people ever assumed a heavier task. No other race ever received at the hands of another a gift so heavy with responsibility. Two centuries of toil and tears have not yet availed to pay the debt. The growth of the race in numbers and intelligence has been phenomenal, but the future is not without its dangers. Its largest numbers are massed in the South, and the statesmanship of the South has not yet found the path to its highest development. Its future is the future of the nation. Its citizens are the nation's citizens. Its problems are the nation's problems. Under them, whether it will or no, we are required to carry these two races to higher and better ground in the end.

"Never has any race shown a more loyal devotion. Never before in the history of this republic has the white race divided on the rights of alien races. The red man was the owner of a vast domain in indifferent the war of the white American union. The yellow man was employed in the building of this republic because he is as cheap and as different. The red man was the owner of the soil—the yellow man labors without and accumulates—but they immigrated not, remained not and are gone. But the black man, starting out the nation, is united with every privilege of enfranchisement and power to the soil, and by people commanded to make good at my hazard and at any cost his full and equal heritage in America privileges and prosperity. It matters not that every other race has been denied a similar chance or reason. It matters not that whatever the wrongs and faults have existed in any era or in any place, there has been no irreconcilable violence. It matters not that no two races have ever stood before each other anywhere at any time on the same soil, with equal rights to people. In spite of all these things, we are commanded to make good this chance of American policy which perhaps has no chapter in American progress—to make certain here what has elsewhere been impossible between whites and blacks—and to reverse, under the very worst conditions, the universal verdict of racial history—and drive at to this superhuman task with an impatience that brooks no delay, a race that accepts no excuse, and a temper that discourages frankness and sincerity. We do not shrink from this trial. It is so interwoven with our industrial fabric that we could not discourage it if we would—so bound up with our honorable obligation to the world that we would not if we could. Can we solve it? The God who gave it into our hands. He alone can know. * * * The resolute, clear-headed, broad-minded men of the South—the men whose genius made glorious every page of the first seventy years of American history, whose courage and devotion you tested in four years of the fiercest war, whose energy has made bricks without straw, and spread splendor amid the ashes of war-wasted homes—these men wear this problem in their hearts and brains, by day and by night."

It is said that on the fly-leaf of the Bible of a sainted woman were found written these words: "This book will keep you from sin. Sin will keep you from this book."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. P. Mahoney of Lovelace, Miss., sends in a subscription to the Advocate and says of the work: "Everything is moving along nicely."

In announcing the end of a successful year on the charge, Rev. Wade Bryant, of Belzoni, La., says of his church: "Our Sunday School is doing fine work."

Rev. A. W. Turner says that Dr. E. E. Watson is one of the best supporters of the Anti-Saloon League work in Louisiana. All the pastors and laymen should give the organization their hearty co-operation.

Rev. J. J. Underwood, pastor of the Columbia Avenue Church, of this city, has been taking for a few days before taking an appointment the full work of the pastorate at the home of his brother-in-law, J. A. Bertrand, at Lovelace, La.

Rev. J. L. Dantzler of Lovelace, Miss., writes that he has had good meetings at his charge and that his work is progressing nicely. The latter remarks in two subscriptions for which we extend to him our thanks.

We wish we could tell you the confidence and esteem in which people hold Rev. C. W. Sinclair of Tupelo, Miss. He is a preacher and a pastor of a strong spiritual temperament. It is needless to say that he is getting an excellent quarter.

Brother R. M. Davis of Vidalia, La., writes his subscription to the Advocate and renewing it says the following encouraging words: "I like your paper for it is well filled and is every way helpful. Long may it live to do its part in the struggle for the right."

A correspondent says: "Dr. Seymour, who was born in Ohio, and Mrs. J. T. Wooten, of Detroit, Mich., an elderly couple, both United States, both the mother and daughter are quite expectantly well." The Advocate extends congratulations to these happy parents.

Rev. J. A. Bond, the efficient pastor at Myrtle Grove, writes in with three subscriptions to the Christian Advocate, and in his business letter says: "We are having some very fine meetings and some after the Bible school. Good. We hope that many of our friends will do likewise."

The Holy Spirit. Miss. Reporter of September 4 contained the following item of news: "Mrs. E. R. Smoot and children returned Monday from a visit to relatives in Kentucky and Indiana." Sister Smoot is an efficient Church worker and is much missed when she is away from home.

We are informed that Rev. A. S. Brown has been very successful in his revival meetings in the Nettleton, Miss., charge. The summer has received 31 persons into the Church on profession of faith—and he has other meetings to hold. Brother Brown's record in the ministry has been highly creditable.

Mrs. H. B. Parker of Lovelace, La., thus writes concerning the work in that field: "Everything is moving along nicely and we are hoping to report the church in full at Conference." Sister Parker's letter brought us some names of new readers. The readers of the Advocate will have the pleasure of hearing from.

We should be pleased to be more indebted to the following friends for whose kindness reference has not been made elsewhere for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. B. Cain, Washington, Miss.; Rev. Charles E. Lowrey, Pearl, Miss.; Rev. W. S. Selman, Cliffe, Starkville, Miss.

Dr. J. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College was in New Orleans last Monday, but the writer, more to his regret, failed to see him. Dr. Cooper left a memorandum requesting us to state that students are expected to arrive at Whitworth on Tuesday, September 10, and that the session of the College will begin on Wednesday, September 11.

From a note from Rev. B. P. Neal of Lexington, Miss., we take the following: "In our recent distribution of Bibles here the soldier-boys seemed glad to get them. One young Jew took one and opened the pages to carry and read it. I am going to get him a Hebrew Bible if I can. The attendance upon our prayer meeting has been quite inspiring lately."

Rev. N. B. Harmon of Magnolia, Miss., sends us 4 subscriptions to the Advocate, 3 of them new ones. He says: "These were secured by that splendid layman, Brother B. F. Goss." Brother Goss has ever been a friend of the Advocate, and this is not by any means the first good service that he has rendered. We may be assured that he has our thanks.

Rev. R. T. Nolen, pastor of the Blodgett Chapel Mississippi Conference writes: "I am now through with my protracted meetings. I was assisted by Rev. P. H. Howse and Rev. W. A. Terry. These brethren are strong gospel preachers and their good work was much appreciated by the people. Several were added to the Church. We have had a good year in many respects."

Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, of Yazoo City, Miss. writes that he has some open time for meetings in October. Those who would like to secure his servlies should write him at once. He is now engaged in a meeting at Slaughter, La., with Rev J. J. Kelly, where he may be addressed for the next week.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, of 815 St. Charles Street this city, has received some help outside of New Orleans in the work of giving Bibles to the soldier, but he needs more money for this purpose. There are many Mississippi and Louisiana soldiers quartered in and near New Orleans. Help him at once!

Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Vancleave, Miss., wrtes: "The new Prospect Camp Meeting, Vancleave charge, will embrace the days of October 17-22. Dr. Cooper, of Whitworth College, and Dr. La Prade, of First Church, Gulfport, are engaged to do the preaching. Brother Jones, the presiding elder of the Seashore District, will also be present."

We are inreceipt of the following note from Rev. J. L. Carter and Mr. W. E. Steede, written from Agricola, Miss.: "The Salem Camp Meeting will commence on Wednesday, October 10, and continue until the following Sunday night. Ministers are cordially invited to be with us. There will be a public tent to care for the public. Let all who can, come."

The second Quarterly Bulletin of the Meridian (Miss.) District, dated August 1, is on our desk. It shows that good work is heing done in the territory covered by that district, under the leadershlp of Rev. George H. Thompson, the capahle presiding elder, and that Brother Thompson knows accurately what is being accomplished. The issuance of such a Bulletin ought to do much good.

As may he learned in a brief note from him on another page, Rev. W. S. Lagrone is again at home, after a vacation spent in the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee. A harder worker than Brother Lagrone we have never known, and we are glad to learn that he has had a brlef season of rest. Brother Lagrone delights to say nice things about the people at Drew, and well do they deserve it.

Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, of Alexandria, Sunday School Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, writes: "Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, Mr. A. L. Dietrich, and Rev. Chas. D. Bulla, D.D., have been secured for some work in our Conference this fall, and Dr. Shackford will attend our Annual Conference. Miss Richardson and I are out in the field all the time now and will be until the close of the Conference year."

Rev. T. M. Bradley, our gifted young pastor at Cleveland, Miss., says: "Our new church here will be a splendid edifice. I believe that we can complete it this fall, with only a small debt remaining to be met. It will cost over $20,000." Cleveland is destined to be one of the leading towns of North Mississippi, and our people there need a first-class house of worship. Brother Bradley is leading them wisely.

From a personal note from Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the hustling Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, we take the following: "I have this week heen holding institutes at Mineral Wells, Ingomar, Ecru, Houlka, Woodland, and Montpelier. We have been organizing teacher-training classes at these places. The brethren are hard at work where I have been and progress is belng made."

Rev. J. T. Abney, of Scooba, Miss., writes that the work is moving along smoothly in his field. Most of his protracted meetings have been held, with good results, the spirtual life of the churches having been quickened and several members received. In the meeting at Scooba, the preaching was ably done by Rev. G. H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Meridian District. The pastor himself did the preaching at Binnsville and Wahalak.

Rev. H. L. Norton, of Crystal Springs, says: "The Hennington Camp Meeting, at Crystal Springs, Miss., for 1917, was a great success. The number of conversions was said to be about 225. There were about 100 accessions to the different Churches. Rev. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, La., did the preaching. Brother Holder is a man full of the Holy Ghost and power, able in the presentation of the Word, and earnest in his work with indlvlduals."

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of New Augusta, Miss., states that he and his family were recently the victims of a good "pounding," administered by the New Augusta people. Brother Ramsey says that his late meeting at New Augusta resulted in the accomplishment of much good. Rev. P. D. Hardin did the preaching, and the singing was led by Miss Bessie Cook, of Hattieshurg. There were 3 accessions to the Church. Brother Ramsey has just closed an unusually good meeting at Wingate, resulting in 5 accessions, in which he himself did the preaching.

Rev. Henry T. Young, of Jena, La., the Louisiana Conference Evangelist, desires to secure a singer to aid him in his meetings until the assembling of the Annual Conference. Brother Roddy, who has been with him and who has rendered most efficient service, will resume his studies at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas. Brother Young says: "The Lord has been gracious to me during the last few months. I have witnessed the conversion of more than 2000 souls this year, for which I am truly thankful to God." This is, indeed, a great record.

Under date of September 6, Rev. S. A. Brown, of Kosciusko, Miss., writes as follows: "Brother W. W. Mitchell preached for me last Sunday. He told me that the reports for the third round of quarterly conferences in the Durant District, just closed, are much better than were those of last year, and that it is easily within the range of possibility for every charge in the district to meet all its financial obligations by the time of the Annual Conference." Brother Mitchell is making a fine record in the presiding eldership, and the faithful pastors associated with him in the work are helping him to do it.

An interesting wedding took place at Mattson, Miss., on September 2, 1917, when Mr. Ray Langston and Miss Anna Elmyra McRae became husband and wife, in the presence of a few relatives and friends. The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Mattie McRae, of Doddsville, and is a descendant of prominent families of Holmes County, Mississippi. She studied music at Grenada College and in Chicago, and has taught it in several Mississippi towns. She is a superior young lady and has a wide circle of friends. Mr. Langston is a bookkeeper at Drew, Miss., and has an excellent reputation. After the ceremony the happy young couple left for Memphis, from which place they came to New Orleans to spend a few days.

The following addresses will be delivered at the Educational Conference to be held at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, Tuesday, September 25: "An Educational Policy for the Southwest," Bishop E. D. Mouzon; "The Attitude of the Educational Commission Toward Southern Methodist University and the Colleges," by Dr. W. D. Bradfield; "The Call to the Ministry," by Dr. John M. Moore; "Our Educational Need and Our Financial Resources," hy Dr. Stonewall Anderson. This Conference was called by the Board of Trustees of Southern Methodist University last June, and is in the interest of our entire educational work west of the Mississippi River. It promises to he an occasion of much interest.

At the September meeting of the Board of Stewards of the Rayne Memorial Church, this city, it was found that all expenses had been paid up to date out of the regular offerings, and a good surplus left on hand. This is unusual for this season of the year—the customary situation at this time having been to be several hundred dollars behind. This record, too, has been made with an increase of $1100 in the current expenses for the year. The pastor, Dr. F. G. Foote, says that this good financial condition is due to the excellent business methods of the Treasurer of the Board of Stewards, Mr. B. F. Manard. This showing reflects credit upon Dr. Foote and his congregation, as well as upon the manager of its finances.

We referred recently in the Advocate to the fact that Bishop McCoy held the Illinois Conference for Bishop Waterhouse, and the note came under the eye of the latter, who wrote us as follows: "My colleagues, the Bishops, just like all other Methodist preachers, sympathize and help each other. This explains why Bishop McCoy took the Illinos Conference for me. My health continues to improve. The Holston Conference meets at a hetter time, and I shall take the main responsibility in holding it; but Bishop Candler will be present to assist as I may desire." We are indeed happy to know that Bishop Waterhouse's health continues to grow hetter, and we pray that he may soon completely recover. The Church needs his safe guiding hand.

SOLDIERS AND TESTAMENTS.

It was with peculiar pleasure that I saw in public print that the people at Aberdeen had provided and that Rev. J. M. Bradley had with choice words presented publicly a copy of the New Testament to each soldier in the company going out from that section. Of course, many other communities and pastors are now, or soon will be, doing the same thing. One of the sweetest privileges and greatest honors of my life was given me here in Lexington when I was permitted to purchase for the Churches and Red Cross Society and publicly present to our soldier boys, 130 copies of the New Testament, with the best pig skin binding, and of India paper.

Let every pastor see to it that no soldier goes from his charge without a Testament of durable paper and binding. The best I have seen is the No. 5 N., costing $1.25, and may he had from the Pocket Testament League, 133 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, Pa. Where no public effort is made, the parents, kindred, or friends of the soldiers should make this Testament the chief thing in their gifts. As everywhere else, so in this war for world liberty, "If the truth shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

Lexington, Miss. BEN P. JACO.

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions: we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

Girls! Use Lemons! Make a Bleaching, Beautifying Cream

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of the skin. It is simply marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Mrs. SALLIE HAWKINS TAYLOR was born in Alabama on March 17, 1846, and died in Booneville, Miss., on August 17, 1917. In early life she was converted and joined the church in which she was a faithful member. She was the daughter of Rev. W. G. Hawkins, a good man and an earnest preacher. She was married to Brother J. M. Taylor, the ceremony being performed by his brother, Rev. Thomas Taylor, on March 31, 1887. A wise, interested step-mother, a true, devoted wife, an exemplary, useful Christian has gone on to the heavenly country where she suffers no more, and where joy is perennial. May the Lord with his rich, abounding grace, comfort good Brother Taylor, who is now feeble in body, and all of her loved ones; and may they all be well prepared to meet the wife, sister and mother in the Eternal Home! J. M. WYATT.

On the morning of August 18, 1917, in the town of West Monroe, La., there passed away a good and true woman, Mrs. EMMA ELMIRA (BRYAN) TIPPIT was born in Jackson Parish, La., on Oct. 23, 1855. She was happily married to N. G. Tippit on Dec. 25, 1876. Of this union were born five children. Two of these died in infancy. Her husband, two sons, Alvin and T. L. Tippit; one daughter, Mrs. E. D. Cason; one brother, M. A. Bryan, two sisters, Mrs. W. L. Warner and Mrs. F. M. Sheppard, survive her. Mrs. Tippit was converted in early childhood and joined the M. E. Church, South. She ever remained a faithful and consistent member. The preachers had in her a good friend. She was a faithful wife, a loving mother, an ideal home-keeper. She was afflicted with the disease that carried her away for nearly two years. Everything was done that money, skill, and loving hands could do. She was beautifully reconciled. Her greatest concern was about her loved ones. She longed and prayed for their salvation. About two weeks before she died, she dreamed that her two deceased children spent the night with her. This made her very happy. The funeral services were held by the writer and her pastor, Rev. A. S. J. Neill. She was buried in the Hasley Cemetery. We placed her body away in a cement vault, on a lovely Sabbath day, in the presence of a large concourse of friends, to await the resurrection of the just. The floral offerings were most beautiful. She knew whom she had believed. She now rests from her labors. Her former pastor.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God in His infinite love and wisdom has seen fit to call our beloved friend and member, Mrs. G. N. Tippitt, to her heavenly home, and the West Monroe Church and Missionary Society has lost a faithful member and a loyal worker; therefore be it resolved:

1. That, while we humbly bow to His will, acknowledging His wisdom and goodness, and thanking Him for her life of Christian service, we do most sincerely lament her death.

2. That we cherish the memory of her Christian graces, her patient endurance, and her cheerful submission during her long and painful illness.

3. That our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to her family in their sad bereavement.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent her family, to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the Monroe News-Star, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Society.

Signed Mrs. A. S. J. Neill, Mrs. Sutcliff, Mrs. T. N. Hood, Committee.

AN UNUSUAL MEETING.

Dear Advocate: One of the most thorough-going revivals that I have witnessed has just been conducted at Farrell by that fine gospel team—Evangelist J. H. Bell and his "yokefellow," Paul Templeton, chorister and soloist. In a quiet, unassuming way, they won the hearts of the people for the Lord. A work of grace was wrought within the Church, the fruits of which will abide, for a goodly number of the congregation were elicited to spiritual exercises. Resolutions were made to re-establish and erect family altars in the home. Men and women—business folk and college students—who were unaccustomed to speaking out either on their knees or on their feet, lifted their voices in public prayer and testimony when the meeting was thrown open. The last morning service of the series took up the hour in an open meeting. On the last evening also there was no preaching, for instead of a sermon a collection was the occasion, which was unexpectedly sprung by a Baptist brother for a new Methodist church, the cost of which was covered by subscriptions—a surprisingly large and liberal amount for the place ($2900). Four adults were received into the Church, and the people went away saying that they had never seen the like in that community.

Friar's Point, Miss.

HEIDELBERG, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: Our revivals have come, and in a sense come to stay, while in another sense they have come and gone. Acting upon the old adage, "If you want anything done right, do it yourself," I did all the preaching in all four of my meetings. We had 100 or more seekers for either pardon or sanctification at the altar. Quite a number were definitely blessed. There were 16 additions to the Church. The work goes forward with increased interest, and we hope to round out one of our best year's work. We have a fine people to serve and we are trying to show our appreciation of them and their kindness. I must say that I have never served a work where everything worked more harmoniously. I don't mean to say that no one has been offended and tried to bring about friction, because if this were the case I would know that the devil had vacated, or that I had fallen from grace. The good Lord has been gracious to us, whereof we are glad.—H. J. Maddox, P. C.

Coarse Hair

doesn't become you and it is as unruly as it is unbecoming. The hair should be soft and light and should hold its original luster when it is healthy. The quickest and surest way to deprive the hair of its original luster is to leave it alone to look out for itself. Each separate hair is an individual delicate structure in itself and every hair on your head, in order to contribute its share of beauty should be perfectly fed with the natural hair oil, which comprises its food. Starve your hair and, like anything else, it will die. Feed your hair with nature's hair food, "La Creole." This excellent hair food, first discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana fifty years ago and preserved by them, proved a treatment from which sprang their reputation for beautiful hair. It has since been offered the public and has served to beautify the hair of thousands of the tasteful and fastidious.

LOUISIANA AVENUE, NEW ORLEANS.

Feeling that the hour had arrived to launch a really great forward movement in the Louisiana Avenue Church, I prepared and delivered to my Board of Stewards on the first Monday of August an address on the possibilities of work among men in our congregation and asked for help. A resolution was adopted authorizing me to draw on the treasury for the funds needed to effect some kind of an organization for church work. Tuesday, August 21, was fixed as the date for a meeting of the men to consider the nature of work we should undertake.

I mailed a card to 56 men asking that they reserve that date free from other engagements. Mr. J. A. Petty, President of the Board, and Mr. E. H. Prescott, superintendent of the Sunday school, sent a personal letter to these men urging their presence in the chapel of our church. The Woman's Missionary Society provided refreshments and a short program for the occasion, and our presiding elder, Brother W. W. Holmes, joined us in handling the men when they arrived. The climax of our first meeting was reached when Dr. W. E. Graves announced that he would hang a card in his office reading, "Closed on Sunday," and that he would give every Sunday morning to his church.

At that first meeting we determined to organize a Men's Bible Class. A second meeting was appointed for Tuesday night, August 28. Dr. U. G. Foote joined us on that night and spoke of Bible classes he had attended. We counted heads and found we had 27 men ready to join the class and we proceeded to organize.

T. W. Coffer, a business man of sound judgment and wide influence, was elected President. Mr. B. Perkins, a man who has been faithful at Louisiana Avenue for more than 20 years, was elected Vice President. Dr. W. E. Graves, the man who touched off the enthusiasm, was chosen teacher. Mr. E. N. Cornay, another business man of large influence, was elected Secretary, and Mr. A. Tracy Petty, who has learned Methodism from the cradle and business principles by first-hand practice, was elected Treasurer. The following men were elected heads of departments: Mr. E. H. Prescott, Mr. A. H. Weldon, Mr. Sam Reeks, Mr. A. A. Breckenridge and Mr. Gordon Shannon.

Our first class meeting was held Sunday, September 2, and we had 20 men present. We have now determined to build the class to a membership of 50 by the first of October, and in view of the fact that the field is unlimited we are not holding down on our future calculations. The next meeting of the class will be held on Friday night, September 14. Regular sessions for Bible study will be held with the Sunday school each Sunday.

In every department, the Louisiana Avenue Church is in better shape at this writing than it has ever been at this time of the year since I have been its pastor. We hope to have a moderately good report by Conference time.

A. J. GEARHEARD.

STARTING PLEASANT.

Beginning over again is always harder than beginning right. God lays upon every one of his children the duty of being sunshiny and joyous; a day begun in that spirit, therefore, is a day begun right; and a day begun in any other spirit will have to be begun over again or it will be a failure. Some one gives this sound advice: "Be pleasant every morning until ten o'clock; the rest of the day will take care of itself." Gloom and joylessness are simple downright disloyalty to him who is the Light of the world. That homely morning recipe is only another way of saying, "Begin the day with Christ, and the whole day will go easier."—Sunday School Times.

WORDS FROM THE CROSS.

First word from the cross—the word of charity: "Father, forgive them."

Second word from the cross—the word of mercy: "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

Third word from the cross—the word of filial piety: "Behold thy Son! ....Behold thy mother!"

Fourth word from the cross—the word of agony: "I thirst."

Fifth word from the cross—the word of humanity: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

Sixth word from the cross—the word of perfection: "It is finished."

Seventh word from the cross—the word of Sonship: "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit."—Presbyterian Journal.

NERVOUSNESS AND DISORDERS OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

The energy that gives life to the body is known to be nerve force. It is this hidden energy that creates the difference between the living and the dead body. It is the indefinable something that the body is robbed of in death.

Irregular distribution of the nerve-force is responsible for many of the disorders of the system. Consequently any remedy that has the power to soothe the irritated nerves, thus regulating the supply of nervous energy, is of inestimable value.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is such a medicine. It not only soothes the irritated nerves, but it induces a more regular distribution of the nerveforce, and thus assists the bodily organs in performing their proper functions. Furthermore, it induces a natural sleep, which is nature's greatest tonic and strengthener.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is especially recommended in cases of Sick, Bilious and Nervous Headache; Epilepsy; Fits; Irregular, Profuse and Painful Menses; Neuralgia; Sciatica; Sleeplessness; Melancholy; Backache; Nervous Irritation and Nervous Dyspepsia.

For more than 25 years Dr. Miles' Nervine has been largely used, and the success that it has met with on all sides is the best proof of its merit.

If you think that Dr. Miles' Nervine is suited to your case, procure a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, which you will find wrapped around the bottle, and then if you are not benefited return the empty bottle, one only, to your druggist and he will return your money in full. The Miles Medical Co. repays him the full retail price, so there is no reason why he should not return your money promptly

You Can Tell The People Who Have Iron in Their Blood —Strong, Healthy, Vigorous Folks

Doctor Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Nervous Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"One glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood," said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European Medical institutions, in a recent discourse. They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the weakling class. Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore, nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The moment iron is supplied the multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the time, double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of every sign of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without any benefit.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. There is nothing like good, old iron to put color in your cheeks and sound, healthy flesh on your bones. But you must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

NOTE—Nuxated iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach, on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

THE MILLSAPS DORMITORY CAMPAIGN.

Dear Dr. Mcek:- I enclose herewith a copy of a leaflet recently gotten out, which I am using in the campaign for the Millsaps College Dormitory. You will notice that a cut of the proposed Dormitory is given on the front page, the plan having been drawn up by Mr. H. N. Austin, the architect, and adopted by the Executive Committee of the Board. When completed, the Dormitory will be a handsome and valuable addition to the campus and the equipment of the College.

During the past sixty days I have visited quite a number of towns in the interest of the College, a Sunday being spent at each of the following places: Liberty, Collins, Woodville, Minter City, Ripley, Booneville, and Glen Allan, and at each of the places mentioned our Methodist people made liberal contributions to the Dormitory fund. The Commissioner greatly appreciates the splendid co-operation most of the pastors are giving him. The recent "drive" for the Red Cross work, which, of course, ought to have the right of way everywhere, has necessarily hindered the Dormitory campaign somewhat, but notwithstanding this, gratifying progress is being made. The aggregate of the subscriptions secured since Commencement makes a very respectable showing. June and August rank among the best months of the campaign. Every friend of the College who will do so is earnestly requested to send in a subscription or a cash contribution to the Dormitory fund within the next sixty days. Don't wait for a personal visit from the Commissioner.

President A. F. Watkins, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, and myself have been diligent all summer canvassing the field for students, and I am glad to say that the outlook for a large attendance at the opening on the 19th of September was never more encouraging. Yours fraternally,

M. M. BLACK,
Commissioner.

Jackson, Miss.

THE LEAFLET.

The leaflet referred to by Brother Black follows:

What Millsaps College Is Doing for Mississippi Methodism.

1. It is engaged in the noble task of providing thorough Christian education for the young men of our State, that is, education which includes both intellectual and spiritual culture, and thus prepares for complete living. Merely secular education is vitally defective and dangerous. The illustrious Mr. Wm. E. Gladstone once declared that "education without religion would only surround us with clever devils."

2. It gives the Bible, which is the source of all that is noblest in our civilization, its rightful place in the curriculum. A distinguished American college president has declared that the Bible is the greatest single educating power in the world.

3. Its faculty is composed of highly trained teachers, every one of whom is a devout Christian and a loyal church member. The influence of these men is an inspiration and a priceless blessing. After all, the personality of the teacher counts most in his work. "It was the genuineness of Thomas Arnold," says Seeley, "rather than his methods of instruction, that made such a profound impression upon the boys of Rugby, and sent them out to be the moral and political leaders of England."

4. It puts a college education within the reach of scores of young men who otherwise would be deprived of the advantages of collegiate training under positive Christian environment.

5. It is training every year a considerable number of ministerial students, and thus is rendering large service to the Church in furnishing it a trained ministry. It is highly significant that 82 per cent of the college-trained preachers and missionaries of America are furnished by our denominational colleges. Only 13 per cent come from our State colleges and universities, and 5 per cent from independent schools. That eminent authority, Joseph W. Cochran, declares that denominational colleges not only furnish over 80 per cent of the ministry, but also a very large proportion of workers in Christian Associations, social settlements, charity organizations, etc.

THE PROPOSED NEW MILLSAPS DORMITORY.

6. It provides thorough equipment and lofty ideals of duty and service, and furnishes our Church and State with trained and trustworthy leaders.

7. A "Greater Millsaps College" means a "Greater Methodism in Mississippi." Each passing year witnesses the widening of its beneficent influence and the enlargement of its usefulness.

What Mississippi Methodism Should Do For Millsaps College.

1. It should co-operate heartily and generously in equipping the College for larger service, Mississippi Methodism being the largest beneficiary. The greatest need of the College is a commodious and well-equipped dormitory where the students may obtain board and comfortable rooms at low rates. It is proposed to erect such a building in the near future at a cost of $60,000.

2. It should furnish an increasing number of students every year, and thus utilize more fully the exceptional advantages provided. Every Methodist should be a "booster" for the College. Who will "boost" it if we do not? Are Presbyterians and Baptists usually guilty of "knocking" on their institutions of learning?

3. It should advertise Millsaps College as one of the finest and best endowed colleges in the South. Millsaps graduates have in several instances taken the M. A. degree at Columbia University and other universities in one year.

4. It should acknowledge the immeasurable debt of gratitude it owes Millsaps College for training hundreds of young men and women for large service and beneficent influence. The graduates of Millsaps are "making good" in all the vocations they have chosen, and many have taken high rank in business and professional life, and in the ministry.

5. It should respond liberally and cheerfully to the call for $30,000 from the Methodists of the State, and thus meet the challenge of the liberal-hearted citizens of Jackson, who have already pledged $30,000 for the proposed domitory. Every Methodist should have a share in this worthy enterprise.

6. It should aid in building the new Dormitory in order that young men of limited means may be enabled to obtain a college education under religious influences. This is the prime purpose for which the College was founded.

7. It should honor the memory of Major R. W. Millsaps, for many years one of the most generous and influential members of our Church, by giving more adequate equipment to the great institution which he founded and loved so well.

"HE HELPS MOST WHO HELPS QUICKLY." DON'T BE A SLACKER.

M. M. BLACK,

been made to use the Laymen's Missionary organization for this purpose. Does not Dr. Ivey think that such a piece of intrigue deserves rebuke?

The true character of a movement is not to be judged so much by the men remotely and loosely connected with it, as by the men who are really governing and directing it. We venture to suggest that the average layman whose name is affixed to this address is not having, nor will have, much to do with the shaping of this campaign. It is being controlled by a few persons in Nashville and Chattanooga, and we dare say that the Vanderbilt influence is strong in its councils. As we have said, there are a number of excellent men among those who have attached their signatures to this document, and we would cast no aspersions upon them; but we do profoundly regret that at this crucial time they have let their names be associated with this radical movement, and we do not doubt that the Vanderbilt and ultra-unionst elements of the Church are chuckling over their seeming success in having rallied them around their banners. If these agitators can sow the seeds of dissension among our loyal people to a sufficient extent to divide them in this perilous hour, God only knows what may be the fate of our beloved Church.

A SUCCESSFUL MEDICINAL COMBINATION

And one that had long been needed and had not seemed to be possible, is Hood's Sarsaparilla taken before eating and Peptron Pills after eating. These two great medicines supplement each other in purifying and enriching the blood, strengthening and toning the nerves, putting life into the body and color into the face. Taken in conjunction, they are the ideal remedy for the blood and nerves. All druggists.

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss

Promotion Day is the fourth Sunday in September.

Rally Day should be the first Sunday in October. Hundreds of new pupils ought to be gathered in at this time. it will require some work to do this, but it will pay.

Trained teachers are one of our great needs. Never have we had such a teacher of teachers as Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, who is to help hold Institutes at the following places: Lyon Sept. 20-21; Sardis, Sept. 22-23; Coldwater, Sept. 24; Byhalia, Sept. 25; Holly Springs, Sept. 26; New Albany, Sept. 27-28; Tupelo, Sept. 29-30. Get one, two, or three automobiles and bring every teacher, and spend the day.

If the Kingdom of God is to come in power in this generation, it will not come because we have been faithful heralds of the gospel message alone, but we must have teachers, a great army of teachers, who live the life of Christ, and who teach this life to the people. We should not have fewer revivals, but we must have more and better teaching adapted to the needs of the different ages.

Remember, that a lost opportunity can never be regained. Attendance upon one or more of these institutes will be the very thing the teachers of our schools have been wanting. We have had good conventions and institutes in the past, but this series will be the best ever held within the bounds of our Conference. Presiding elders, pastors, superintendents, teachers and all the officers of the district organization will be expected to attend and take part in these meetings. "Who will come to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty?"

EVERYBODY ASKS FOR NEW KIND OF CALOMEL.

Calotabs, the New De-Nauseated Calomel Tablet, is in Great Demand Because of its Freedom from Unpleasant and Dangerous Effects.

Have you tried the new calomel tablet that makes calomel taking a pleasure? If you have you appreciate the wonderful virtues of calomel, when robbed of all its unpleasant and nauseating effects.

Calotabs is the sensation of the year in the drug trade. Pharmacists regard it as a practically perfect remedy for the liver. Its effect in biliousness, constipation and indigestion is delightful.

The next time your liver needs a thorough cleansing try Calotabs. One tablet at bedtime, a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no nausea, no griping. Wake up in the morning feeling fine, with your system thoroughly cleansed and a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger.

Calotabs are never sold in bulk. Ask for the original, sealed package containing twenty doses; price thirty-five cents. Your money back if you are not thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.

A PLEA FOR THE POSTER.

Publicity is that department of our organization which seeks to impart the great facts of missions to those who do not know. It is invaluable to the progress of the work. Through the secular press it seeks to reach those who are in no way connected with the missionary societies. Through the religious press it presents the facts of the missions of the Church to those members who, because of indifference, carelessness, or prejudice have never contributed to the success of its enterprises. Through the Bulletin the messages are sent direct to the organized missionary societies. Always the object is to make known some fact.

There is one important phase of the publicity work which has been neglected by our auxiliaries to a great degree, and that is presenting the facts by means of posters. The Home Base Department in The Missionary Voice contains suggestions for posters for each program. These ideas may bring to your mind some original plan that will suit the conditions in your auxiliary better.

The poster is an effective way to present missionary facts because it attracts attention. Before it is possible to teach anything to a person it is necessary to secure his attention; in fact, this is a law of teaching. In making the poster the aim should be to make it so striking that even involuntarily the eye will be drawn to it. In this way an impression is made. We are told that we remember 50 per cent we hear, 80 per cent we see, and 90 per cent we do. The object of every missionary program is to give to those present a knowledge of facts. Then if through the poster the efficiency of the presentation can be increased 30 per cent, why not make more frequent use of this method? It may lead to activity. Robert Moffat was led to give his life as a missionary by reading a poster on the side of a road: "Teaching is making an impression that will bring an expression."

In the next place, the poster says one thing. In articles that are read, in talks that are made necessarily more than one idea is included. In the multiplicity the force may be weakened. Place before them a poster, and, in addition to the impression gained through the sense of sight, it carries strength because it says one thing.

The poster visualizes facts. A poster is not a mere printed or written statement—it is a fact—most often a new fact, presented pictorially. Pictures may be cut from magazines and arranged so as to bring out the thought. Some one with a talent for drawing has an unlimited opportunity for helping in the missionary work. It should be catchy, newsy, and original.

At the Council meeting in New Orleans the walls of one of the Sunday school rooms were covered with posters sent by different Conferences. May we not have such an exhibit at our next annual meeting? Make use of the poster in your auxiliary and then save them to let others see what may be done along this line.

Mrs. S. F. RILEY.

THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT IN JAPAN.

Although Japan is claimed as a Buddhist land, and although Buddhist doctrine condemns the use of intoxicating drinks, for centuries the drinking of saki (liquor made from rice) has been practically universal. Other varieties of alcoholic drinks are also manufactured. Beer has become a favorite drink with many, and large breweries are growing up. The tax on saki has been one of the largest received from any single source, standing usually next to the land tax, which is followed by the tobacco tax.

With the coming of Christianity to Japan, a temperance movement has taken firm root. The first society was started in 1875; by 1898 twenty local societies had been formed, and by 1915 they had increased to 198, with a total of pledged abstainers of about 12,000.

The temperance campaign is carried on by public meetings, exhibits, the distribution of pertinent literature, and the publication of a magazine. American temperance workers, says Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, might well give not only their moral but their financial support to the temperance movement in Japan.

SOME FACTS AND FIGURES.

The third quarter is rapidly drawing to a close, and we are wondering what the records will show. Will there be an increase in our funds, or will a shortage again confront us? Surely we women of the Mississippi Conference are too loyal to our Great Commander to allow the latter to happen. This is a time when God's children must make sacrifices that partake of the nature of the great sacrifice made by his Son.

Let us ponder for a little while the figures of our treasurer, Mrs. Hemingway. For the first quarter of 1916 $2409.80 was reported; for the same quarter of 1917, $2100.50—a slight decrease. Second quarter 1916, $1977.04; second quarter 1917, $1897.52—still a decrease. The total paid on the pledge thus far is $1714.37—not even one-third of the amount promised. We did so well last year that we cannot afford to fall behind that record. The goal set before us, you remember, is a ten per cent increase in funds, and we are confident that our women are going to put forth every effort to reach the goal.

Let us make glad the hearts of our Conference officers by going way over the mark this third quarter. We can do it, if our trust in Him is strong enough. What if we do have to deny ourselves some little luxury or comfort? It isn't real giving until it hurts, but the blessing received is so great that the act of self-denial is turned into a song of joy and gladness.

Again, the appeal has gone forth from our President, Mrs. Johnson, urging the women to fulfil the promises made to the two Wesley Houses. When this matter is presented to your auxillary don't deal with it carelessly or indifferently. Whatever amount you have been asked to contribute, give it promptly. All working in unison can soon accomplish the task, and the work can go on uninterruptedly. Time is too precious to waste, when "souls are dying for a little bit of love." The deaconnesses often carry around with them many a heartache because we are so slow in responding to the needs of the work they are engaged in. They see the distressing needs and realize the hopelessness of the situation unless we come to the rescue. Oh, can we, for whom he gave His life, be content to place in His hands a few paltry coppers? No; we are going to say,

"Take my silver and my gold—
Not a mite would I withhold."

Protection Against Infection.

If you bruise, cut, or burn yourself or get a splinter in your flesh, do not neglect the wound just because it is slight. Many deaths from blood poison have resulted from neglecting just such slight wounds. For nearly a century Gray's Ointment has been used as a protection against such infection. You will find a box of this ointment in thousands of homes. It costs only 25c and will last indefinitely. You cannot afford to be without it. Get a box from your druggist to-day. For allaying pain and healing abrasions and eruptions of the skin, boils, sores, cuts, bruises, burns, etc., it has no equal. For a FREE sample write W. F. A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. Margaret Grassman, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. George A. Dunbar, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. Kissling, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

SEASHORE GLEANINGS.

In spite of some very dry and some very hot weather, many things have come to pass in the Seashore District this summer.

Rev. J. L. Carter took unto himself a wife. From many sources we hear of her fitness for the new work, and the joy the people experience in this addition to their number. A beautiful parsonage is nearing completion at Harieston, which will be the head of the charge after this. Two good meetings have been held and two more will be held, one of these at the historic place known as Salem Camp Ground. If I mistake not, this will be the 92d session. A good time is expected.

Brother C. C. Evans has had fine congregations through the summer months. The finances are in good shape. Preacher and people are happy.

Brother L. Fayard still leads in the number of children baptized. He also travels much and preaches often. He has just finished a nice little church on Back Bay.

Brother Ulmer had Rev. J. C. Chambers to hold a meeting for him at Bond. I heard good reports from the meeting, but have no definite figures. His force of workers at Brooklyn has been very much strengthened by the addition of Brother Wainwright, who has been the efficient Sunday school superintendent at Gulfport for so long. At Maxie Brother Ulmer did the preaching himself and had a very fine meeting.

Brother J. T. Weems has been in the hospital, but is out now and will soon be able to take up his work again. We are thankful indeed that he is mending so rapidly.

The Coalville Circuit has been blessed with splendid revivals. The pastor, Rev. R. A. Allums, is well liked.

Columbia still pushes to the front; all the Conference collections are in for the year and there is a good prospect of the church debt being wiped out. Brother W. M. Sullivan stands well with his people.

No man in the District has been more faithful than Brother R. A. Sibley, and possibly no one has had a harder field; his efforts are not without fruit.

Fortunate are the people permitted to listen to Dr. LaPrade's sermons week after week. The Gulfport people realize what they have and are enjoying him to the full. The Doctor's son, Dr. W. H. LaPrade Jr., presiding elder of the Atlanta District, North Georgia Conference, visited his parents at Gulfport last week, preaching once for his father on Sunday.

The Kiln is making headway under the leadership of Brother W. T. Griffin.

Rev. J. C. Jackson, of Hub, is planning to go to school next year, and if he does he will give up his work on that charge.

Logtown, under the leadership of its faithful pastor, J. E. Gray, and the help rendered by our presiding elder in a protracted meeting, is going right along. The year will be both a happy and successful one.

Brother G. S. Harmon helped Brother C. P. Jones in his meeting at Long Beach, and Brother Sutton helped him at the Pass. Considering the difficult fields, both meetings were good.

Brother Claude is doing nicely with his work. The people say, in speaking of his and his father's preaching, that the only difference is that his father preaches longer than he does.

The big mill has shut down in Lumberton. This is a sad blow to the town. Just how much it will affect the work of the Church for this year we can't tell, but we know Brother J. A. Moore well enough to say that all will be done that can be done. He stands well with his people.

The day of the "automobile" has come we say, but that isn't unanimously true. A few days ago Brother Clifford and his wife, of Howison, clad in the regulation walking apparel, with as little baggage as a man and wife could do with, took the trail (camping at night wherever dark overtook them) for Homewood, Miss. (a distance of 120 miles), to the home of Mrs. Clifford's father, Rev. M. L. White. They report it as being a very happy and successful trip. Brother Clifford is doing well with his work. He held part of his protracted meetings himself.

At Antioch Brother Grice has completed another church. Those who have seen it pronounce it both a beautiful and convenient church, having several Sunday school rooms in addition to the main auditorium. Brother Grice is one of our most active and successful young men. He has had good meetings, having had the following men to help him: Rev. J. R. Jones; Rev. J. L. Sells, in two meetings, and Rev. C. P. Jones.

A beautiful church, an appreciative people, good health, a new car, a summer vacation—what more would a man want? "Who is the lucky man," you ask? Dr. B. F. Jones of Moss Point. "Oh, yes I might have known," and to think this is his fourth year—moving time.

Brother Darsey is still on the job, and the presiding elder says always at it.

Brother Forsyth is rejoicing over the revival of business in Pascagoula.

The Poplarville people are deprived of their pastor much of the time, due to his popularity and ability in holding revival meetings. Brother G. S. Harmon has done some of the best work that has been done in the Seashore District in many years. Fortunate are the people served by such a faithful man.

Brother W. L. Blackwell is closing up his fourth year in his usual way. He is not as fast as some, but we have few men in the pastorate more painstaking and conscientious than he. He is loved by his people and is a true servant of the Church.

Brother J. L. Sells is still bringing things to pass on the Wiggins charge. They have good prayer meetings, good Sunday schools, and good revivals. A splendid man in a fertile field. He has recently enlarged his work by opening up a mission at Fruitland Park, and will probably organize there soon.

Our presiding elder, Brother J. R. Jones is loved by all. He has been busy all the time. When through, he will have held six or more meetings, besides going through the regular grind of his office. He seems happy all the time and is gaining in weight. He says he has lots to eat and many friends—why not be happy?

In spite of adverse conditions, the material affairs of the district are up to last year. Spiritually, the district is ahead of last year. Some grave problems face the presiding elder in closing the year for Conference, but he will meet them in the fear and love of God, and I have no doubt but that they will be solved in the very best way.

ELLOT.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

FROM BROTHER LAGRONE.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have held my meetings and should have sent you something of the results sooner, but I have had no time to do so. Our meeting at Drew was quite a success. Brothers Bowen and Robinson were with us and did good work. There were about 20 accessions to the Church. We had only one accession at Sandy Bayou, but the meeting did good. We have had in all about 70 accessions to the Church this year.

I have just returned from the first vacation that I have had in 46 years in the mountains of North Carolina and East Tennessee. My people said they just had to have a rest and payed my way out of town, and I shall expect them to do so next year. Do you see? W. S. LAGRONE, P. C.
Drew, Miss.

FROM NOBLE, LA.

Dear Brother Meek: I would like to have a little space to tell what the Lord has done for us on the Noble Circuit. We have held all of our meetings, but we are going to try the second barrel on Noble, as we did not get the results that we thought we should. We had a fine meeting at Benson. While we only received one member into the Church, several already members were brought nearer to God. Our meeting at Bayou Scie was good. While our help was not well at the time, his preaching had the old-time ring and power. We received eight into the Church there. Old Bayou Scie is doing the best work of its life, both in a spiritual and financial way. Bayou Scie is not dead, but liveth. We have some very spiritual men in that church, and they are doing a great deal in the service of the Lord. It is a real pleasure to work among them.

We began our meeting at Belmont on Wednesday night before the second Sunday in August. Our help failing us, we pitched the battle against the wicked one alone. The work done there seems more like a miracle than anything else. This church is in the midst of a large Baptist community, where some folks think that it is a sin to go to hear a Methodist preacher, though some are broad-minded Christian men and women. For five days I preached with all the power that a man of my capacity could, seemingly without effect. But I could see that conviction was on the people—the fear of death, hell, and the judgment was deepening; so the more I cried aloud the "terror of the law," trying to persuade men to repent. On the night of the sixth day the fire fell from heaven, I am sure if Peter had been there he would have cried out, "Pentecost!" Men, women, and children were crying, shouting, and testifying unto the Lord, telling what wonderful things the Lord had done for them. We continued the meeting for three days, preaching the best we could between shouting periods. Thirty-three were sweetly saved from sin and sanctified unto God. We received 20 into the Methodist Church, giving us a membership here of 43. One year ago we began at this place with only nine members. We now have a good Sunday school and prayer meeting there. For all that has been done, we give God the glory.

We have all our Conference collections in full, in cash and subscriptions. The Noble Circuit means to pay out in full again this fall, in spite of the dry weather and war.

We will begin our second revival at Noble on the third Sunday in October. Brethren, pray for us.

R. T. WARE, P. C.

HINDRANCES ARE HELPS.

Hindrances are helps in the life we live and in the paths we tread. It is because of God's love for us that He denies us so many things we ask Him for, and that He gives us so many things we pray Him to spare us from. This, we may all see, has been the case in our own experiences, as we look back on the years that are gone. What have been God's ways with us in contrast with our petitions to God, ought to assure us of God's wisdom and love, and our lack of knowledge even where we thought we knew our greatest needs. Yet we have a right and a duty to make our desires known to God daily, and to rest all with Him, according to His wisdom and love.—H. C. Trumbull.

Wash the Poisons of RHEUMATISM

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

SHIVAR SPRING AS NATURE MADE IT. NOW PROTECTED BY SANITARY SPRING HOUSE.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucomaines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

The Results.

Read the following letters which are fair samples of tens of thousands that are received at the Spring, then accept Mr. Shivar's guarantee offer. It gives you the equivalent of a three-week's visit to his celebrated Spring, with no charge for the water should you report no benefit. Sign your acceptance on the coupon below.

Editorial

"Men that make
Envy and crooked malice nourishment
Dare bite the best."

Of all soiled things, a soiled imagination is perhaps the hardest to make clean again. Nothing but the infinite power of the Holy Spirit can do this.

Writing of Jesus, St. Luke says: "As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." So should his disciples go to the place of public worship on the Lord's day. The Church-going habit counts for much in the life of a Christian. It helps both him and others. There is strength and inspiration in the communion of saints.

The prayers of really great Christians are among their most remarkable utterances. This is so because in talking to God a saintly soul has an incentive to pour out its purest and highest aspirations, knowing that He can understand and appreciate them. The supplications of Jesus and Paul were of a kind to attest their majestic spiritual stature. Well may we study them and seek to sound their far-reaching depths.

THE TWO GREAT OBJECTIVES.

Every Christian should keep before him two chief objectives: purity of heart and life for himself, and service to his fellow-beings. Neither of these aims can be neglected without incalculable loss. The man who plunges constantly into all kind of commendable activities, but who takes no time to nourish and cultivate his own spiritual life, must fall far short of making his career count for the utmost possible. On the other hand, the person who strives only to promote his own piety and growth in grace, and who thinks little of the world's vast need, must fail to realize in the largest measure the end that he has in view. The law of true progress in the spiritual kingdom is, Take heed both to thyself and others. To relate in right proportions these two spheres of Christian endeavor is a thing that every disciple of Jesus should learn to do. One's personal devotions and one's work to help his fellow-men are efforts that exercise upon each other reciprocal influences of a beneficial character. The best worshiper is usually the best worker, and those who achieve most for the Master are those who most completely enthrone him in their hearts and who live much in communion with him.

A FINE SUGGESTION.

Mr. St. Clair Favrot, Secretary of the Louisiana State Board of Affairs, in a communication to the New Orleans Times-Picayune tells of a visit to Beauregard Parish, of which De Ridder is the parish-seat, and of seeing in the rotunda of the attractive new court-house there a bust of General G. T. Beauregard, for whom that parish was named. Mr. Favrot states that his work has carried him into nearly all of the court-houses of the State, and that nowhere else has he seen the man whose name has been given to a parish thus honored by its citizens. He commends strongly the example of the people of Beauregard Parish and suggests that it ought to be generally imitated. He thinks it would be a good thing for the educators in each parish to undertake, through the school children, to set up in a suitable place in its court-house a similar memorial to its namesake. He further says: "Gazing on a list of parishes now before me, I find the possibility of * * * thus commemorating such historical characters as Allen, Bienville, Claiborne, De Soto, Evangeline, Franklin, Grant, Iberville, Jackson, Jefferson, Jefferson Davis, La Fayette, La Salle, Lincoln, Livingston, Madison, Washington, Webster, etc., and all of the several saints, Indian tribes, Biblical events, and other originals that have contributed to Louisiana's parochial nomenclature."

This suggestion impresses us as a most excellent one. It doubtless would exert a beneficial influence upon the children in the public schools of the State, and upon its citizenship generally. A goodly measure of reverence for the great men of the past is a virtue of no little importance. In fact, persons or a people without it lack an essential element of true nobility, and are much to be pitied.

OTHER DENOMINATIONS NOT WITHOUT WEAKNESSES.

As a rule each family knows its own troubles, but is ignorant of the troubles of other families. This is likewise true of religious denominations. So, Methodists, seeing the friction that exists in the operation of their governmental machinery, are apt to imagine that other Churches are free from such annoyances. And they may, indeed, be exempt from the particular irritations that disturb us; but they are pretty certain to have others that are as bad or worse. Perfection does not belong to anything that is of human origin, and even if a system of ecclesiastical government were perfect, with imperfect and erring men as its administrators and subjects, there would be certain to be some jarring and jostling in its ongoings. Emerson's "Law of Compensation," namely, that for every good there must be a corresponding possible evil, holds in the domain of Church government, as well as in the various other spheres of human life and activity.

The connectional and centralized organization of Methodism has given it coherency, strength, and efficiency. Though the youngest of the larger Protestant evangelical denominations in the United States, it has outstripped all others in the rapidity of its growth. Within all its wide bounds, there is never a vacant Church nor an unemployed pastor. In his "Democracy in the Church," Heermance says: "The Methodist society was on a war basis, and perhaps no more efficient fighting machine was ever devised." But such a scheme of government cannot be maintained if congregations are to pick their pastors, and the preachers are to select their charges. Such liberty is utterly incompatible with the genius and spirit of Methodism. These privileges can only be accorded by largely unmaking it, and at the cost of impairing its effectiveness. As has been said, its ideal is military—and what sort of an army would the United States have with each soldier picking his place in which to serve, and each section along the war-front determining what captains should direct the forces operating there? The paramount purpose of Methodism is to take care of the whole field, rather than of particular individuals and localities; and to do this, the common good must be allowed to outweigh the special preferences of anybody or any place.

We would not be understood by the foregoing statements as admitting that Southern Methodism is autocratic in its government. As a matter of fact, every official in it, from the highest to the lowest, works under explicit laws, and not a single enactment can be placed in the Discipline without the concurrence of the lay representatives in the General Conference, who constitute half of that body—they may vote separately if they wish. (We sympathize heartily with the view that the Methodist people generally, and not merely a few of them, should be permitted to choose these lay delegates.) It is true that the Bishops exercise an untrammeled appointing power in stationing the preachers, but their administration is under the rigid scrutiny of the General Conference. The President of the United States exercises an unrestricted appointing power upon a far vaster scale than do our Bishops, the Senate confirming only some of the more important officials named, and even in those instances having no initiative whatever in procuring men for the places to be filled. Does the exercise of this function of government make the Chief Executive of our Nation a czar—an autocrat? Such a charge would be accounted silly. It is recognized as being necessary to the efficient administration of public affairs. And it should be kept in mind that even if a Bishop should do any man or any charge an injustice, he cannot perpetuate it, for the reason that his appointing power in any Conference must be annually conferred by the whole College of Bishops, to which body complaints as to unwise and harmful administration may be carried.

But we started out with the purpose of showing that the governments of other religious denominations, which are now being so much extolled by some of our would-be Methodist reformers, have serious deficiences which we would do well to note at this time of innumerable clamorings for changes in our wonderful system, and we will now submit a few quotations from high (non-Methodist) sources in support of this affirmation. Mr. Dargan, an eminent Baptist leader, in his "Ecclesiology" (pages 142, 143) says:

"Perhaps it would not be too much to say that the crowning reproach of the Baptists as a people, and their most conscientiously recognized fault, is their lack of efficiency as a whole. Their idle resources are a cause of keen mortification to the most intelligent among them * * * Now the BEAR YE ONE ANOTHER'S BURDENS.

"My burden is too heavy, Lord,"
I tremblingly said;
"I can no further carry it!"
And tears I shed.

Then came a sudden cry for help
From one sore pressed;
I ran to seek him, gladly gave Him of my best.

Then thought I of my heavy burden—
But, lo! 'twas gone!
The gloom and doubt had vanished quite
And Love's light shone.

When we another's burden lift
Or try to bear,
Love's gentle hand removeth swift
Our load of care.

THE ACCOUNTING.

It is the life that counts for or against Christ. Some one has said: "There is a gospel according to Matthew and a gospel according to Mark, Luke and John, but let it not be forgotten that there is a gospel according to you," and if your life does not ring true with the other gospels you shall be called to account. Such a life can make real havoc of the Church.—J. Wilbur Chapman, D.D.

THE RICHES OF JEWELS.

George Macdonald has a story of a father and daughter, dwellers in an old Scotch castle, so reduced and poor that they could only live in the scantiest way, who, all the time, however, were really rich, because in a secret cupboard were masses of flashing jewels, put there by some ancestor of an earlier time. Ah, if they had only known how rich they were! And all the time God's utmost gift of forgiveness, strength, love, power for noble living, are at men's hands, if they but knew.—Wayland Hoyt, D.D.

THE UNDELIVERED MESSAGE.

"I sent my love to you every day," said a little girl indignantly to a sick friend who was beginning to be convalescent, and felt hurt because no word of remembrance had come to her. "They just took it and kept it all themselves." The childish way of looking at it sets in strong light the meaning of an undelivered message. Christ sends his love to men with each returning day—sends it by us. Do we deliver it, or do we take it and keep it all ourselves? What does he think of us as messengers?—The Christian Endeavor World.

NEEDED EVERY DAY.

We need the peace of God in our heart just as really for doing well the little things in our secular life as for the doing of the greatest duties of Christ's kingdom. Our face ought to shine, and our spirit ought to be tranquil, and our eyes ought to be clear, and our nerves ought to be steady, as we press through the tasks of our commonest day. Then we shall do them all well, slurring nothing, marring nothing. We want heart peace before we begin any day's duties, and we should wait at Christ's feet ere we go forth.—J. R. Miller.

THE PRINCE OF SOUL-WINNERS.

"He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto My Father." (John 14:12). Christ opened the eyes of a blind man and he saw his father. You can open the eyes of a man's heart and he shall see God. He lifted up a man who was lame; you shall bring a man to walk in the ways of righteousness. He took a young man by the hand and raised him up from his bier. If you are filled with the Spirit of God, you can bring a man up from the death of sin into the life of God. It is a greater work than Jesus Christ did when he opened the eyes of the blind man.—Alexander McKenzie.

THE THEOLOGICAL SITUATION IN THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH (NORTH.)

By Rev. W. Ridout, D. D.

(Dr. Ridout is Professor of Practical Theology in Taylor University, Upland, Ind., and Associate Editor of "The Christian Witness," Chicago. He is a member of the New Jersey Conference of the Northern Methodist Church.—Editor of Advocate.)

Bishop Foster once said that "Methodism was the breath of God blowing across the continent and the world: refreshing and reviving faint and dying souls, giving new life to millions and changing the condition of the religious atmosphere of the world." Methodism brought to the Church and the world a revival movement that swept on almost unabated for one hundred years and more, and one of the grand secrets of its revival force was its theology. Methodism contributed to Christendom a theology that was eminently Scriptural, evangelical, practical, and revivalistic, and one of the wisest things ever done by the fathers was in embedding this theology in the constitution of the Church, making it impossible for the General Conference or any other body or agency of the Church to "revoke or alter our Articles of Religion, or establish any new standards or rules of doctrine contrary to our present existing and established standards of doctrine." (Restrictive Rule I.)

For many years Methodism stood solid on all the doctrines of grace. Every one knew what to expect from the Methodist pulpit, the Methodist press, the Methodist theological seminary on such doctrines as the Deity of Christ, the Atonement, Sin, the Inspiration and Authority of the Scriptures, Regeneration, Holiness, Eschatology, etc. With a solid front on these great questions, Methodism was a tremendous force in the country—her churches were crowded, her pulpits were on fire, and revivals of religion abounded. But the times have changed, and Methodism has sadly changed. "How is the gold become dim! how is the most fine gold changed!"

It is said of Sir Francis Drake that when a dangerous storm met his vessel in the Thames, he exclaimed: "Must I, who have escaped the rage of the ocean, be drowned in a ditch?"

Methodism has passed through some tremendous storms: indeed she was cradled in a storm. She battled victoriously through storms ecclesiastical, polemical, and political, and came through with colors flying. She stemmed the storms of sin and Satan for a hundred years and came into port bearing thousands upon thousands of converts, "washed in the blood of the Lamb." And now, after a glorious past, shall the Methodism of our fathers be drowned in the ditch of the New Theology and German Rationalism? May the mighty God that sitteth in the heavens forbid!

The theological situation to-day is a sorry one for Northern Methodism. "Hath a nation changed their gods which are yet no gods! but my people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit. Be astonished, O ye heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid!"

It is hardly too much to say that official Methodism (Northern) to-day stands committed to the "New Theology." Think of the refusal of the Board of Bishops in their May meeting to rebuke the "New Theology" men who made up the present Course of Study, which is reeking with Pelagianism, Unitarianism, Universalism, and Rationalism! The only thing of any account they did was to throw out the most infidel of all the books—Soare's book. But they let ten or more other books stay in the course wherewith to damage the faith of the young preachers. Room in that course for Coe and Bowne and Rall and others whose philosophy plays havoc with the Methodist faith, but no room for Wesley, Fletcher, Pope, Miley, Curtis, and other great writers and theologians who stood firm and unflinching for the faith once delivered to the saints! The finishing up book on theology in the fourth year is by a Baptist, and his hook knocks into smithereens the Methodist doctrines of Creation, Sin, Justification, the Authority of the Scriptures, and Eschatology. One would suppose that Methodism could furnish a work on theology written by a Methodist for the young preachers to finish up on!

Official Methodism (Northern) from the "sole of the foot even into the head" seems to be infected with the "New Theology."

It is in our Sunday school literature, because a rationalist is at the head of that department.

It is in our colleges and theological seminaries, because professors openly committed to the new thought are the teachers there.

It is in our books because our Book Concern is constantly putting out books of the most perniciously rationalistic kind—Soare's book, for instance!

It is in our pulpits, because it would be next to a miracle for our preachers coming from the schools not to reflect the teachings of said schools in their preaching.

Dr. Crooker, a Unitarian, writing on the progress of his Church, said: "What was once damnable heresy now walks abroad as respectable orthodoxy." It is so in Methodism.

Professor James, of Harvard, said: "See how the ancient spirit of Methodism evaporates under those wonderfully able rationalisitc books of a philosopher like Professor Bowne." Too true!

We have sowed to the wind of rationalistic theology, and we are reaping the whirlwind of doubt, skepticism, materialism worldliness, unspiritnality, dead class meetings, dead prayer meetings, decaying pulpits, empty churches, and a godless generation.

Oh, my Methodism come back!—back to the faith of the fathers; back to the old Bible and the old paths; back to the old time religion! Come back to the Cross, with its cleansing blood and to the upper room, with its baptism of fire! Then again shall thy altars burn with sacred fire; then again shall the faces of penitents be wet with the tears of contrition, and thy walls resound with the shouts of the redeemed and the blood-washed!

Thank God there are thousands and tens of thousands of Methodist men and women and preachers who have not bowed the knee to Baal, and an army is gathering from the four corners of the continent to put up a fight for the old faith; and we believe Methodism is not going to the graveyard, but shall recover herself from the wounds of the Rationallsts.

SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

I desire to present to the Church some interesting and important facts concerning the School of Theology of Southern Methodist University.

Faculty.

Every member of the faculty has had successful experience in the pastorate. No man can teach others how to be successful pastors and preachers unless he himself has been successful in this work. There are now eight members of the theological faculty, as follows:

Hoyt M. Dobbs, A.M., B.D., D.D., Dean and Professor of Christian Doctrine.

Ivan Lee Holt, A.B., Ph.D., Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Interpretation.

Paul B. Kern, A.M., B.D., Professor of Homiletics and Church Efficiency.

James Kilgore, A.M., D.D., Professor of Psychology and Philosophy of Religion.

Frank Seay, A. M., B.D., Professor of New Testament Greek and Interpretation.

Horace Morland Whaling, Jr., A.B., B.D., Professor of Church History and Missions.

Jesse L. Cunninggim, A. B., B.D., Professor of Sunday School Pedagogy.

Comer M. Woodward, A.M., B.D., Professor of Sociology.

From the character and standing of the men teaching in the School of Theology as well as from their thorough equipment as scholars, and the attractive courses they offer, it is evident that Southern University asks and expects the attendance of young preachers not merely because it is a Methodist school, but because of the unusual opportunities afforded to get that kind of preparation which is needed to-day.

Distinctive Features.

Special attention is called to the advantages arising from the close relation existing between the Academic Department and the School of Theology. A paragraph is here quoted from the report of Dean Dobbs to the Board of Trustees:

"Our student body is undivided and no zone of differentiation is drawn between academic and theological students. This is emphasized by the fact that the president of the student body for the coming year is a student in the School of Theology, as is also the president of the self-government Association. Both in their class-room duties and in their social relationships, no artificial distinctions are made. It is our judgment, based upon careful study, that this is conducive to fruitful results in bringing the future leadership of the Church into broader and more intimate contact with all other student groups in university life."

Not only so, but theological students who need to study in the College of Liberal Arts have opportunity to do so; and our young preachers are continually reminded that academic training is necessary as a foundation for theological education. In addition to this, work in the School of Theology is open to academic students in such departments as the following: English Bible, Church History and Missions, Sociology, Religions Education, and Sunday School Pedagogy. The School of Theology thus offers to our Christian young people, who are not expecting to enter the ministry, opportunity to prepare themselves for large efficiency as laymen.

The Summer Term.

It has been found that many married men with families, after some experience in the pastorate, come to a keen sense of their need of more adequate preparation. The Summer Term offers them the opportunity to spend six weeks, or more, in the University under successful leaders and trained teachers. It also offers special advantages to teachers and missionaries.

Scholarships and Loan Funds.

Through the efforts of Vice-President C. S. Wright and the hearty co-operation of the presiding elders, the district conferences of at least seven of the Annual Conferences within the territory specially served by Southern Methodist University have provided scholarships and loan funds so that the University has been able to assist financially all students who required such assistance. In this connection it should be said that the presiding elders on districts adjacent to Dallas have co-operated with the School of Theology in opening student pastorates to a number of our young preachers. Such pastorates are, of course, open only to young preachers who have had some experience and only to such as have had preparation sufficient to enable them successfully to serve as pastors while carrying on their studies at the University.

The Library.

The School of Theology is most fortunate in its Library. Funds have been available for the purchase of new books. Many friends have donated valuable books. The University is indebted to Rev. E. L. Shettles, of the Texas Conference, for many rare volumes of the greatest value. Brother Shettles possibly has larger knowledge of the source-books of Methodist history than any other preacher in the Church. For many years Mr. W. C. Everett, of the Publishing House at Dallas, Texas, had been getting together a collection of books on Methodist history. He had collected these volumes with great discrimination. By the courtesy of the Book Committee this valuable library has been placed at the service of the School of Theology. The University thus has a library of Methodist history and doctrine hardly to be equaled in the entiro South.

The Attendance.

There were one hundred students in attendance this last year, from eleven different States and countries, namely: Texas, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, New Mexico, California, Nebraska, Mexico, Japan, and Korea. Since it is the desire of the Educational Commission that Emory University serve the eastern section of the Church and Southern Methodist University serve that part of the Church lying west of the Mississippi River, Southern Methodist University has directed all young preachers east of the Mississippi River, who have sought to enter the School of Theology, to attend the Candler School of Theology in Atlanta, Georgia. Dean Dobbs is greatly encouraged over the outlook for the coming year, a considerably larger number of students having signed up than at this time last year.

University Park, Dallas, Texas.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

In the August number of our Sunday School Magazine there is published an article copied from The Outlook, entitled "The Miracle Worshiper." As is well known, The Outlook is noted for its materialistic and unsound views. The writer writes to throw a damper on the supernatural under the guise of terming it "miracle worship." The hit is really at miracles, and not miracle worshipers, as may be seen hy a casual reading of his article. Now if views like this copied from such a source are to he taught in our Sunday schools, what can be the result but sowing the seeds of infidelity that will be used by Satan to do great evil in misleading souls. Why should such articles appear in our literature? Who is responsible for it? Above all things our teachings should be sound in our Sunday school, and not be of a doubtful nature and from a doubtful source. In other words, it should be truly Methodistic and truly Scriptural, so that our children may have a due reverence for the supernatural and for the miracles recorded in the sacred and inspired Word of God.

E. B. PARTIN, M. D.

Chunky, Miss.

The Miracle Worshiper.

Not long since I was faced in my church chapel by one of those glib, weak-chinned, wide-eyed young Americans who profess to have a special spiritual insight. In an eager sort of way he caught me by the lapel and wanted to know if I believed in the omnipotence of God. I told him that I believed in the God who could limit himself by law, for humanity's good, and that to my mind such limitation was the highest evidence of omnipotence. He said: "Don't you believe if your faith were great enough you could remove mountains by prayer?" I waited for a moment, and he continued excitedly: "If the Christians had the faith they once had, we could get together at the base of French Mountain and pray it into Lake George." Here is a miracle worshiper, and it seems to me that his failure to appreciate Eastern forms of speech and his willingness to couple prayer with great contracts for excavating the earth have about as much connection as the thought of the little boy who remarked: "My father is not a democrat; he is a Presbyterian."

The majority of the readers of this article will agree in this judgment of this man's wits and will own that his wisdom and his faith are those of a weakling who can't or won't think or act; but when I say that hundreds of thousands of Church members and a great mass of ministers are taking just as foolish an attitude toward the salvation of men as this fellow's miracle-obsessed mind has assumed toward the removal of mountains, they will disagree.

The Church of yesterday is demanding that God should do his work twice and that it should be excused from the performance of its own simple duty. Forgetting that Jesus said, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth," they still hold to the narrow notion that the awakening of a soul must be in one psychological form; that the child must be allowed to grow up without being told that from its birth it is a child of God, and made every day a little more conscious of the immanence of God in its life and around it; that in this ignorance it must come to a specially planned gathering of men, where it may be awakened by a miraculous intervention to the fact that it has a godly nature. This is the great form of miracle worship in the Church now, and it is nothing but the perseverance of a custom after the reason for that custom has ceased to exist.

We are in a new light to-day, and we are responsible to live up to its revelation. That light distinctly shows us that the great ideal for the Christian Church is the educational ideal, and that for us to refuse to think out the educational method and put it into practice for the generation of spiritual life and to wait for the miraculous regeneration of tainted spiritual life is just as childish as to couple the overturning of French Mountain into Lake George with prayer. The miracle worshiper is ignorant of the inborn spiritual nature of the child, and he is so stubborn about it that, if he knew, he would be unwilling to own that there could be another method of awakening the human soul to a realization of its likeness to God than the one method with the idea of which the mind of the Church has so long been obsessed.

The way to go at the removal of French Mountain would be to make a contract with an excavating company, raise funds for its payment, and have it removed. That is the only way God would have it done, and the prayers of the universe would not get it done in any other way. When Jesus said, "Man shall live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," he frankly stated that the whole law must be obeyed, and the law that covers the removal of French Mountain is the law of pick, spade, steam shovel, and the contracting company.

If the Church of Christ proposes to save this generation, it is running in the face of failure to refuse the educational method and its complete application to the child. If the children are allowed to grow up without the knowledge of God, and are then turned over to the hands of the miracle worshiper, not one in a thousand will ever intimately feel the sense of the Infinite Spirit; and those who do not experience converson will become the most unwieldy, ungenerous faction in the Christian Church. Now and then one such man is broad-minded, wholesome, and helpful. In general they are censorious, narrow, selfishly critical, and unbearable in their religious egotism.

Study for a moment the way the law of God will work if the Church of Christ will let it work. To-day a little one is born. To-morrow some finely cultured worker in your Church (probably your kindergartner) secures that little one's name for the Cradle Roll, has a visit with the mother, gives her encouragement about her child's religious life, and turns the mind of the mother and the father toward the Church for the child's sake. In a few months the pastor, who knows child life, visits that home and by the act of infant baptism dedicates two forces—the life of the child to the cause of Christ and the lives of the parents to the proper Christian culture of the child. At three years of age the child comes into the Church kindergarten, and by that most beautiful and eternal of all forms of teaching the story has implanted in its life the Word of God in ways it will never forget and will always deeply love and cherish. Up into the sixth and seventh years that little child grows in the Christian Church; and later, when the minister is forming a class of children to be taken into the Church and asks such ones if they want to be members of the Church, in nine cases out of ten the answer will be: "Why, I am a Christian; I have always belonged to the Church." They are Christians, and they have always belonged to the Church.

If now, through the delicate adolescent years, the Church can be a tender foster-mother of the families and the growing children, into adulthood they will come, long-standing, cultured Christians, aware of God and sure of their faith in God; and in the after days that long-continued awakening process will prove its value by a certain splendid quality of religious life. And still I suppose the Church will go on for another generation refusing to do the fine, constant, watchful work of rearing Christian characters and will pray on in vain for God to save men by corrective methods after neglect has done its work. Isn't it pitiful that custom will so long persevere after its reason for being has gone?—Charles Otis Judkins, in The Outlook.

OTHERS NOT WITHOUT WEAKNESSES.

effectiveness of the Baptist Church, like other things, is a matter of parts and a whole; for its vitality depends upon the proper relation of these parts to each other. No thoughtful Baptist can fail to see that here lies the principal waekness of our denomination."

The following statement is by Heermance in his "Democracy in the Church," page 121:

"The curse of congregationalism, which not only hinders it from fulfilling its mission, but threatens its very existence, is 'parochial selfishness.' This is by no means confined to the Congregational churches, but is a graver danger under our free polity. Each church being sufficient to itself, thinks only of itself. It resents advice from other churches as an interference with its supreme authority."

We quote again from Dr. Dargan ("Ecclesiology," page 186):

"Unemployed ministers lying around promiscuously, hunting for a job; committees on pastoral supply bombarded with testimonials and with letters of recommendation, and sometimes disgusted with the shameless scrambling of applicants; churches going pastorless for months, sampling an endless series of prospective pastors—all these abominations exist among us. It is not that we Baptists have any monopoly of this wretched business, but surely our churches are suffering, and will continue to suffer, from these evils unless they themselves apply the remedy."

We might multiply such quotations almost indefinitely, but these will suffice for the present. There would be little wisdom for us as Methodists, because our Church government is not ideal in every respect, to try recklessly to make it like that of other ecclesiasticisms, destroying in endeavoring to do so its marvelous efficiency and generating far worse evils than we now have. Is it said, in reply, that it is desired to go only a part way toward congregationalism in reforming our polity? We answer that such an effort can only prove abortive, so far as doing this and maintaining effectiveness is concerned, for the reason that there is no successful middle-ground between a congregational and an episcopal form of government, as innumerable experiments have clearly demonstrated—one or the other of the two elements must be in the ascendency and dominate.

The general governmental trend in all secular spheres to-day is not toward a division of authority in administration, but toward a concentration of it and holding the person or persons exercising it to a strict accountability for the use they make of it. This is seen in the springing up among us of the commission form of government in our cities, and of the larger power that the President of the United States is now exercising (with the approval of the people) in shaping Congressional legislation. This is truly an age of democracy, but not of a democracy that has no constitutional checks and no authority duly vested in any official to achieve in an orderly manner the necessary ends of society. Viewed in one sense, what could be more undemocratic than the drafting of our young men into a national army, leaving them no say whatever about the matter? But viewed in another sense, it was thoroughly democratic, because all stood upon an absolutely equal footing in the execution of this policy of the Government? So, while it may not allow as much liberty of choice in every respect as some of the Churches, Southern Methodism maintains a great democracy in service, placing (when uninterfered with in its operation) all pastors and churches upon the same plane, and seeking to marshal all of its forces in the way that will contribute most to the general welfare of the Church and to the upbuilding of Christ's Kingdom. And is it not those who want SPECIAL consideration of some kind who are making the largest outcry against our tested and unsurpassed polity? It certainly appears so to us. So far as we are able to judge, there is no clamor for revolutionary changes in our government from the rank and file of either our preachers or people.

The Texas Christian Advocate of September 13, under the caption, "A Girl's View," carried a most suggestive brief article from the vigorous pen of Dr. J. E. Harrison, of San Antonio, which we think may be appropriately reproduced in this connection:

"A prominent official layman of another denomination said to me the other day, 'My grown daughter asked me why we did not do like the Methodists in appointing pastors to churches, and I replied that the Methodist plan was not in the Bible. Her reply was, 'Well, if God left that plan out of the Bible, he overlooked a mighty good thing.'"

AMONG THE SOLDIERS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have had some responses to my call for funds to provide Bibles for the soldiers, but the response was not equal to the need. I don't believe that our people realize the great opportunity that we have at this post for rendering service along this line. The commanding officer of Jackson Barracks and his Staff are interested in every movement for the uplift of our soldier boys.

Below I am giving you an extract of a letter from Mr. Gerald W. Birks, who is a member of one of the greatest jewelry establishment on the continent, with immense stores at Montreal and in other Canadian cities. He is a member of the International Y. M. C. A. Committee and also of the International Sunday School Committee. He is a supervisor of the Y. M. C. A. work and is with the Canadian troops in Europe, and in a personal letter to Mr. J. Shreve Durham, of the International Sunday School Association, he recently said:

"While readily appreciating the magnificent opportunities for Christian service over here, I am every day becoming more and more impressed with the fact that the real constructive work of the Kingdom is what is being done at home by the Sunday School, the Y. M. C. A., and kindred organizations, for there seems but little chance of a man coming through these awful experiences straight, unless his feet have been firmly planted on the rock before he leaves home. So I urge upon you, as this war may possibly be drawn out for years, to do your part with the older boys who are now being called to the colors."

As I have said before, the opportunity for constructive work is not greater anywhere in the country than at Jackson Barracks (in this city), and the appreciation shown by the soldiers in different ways makes one glad to take advantage of every opportunity. These boys are passing our way but once—they are here a few days or weeks, and then they are sent to other camps. I would like to urge our people to rally to our help so that we may he able with sufficient funds to give each of them a copy of God's Word.

Another way in which valuable service can be rendered, is by sending magazines and books. Please send them postpaid to me at 815 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La.

GENESIS OF THAT LAYMEN'S "ADDRESS."

We do not like to designate it as a laymen's address; for there were very few of them who had anything to do with making it and we do not believe that any large number of them will endorse it after it is presented to them, and certainly not the methods that have been employed to date to get it started. Since publishing it in our issue of August 23d, other important facts concerning its beginning have come to our knowledge. A secret propaganda has been going on at least since March 1. We stated in connection with the publication of the "address" that, "according to our best information, the 'movement' originated in Nashville, Tenn." Now what is probably a copy of the original letter that was sent out candidly affirms: "A half dozen Nashville laymen, * * * have prepared the enclosed statement." Whether that "statement" was identical with the "address" that finally fell into our hands, we cannot affirm. We judge that the original "statement" had been revised, inasmuch as in a subsequent letter, a copy of which also has fallen into our hands, it is said: "You will find that the legislative program proposed is much more in keeping with your views than the one I sent you." The "I" in this letter refers to the same party as the name which occupied the position of honor in the first letter. At any rate the "address" that we gave to the public first was the product of that "half dozen Nashville laymen" who "have started this campaign in deadly earnest," to quote again from one of these sub-rosa letters. It may have been "toned up," or "toned down" to suit the views of their select "inner circle," but the heart of the thing has not changed.

Again, we connected this movement with the Vanderbilt affair. Of course we did not mean that there was necessarily any official connection, but the spirit of it marks it of the same character. The second letter of which we now have a copy was a sort of "Who's who" of the signers of the first letter. As a footnote to that letter is this significant statement: "None of these are connected in any way with Vanderbilt University." In a subsequent letter in which the original sponsor turns it over to the "Chattanooga Committee," there is this postscript: "Very wisely, I think, the movement proposes to keep completely away from the Vanderbilt case." Certainly! But why this precaution about the matter? Why should the "Vanderbilt case" suggest itself in connection with it? And why this transference of the base of operations from Nashville to Chattanooga? The reason for it all is patent. The movers in this matter knew that the marks of the "Vanderbilt case" were written all over the spirit of this "address;" and they did not wish for it to appear to originate under the shadow of that institution. They know how the Church regards the way that went, and so they shifted their base of operations to Chattanooga. It is too late, gentlemen; the truth is out!

With reference to the method by which this movement was inaugurated, we took occasion to say: "We have an opinion of it that would not look well in print." We thought that any one would understand us by that to mean that we very strongly condemned it. We do not wish to recede from that position. A secret propaganda that seeks vitally to affect public matters is unworthy Christian manhood. We do not care who does it, whether preachers or laymen, that does not affect the moral quality of it. But we did not, and we do not, mean for that stigma to attach to all those who have signed it. Unless we are mistaken, many of those signatures were given without very serious thought about it; and probably none of them thought specially of the secret propaganda by which the original movers went about their task. In fact these letters rather paraded the publicity they were going to give the matter, though the first one did venture to caution: "Naturally, it is desirable that no publicity should he given to the matter just yet." We suppose that the "just yet" is now passed; for we received to-day a copy from headquarters with request to publish. Whether they have been "smoked out" by its publication and wish now to don the garb of publicity, or whether the time has arrived when they think they are ready to make the "charge," the reader can judge as well as we.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

"THE MAN NEXT DOOR."

Some kinds of Christianity are effective only at long distances, their beauty and usefulness being in proportion to the distance from which one views them, which means that at close quarters they are neither useful nor beautiful. It seems more than doubted whether such a religion has any claim at all to be called Christian, and yet it is common enough in every-day life. There are Chinese converts possibly blessing some saintly brother in Canada because of his generosity and Christian kindness, while his next door neighbors in Canada have never heard him speak a kindly word, nor even seen him smile. The religion that will not stand the next-door neighbor test is not what the world needs. Then the next door neighbor is often worth knowing. We look for saints and heroes in the far distance, and they are living right on our own street. Some of us would gladly go a thousand miles to talk with some one who has become to us a hero, and yet it may be that within the sound of our voice is some one greater than he. Try to find him out.—The Christian Guardian.

THE PROSPECTIVE NEW MILLSAPS DORMITORY.

Plans for this structure have recently been drawn by Mr. H. N. Austin, the well known architect. It is expected to cost $60,000. Of this amount the citizens of Jackson, Miss., have pledged $30,000, and a campaign, led by Commissioner M. M. Black, is now under way throughout the State of Mississippi to secure the remaining portion of the money necessary for the erection of this urgently needed building. The picture that we gave in the Advocate last week was of the Millsaps Main Building, not of the dormitory, the wrong cut having been sent us from Jackson. So we take pleasure in giving above a view of the proposed new dormitory as it will appear when completed.

THE LOUISIANA ORPHANAGE "WORK DAY" AND "HARVEST DAY."

By Conference action our Churches and Sunday schools are pledged to observe "Work Day" and "Harvest Day" for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors it was agreed that Saturday, October 13, would be "Work Day," followed by "Harvest Day," on Sunday, the 14th.

The plan is for every member of the Methodist Church, and all friends of homeless children, to give the price of one day's labor to our cause. It is hoped that every man, woman, and child will either find something special to do whereby they may earn something, or estimate the price of their daily labor, and contribute what they would earn on Saturday, or "Work Day," on the following Sunday morning, either at Sunday school, or Church services, for the Orphanage. For a number of years we have observed this day throughout the State with gratifying results. It is sincerely hoped that in this year of high costs for all necessities of life our people will be more genreous than ever before, so that our great work will not suffer.

This has been one of the most satisfactory years since the beginning of our work. The health conditions in the Home have been most gratifying; the records made by the children in school and at home have been up to the standard; while we have suffered from a severe drouth, the agricultural interests have been profitable; many needed improvements and conveniences have been added, due to the benefaction of our lamented friend, Mr. C. W. Blair; quite a number of children have been placed in good homes, and we now have 125 children in the Orphanage. We have been able to meet all our obligations without accumulating debts, and, while we are now facing an empty treasury, we are unencumbered.

Now if our high record is to be maintained, and our great cause is to continue to go forward, it will be necessary for our people to rally to our work as never before. We are spending almost double for the necessities of life this year that we paid last year. Flour, meal, meat, sugar, lard, shoes, clothing, school materials, fuel, and every other essential have almost doubled in price. In addition to this, we now have more children than ever before. It is easy to see, therefore, how necessary it is that we not only do as well this fall for the Orphanage as in former years, but that our people will have to do much more, and must secure a much larger sum if we are to get through the winter unencumbered and without debt.

I urge, therefore, all our preachers, Sunday school superintendents, and interested friends, to prepare for the proper observance of "Work Day," and make as great an effort as possible for our cause. If every pastor and Christian worker will do his part, and all our people are given an opportunity, I feel sure the results will be highly gratifying, and that we may continue to do the work in the same commendable way as in the past.

Sincerely,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,

Supt. Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE WORK DAY—OCTOBER 13, 1917.

What is Work Day?

Work Day is a day set apart by the management of the Orpanage in which all the friends of the Orphanage are requested to work for the nearly 200 children in the Orphanage. It is not mandatory; it is no act of the Church, but simply a request of the Board of Directors and Managers of the Orphanage. If Saturday, the 13th of October, does not suit you, you take any day that does. But be certain to take one day and work hard and give God the proceeds.

How Can One Observe Work Day?

Those who have no regular employment, such as children, by securing some work for that day—picking cotton, cleaning the house, hauling wood, etc. When children are in school they can piek cotton or do other work on Saturady.

All who are working for a salary ean give one day's salary. All professional people can give the proceeds of the most profitable day of the week. A lawyer might win a case and make $100 or $500 that he could give. The doctor could give the proceeds of his income for one day. All the court officials, railroad and factory employes and officials could give the worth of one day's work. The school teacher, stenographer, elerk and telephone operator, etc., could do the same. The merchant could give 10 per cent of one day's sales. Let the merchant take the best day's sales, say Saturday. Promise the Lord at the beginning of the week what you will do and ask his help. Request all business men to join you in giving the profits of their business that day to the nearly 200 children here.

Advertise Work Day.

Publish it in the Sunday school, at Church services of all kinds, in the women's meetings, in the public schools, at the post offices, depots, and all public places, and especially in all newspapers that circulate in your county. Have some circulars printed with extracts from "Our Home" and a eall to the public for help and have some children to distribute them all over the eommunity. Pay all expenses out of the proceeds. It will be a profitable investment. One friend, the superintendent of a Sunday school, last year sent out circulars and contribution cards, which I think was a fine idea. Advertising the day will pay. Try it. Pray for God's help.

J. B. RANDLOPH,

Manager.

(October 14, will be Harvest Day, when all the donations should be gathered in, that they may be forwarded to the Manager of the Orphanage at Jackson, Miss.)

ORPHANAGE TRUSTEES TO MEET.

Tho Board of Directors of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home aro called to meet at the Home in Jackson, Miss., on Thursday, Sept. 27, at 10 o'clock a.m., for the purpose of eleeting a Manager for the ensuing year.

PORT GIBSON COLLEGE OPENS WELL.

Dear Brother Meek: I was present at the opening of Port Gibson College on Sepetember 11. There were present enough to fill five of the long tables in the dining hall, which indicates that the number of matrieulates was about sixty. Brother O'Neil was looking for others on trains soon to eome in, and was happy. War times do not seem to have affected the patronage of this honored institution.

A THING THAT COUNTS.

Five minutes spent in the companionship of Christ every morning—aye, two minutes, if it is face to face and heart to heart—will change the whole day, will make every thought and feeling different, will enable you to do things for His sake that you would not have done for your own sake, or for any one's sake.—Professor Dummond.

It is useless to ask God to control our hearts until we are willing to try to control our own thoughts.—Edward Leigh Pell.

The Great Battle

NOTES.

The American Issue thinks that the liquor forces in the State of New York are preparing, in order to try to safeguard the traffic, to have wet Democrats register and vote as Republicans.

Dallas County, Texas, within which the city of Dallas is situated, voted dry on September 10 by a majority of approximately 2000. It is said that this action, when it takes effect, will close 220 saloons, one brewery, and twelve liquor houses, representing a capital invested in the liquor business of $2,500,000.

The New York Press, a journal that supports the saloon cause, estimates that the Federal law forbidding the manufacture and importation of distilled liquors will reduce the number of dramshops in New York City by one-third. It is said this reduction will begin to take place about October 1, the time for the renewal of licenses. The New Orleans papers are of the opinion that many saloons in the Crescent City will also find it necessary to shut down. Let the good work go on!

"YOU CAN'T MAKE MEN GOOD BY LAW!"

Ex-Governor J. Frank Hanly.

This is a bit of folly we do not try, but you have made men bad by law. What we quarrel about is the latter attempt, whether the other can be done or not. The law is a great sentiment maker. Besides, it fixes the environment of many absolutely.

But is it true that men can not be made good by law? The supposition of criminal laws is that they do have some restraining influence among men. They not only serve to punish bad men, and to protect good men, but to keep many individuals out of a life of crime which they would have entered if there had been no such laws. I apprehend that we are a great deal better under law than we would be without law. No doubt there is a good deal less of crime in the State than if we had no criminal code. By so much are men made better by reason of the law. A good prohibitory law, reasonably enforced, would serve to improve the character and lives of many people. Saloonkeepers would be forced to go into some decent business, which would make them, their wives, and children better. Many a young man who has been subjected to temptation and has just started on the road to ruin would be saved by a law shutting up saloons.

A BAD GOVERNMENTAL POLICY.

Ex-Governor J. Frank Hanly.

The amount of annual bribe the liquor traffic now pays to the American conscience is more than two hundred million dollars in federal revenue alone. If to this be added the annual bribe in State, county, and municipal revenues, the sum would be greatly augmented. The effect has been to deaden the civic conscience of the Nation, to embed the traffic in the financial affairs of all government, and to give it the sanctifying seal of legality. With this gigantic revenue ever before them, men are wont to believe that they are thereby relieved to that extent from the burden of taxation. They do not see beyond the traffic's bribe of up-heaped gold. They do not pause to count the cost and ruin, or to calculate the loss in physical, mental, industrial, and moral efficiency the traffic occasions—its enervating blight, its moral degradation. For the sake of two hundred million dollars of revenue they are content to pay an annual drink bill aggregating a thousand seven hundred and fifty million dollars! Our most worthy government has not yet attained to that nobility that impelled the emperor of a heathen nation nearly three quarters of a century ago to say to those who were urging him to license the opium traffic, "No, I will not take a revenue from what represents the vices and misfortunes of my people."

For the sake of one dollar in revenue the Federal Government is content to see its citizens squander eight dollars and seventy-five cents in the consumption of an article that injures every high quality of citizenship that they possess, and adds an incalculable burden of crime, dependency, and taxation. It condones the sin because the sinner contributes to its coffers. The moral effect has been and is disastrous. Our conscience has been deadened until we are willing to dethrone manhood for revenue, and to discrown womanhood to escape taxation. This brings us to the second point—to the second primal reason—Our Absorbing, All Consuming Love of Money. We tolerate the traffic because there is money in it for those directly engaged in it. We are so eager for wealth that we do not hestitate to destroy manhood in the making of it; it is more sacred than motherhood, more beloved than childhood. To obtain it we despoil the heritage of the one, and trample upon the heart of the other. We are more censurable than were our fathers. Apprised of the evil, we accept it, silencing our consciences with the profits it brings, and hesitating not, though every coin we receive is wet with tears, every banknote odorous with blood.

Knowing the true and living God, we stoop to worship the idols of the market-place. Possessing freedom, we are satisfied to write our history in a cashbook, and to weigh all questions of right and wrong in the balances of trade. We recognize no higher law than interest and cupidity. Possessed by a consuming love of the sensual, we prefer property to principle, and money profit to moral sentiment. Taking advantage of our weakness, this predatory and destructive traffic has entrenched itself in the sordidness of our natures until it is financially impregnable. Because of this it still exists.

CHRIST THE WORLD'S ONLY SAVIOR.

Rev. Chas. W. Crisler, in the Weekly Messenger.

A good character is the greatest of moral forces. The character of Jesus Christ is conquering human hearts and transforming human society. Its influence has spread from the smaller life of His chosen few to the wider life of the world. It has moved from heart to heart and from age to age until it is almost universal.

This is a great time in which we live. "Man's materal life was never so immense, its achievements never so marvelous, its wealth never so bewildering," and its opportunity never so far-reaching, as now. Probably in its life no age in history has ever been "so rich in redemptive moral agencies as the present." All the prevailing forces of man and the moulding forces of God are lending themselves to a world-democracy—the universal brotherhood of man.

"The Son of righteousness is rising with healing in His wings." A half-drunken world has received a sobering shock. Intoxicating drinks, responsible directly or indirectly for 75 per cent of all crime, are going to be prohibited and weak men, enslaved by their appetites, are going to be made free. The dense and beclouded brain of the world has at last realized that the highest efficiency socially, industrially, and morally, can only be reached by sober, clean men.

The pure mind of Christ has given men and women new views of social sins. The man who persists in living a double life is going to be given a double shift: he is going to be put out of decent society and out of respectable business. A fallen man is no better than a fallen woman, and both should receive the same treatment.

The moral standards of the race are such that no sin is going to be excused on the grounds of its necessity. No crime, no degree of sin, is essential to any man or woman. The Mann Act of Congress is making it very uncomfortable for affinities who persist in breaking the moral law. Moral reforms are threatening the existence of social sins in many of our cities. Memphis has just issued police orders that the immoral woman must go.

Yes, "the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." His beauty is attracting, His purity is vitalizing, and His goodness is spreading. He is making the world better, human life safer and happier, and the principles of His gospel more universal.

MORAL CONDITIONS IN THE WEST.

Just before sailing for the Orient, Bishop John C. Kilgo tarried for two or three days in San Francisco, and he wrote for the Nashville Christian Advocate when on the Pacific Ocean a communication in which occurs the following reference to that city:

"San Francisco is a new city so far as buildings are concerned. The earthquake and fire destroyed the old city, and it was rebuilt on even a larger scale. But there are no signs that this Pacific metropolis is a better city. Physical calamities did not stir them to moral and religious improvement. If one were in search of a field of paganism in which to labor, he might find all he could wish in this magnificent yet godless city by the Golden Gate; and American paganism is of the worst type, whether in New York or San Francisco. It is rich, well-fed, insolent, irreverent, and boastful. To a Southerner there is something shocking in the extreme in what is called the highest class of women smoking and drinking and carousing in the most splendid hotels. But they tell us this is the West, not the conservative South—a piece of information I did not need. One thing which distinguishes the East from the West, making altogether two different types of civilization, is the solitary fact that the West never had the ministry of an Asbury; and what the South would be today without the labors of this prophet sent of God no man can tell. But there are good people in San Francisco, although the number may be small; and God knoweth them that are his wherever they may be. But if an example of the teachings of the new theologians is desired, this Western city will fully satisfy every requirement."

LEARNING CANNOT SATISFY.

Solomon was one of the largest contributors to the literature of his day. The man who tries to make learning and science his God has before him a life of gigantic wretchedness. Byron had all that genius and sympathy with nature and literary applause could give a man, and yet he died of wretchedness.—Talmage.

"If you mean to act nobly, and seek to know the best things which God hath put within the reach of men, you must fix your mind on that end, and not what will happen to you because of it."—George Eliot.

THROUGH THE DAY.

By Mrs. H. B. Perritt.

(Dedicated to the Superannuated Preachers.)

God be with you in the morning,
When the first faint rays of light
Fall across your chamber window,
Making earth all glad and bright;
When the flowers are steeped in dewdrops,
When the air is cool and sweet,
And each task and duty waiting
Willing hands and willing feet!

God be with you at the noonday,
When the heat and toil and care
Press upon your weary body,
Making life seem hard to bear;
When your soul grows faint with longing
For the rest of other lands—
God be with you in the noonday,
Strengthening hope and heart and hands!

God be with you in the evening,
When the sun dips westward low,
And the day is softly dying,
And the gentle zephyrs blow;
When the heart and hands are tired
With life's long and weary quest—
God be with you in the evening,
Just to guide you into rest!

REBECCA'S SPONGE CAKE.

"Not a bit of cake in the house for supper!" mother lamented. "Oh, if I only hadn't sprained my wrist!"

"Let's open a box of baker's cakes, Peggy suggested, glancing up with a little scowl from her story book.

"Oh, I hate to do that, with Miss Barton here. It's such a simple supper to-night, anyway, for a boarder!"

But Peggy was deep again in her book.

"Mamma," Rebecca, ten years old, and two years younger than Peggy, laid down the doll's sweater she was knitting and went to sit beside her mother, "I can make my sponge cake; that's always rather nice."

"It's delicious," mother said, with a hug, "but I don't like to have you bother with it."

"Oh, I don't mind a bit, mamma," said Rebecca. So she laid bisque Arabella carefully away in her cradle and went into the kitchen. It wasn't necessary for mother to know how anxious she had been to finish knitting her doll's sweater.

Miss Barton, passing through the hall a little later, paused a moment at the kitchen door to smile at Rebecca, enveloped in a big gingham apron and bravely whirring the egg beater. "What are you doing, dearie?"

"I'm just making a sponge cake for supper," Rebecca smiled back. "Mamma's sprained her wrist, you know. I can't cook very many things; Peggy makes beautiful cakes, but I only know how to make sponge cake."

"It's one of my favorite cakes," Miss Barton said, "and I know by experience it isn't a very easy one to make." Her eyes were very earnest and kind as they rested on Rebecca. Then she passed through the hall and into the sitting room where Peggy lay on the lounge, still buried in her story book. "Reading another book?" she asked.

"Yes, I'd rather read than to do anything," Peggy said. Mother was in the dining-room, moving between table and sideboard, setting the table with her left hand. "I'll come and help you in a minute, mother," Peggy called out. But she read to the end of the story, Miss Barton noticed.

Rebecca's sponge cake proved delicious. Miss Barton praised it very highly, and delighted the young cook by taking a second piece. "It's one of the finest sponge cakes I ever tasted," she said. Then, with a sudden, flashing smile, "Rebecca, would you be willing to make me a cake all for myself, a whole cake, and not cut it?"

"Why, yes, Miss Barton, I'd love to," Rebecca said, politely concealing any wonder she felt at the request.

"It's wonderful for a little girl of your age. Does it always turn out as well as this?" Miss Barton continued.

"Always," mother said, with loving pride. "She's going to be a fine cook, and she's always the sweetest little helper imaginable."

Rebecca took great pains with her sponge cake the very next morning, and it came from the oven beautiful and light and with a lovely golden color. Miss Barton kissed her as she spoke her thanks and disappeared with the cake.

"Do you suppose she's going to take it to somebody who is sick?" Rebecca wondered, but mother shook her head. "I can't imagine, dear," she said.

Two days passed, with nothing further said about her cake. Then one bright morning Miss Barton asked if she might take both girls to the State Fair with her, and the three went off gayly together. Such an interesting morning as they had, going from one big building to another, admiring the wonderful displays of fruits and vegetables and flowers, the "pioneer exhibits" in the old log cabin, the horses and the trained dog show. Finally, they went into the "Woman's Building," where Miss Barton took them to a huge glass case filled with all kinds of cake. "Read that, dear," she said, pointing to a card leaning against a sponge cake which had a neat triangle cut from it.

"Made by Rebecca Olmstead, ten years old," Rebecca read, amazement in voice and eyes. "Why—why, that's the cake I made!" she said wonderingly.

"Surely it is; I entered it in the contest by children under sixteen, and look at this!" "This" was a blue card on which was printed "First Prize."

"Oh," Rebecca said, her face very rosy, her voice almost shaking.

"The first prize is $10," Miss Barton added, "and I can't tell you how proud I am that it is our little girl who won it."

It was a good thing that the other sights had been seen, for Rebecca after that walked on air, she was so amazed and so wonderfully, dazedly happy. "I never had so much money in all my life," she whispered. "Oh, Miss Barton, how perfectly lovely you were to do it for me!"

"Your sponge cake won its own honors, dear," said Miss Barton. "I merely had the honor of introducing it to the fair."

All the way home Peggy's eyes were very thoughtful. She was thinking how she might have won a prize for her angel cake if only she had made one that evening for Miss Barton's supper. But—she looked at her little sister, trudging so joyously beside her, and suddenly squeezed that little sister's hand.

"I'm so glad you did win," she whispered, and she meant it, too.—The Child's Hour.

CARRIER PIGEONS IN WARFARE.

The value of airplanes in the war is partly due to the speed of the carried pigeons taken aloft and released with messages. Should the airplane be shot down the bird may accomplish the task the man set out to do. In the French army alone it is said upward of 15,000 carrier pigeons are used daily.—Christian Intelligencer.

HOW ARE YOU WRITING YOUR NAME?

Boys have a fashion of putting their names on things. The ever-ready knife carves name or initials in all sorts of places. The pen or pencil or popular rubber stamp impresses it upon their books and other belongings. Even their skates write it in shining curves and it flourishes on the ice, if they have sufficient skill to do it.

Their names, like all others, are written in the hearts of their friends and acquaintances, too. The odd thing about it is that they can be written there in so many different ways. One boy may write his in rudeness, in selfishness, in ill-temper, in all sorts of unpleasant scrawls. Probably he would be much surprised if he could see what his name stands for in the hearts of those who know him.

Another writes his name in letters of politeness, of kindness, of good-natured readiness to do nice things for others; and he, too, might be surprised if he could see the record. But it would be a much pleasanter kind of surprise than that the other boy would feel. It is worth while for you to be careful how you write your name in the hearts of others.—Apples of Gold.

REJECTED.

By James W. Lipscomb, M. D.

Proud souls who stay at home,
I feel for you;
I, too, have felt my country's call,
Just as did you:
But here back home, if we are true,
There's work to do
Let us not mourn or repine,
But that work do.

Perhaps, too old, perhaps unfit
Be that as may;
Ours to labor, not to quit;
We're here to stay.
Each man at front needs live at home,
So we are told,
To your tasks, proud souls—work, work;
Be bold, be bold.

No martial strains, no loud huzzas,
Shall be our lot;
But in seclusion, in the grind of toil,
By man forgot—
Ours to labor morning, evening,
Accept your fate;
Down autocrats—up democrats—
That's now our slate.

Who knows but on the judgment day
Where all must stand—
When rings the Master's voice, when,
With uplift hand,
Pointing to that highest place,
May speak the Son
"Your name, my child, leads all the rest.
Well done, well done."

Columbus, Miss.

PROCRASTINATION A GREAT MISTAKE.

I often wish, when I see the young hesitating on the threshold of the kingdom that they might realize how much they lose by staying away. Not a friend below can offer so much of enduring joy as is freely offered by this Friend with pierced hands, and the head once crowned with thorns. The sweetness of his call will be in your souls, dear child of time, to all eternity. You can never know immortal joy if you do not heed it. "Come unto me," he says, "and I will give you rest." Yes, Lord Jesus, we will come, and receive in this life, and in the life to come, peace, rest, and joy, for at thy right hand there are pleasures for every one.—Margaret E. Sangster.

CENTENARY COLLEGE
SHREVEPORT, LOUISIANA

Fall term opens Sept. 19. Full College courses leading to degrees; also High School preparation for College entrance. Military instruction offered. Comfortable dormitory, steam heat, hot and cold baths, good board at moderate cost. Faculty with university degrees. Health conditions unsurpassed. Christian influences.

R. H. WYNN, President BOX 6

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

Editorial

WHAT ONE PASTOR HAS DONE.

Rev. M. F. Adams, our choice young pastor at Flora, Miss., writes us as follows: "I send you 20 subscriptions, and, according to your offer, I ask you to send me one of your $3.50 Bibles, with the name of ——— printed in gilt letters on the back. Also send me a copy of Billy Sunday's Life, to which I am entitled under your terms." This shows what a live worker can do toward getting subscriptions to the Advocate and securing some of the fine prizes offered when he really tries. The days are swiftly passing, the Conferences will soon come, and the splendid opportunity to secure these excellent Bibles without a cent of cost will have passed. Now is the time to get busy if you mean to avail yourself of the Publisher's generous offer.

A CORRECTION.

In our discussion of the Nashville revolutionary propaganda in the Advocate last week we stated that the movement was originated by "eight" Nashvillites, when we should have said seven. We profoundly regret having made this mistake. Four of the seven, being members of the West End (the Vanderbilt) Church, the representatives of that congregation had a clear majority. We had no thought of stripping those gentlemen of this distinction. It all came about by our counting, when in haste, Mr. Eleazer's name twice, it appearing first in the list of signers and being repeated at the end to let the brethren know to whom to write, thus making him both the head and tail of the shining coterie. But, after all, our error was not so very bad, since apparently Mr. Eleazer did quite enough toward starting this brave and chivalric agitation for almost any two men. However, the humbiest apology possible is hereby extended to any brother to whom injustice may have been done by our failure to be strictly accurate.

TWO IMAGINARY BUGABOOS.

Two things held up as great bugaboos in the Nashville revolutionary propaganda are the so-called secret sessions of the Episcopal College (we use the word "so-called" because much of what is done is not really secret) and the life tenure in office of the Bishops. Let us look at these features of our polity calmly and dispassionately and see if they are the menacing evils that some would have us to believe.

1. It should be remembered that the College of Bishops is the great administrative body of the Church, being the prescribed agency through which the General Conference expects most of the policies that it formulates to be executed and made effective. There are many matters of a very delicate nature that this body has to handle, which are often necessarily determined some time before it is expedient to announce what has been done, as, for instance, the transfer of ministers from one Conference to another with a view to taking care of important churches in strategic centers, and the immediate publication of their plans would be calculated to disturb things prematurely and do great harm. Think of what a furore the country would be kept in if President Wilson and his Cabinet were required to confer with open doors! There is not a single executive department of our Government which is not operated as a result of private consultations among the officials in charge of it, and Congress and the State Legislatures frequently find it necessary to make their sessions executive, thus keeping their proceedings from the public; yet these agitators would make it illegal for our Bishops to confer except with the eye of the world upon them. What have our Chief Pastors done that they should be objects of so much suspicion? Why should they be placed under a different rule from all the other administrative bodies of the Church and State? We can see no reason for trying to excite prejudice against the College of Bishops because, as the administrators of large interests, many of which are of a most sacred character, they do not choose to sit with all present who may care to come, including reporters to have everything that is said and done flashed all over the country. Could any demand be more preposterous than this?

2. But what about the life tenure of Bishops? Does not that smack of autocracy, and is it not out of place in this democratic age? Let us consider a little this regulation of our economy. Few men are elected to the episcopacy before they are fifty years of age, and twenty years would probably be a large estimate for the average term of service of a Bishop. When he is chosen to office, it is not to exercise by himself large powers in a single area of territory, as does a Governor or the President; but he becomes a member of an administrative body of twelve or fourteen men, whose authority is co-ordinate with his own, and his field of service is prescribed annually. It is practically an unheard of thing for a Bishop to have charge of the same district longer than for a quadrennium, and usually it is for a less time than that, and frequently for only one year. And with our nearly fifty Conferences and mission fields, if he should serve as a Chief Pastor for fifteen or twenty years he would hardly be able to do more than swing around the connection once. It takes a Bishop several years to become really proficient in the work of his office; so, in view of the fact that his field is almost constantly changing and that there is practically no opportunity for him to exercise supervision continuously in the same area, we think it would be most unwise to discontinue him, thus losing, for no good reason, the benefit of the efficiency as an administrator that he has acquired from experience, and having constantly to bring in new and untrained men. The provisions that a Methodist Bishop must work under laws that are clearly prescribed, that his colleagues may overrule his legal decisions, that his administration is reviewed by the General Conference, and that he is not permitted to continue long in charge of any one district are, in our opinion, ample safeguards against any abuse of power and the building up about him of any ecclesiastical machine.

But it may be asked, if it would not be better to elect a Bishop for four or eight years and make him eligible to re-election. We do not think so. Such an arrangement would, we fear, tend to make him less impartial, independent, and firm in administration—qualities which, in our judgment, are very much needed. And, furthermore, we fully concur in the following statement recently made in the Texas Christian Advocate by Dr. J. E. Harrison, of San Antonio: "By electing our Bishops for life and putting upon them the duty of naming the presiding elders, Methodism is saved from a stupendous political organization that would greatly cripple it in spiritual power."

A TIMELY REMONSTRANCE.

We think that Dr. Partin's objection to the article from The Outlook that was reproduced in the August number of our Sunday School Magazine is well founded, and that it is most timely.

We believe as thoroughly as one possibly could in the careful teaching and training of our youth from the cradle up to the years of maturity, but not in a training based upon the assumption of birth regeneration. Such a doctrine is at variance with all of the recognized standards of Methodist doctrine. That children are born regenerate is clearly the implied teaching of the article in question. Note, for instance, the following statement: "The Church of yesterday is demanding that God shall do his work twice." Since the work here referred to is regeneration, this affirmation seemingly can only mean that children come into the world without need of the new spiritual birth. Or, if the need of the quickening, life-giving work of the Holy Spirit is taken into account in the cultural process outlined, certainly the emphasis placed upon it is very vague and weak.

Note the declaration that it is a fact that it (the child) has a GODLY NATURE." We respectfully submit that this lacks much of being in accord with the Seventh of our Twenty-Five Articles of Religion, which were considered so important that they were specially safeguarded in the Constitution of the Church. That article is as follows:

"VII. Of Original or Birth Sin."

"Original sin standeth not in the following of Adam (as the Pelagians do vainly talk), but in the corruption of the nature, that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam, whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness, and of his own nature inclined to evil and that continually."

And of the same import is the first part of the Eighth Article, which reads as follows: "The condition of man after the fall of Adam is such that he cannot turn and prepare himself by his own natural strength and works to faith and calling upon God."

Dr. Partin states his case mildly. The article taken from The Outlook not only tends to depreciate miracles, but it strikes chiefly at that universally necessary miracle, the new birth, while is always a divine and supernatural work, though the writer under review speaks as if it is possible "to think out an educational method and put it into practice for the generation of spiritual life," so as not "to wait for the MIRACULOUS regeneration of tainted spiritual life." This jumble of words is somewhat perplexing. Is there a "spiritual life" in the sinner which is merely "tainted?" Paul's way of expressing it was, "And you hath he quickened who were DEAD in tresspasses and in sins."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. H. S. Johns, of Baton Rouge, La., spent last Sunday and Monday in New Orleans, and while here did us the kindness to look in on us in our sanctum. Dr. Johns is doing a great work among the prisoners of the State.

Brother J. H. Calhoun, of Rayville, sends in his subscription, and says: "I have seen a number of copies of the Advocate and heartily endorse its editorials—especially those on the Vanderbilt question and against organic union with the M. E. Church, North."

Dr. J. T. Sawyer, of New Orleans, reports that he preached last Sunday afternoon for the Rev. Mr. Hayes at the Westwego Presbyterian Church, across the river. He expects, Providence permitting, to preach at Epworth M. E. Church, South, next Sunday at 11 o'clock a.m., Rev. C. M. Morris, the pastor, being out of the city.

Rev. R. A. Aliums, pastor of the Coalville (Miss.) charge, writes: "The Palmer Creek Camp Meeting will begin on September 28, and will continue for ten days. Rev. G. D. Anders will do the preaching. All ministers will be entertained free. Let everybody who can, come. We request the readers of the Advocate to pray that we may have a good meeting."

Rev. J. H. Holder, the energetic presiding elder of the Sardis (Miss.) District, in forwarding his fourth round of appointments, thus refers to the work in the territory under his supervision: "Things are making good headway in the Sardis District. If we continue for the next two months as we have for the past ten months, our district will make the greatest report in its history. The preachers are all hard at work."

Rev. C. Y. Higginbotham, of Jennings, La., has brought us under obligations to him for some good work recently done in behalf of the Conference organ. He believes in taking care of all the interests of the Church in his field.

Byhalia, Miss., has recently had an interesting series of revival services in which the popular pastor, Rev. A. C. McCorkle, was aided by Rev. E. S. Harris of Bigelow, Ark. The congregations were reported to be large and attentive.

Rev. J. B. Fulton, pastor of the Baker (La.) charge, reports a great meeting at Deerford. Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Crowley, did the preaching. Forty-four persons were added to the Church, and the membership was greatly strengthened spiritually.

No account of the opening of Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., has been sent to the Advocate, but the press dispatches stated that the number of students matriculating was larger than usual, and that the outlook for the term now beginning is very bright. The present will be the 64th session of this institution.

At an informal meeting held at the Monteleone Hotel, this city, last week, in the interest of the war work under the direction of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, Dr. S. H. Werlein was named as one of several delegates to the Congress of Inter-Church Federations to be held in Pittsburgh, Pa., October 1-4.

Rev. Hyder B. Thomason, of Bayou Chicot, La., sends us two subscriptions, for which he has our thanks, and graciously adds the following message: "I am always glad to help the Advocate. When a boy it fired me with an inspiration to be a man; it has helped me all my life, and I do not think it was ever better than it is now."

Rev. C. H. Ellis, pastor of the Lintonia charge, Mississippi Conference, gives us some subscriptions from his field and an interesting write-up of his work, which will appear in the next issue of the Advocate. Brother Ellis stands for the highest things in the Christian life and service, and is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

A correspondent informs us that Rev. J. M. Bradley has received 50 or more members into our church at Aberdeen, Miss., since Conference, and that his influence in the community has been most wholesome from the standpoint of patriotism, as well as religion. His son, Mr. John Bradley, has recently enlisted in the Navy and is now at Norfolk, Va.

Writing under date of September 17, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, our pastor on the Donaldsonville (La.) charge, says: "Rev. C. C. Wier, of New Orleans, did some splendid preaching for us at Whitecastle last week, and we had the best congregations that I ever saw there. He was pastor there for four years, and no man was ever held in higher esteem anywhere than he is by the people of that community."

In a letter bringing his fourth round of appointments for publication, Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Lafayette (La.) District, says: "We have had a number of great revivals, have paid several church debts, have bought and improved parsonage properties, and the indications are that we will have the best financial reports at Conference that the district has ever made." Good for Brother May and his co-workers!

We have learned with sorrow that Mr. Lovick A. Lowrey, a brother of Rev. P. O. Lowrey, died at his mother's home in Mansfield, La., at 11 o'clock p. m. on September 15. The deceased had been afflicted for twenty years, but bore his afflictions nobly, and was a man of most exemplary life and character. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may consciously sustain them in their sorrow.

Rev. B. P. Jaco, of Lexington, Miss., had with him on a recent Sunday Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner of Emory University, and Rev. W. W. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Durant District. It scarcely needs to be said that the occasion mentioned was a high day with the Methodists of the Holmes County Capital. Brother Jaco writes optimistically of the work in his excellent charge.

The many friends of Mr. J. D. Barbee, formerly of Greenville, Miss., but now of Memphis, Tenn., will regret to know that he has lately been far from well physically. Brother Barbee is one of the best informed laymen in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and we trust that his health will soon improve. He takes a keen interest in all the affairs of Southern Methodism, and has scant patience with the disloyalists who are seeking to revolutionize our beloved Church.

Rev. E. G. Wood, of Standard, La., writes as follows concerning his charge: "My work is in a good condition. I expect to have a creditable report at Conference."

Rev. N. B. Harmon, of Magnolia, assisted his brother, Rev. G. S. Harmon, in a revival meeting at Poplarville, Miss., last week.

Rev. J. E. Thomas, of Amory, Miss., is rounding out, as usual, a year of untiring, consecrated, and successful labor in the Master's vineyard. He has received some 45 members on profession of faith since Conference, and the work is prospering both at Amory and Nettleton. Brother Thomas is fortunate in having a most efficient assistant in his work in the person of Sister Thomas, whose influence is largely felt for good. Together, they make a great team.

President R. E. Bobbitt writes: "We are happy to state that Mansfield Female College opened with the number of boarding students larger than the enrollment for the entire year of 1916-17. The average attendance last year was 20 per cent greater than the year before, and we are beginning with a 15 per cent greater number than that of last year. Another member is to be added to the music faculty, and perhaps another teacher secured for literary branches. Our entire faculty would then be 15 in number, about double that of five years ago."

The Editor acknowledges, with thanks, the reception of invitations from Bishop E. D. Mouzon and Dr. Hoyt M. Dobbs to attend the Educational Conference to be held at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, on September 25, in the interest of our schools west of the Mississippi River. He regrets that it will not be practicable for him to be present on that occasion. He has asked Rev. W. W. Drake, who is a trustee of Southern Methodist University and who expects to be there, to report the proceedings of the Conference for the Advocate, and Brother Drake has kindly consented to do so. We trust that this gathering will be a notable one in every respect.

The following is the schedule of Sunday School District Institutes within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference: Greenville District, Lyon, Sept. 20 and 21; Sardis District, Como, Sept. 22—Coldwater, Sept. 24; Holly Springs District, Byhalia, Sept. 25—Holly Springs, Sept. 26; Corinth Dist., New Albany, Sept. 27, 28; Aberdeen Dist., Tupelo, Sept. 29, 30. Brother Gladney has with him in carrying forward this work Mr. A. L. Dietrich and Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, both of whom rank high as experts in this important field of service. These occasions should be made to count for the utmost possible in stimulating an intelligent interest in Sunday School methods and activity.

We have received a card written from Calaveras, Texas, and signed by Brother and Sister T. S. Randie (of the Louisiana Conference), which reads as follows: "We desire our many friends in Louisiana to know that we are again safe in Texas, after having spent with Rev. Robert Randie and his kind people at Farmerville, La., and relatives in Monroe and friends in other parts of the State four delightful months. We thank them all for their kindness." Rev. T. S. Randie and Rev. Robert Randie are twin brothers, and Sister Randie has a sister residing at Monroe. Though they deem it best for providential reasons to reside in the Lone Star State, they still regard beautiful Louisiana as really their home.

We erred some weeks ago in stating that Rev. J. L. Neill, the efficient Sunday School Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, would engage in the Y. M. C. A. war work. Brother Neill was offered a position in that arm of service and also a chaplaincy in the Army, but he felt that his home obligations were such that he could not accept either of these places. He has been chosen Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of the Mississippi A. and M. College, near Starkville, Miss., and has consented to take up that work. A thousand or twelve hundred young men attend this great institution, and Brother Neill will have an opportunity there to render a far-reaching service. He is also Chairman of the Committee on Public Information appointed by the Mississippi State Council for the Public Defense.

We take the following from an Ashland (Va.) dispatch to the Commercial Appeal: "The Duncan Memorial Church here was the scene of an interesting wedding this evening (September 5) when Miss Margaret Gertrude Wightman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Pinckney Wightman, of 'Telcourt,' near Ashland, became the bride of Dr. Alfred Allen Kern, Professor of English in Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss. Dr. J. A. Kern, father of the groom and former President of Randolph-Macon College, officiated, assisted by Dr. D. T. Merritt. The best man was Dr. J. M. Burton, of Jackson, Miss., and among the guests from a distance were Miss Elizabeth Duncan, of Grenada, Miss., Dr. L. M. Kern, of Nashville, Tenn., and Bishop Collins Denny, of Richmond, Va. Dr. Kern and his bride are spending their honeymoon in Western North Carolina."

A SAD BEREAVEMENT.

Just as we are closing our last forms, the following telegram, sent us by Rev. A. I. Townsley, from Franklinton, La., comes to our desk: "Little Ellen, a daughter of Rev. J. A. McCormack, was burned to death Tuesday in Franklinton." It greatly grieves us to chronicle this sad message. Let the members of this stricken family be earnestly remembered at the throne of grace.

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

GIRLS! MAKE A BEAUTY LOTION WITH LEMONS

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to whiten, soften, freshen and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is truly marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

ALLIE L. LORD was born in Hinds County, Miss., on Jan. 23, 1867, and died at his home at Oak Grove, La., on May 19, 1917. Brother Lord was married twice. He first married Miss Sarah Jane Strong on Feb. 4, 1892, and of this union 2 children were born, both of whom are living. In March, 1895, the death angel came and took the young wife away. On Jan. 25, 1895, he was again married to Maria Louisa Strong, and of this union were born 13 children, all of whom are living. Brother Lord was a good man and a good neighbor. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1895, at Hickory Ridge under the ministry of Rev. W. M. Stephens. He leaves a wife, a mother, 15 children, and 2 grandchildren to mourn their loss. May the Lord comfort the ones who are so sadly bereaved!

A FRIEND.

JAMES MADISON OVERTON was born in Detroit, Mich., on May 13, 1842. After service in the war he lived for seven years in Chicago. He then moved to New Orleans, where he was married to his first wife, Miss Katie Keefer, on Oct. 3, 1872. James H. Overton, of Lexy, Ark., is the only one of theirs three children living. Since 1883 Brother Overton had lived in Vicksburg. He was one of the original members of the South Vicksburg (now Gibson Memorial) Church. He was ever been loyal and devoted to his church, serving for fifteen years as Sunday school superintendent. He was a steward till four years ago, and a trustee until he died. On Oct. 16, 1899, he was married to Mrs. Lavenia Smith, who survives him. She was a devoted wife and faithfully nursed Brother Overton in his last illness. Though suffering much, Brother Overton bore his afflictions as a Christian. He looked forward to death as a time of happy departure to be with his Lord. His end was peace. He quietly fell asleep in Jesus on Aug. 21, 1917, and was buried from Gibson Memorial Church the next day. We miss him, and many testify to the good that he has done them. May the abiding presence of the Comforter be with his loved ones till they all meet again in yonder city!

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas since the last meeting of our Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. Maggie Bennette, one of our choicest and most consecrated members and co-workers in Christ, has gone home to live with God; and

Whereas, she through the years, by her good deeds, devotion, and faithfulness to duty, Christ-like bearing, and godly conversation, had been a living benediction to this society and church, filling for many years and at the time of her departure the office of Third Vice President, which office she magnified, promoting the giving of tithes for the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom in this world—being great in example, and great in prayer, so that we feel forcibly our distinct loss; therefore be it

Resolved, That we thank our Heavenly Father for her beautiful life and pray that we as a Society may strive to emulate her example and profit by her precepts, and that some happy day we may strike hands again with her in the city of God.

Resolved, also, that we extend our tenderest sympathy to her loved ones and that these resolutions be read before our society, spread upon our minutes, and published in our church papers.

Signed: Mrs. A. F. Calloway, Mrs. James Stone, Sr., Mrs. Bettie Fee, Committee.

IN MEMORIAM.

In Red River Parish, near Coushatta, on December 5, 1856, Julia McMurray began her life's journey. As a war orphan, her father having laid down his life for his country in the battle of Mansfield, she had few educational advantages in childhood; but, being possessed of an unusually bright mind and an indomitable will, as an adult, with the help of kind friends, she secured an education and became an educator of no mean ability.

She "remembered her Creator in the days of her youth;" joined the Methodist Church, gave her heart to God, and spent her life in His service. She married when young a Mr. John Eves. Of this union, two children, a boy and a girl, were born. The daughter preceded her mother to "the strange beyond;" the son, John Eves, Jr., is a respected citizen of Simsboro, La.

Later in life she married Mr. Tom Robinson, a widower with five children, to whom she became a real mother. They together were blessed with two boys and two girls, namely, Mrs. Lula Ensley, Mr. Poole and Mr. Baxter Robinson, of Alexandria, La., and Miss Sallie, who, with her father, is left with "the vacant chair" in "the house made desolate."

About eighteen years ago, Mrs. Robinson, with her family, moved to Ruston. She identified herself with the Methodist Church, and soon became one of the most prominent figures in the religious life of the community. She left no "last message"—none was needed, for she had been a "living witness" for nearly half a century.

As the sun was nearing the western horizon on the afternoon of August 23, 1917, she heard the "well done," and obeyed the command, "Come up higher." The tired hands, so full of earthly activities, dropped temporal things, to engage in Heavenly service. "She has fought a good fight," and, after life's fitful fever, she sleeps well. Followed by a large concourse of sorrowing friends, the body was taken to Simsboro for burial. The town has lost a useful citizen, the Church a valued member, and her family a devoted mother. We commend them to Him who has both "given" and "taken away." And may she have the reward of answered prayers in the salvation of all her loved ones!

Mrs. A. C. McKINNEY.

AN IDEAL HOME SCHOOL FOR YOUR DAUGHTER.

Parents seeking the best of moral and social surroundings and influences in a boarding school for their daughters should by all means be familiar with Martin College, Pulaski, Tenn.

For forty-five years Martin College has been located in one of the most cultured, morally wholesome towns in the State of Tennessee, and, throughout these years its aim has constantly been to surround the girl with the best Christian Home life—most refined and cultural influences—and every opportunity for true advancement in every line.

Martin College, while large enough to make the highest grade of work possible, is small enough to insure that important personal help and attention usually found lacking in the largest institutions. Full particulars of this time honored and improved college can be had on application. Sign and mail the note below.

Sunday School

THE JACKSON DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

For the better part of two days, Thursday and Friday, September 6 and 7, a goodly company of energetic Sunday school workers of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, were in session at Flora in the second annual District Sunday School Institute. Pastor Adams and the local people had made ample arrangements aud every one was comfortably and hospitably entertained.

The program which had been arranged by Field Secretary Neill was not entirely carried out because it contained more good things than there was time for; but nearly all the points of the Standard were touched upon and a good number of pledges were secured from workers that they would go back to their local schools and work earnestly to secure the improvement of the said schools in some definite way. Those who had a part in the program were Mrs. Isaac Sewell, of Nashville, Tenn., the field secretary for the Tennessee Conference; Mr. C. J. Nugent, of Louisville, Ky., Field Secretary of the General Board for the Middle Division; Rev. J. L. Neill, the Conference Field Secretary; Mr. V. R. Howie, of Jackson, the president of the district organization; Mrs. Sue Stewart Brame, of Jackson, elementary superintendent of the district, and the writer. The devotional periods in charge of Presiding Elder Morse were among the best of the kind I have ever had the pleasure to participate in. Brother Morse is a past-master as a devotional leader.

The following are the newly elected officers for the district: President, Mr. V. R. Howie, Jackson; secretary-treasurer, Mr. H. N. Ivy, of Canton; elementary superintendent, Mrs. Sue Brame, of Jackson; Wesley Bible class superintendent, Rev. J. A. Lindsay, of Brandon; teacher-training superintendent, Prof. D. M. Key, of Jackson; home department superintendent, Mrs. J. L. Singletary, of Florence; missiouary superintendent, Mrs. J. C. Wood, Jackson, Miss.

Just before the close of the Institute an interesting set of resolutions was read by Dr. W. H. Huntley, of Yazoo City, Miss., chairman of the committee. The people of Flora were thanked for their gracious hospitality; Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson District, was commended for his excellent devotional exercises; the District President, Mr. Howie, was assured that his good work was highly appreciated, and Mrs. Brame, Mr. E. E. French, Mr. Nugent, aud the writer were complimented upon their work, and appreciation of their several messages was expressed. The resolutions concluded as follows:

"The institute body recognizes in the work of Mr. Neill its great value in spirit and in zeal. We regret his transfer to another service, as he has demonstrated so thoroughly in the time he has served the Mississippi Conference as Field Secretary his qualities to magnify and illuminate all essential sections of the Sunday school. He will be remembered as among the pilots and pathfinders when the Church hereafter looks back to beginnings and the expanding organization of Sunday school interests. Brother Neill has cleared and broken much ground and started deeper cultivation throughout the Mississippi Conference.

"We have open hearts, to-day, and full of grateful praise, to our Savior and Lord, whose life in the flesh flamed most warmly to children. We strive for the heart and mind of the Master seeing children in His enfolding arms—hearing His admonition on behalf of their going to Him.

"Resolved, That in such service as this institute develops we believe we shall overcome the world, starting with the springs of the stream—in the spring season of time.

"Resolved, That the Jackson District, as far as our faith and zeal can impel us all, shall do its greatest work in the year which is opening as this session adjourns."

A. L. DIETRICH.

Meridian, Miss.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

"Say, if Nugent gives you all a talk like he did at Crawford Street this morning you have a great treat in store," was the telephone message I received last Sunday afternoon from Brother Holloman. Well, Nugent came to Gibson Memorial that night and gave us that treat, all that we were led to expect and "a leetle the rise." Some of the Crawford Street Methodists were on hand to get a second helping to the treat.

It was with great anticipations that the six delegates from Gibson Memorial boarded the train for Fayette Monday morning. The sample had been fine, so we knew the full course would be great. We were not one bit disappointed. The two days spent at Fayette were brim full of interest, information and inspiration. The hospitality of the Fayette people was of the highest order—everybody royally entertained.

The Institute began at 3 p. m., Monday, and closed Tuesday night, there being five sessions in all. The speakers were Rev. J. L. Neill, our own Field Secretary; A. L. Dietrich, Field Secretary for the Gulf Division; C. J. Nugent, Field Secretary for the Middle Division, and Mrs. Isaac Sewell, Elementary Specialist and Field Secretary for the Tennessee Conference. The addresses of these speakers covered practically every phase of the Sunday school work and gripped the attention of all who heard them. A better corps of instructors I have never heard in any institute. It would be a great thing for Methodism, and consequently for the Kingdom, if every Methodist Sunday school superintendent, teacher and pastor in the land could hear these four speakers.

The registration was above that of last year—116 in all, 80 of whom were Methodists, and 45 of these outside of Fayette—14 charges were represented. It was decided to hold two Institutes in the district next year, one in the northern section, and the other in the southern.

The following officers for the new year were elected: J. G. Parham, chairman; H. Huff, Secretary; H. H. Crisler, Superintendent Wesley Bible Classes; W. W. Ellis, Superintendent Department of Missions; Rev. J. Buford Cain, Superintendent Teacher-Training; Mrs. Z. M. Davis, Elementary Superintendent. The report of Rev. J. B. Cain as Superintendent of Teacher-Training was very gratifying and worthy of praise. Deserving of special mention was the work done by Mrs. Z. M. Davis as Elementary Superintendent.

There was a general feeling of regret that Brother J. L. Neill is soon to give up his position as Field Secretary. He has been a most faithful, untiring and efficient worker, combining more good qualifications in one personality than is usually found. He has been the right man in the right place, and is now more efficient than ever. It is gratifying to know that, though he will not be officially connected with this work, his interest in the Sunday schools of the Mississippi Conference will continue. The following resolution of appreciation was passed by a unanimous vote at the final session of the Institute:

"Resolved, That we profoundly appreciate the splendid, untiring, and efficient service rendered by our Conference Field Secretary, Rev. J. L. Neill, and regret that he cannot continue this work."

Signed: H. Walter Featherstun, J. O. Ware, J. Buford Cain, O. S. Lewis.

Other resolutions, expressing appreciation for the kind hospitality of the people of Fayette, and the inspiring service rendered by the other speakers of the Conference, were read and adopted. All the delegates are looking forward to doing greater things in the Sunday school. I am sure of greater things here at Gibson Memorial because of the good our delegates received. O. S. LEWIS.

HEADACHES AND OTHER ACHES AND PAINS.

Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are willing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains, and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad after-effects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nerves pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

EXCHANGE YOUR OLD BODY FOR A NEW ONE.

You can do it in three weeks and thereby renew your health. This article is written by a physician who has seen it demonstrated in numerous cases and explains how it is done.

Listen: If your weight is one hundred and thirty-three pounds your body contains eighty pounds of water, for according to standard medical books, the human body contains sixty-seven and one-half per cent of water. Now disease is invariably caused by impurities which we call poisons, and these are readily dissolved by the right kind of natural mineral water. Drink ten gallons (eighty pounds) of Shivar mineral water (use no other water for twenty-one days), and you will have exchanged your old body for a new one, so far as the soluble part of it is concerned. The impurities will be dissolved and pass away. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other curable conditions due to impure blood, accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer which appears below. Read the following letter carefully; then sign and mail it:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-J, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

DELIGHTFUL CALOMEL, LATEST DISCOVERY, NOW ON SALE.

The Nauseating and Dangerous Qualities Have Been Entirely Removed—Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved——Calotabs the New Name.

What will human ingenuity do next? Smokeless powder, wireless telegraphy, horseless carriages, colorless iodine, tasteless quinine—now comes nauseless calomel. The new improvement called "Calotabs" is now on sale at drug stores and is the sensation of the year in the drug trade.

For biliousness, constiation and indigestion the new calomel tablet is a practically perfect remedy, as evidenced by the fact that the manufacturers have authorized all druggists to refund the price if the customer is not "perfectly delighted" with Calotabs. One tablet at bedtime, a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no nausea, no griping. By morning your liver is thoroughly cleansed and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger—go about your business.

Calotabs are not sold in bulk. Get an original package, sealed. It contains twenty doses; price thirty-five cents.—Adv.

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a safe and pure remedy made from roots and herbs, much suffering might be avoided.

VINTON, LA.

Dear Brother Meek: As I have never seen much concerning our section of the country, I have decided to write a few lines. Vinton is a nice town with about 2000 inhabitants. We have three Churches and a fine public school, conducted by Prof. Labode, with good teachers as helpers. Our church is on the up-grade. Brother Louis Hoffpauir is in charge of it. He is with us the second year by the petition of the official board of the two churches that he serves. He is a young man of promise, full of energy, and, above all, full of the Holy Spirit. He visits his people, and shares with them their joys and sorrows. This brings about that unity of spirit which is so much needed in building up a church. We have a large Sunday school. There are about 90 pupils enrolled, and the average attendance is fairly good. We have a prayer meeting which is quite spiritual; also a good Epworth League. We will have to give up three of our Sunday school boys who are going to the front, but if they make as good soldiers, and I believe that they will, as they have been Sunday school workers, they will be helpful on the firing line. I am sorry to see some people trying at this late day to pick flaws in the management of the good old Southern Methodist Church. I have been a member of it since I was twenty-two years old. I am now seventy-one, but not quite old enough yet to make suggestions to these grand old soldiers of the Cross who have gone before us, and who graded the roads that we now have the pleasure of traveling. Oh, no, my brother, what is needed now is the old-time religion. It makes me think of that old poem, "Woodman, spare that tree; it sheltered me in a time of storm, let's not desert it now." The troubles complained of are all home-made. It is not the Church or its leaders. Bring these difficulties to the altar, let God have the right of way in our hearts, and this fault-finding with the Church will all disappear like leaves in an angry wind. That God may help our complainers to do this, is my prayer. Respectfully,

R. M. DAVIS.

Vinton, La., Sept. 7, 1917.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss

The roads are good, weather fine, and automobiles plentiful—then why not fill two or three cars with teachers and spend one day under the instruction of a great teacher and have fellowship with the other teachers of your Church?

Teachers of the Sardis District, take notice: The institute announced for Sardis, will be held at Como instead, Saturday 22 and Sunday 23. Much advertising has been done, bnt the attendance upon these institutes will largely depend upon the personal effort of some one interested in making better teachers.

An opportnnity will be given the district officers to organize and plan some concerted work this fall and winter. Some of these district officers are already doing excellent work, but we must all work more and pray earnestly or we will be numbered with the backsliders. The prospects are fine for a large attendance at all these institutes. Again let me urge the pastors, superintendents, and teachers to do some personal work and bring at least one teacher with you.

The Wesley Bible Classes of Sardis have 125 testaments to be given to our soldier boys. The organized classes have more to do now than ever. Just look at the needy, heart-broken world all around you. If you do not see it, then fall upon your knees and get a vision of Him who is at the right hand of the Father, and you will see and hear and do.

Mrs. W. L. Graves, the wife of our pastor on the Montpelier Circuit, is doing a great work at Palestine, a church two miles from her home. With the aid of the superintendent and teachers, she expects to make this school reach the Standard of Efficiency before the meeting of our Annual Conference.

More schools will observe Promotion Day the last Sunday in September than ever before. Where this day is observed it will afford an opportunity for organizing the Elementary Division. This Division includes the Cradle Roll, the Beginners, the Primaries, and the Juniors. This division should have a superintendent, a pianist, a secretary-treasurer, and an usher. It should have some of the pictures for the lessons, chairs, tables and a cabinet for literature. Give these teachers an opportunity for supplying their equipment, and see what they will do.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's.

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 60 cents.

Eupora and Maben, at Eupora, Nov. 11, 12.

Let it be remembered by all concerned that the Annual Conference convenes two weeks earlier this year than has been its custom in the past, making it necessary for all financial Boards, on circuits and in stations, to be ready for settlement not later than Nov. 17.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.—Adv.

A HEALTHY BODY.

Do you suffer from constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, or other forms of liver trouble? A healthy liver means a healthy body. When constipated don't poison yourself by failing to take the proper treatment. Don't force your perspiration to carry off through your skin pores more than its share of the impurities of your body by failing to keep your bowels clean and healthy. Take Van Lax for your liver. It is harmless, contains no calomel or habit-forming drugs, is pleasant in taste and results. It promotes a healthy condition in your entire digestive system. Take Van Lax and keep your body healthy. Sold by all reliable dealers. In bottles 50c. Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

RENWAR RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanitarium treatments, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should anyone doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c, or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

MISSION STUDY CAMPAIGN.

In October a Mission Study Campaign will be put on, and we hope by the third week in the month that every auxiliary will be prepared for this campaign. During the time that intervenes every member should work not ony to enlist every woman in the Church in the circles already organized, but to organize new cireles wherever it is practicable.

Up to date one new Study Circle has been organized at Bude; so far, this is the only one for this quarter to be reported. However, I am sure that the one at Scooba will be ready to be included in this quarter's report.

It was my good pleasure to be wtih Mrs. McQueen in a meeting at Scooba a few days ago. There were some obstacles to meet—a Red Cross meeting in the morning and a rain in the afternoon, but we feel that some good was accomplished.

During the next few days Mrs. McQueen will visit a number of societies in the district, and hold "All Day" meetings with them. She is using this plan for a closer touch with the women of the district, instead of the regular district meetings. In her rounds she will give special attention to the developing of the rural work and doing all she can to seeure the ten per cent increase in the Meridian District.

We are looking forward to having Mrs. Lewis, our Conference Secretary, with us in Meridian in a few days. She will also go to other points in the district. I am sure that we shall have rich results from her stay with us.

I shall be so glad to hear from those Secretaries who have had new circles organized in their district; some have written to me, but all have not. What are you doing, Sister Secretary, in your district for the Mission Study Course? I need your co-operation, if this work is to be a suecess; so please push the campaign in October.

Now is a good time to push the work mapped out by the Federated War Committee. If this world-wide war is to be won by our nation, the Church must be a mighty factor in whatever is done; so let us look well after the interests and welfare of the men who have gone out to fight for God and home and native land. Send the names of every officer, soldier, and trained nurse to Mrs. MacDonell at Nashville, Tenn., that our Church may keep in touch with these.

"Let every woman in the Church pledge to set aside a speeial season each day to pray that our officers and soldiers may he kept pure, strong, and true, and that our nation may be without blame in this bloody strife, and that peace may speedily come." This is urged in the leaflet sent out. In this time of sorrow and anxiety, we need to be constant in prayer not only for our own good, but that those of our loved ones who have gone out may feel that God is ever present with them and is able by his power to sustain them.

A SHORT REVIEW OF "AN AFRICAN TRAIL."

This is a book of unusual interest and value. Miss MacKenzie's letters from Africa were published in the "Atlantic Monthly," and later appeared in book form, under the title, "Black Sheep." The literary excellenee of "An African Trail" is attested by the fact that the "Atlantic" has requested the privilege of publishing also two chapters from it.

This is not a book of travel, though it presents many vivid pictures of life in the Kamerun country. It is rather the story of the Bulu's approach to God. There is nothing like it in missionary literature.

The first chapter, "The White Man in Africa," brings the reader face to face with many of the famous missionaries, and along with each his notable African converts and friends.

Chapters two and three, "The Bulu" and "The Bulu and God," make the native live before us, with his virtues and vices, his superstitions and charms, and his hazy ideas of Uzambe, the great God, "who created the world and forgot it." Then the African evangelist appears with the story of Yesus, son of Uzamhe; and awe, wonder, and compassion fall upon the crowd in the palaver house.

"The Ten Tyings" (Chapter IV) tells of the ten eommandemnts of the Bulu, from which it is easy to lead him to their summation in the law from Sinai.

Interest grows with every step of the "trail" and cuiminates in great joy as in the coneluding chapters, "The New Tribe" and "The New Custom," the reader beholds the result of twenty-five years of missionary effort in the turning of thousands to Christ and the regeneration of great eommunities.

Women readers will find of peculiar interest the story of female emancipation from slavery and fetishism, vividly drawn from life.—Missionary Volee.

SPLENDID INCREASE FOR FIRST TWO QUARTERS—NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Such good news came to your officers in regard to our record for the first two quarters of 1917, that a part of Mrs. Lipscomb's letter is sent on to you. It is as follows:

"The finanelal report for the first six months shows that we are on the whole 11 per eent in advanee of our colleetions for the first half of 1916. Your Conferenee advanced far more than this and has made possihle the 11 per cent advance, for some Conferences gained very little and a few fell behind. For the first half of last year your remittanee to Mrs. Ross amounted to $5309.48, and for the first half of this year to $6428.98, making 21.8 per eent increase.

"I am sure that this good news will not cause you to relinquish your efforts during the last two quarters, but that you will do everything in your power to keep up this high tide of giving. Having fallen into sueh a double-quick step, your Conference army will surely be on a veritable run by the end of the year, and we shall have an overwhelming vietory." — N. Miss. Conf. Bulletin.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN CHINA.

A Woman's Conferenee Missionary Soeiety has been organized in China, with Miss Sze Voug Pau, of the Me-Tyeire School, President, and other Chinese women, as offieers. This marks an important step in the progress of our missionary work in China, and should be a means of eneouragement to our workers at home. Miss Mary Culler White thus deserlbes the organization of an auxiliary in a small town of the Sooehow Distriet: "There were thirteen present, of whom nine were widows, one blind and one deaf. The Bible woman was given the floor and made a ringing missionary speeeh, while the muffled sound of heathen gongs and tom-toms reaehed them from without. When she asked those who wanted to join the society to hold up their hands, the blind woman held up both of hers. It was her first experience in a voting body. The Bible women had taught them tithing, and when piedges were ealled for, their liberality was a surprise to me, for they subscribed dimes where their appearance indicated that pennies would have been more appropriate to their circumstances."

Loss of Vitality is loss of the principle of life, and is early indicated by failing appetite and diminishing strength and endurance. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer—it acts on all the organs and functions, and builds up the whole system.—Adv.

Iron Is Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

A Secret of the Great Endurance and Powers of Athletes

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or naracotic drug, said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physicion who has studied widely both in this country and Great European Medical Institutions wheu, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

An Advertising Success.

Less than ten years ago an aggressive shoe salesman reeovered from ill health by drinking water from a certain mineral spring. He purchased the spring, tried out the water on other people, and found it of great value to others as well as himself. He began to advertise in the church papers of his home State. At first results were discouraging, but he kept at it. Once in a while he would use other papers than the church papers, but for the most part his advertising was in the church weeklies.

Gradually he began to spread into other States. Now his advertising covers one-third of the United States. In less than ten years he had built up the largest mineral water business in the region with very small capital, and probably 90 per cent of his entire advertising expenditure has been in the standard church weeklies of white denominations. The reason why he uses them is that they pay him best on the average, better than any other class of literature circulating in that territory. He uses page copy frequently in a great many of these church papers, and seldom misses an issue in many of them. He bas built a very valuable business, with very little capital to start on, by his own aggressive selling effort, his intelligent business management, the exeellent advertising copy supplied by his advertising agents, and last, but not least, by the faet that the religious papers have proven so suceessful for him.

This story is worth considering by all readers of this paper who are general advertisers, covering one or more States with their advertising. This is but one of hundreds of advertising sueeesses made by using space in the church papers.

From the Field

Porterville, Miss.

Dear Doctor Meek: Things are moving along very nicely in the Porterville charge this year. I have held a series of revivals over the work which resulted, I believe, in much good. Rev. E. L. Hillman was with me for two weeks in July. Brother Hillman is an excellent young man, and the people all fell in love with him, especially with his preaching. He tells me that he will spend the coming session at Emory University. Brother Abney, of Scooba, was with me one week; then Brother Fikes, of Moscow, came and spent one week. Afterwards came Brother Westbrook. All these brethren did most excellent work.—W. D. Barrett, P. C.

Pleasant Hill (La.) Circuit.

Dear Dr. Meek: We held a gracious revival at William's Chapel. Brother E. B. Moll did the preaching and did it well. The people say he is a good preacher and want him to hold another revival for them. Well, we erected an altar in our church—the idea of calling a church a Methodist Church without a mourners' bench! Brother Moll called mourners and they came and many of them found Christ in the forgiveness of their sins. Again, we had rejoicing, or old-time shouting. Some testified that they were saved, some that they were sanctified, and others that they were baptized or filled with the Holy Ghost. There were between 35 and 40 conversions. The services ran eight days. On the last Sunday of the revival a singing-school teacher brought his class and began a good song service at a little after 10 o'clock; then we had a testimony service, after which the pastor made a short talk on infant baptism and baptized six babies. Then Brother Moll preached, called mourners—some came and were converted and a few persons united with our Church. After this we dismissed and had a good dinner on the ground. A short while after dinner, the singing began, next the pastor held a good church conference, organized a prayer meeting, revived the class meeting, and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Then Brother Moll preached, established several family altars, and called mourners. Nine were converted, and some other persons gave their names for membership in our Church, and the pastor baptized 9 young people and received 17 into the Church (one man, his wife, two sons and a daughter came in together), after which we extended the new members the right hand of fellowship and were dismissed and went home. That Sunday was a great day with us.

Brother Moll is a plain, earnest, forceful, consecrated preacher, and God honors his efforts. He uncovers sin and tells the sinner that the blood of Jesus cleanses. He left us to visit his mother in Ohio, but will return in time to enter Centenary College when it opens.

We desire to hold one more revival before our Annual Conference. Our third quarterly conference is about upon us. We hope to close out a successful year in every respect.

Yours in His name,
T. D. LIPSCOMB.

Vancleave Circuit (Miss. Conf.)

Dear Brother Meek: As it has been some time since I appeared in the columns of the New Orleans Advocate, I will now undertake to give a review of the year's work for this Circuit. We took up the year's work immediately after the adjournment of the last Mississippi Annual Conference, and have been trying to meet all the duties and responsibilities devolving upon one in the pastorate, endeavoring to make full proof of my ministry. To this end, I have visited and prayed in the homes of the people where convenient, have buried the dead, married the living, baptized babies, received members into the Church and preached the gospel as best I could, thereby sowing the good seed of the word of truth, which I hope and pray will not return void, but accomplish that which pleaseth the Lord. Our revival season began May 23, with Dr. LaPrade of First Church, Gulfport, to do the preaching, which he did to the delight of all who heard him. While there were no visible results in the way of additions to the Church, we feel that much good was done.....The next revival was conducted by the pastor, no visible results obtaining there.....The next meeting was conducted by my old friend and schoolmate, Rev. C. C. Evans of Bay St. Louis, Miss. The preaching was fine, and all present enjoyed to the fullest the ministry of this faithful man of God. The results were 16 on profession of faith, 3 by certificate, 6 babies baptized, the church revived, and all felt that the time had not been spent in vain..... The next revival was conducted by Rev. B. E. Melgs, pastor of the Saucier and Lyman charge, which was done in much earnestness, and all heard him gladly. There were 2 received on profession of faith, and the church was greatly benefited.....All the other protracted services were carried on by the pastor, and, while our congregations were good, we did not have the visible results that we had hoped and prayed for. But we feel that some good was done. Only eternity can reveal the good accomplished in all these services. To God be all the praise and glory. Amen.

Our camp meeting which embraces October 17-22, 1917, will close up the revival work for this year. We hope to be able to concentrate all our forces there in one grand effort to finish up the good work begun, for the year is now fast coming to a close. Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College, and Dr. W. H. LaPrade, of First Church, Gulfport, Miss., and our esteemed presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, are expected to be with us.

Well, lest this report should find its way to the wastebasket and all this effort be lost, I will close by saying that I don't write often, and that I am closing out my fourth year on the Vancleave Circuit, which is proving to be the best of the four in many respects. To God be all the praise!

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

A LETTER FROM DALLAS.

Dear Doctor Meek: On Monday of last week the moral forces of Dallas County voted out the open saloon by a majority of about 2000. This is the greatest vitory over the saloon in the history of Texas. Dallas is the largest city in the State, having 130,000 inhabitants. This makes it more than a local victory. Fort Worth, only thirty miles away, has already resolved to drive the liquor traffic from her midst, as a matter of self-protection. They will vote early in October.

With saloons gone from among us, parents will feel freer to send their sons and daughters to our colleges and universities. This is a great day for our moral forces. All the Protestant forces, including the Episcopalians, stood in one unbroken line against the enemy. The large majority was a surprise even to the prohibitionists. I was grateful for the privilege of helping to "stump" the county in behalf of this great cause.

In a few weeks, November 1, we shall close our pastorate at Oak Lawn Church here. It has been a quadrennium of delightful service. We have had 600 additions to the Church, with a net gain which more than doubled the membership, and our $100,000 building has been completed. Come to see me before I go hence and be no more. From October 13 to 28 there will be held here the State Fair of Texas, said to be the greatest State Fair in this country. You could take this in. Then, too, you may have the privilege of preaching in the most beautiful church west of the Mississippi River, and to the best people in the world. Faithfully yours,

CLAUDE M. SIMPSON.

COALVILLE CHARGE, MISS. CONF.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am well pleased with my work this year. We have just about finished our meetings. We have one more, and then the Palmer camp meeting will come.

I had the good service of Brother Huff in two of my meetings, and the Lord was with us in them. They were held at White Plains and Coalville. The meeting at White Plains resulted in a good revival and 6 additions to the Church by vows. At Coalville the Church was greatly revived and there were 42 members received by vows and baptism.

I went into my other meeting by myself, as I felt they could not well care for me and other help too. So at Fayard Chapel we were rained out, and I will go back again and try it over. We received one member there by vows.....Then I went to Beulah and, of course, Brother L. Fayard was on hand to scotch and help in every way that he could. We had a really good meeting there. The old-time shouting broke out, and, to fix everything up as it ought to be. Brother Fayard gave us one of his patent sermons, as Brother Huff calls them, on the Church. He said John the Baptist was a Methodist, for he believed in fire, and that Paul was a Methodist for he believed in shouting, and that everybody knew David was a Methodist, for he fell from grace. I had to give Brother Louie the ropes. There were 22 added to that Church, all by vows and baptism except two. We got one large family of Baptists, and, to touch it off right, Brother Louie baptized two of their babies, thus completing the job.....I went from there to the Cedar Lake church, where we had just straightened up the church from the storm and we had there the best meeting that had ever been held at that place, so they say. We had a victory at every service and several Catholics, Baptists and Presbyterians joined our Church. For the sake of some who know this people, I want to tell the names of some who came from the Catholics: Old Sister Laurie Scarbrough, about 65 years old; Brother Mose Krohn and all his family, and several more heads of families, with their children. Out of 25 who joined through the meeting, at least 20 had been baptized as Catholics.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER DRING.

Dear Dr. Meek: I wish to make a report of my work through your valuable paper. We are moving on nicely. I have finished my summer's work with the best of results, and if you will permit, I wish to go into details just a bit. I began with my meetings at Rocky Mount. My people helped me there, and I did the best I could with the preaching. There was some old-time shouting. We received 19 members during the meeting with others to follow.....Next I went to Brother Smith on the Simsboro charge; we had 31 additions there.....I held my third meeting in my own charge, at Grand Bayou. This was a good meeting, with 10 additions to the Church.....I then went to assist Brother Moss on the Alberta charge in two meetings. With some little fighting, we came out victorious, having 16 additions to the Church.....I then came back home to hold my Andrews Chapel meeting. Brother R. W. Smith assisted me and did some fine preaching. We did not receive any members in this meeting. Before these services closed we began a meeting here in Ringgold, with Brother W. W. Perry to help me. He is an excelient preacher. He came with a great message every time for ten days. Thanks be to God for the victory gained in this meeting. We received 25 members into the Church, 20 of them by baptism. I have never met a man that came as near filling the place as a revivalist as Brother Perry did at Ringgold. God bless him; he is a brother, a friend, and a good gospel preacher.....I have received 54 members on my work up to date, 37 of this number by baptism, and 8 by vows, the last-mentioned coming from the Baptist Church.....There were 50 members received in the meetings I assisted in when with Brothers Moss and Smith, making a total of 104 for the summer. I am expecting to come to Conference with a good report.

Few things are more difficult than to be always sincere and truthful. The temptation is frequently strong in the interest of politeness or out of a feeling of kindness to say things that we do not really mean. A person does not always have to speak out what he thinks, and silence is often wise and proper; but it is never right to make statements that convey impressions that are misleading as to one's true sentiments. The fact that there is so much of this is one reason why men of the highest type are disposed to discount largely what may be said to them in commendation of their utterances or actions.

THE ENLIVENING GOSPEL.

Much is now being said about making the gospel message attractive, of producing an inviting atmosphere in the Church, of obtaining harmony and beauty in the music, and of otherwise rendering the Church service pleasing, to win the indifferent to its folds and hold the members it already has. Many go so far as to assert that in this respect the Church should be as alluring as the theater, the moving-picture show, and other organized amusements to gain the attention and satisfy the public mind in its search for recreation and rest. Not infrequently is the complaint made that the Church service is not so attractive as these secular institutions, which are so popular with the multitudes; and some Church workers seem disposed to put forth the pleasing side of Church interests as the chief note. The crescendoes of a great organ pealing out lofty themes, the mellifluous voice of an artist of song at its best, the cushioned seats of the turned pews upon deeply carpeted floors to render comfort, the mellow light diffused through stained-glass windows of cathedral-like arches, to charm, tend toward producing a complacent and angelic feeling in the breast of church-goers. An atmosphere of subtle flattery of the worshipers is produced by this artistic array which may cause the direst sinner to feel heavenly when he ought to be repentant. The funds for carrying on the work of the Church is extracted from the bank-rolls of men by these moral and spiritual narcotics. This is one manner of propagating Church work. Not all congregations have the facilities for the building up of such an "effective" organization, but this is a popular model copied as far as possible in many places. This is no attempt to say that great good cannot come from the employment of talent and richness of material things in the worship of God; but we do say, and emphasize, that these finite blessings should not be allowed to blunt the message which God has in store for his people, to dull the sense of sin in the heart of the transgressor, nor to detract from the spiritual stimulus one should receive in worshiping God.

Methodism has ever been known for the poignancy of its gospel message, and her ministers should be true to this tradition of the Church whether their sermons are delivered in stately houses of worship or in chapels at the cross-roads. Religious virility will bring to his knees the sinner, will encompass within the folds of the Church the indifferent, and will plant the kingdom upon every foreign shore. To do this it must arouse the slumbering disciples of Christ. A disquieting gospel is as essential as a soothing message. The Calvary charge upon those who are at ease in Zion is a mark of a victorious faith; downy beds must be rendered places of restlessness, comfortable chairs must be converted into bad resting places; and the voices of friendly Sirens to lead into temptation must be made discordant to the ear. A virile gospel will draw attention from the tawdry habiliments of the place of worship, from the ease of the person, from the self, inflated with false pride, and will bestow it with redoubled vigor upon the recalcitrant heart of the worshiper which will begin a search as to how it stands before God and what relationship it bears to brother human beings. A virile gospel will warn the worshiper that the peculiar and beauteous atmosphere of the artist in the place of worship must not be taken for the presence of the Holy Spirit; it will strike into the soul and tell men that they themselves are the temples of the living God, and that if he does not dwell in their hearts there can be no true service to him. Doubtless it is difficult for the gospel message to break the spell of a deep worldly enchantment, but history bears the record where on many occasions it has been done, and the present offers full opportunity for it to be tried again.

The gospel message becomes an astringent when applied vigorously to society where it has become wounded by meddling with sin. Wounds caused by some dread disease demand a most thorough cauterization, which is very painful to the patient, but none the less essential. There are none to minister the spiritual astringent but the disciples of Christ; he did not hesitate in this duty, calling the false religious leaders of his day hypocrites, and his followers should walk in his footsteps, condemning sin in its every phase.

Without divine leadership people will die morally and spiritually, hence God speaks to them through his prophets. This is one proof of a God-inspired ministry; and the true gospel message is easily distinguished from the false by its enlivening, its invigorating, and its spreading effect. It may not be as eloquent as many congregations desire for their pulpits, but it reaches out and draws men, as a net, cast deep and wide, catches within its ample folds the multitudes of fishes.

MR. FRITTS' EULOGIUM.

We are carrying on another page an article from the pen of Mr. B. F. Fritts, of Chattanooga, Vice Chairman of the so-called Laymen's organization, in which he seeks to impress the public with the standing and weight of the men who have made the assault upon our Methodist economy—particularly upon our episcopacy—which has lately been so much discussed in the public prints. We desire our readers to remember that we have said repeatedly in the Advocate that there were some excellent men connected with this regrettable procedure (who probably attached their names to the "Address" without knowing whence it came or without understanding the true animus of it), and that we have never charged them with being unworthy or "obscure." The Editor of the New Orleans Advocate believes that the humblest layman in the Church is as much entitled to be heard concerning its government as the most distinguished official in it, and he yields to none in his desire to see the will of the rank and file of our people registered in the management of its affairs. There is no question before the Church that he is not perfectly willing to have settled by a vote of the great body of our membership, and time and again he has appealed to our Unification Commission to refer the question of uniting the two Episcopal Methodisms in the United States to all our congregations—only, however, to have his suggestion utterly ignored by some of the very gentlemen who are now shouting about "democracy" and the rule of the people.

We think that Mr. Fritts' effort to make a great ado over the 186 signatures that he and his coadjutors have been able to secure to their remarkable document AFTER FIVE OR SIX MONTHS OF CAMPAIGNING is somewhat amusing. We would respectfully suggest that these gentlemen ought also to give to the Church a list of the laymen whom they sought to induce to sign their paper, but who refused to do so; and we rather think that in the interest of fairness it might be a good idea to publish some of the letters in which these refusals to fall in with the movement were conveyed to Mr. Fritts and his associate revolutionists.

We confess that we are somewhat tempted to comment upon the past alignments in the Church of some of the signers of this now notorious "Address," but we prefer not to do this unless it should become more necessary than it now seems to be, for the reason that there would likely be a great hue and cry raised to the effect that we were indulging in "personalities." As we have said, there are some brethren among these so-called reformers who are excellent men, but there are also quite a few who have long been noted for their radical views; and the latter have been the leaders in this proposed reconstruction, the circulated document having come from their hands.

MY GUIDE.

Robert J. Burdette.

There is no path in the desert waste.
For the winds have swept the shifting sands;
The trail is blind where the storms have raced,
And a stranger, I, in these fearsome lands,
But I journey on with a lightsome tread:
I do not falter nor turn aside,
For I see His figure just ahead—
He knows the way—my Guide.

There is no path in this trackless sea;
No map is lined on the restless waves;
The ocean snares are strange to me
Where the unseen wind in its fury raves;
But it matters naught; my sails are set,
And my swift prow tosses the seas aside,
For the changeless stars are steadfast yet,
And I sail by His star-blazed trail—my Guide.

There is no way in this starless night;
There is naught but cloud in the inky skies;
The black night smothers me, left and right,
I stare with a blind man's straining eyes;
But my steps are firm, for I cannot stray;
The path to my feet seems light and wide;
For I hear His voice—"I am the way!"
And I sing as I follow Him on—my Guide.

PRAYER REFRESHES.

Our Lord declared that "men ought always to pray and not to faint," and "faint" is a very profound word. It is evident that his conception of life is that if men pray they will not faint, and conversely, if men do not pray, then will they faint. This word indicates that Jesus had a profound consciousness of the pressure and strain of life.—G. Campbell Morgan.

WHAT IS PURITY?

A thing is pure when there is nothing in it out of harmony with its nature. Water is pure, air is pure, when they contain only their constituent elements, and in the right proportion. Gold is pure when it has been separated by fire from all foreign matter. The diamond is pure, the crystal is pure, when there is nothing in them which hinders the refraction and reflection of light. It is thus with the heart, which is the emotional part of the soul. It is pure, when it loves only that which it ought to love.—The Abbe Bautain.

THE POWER OF A GOOD CONSCIENCE.

No man need be afraid of persecution or desertion at the hands of his fellows, nor need he quail for sorrow and affliction, if conscience be on his side. He need not fear to die, nor to stand at God's Judgment Bar with this fast and weighty ally. Happy is the man who, like Bunyan's Pilgrim, has made a tryst with conscience to meet him at the river, and to accompany him across, for, when in this life, or in that which is to come, a good conscience says, "Well done," it is the voice of the Judge himself.—Ian Maclaren.

WINNING BY SYMPATHY.

How many strayed souls have been won by sympathy and kindness! Referring to a poor creature whom he had picked up in one of the streets of London, the truly noble Lord Shaftesbury said: "One night I found a stranded bit of driftwood. She seemed broken-hearted, and I started her in business with a cress and coffee stand. Her fidelity and service of love among the poor in the years since her reform have made her a veritable angel of merey in the tenement district where she lives. During a long life I have proved that not one kind word ever spoken, not one kind deed ever done, but sooner or later returns to bless the giver and becomes a chain binding men with golden bands to the throne of God."—Sunday School Journal.

FORESIGHT AGAINST SIN.

Trusting to something to turn up to save one from results of his own mistakes or neglect is nothing if not foolish. The laws of cause and effect are unrelenting, and mere circumstance has little power to overthrow them. Sin brings punishment, as fire brings loss, and he is a wise person who so lives as to reduce such punishment or loss to a minimum. We need more foresight than a certain old man who sought insurance on his property. When asked what facilities his town had for extinguishing fires, he replied, "Well, it sometimes rains." He and his town were trusting to nature to save them from their own carelessness. We all, however, have a similar tendency to trust something to turn up to keep us from eating the fruits of our own indolence, selfishness, or flaming passion. It would be well to turn instantly from our sin to the mercy of God, lest our penalty overwhelm us. But it is even better by daily trust in Christ to guard against ever falling into sin; for fire prevention is even better than fire insurance.—Forward.

NEGLECT OF GOD'S HOUSE.

Neglect of God's house marks decline in religious life and is one of the characteristics of the backslider. Those who are wilfully guilty of it will be found to be in spiritual deadness or decline. If we wish the religious life of ourselves and our households to be strong and expanding, we will be careful to maintain our places in God's house. Where God records His name, God will be present, and so will be His people.

When Jeroboam tried to break down the Israelitish character and make them his ready tools in doing evil, he not only set up a separate kingdom, but kept the people from attending the temple services instituted by God. "It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem," he told them as he set up heathen shrines near to their homes and encouraged and commanded them to attend these places and remain away from God's sanctuary. And this was one of the early and sure steps that led on to their deterioration and destruction as a people.

The best and worthiest and most substantial life of our own people and nation is found in those who delight in God's house and worship and who are found regularly in the services of the sanctuary. It is a matter of the gravest concern when an individual neglects God's house or when there is a tendency toward a general neglect of this holy and important privilege and duty.

It is not a question as to whether a certain minister is liked or not. It is not a question as to whether the church is beautiful and its music artistic and its services delightful. These are matters of secondary importance. The prime essential is that the soul shall meet God in the way of His appointment and worship Him, in company with other Christians, in the sanctuary. Where God is thus worshiped, every good element in life flourishes, and all that is desirable for human welfare finds advancement. Where God is neglected and His sanctuary is despised, there is threatened dark disaster, and swift judgment is on its way to execute the divine displeasure. It cannot be well with those who part company with God.—Herald and Presbyter.

THE GOLDEN RULE APPLIED IN THE TREATMENT OF OUR MINISTERS.

(The following thought-provoking letter has just been sent out to the Methodists of the Aberdeen District. It is worthy of serious consideration by all of our people.—Editor of the Advocate.)

To Every Member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the Aberdeen District.

Dear Friend: As your presiding elder, I would have you to consider seriously an important question. Do you not think that the Church should everywhere in her own dealings practice the just and considerate Golden Rule which she teaches to others?

Perhaps you have not realized that the Church fails to practice this precept in the treatment of her own ministers, yet in very many cases this is sadly true. Every other salaried man or woman expects as of right and receives in simple justice his salary paid in full and at stated times; yet the Church of God which teaches, "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them," in most cases pays its ministering servants in driblets after long delay, with a vague promise that the balance may be paid in the fall if the year is prosperous. Where else is such injustice practiced or would it be tolerated? Think of merchants, farmers, railroads, banks, factories, paying their employees in small and irregular amounts with only the promise that if profits are large the balance may in the end be paid! What an outcry against such injustice would we hear, what strikes, what insurrections would arise, if such methods were adopted in the business world! Yet this is precisely the method followed by very many churches; and the preacher is as dependent upon his salary for his support, to pay his honest debts, as is any salaried person to be found. Last year the circuit preachers of the Aberdeen District received an average of 73 cents on the dollar of the amounts promised them. The average paid on Conference collections for missions, aged ministers, etc., throughout the district was 50 per cent. Should the Church of God be the only organization in the world which fails to meet its obligations in full?

Shall we not—members, officials, and ministers alike—resolve, for the honor of the Church, the glory of God, and in justice to our ministers, missionaries, and all who have claims upon us, that in the Aberdeen District this year and henceforth forever our standard shall be 100 cents on the dollar—ALL OBLIGATIONS MET IN FULL—rendering unto God the things that are God's, and expecting and rejoicing in the blessings both material and spiritual which will surely come as we thus express by our deeds our faith and love and loyalty to Christ and the Church?

By liberality on the part of every member—God has dealt bountifully with us—by diligence on the part of stewards and pastors in canvassing for ministerial support and the benevolent collections respectively, surely this goal can be met.

The Church expects, God expects, every member and every minister and every steward to do his duty.

Assuring you of my love and deep concern for the honor and glory of God's Church and the temporal and eternal welfare of his people, I remain, with constant prayers for heaven's blessings upon you, your brother in Christ.

THOS. H. LIPSCOMB, P. E.

PLAY THE GAME FAIR.

The purpose underlying the existence of the Church is that God may have a human institution through which to work to help Him establish the kingdom of God among men. The Church visible was not established by Jesus Christ, but He laid down the principles upon which the Church visible was to be established and He clearly stated the conditions that must be fulfilled in the life of those who would follow Him. "If any man wills to come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow me." Selfish humans may compose the membership of the Church visible, but none are members of the Church invisible save those whose lives are projected upon the basis of aggressive loyalty to truth, righteousness, love and mercy. "Love suffereth long and is kind; love envieth not, vaunteth not itself, seeketh not her own," etc.

One who will take the time to carefully study the history of mankind will discover that there are two purposes running throughout the history of the world: "The Divine purpose toward which the whole of creation moves," and what, for the like of a better name, we call the human purpose. The one is working toward the redemption of the human family by lifting man's spiritual nature to the place of exercising dominion over the life; the other is working toward the realization of selfish ideals as regards man's lower nature. Though the climb upward for mankind is necessarily a slow one, when men look at the world's history from century to century, they find that the higher ideals of the spiritual life are coming, more and more, to dominate in the life of humanity. One also learns by this study of world history that all human purposes, howsoever well buttressed they may be for a time, are ultimately doomed to failure, for the simple reason that they run counter to the Divine purpose. The only way that man can labor for eternity is to bring his will into harmony with God's will and thus help in the realization of the Divine purpose.

The methods of work obtaining in the two different camps, the Divine camp and the human camp, are diametrically opposed the one to the other. In the Divine camp the game is always played in the open and for the highest interests of the kingdom of God. Questions pertaining to changes, etc., in the visible Church are openly discussed that all possible light may be thrown upon the issues that are up for discussion; then the issue is decided upon the basis of the judgment of the majority. One who is working for the advancement of the kingdom of God spurns the thought of a "secret combine," howsoever righteous may be the cause from which the combine is made, because God has plainly said, "Do not do evil that good may abound," and because the ultimate result following all unrighteous deeds are evil, even though the immediate result have a profitable appearance. On the other hand, in the human camp all sorts of trickery, intrigues, schemings, secret caucus manipulation, etc., are resorted to, that the end desired may be accomplished.

If, then, we would prove ourselves the sons of God we must PLAY THE GAME FAIR. Otherwise we brand ourselves as sons of Satan.

"THE MEN BEHIND THE MOVEMENT."

Who are the 186 laymen behind the movement for the revision of Southern Methodist polity? What standing have they in the Church? What relation do they sustain to its larger activities? What is their reputation for loyalty and devotion to its interests?

These are timely questions. The Church is entitled to know, while the issues speak for themselves and must be considered on their merits. The strength of the movement and its probable wisdom may be judged in part at least by the personnel of its promoters. A search of the list shows the following interesting facts.

Twenty-three of the signers—Philips, Weatherby, Stubbs, Rader, Edgerton, Stubblefield, Hughston, Newman, Fritts, Tatum, Ayers, Stevenson, McLeran, Southgate, Crawford, Hay, Searcy, Graham, Swepston, Howard and Demarce—are now, or have been, lay leaders of their respective Annual Conferences, the highest lay office in the gift of an Annual Conference.

Some of them have been continued in that capacity ever since the beginning of the Laymen's Movement, seven years ago, and have rendered conspicuous service. T. S. Southgate, of Virginia, is a notable example, a man of large business interests, but for years a leader in the movement that has put the Virginia Conference at the head of the missionary list. It is doubtful if any layman in the Connection has done more for missions than he.

Another, W. B. Stubbs, of Georgia, was the first General Secretary of the Laymen's Movement, in which connectional office he organized the Movement throughout the Church.

Judge Perry S. Rader, of Missouri, has not only served long as Conference Lay Leader, but for the past two quadrenniums has been a member of the General Board of Missions.

General Julian S. Carr, of Durham, N. C., needs no introduction. He is known throughout the Connection for his intelligent and loyal support of all the enterprises of the Church. Both he and Mr. Southgate were elected by the last General Conference members of the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

J. B. Wadsworth, of Gadsden, Ala., is a member of the Connectional Sunday School Board, elected by the General Conference.

Col. Creed F. Bates, of Chattanooga, temporary Chairman of the Movement for Revision, led the Holston Conference delegation in the Asheville General Conference. Both he and Judge Newman were members of the Commission on the relation of Vanderbilt University to the Church, and were tendered a unanimous vote of thanks by the Conference for their services in that capacity. (See Journal, page 259.)

Fifty-four of the 186 signers were delegates to one or both of the last two General Conferences, picked from a half-million laymen as best fitted to sit in the highest legislative body of the Church. In that capacity they had opportunity to learn much of the inner workings of the Church and its needs.

Ninety of the signers, or nearly half, are now serving as District Lay Leaders, chosen to that place as the men best fitted for general religious leadership in their respective districts.

Educational interests also are well represented. Among the signers are J. W. Beeson, President of Meridian College; John H. Hinemon, President of Arkansas School for the Blind; W. H. Fitzgerald, son of the sainted Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald, Principal of Fitzgerald Training School; R. G. Peoples, Principal of Battle Ground Academy, and E. Sumpter Smith, Principal of Randolph-Macon Academy. There are, in addition, three college professors and twenty members of college boards of trust. Among the institutions represented, in addition to the above, may be mentioned the following: Southwestern University, Hendrix, Galloway, Central, Blackstone, Carolina, Martha Washington, Howard-Payne, Lonisburg, and Logan Colleges, Greensboro College for Women, and the Memphis Conference Female Institute.

Thus it will be seen that about half of the Annual Conference Lay Leaders, and nearly one-third of the District Lay Leaders in the entire Connection, a considerable proportion of General Conference delegates, and more than a score of men prominently connected with many of the leading educational institutions of the Church, are united behind the program for revision. It is a list that will carry weight and command for the movement the serious consideration of every open-minded Methodist. The loyalty and sincerity of these men are above question. They have no axes to grind, no selfish purposes to serve, no grudges to satisfy. They are concerned only for the good of the Church, and are speaking their convictions solely from a sense of duty. It is absurd to accuse such men of clandestine and unworthy motives. Any such suggestion is meant solely to muddy the water and divert attention from the real issue.

The effort to localize the movement is of exactly the same character. Here are 186 men well distributed over the whole Connection, representing twenty States and nearly twice as many Annual Conferences. Had there been time and opportunity to reach them, thousands more would gladly have signed. Of the genesis and development of the movement we would be glad to speak here, did space permit.

The main question, however, that concerns its friends, and particularly its opposers, is not where it started, but where it is going. Being in line with a sentiment that was already widespread, it is meeting with enthusiastic approval on all sides, both from preachers and laymen. Even its determined opposers must recognize that the movement is bound to win ultimately. The best they can hope to do is to stave off the inevitable as long as possible. We await the result with confidence.

CANDID DECLARATIONS.

By Rev. S. A. Neblett, Matanzas, Cuba.

Mr. J. E. McAfee, secretary of the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church (North), delivered an address to the General Assembly of that Church in May of the present year, which has been published in pamphlet form under the title of "Home Missions and the New Human Brotherhood." Mr. McAfee is an able, earnest man, of the extremely radical type. He is frequently carried beyond bounds by his enthusiasm and sees things in a wrong light, but he is one enemy of denominationalism, one advocate of organic union, who makes no attempt to conceal or disguise his views and purpose. Were all the leaders of the unionist propaganda as frank and open as Mr. McAfee, the Church would not be so easily misled. The following paragraph from his address is illuminating:

"I plead for the larger realization of the Home Mission policy already established which has made the Presbyterian the only national organization at work among the 350,000 homeless men in the nation's lumber camps, where rewards can never be measured by statistical returns; which has established a Presbyterian work in Alaska equal to that of all other Evangelical forces combined in a region where results must be estimated qualitatively and not quantitatively, and where more money and more men are needed at once to save that fair land from the blight of sectarian rivalries which have made such spiritual havoc of countless communities in continental United States; which has contributed the strongest Mission and the most aggressive leadership to that movement in Porto Rico where Christian Union has in some respects further advanced than on any Mission field, among a population within the twelve-month admitted to American citizenship, who less than two decades ago were the vassals and slaves of an autocratic European power; which has put Presbyterian zeal foremost in that movement in Utah where all Evangelical overlapping and conflict has now been eliminated; which has emboldened the effort in Cuba against enormous difficulties to press on toward the unity of all Mission forces, and where the complete consolidation of the Presbyterian U. S. A. and U. S. Missions awaits only the supply of the money from our abundant resources; which is giving a new hope and confidence to 3000 Presbyterian Home Mission workers, East and West, in every variety of community, where the Kingdom of Heaven waits for the application of a gospel which shall establish the brotherhood of all believers and shall set all in full harmony and devotion to the Christly program of a regenerated human society." (Italics mine.)

Mr. McAfee, to my certain knowledge, is in possession of facts that show clearly that something more than "the supply of money" is needed to bring about the consolidation of the Presbyterian Missions in Cuba, but he doubtless failed to recall them at the moment, or brushed them aside as unimportant.

The able secretary's enthusiasm for union leads him into great unfairness in his attitude toward the Churches as they exist to-day, as the following paragraph will show:

"Does any believe that in this purifying element the misdirected mechanism of our American religious order can be saved—the tangle of overlapping Mission Boards and administrative agencies, the utter chaos of competing sects? Is it right to try to save it? Are not the prophets of the Lord commissioned to speed its transformation? In the new age of brotherhood what place will be found for our sectarian structure, built to magnify differences and to frustrate impulses to brotherhood; conceived in faction and perpetuated to compel faction; careful second how others fare and careful first that this or that little coterie shall attain Heaven's bliss; honoring an arbitrary, absentee deity and little responsive to God in Christ, to be made regnant and redemptive in every range and rank of human society; busy with inconsequentials while indifferent to much which men live by day upon day and which thus shapes their immortal destinies—will place be found for so unholy a thing in a world redeemed by these floods of sacrificial blood? Will not the clarified spiritual yearings of this regenerated people sweep it with all the other trumpery of the old world into everlasting oblivion?"

It would be very easy to show the utter falsity of Mr. McAfee's strictures upon the denominations. Because there may be here and there a preacher or a congregation rabidly sectarian, does it follow that the "mechanism of our American religious order," or "sectarian structure," was "built to magnify differences and to frustrate impulses to brotherhood?" Tell me, ye hosts of Methodist itinerants, are ye careful first for self, and are ye "busy with inconsequentials?" Are the denominations which, like our own, had their origin in Europe nothing but the "trumpery of the old world" deserving of being swept into everlasting oblivion?

I choose rather to accept the estimate of another able Presbyterian who, in a review of the Panama Congress on Christian Work, said among other things:

"It was almost amusing to see the confidence with which brethren disposed of difficulties over which a Luther or a Calvin would have sweat blood. The Anglican communion with its counterpart on this side of the sea, the Confessional Lutheran Churches, the Pan-Presbyterian family, Methodism with its splendid organization, the Independent Congregational and Baptist Churches—these are not fungus growths or flowers that bloom in the spring; they are giant oaks, hardy mountain pines, cedars of Lebanon. They have their roots of doctrinal conviction, ordered government, devotional habits. It is hard to see how any one can seriously believe that they can be picked up and clapped together by a Business Committee or a Congress, or a hundred Congresses. Before the goal is reached the people will have something to say about whether they are to give up things in which they believe and love with all their hearts because a Continuation Committee or a concatenated jungle of similar Committees imagined that it can be done."

There is in this day among the leaders of Mr. McAfee's type a striking sensitiveness as to the value of their own convictions on the subject of unity, but an amazing lack of consideration, even of positive disregard for the convictions of great men of the past and of other strong men of the present, when these convictions are not in accord with their theories. The Church needs men of convictions to-day just as in days gone by. Her spiritual and organic life depends upon the fidelity of such men to their convictions, and their loyalty to the Church which interprets God's Word in accordance with their convictions. Once more I would quote my friend, the critic of the Panama Congress:

"The greatest power on earth, is conviction—no, the second greatest—greater is the power of truth. A man must act on his convictions, but they may be wrong. If it please God to give him the truth, what right has he to enter into pacts with any one on earth that he will suppress the truth, not preach it, cloak it in ambiguous phrases, rob it of any of its power by "weasel words" so that one sentence sucks the life out its neighbor? This is the thing that we really have to dread in South America, and North America, too. It is this lack of conviction of the truth, lack of knowledge of the truth, a half-hearted, shambling, paltering habit of mind which is the real foe to unity. Are we to forget what Jesus Himself said in the very prayer that is so often quoted and misquoted? "Sanctify them through thy truth: Thy Word is truth." Let the advocates of spurious unity fasten that verse to the twenty-first "that they may all be one." Real unity is a divine creation deigning to use human vessels to manifest itself. It will not manifest itself, it will not, as the Pragmatists say, "work," except by the truth and in the truth, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth. In no other way can Christ's unity be attained. All other is a counterfeit and base metal. May God give us grace to refuse anything but the coin of the King's realm!"—The Cuban Evangelist.

GOD CARRIES OUR BURDENS.

God will carry us and our burdens, too. An aged, weary woman, carrying a heavy basket, got into the train with me the other day, and when she had seated herself she still kept the heavy burden upon her arm. "Lay your burden down, mum," said the kindly voice of a working man. "Lay your hundle down, mum; the train will carry both it and you."—J. H. Jowett.

Life is not so short, but there is always time for courtesy.—Emerson.

ANTON LANG.*

By Ulysses Grant Foote.

I.

In Ammergau good Anton turned the clay,
And shaped his vessels fair. He had his art,
As Jesus used the saw and plane. A part
It is to worship with our hands; to play
To life's stern needs and sanctify the day.
For our Gethsemanes will break the heart
To glorify the cross. Yet work would start
The labor of his breath and he would sway
Beneath the heavy weight. He knew the pain
Forbode his end. But Anton tasted death
Upon the cross, so now he feels most deep
For his dependent ones. Could he but gain
Some substance for his own ere early death
Will end the scene and he shall fall asleep.

II.

His village folk loved him because so rare
A man. The light that Limner gave the one
Whom Jesus loved was in his eyes and shone
As bright as if divine. Beneath his hair
A nimbus circled round his brow. His share
Of glory was the cross he bore; he won
Sublimity when loud he cried: "'Tis done."
He held enthralled the hosts that gathered there
More by his mien than by his studied art.
His heart is pure, which glorified his deeds.
The Life of lives found human form to show
That Christ in thought and act of us is part.
Life's drama cast is vain save it proceeds
And ends as Christ himself would have us go.

III.

Now William calls him from sweet Ammergau!
The strong have gone before, but now the weak,
The famed, must feed ambition's maw and seek
A fate unknown. Thus Christus Lang must do
The soldier's part and pierce his victim through
That he may die. Must learn, e'en now, to speak
The words of hate. Tis fierce for him, who meek
And low, twice took the part as Christ, to brew
His spirit thus. In war his plague gains speed
And whitens with its growth, and cuts the breath
To painful gasps. His race divinely fair
Most like his Lord's by men has been decreed.
It counts for naught! The shining mark by death
And kings are both desired to hide despair.

*Anton Lang, who twice played the part as Christ in the Passion Play, though suffering with tuberculosis, has been ordered into the Prussian army.

A LETTER FROM BISHOP PAINE.

(Bishop Robert Paine was one of Southern Methodism's really great men and the brilliant biographer of Bishop McKendree, who had so much to do with the shaping of constitutional Methodism. Bishop Hoss sent us a few days since the following letter, with the suggestion that it would make good reading at this time, and in his communication thus referred to his distinguished predecessor in the Episcopacy: "Bishop Paine was so upright and noble a man, and served the Church so well, that he was justly entitled to speak in regard to anything that concerned its welfare."—Editor of the Advocate.)

Aberdeen, Miss., August 3, 1882.

Rev. R. G. Porter.

My dear Brother: I sincerely thank you and the Aberdeen District Conference, whom, as its Secretary, you represent, for the very kind communication you have sent me. None but a worn-out old Methodist preacher is likely to appreciate such an evidence of esteem and fraternal love. In this instance, however undeserving I feel of the compliments conveyed, the pleasure of learning that I am not forgotten by those among whom I have lived and who have known me most intimately for the greater part of my ministry, is peculiarly comforting. That I have given my life to the Church is the best evidence I could render of my estimate of the truth and importance of its doctrines and polity. The former, I trust, will remain unchanged. It would be a criminal rashness to try to formulate a summary of Scriptural truths in their place. The latter should not be materially altered except it be done to make our great itinerant system more effectve. Let our motto be, "Holiness and the world for Christ."

Please return my thanks to your Conference.

Your brother,

R. PAINE.

"How shall we treat our enemies? As Christ would have treated them. He was silent before many of their accusations. He let His life answer their charges. The courage and patience that makes one quietly endure and wait, have their reward."

A GENEROUS BEQUEST.

Hon. James R. Deason, of Trenton, Tenn., a lifelong Methodist, and a consecrated, big-souled Christian gentleman, departed this life on July 1, 1917.

Hon. J. R. Deason.

Mr. Deason's will, after providing for the payment of certain legacies, creates a trust estate to be administered in the interest of five beneficiaries, and "as the beneficiaries of the income from the estate die, the trustee will pay the part going to each to the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and when the last one has died the trustee will pay the corpus of the trust fund to the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

In addition to the trust estate, Mr. Deason bequeathed to the Board of Church Extension, subject to a life estate, some residential property in the city of Trenton. The will of Mr. Deason contains the following language:

"I have also for years had the purpose in mind to do something for the spread of the Gospel through the Church of which I am a member, and as a memorial, also, to my deceased wife, whose life was devoted to this cause."

The executor of the estate is Mr. H. H. Elder, a nephew of Mr. Deason and superintendent of our Sunday school at Trenton, Tennessee.

The Board of Church Extension should receive ultimately from this estate something more than $25,000, and the fund will be known as the "Lelia Deason Memorial Fund."

MR. FRITTS' EULOGIUM.

this so-called Laymen's "Address" is that nearly all of them that we have heard express themselves concerning it repudiate about seven-eighths of it. Yet they have signed their names to the whole of it. We wonder if it has occurred to these brethren that in attaching their names to this document, in most of which they say they do not believe, without laying down any qualifications, they are in effect endorsing the entire deliverance, so far as the public is concerned. True, they were invited to sign it if they believed in any part of the program proposed (this was a very shrewd piece of work); but surely they should see that in doing this they have made themselves sponsors for the whole revolutionary scheme, and that, while they themselves are disclaiming any such intention, they are being thus paraded by the leaders in the propaganda. It would seem that they ought to define their position concerning the various things advocated and stop this effort to use their influence to accomplish revolutionary changes in which they declare they do not at all believe.

Mr. Fritts objects to any one trying to "localize" this movement. If any one will read carefully Mr. Fritts' present article, he cannot but see that he himself has pretty nearly "localized" the movement in and around the Board of Missions. Look it over and see if this is not true.

Twenty-three of the signers, we are told, are now, or have been, Conference Lay Missionary Leaders. Ninety of them, or nearly half, are now District Lay Missionary Leaders. Judge Percy S. Rader, of Missouri, is on the Board of Missions. General Carr is on the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which since its birth has been under the wing of the Board of Missions. From missionary circles came Dr. Cook's rancorous pamphlet, which was scattered abroad by Brother Fritts and his associate workers. Brother Eleazer, who wrote the first letters in behalf of the movement, is Editor of the Missionary Voice, the official organ of the Board of Missions. Is not this quite enough to indicate rather conclusively that this so-called contagion of Bishop-phobia has originated from a common focus, and is not in any sense a movement that has sprung up voluntarily from among our more than 2,000,000 Church members? It certainly seems so to us. We do not mean by the foregoing statements to impeach the loyalty of the entire Board of Missions—there are some as choice spirits on it as we have among us—but the attitude of the majority of its members toward most of our Bishops is well known. Only a short time since a leading minister in our Church, who was present at the recent missionary meeting at Lake Junaluska, wrote us that it was largely attended by old Vanderbilt students and that he scarcely heard a kind word about any of our Chief Pastors, and that Bishop Hoss and Bishop Kilgo came in for the larger share of the belaboring that was being given the Bishops. Of course, some will say that we ought not to write thus, but the time has come to lift the curtain on what has been going on and for indulgence in plain speech.

Mr. Fritts apparently would make much of the fact that these men were ELECTED lay leaders. Let him tell the public how many laymen voted for them. At the average district conference there are perhaps 12 or 15 laymen in attendance, and very few, if any more, at the average Annual Conference. It is well known that the voice of the great body of our people is not heard in the choosing of these men. There is nothing to justify the pretentious claim made for these brethren, that they are authorized to speak and act for the whole laity of the Church. They no more represent the laity of the Church than do the laymen on the other Boards—those on the Board of Church Extension, of Education, the Joint Board of Finance, the Sunday School Board, and the Epworth League Board. Methodism had as many great laymen serving as class leaders and in various other capacities before the Laymen's Missionary Movement was ever heard of as she has now. We do not mean to disparage all our Lay Leaders—there are many valuable workers among them—it is the notion that they have any representative relation to the whole body of our laity that we are combating. It is not surprising that some of these brethren have been led astray when the influences that have surrounded them are taken into consideration.

Mr. Fritts seeks to make capital out of the fact that Judge Bates and Judge Newman served on the Vanderbilt Commission, and were thanked by the General Conference for that work. It is reported that Judge Bates has resigned from the chairmanship of this so-called laymen's organization and that he has largely repudiated the revolutionary program outlined in the "Address" that is being scattered abroad. And it should be kept in mind that the Vanderbilt Commission did its work in 1906, and that it was the General Conference of 1910 which expressed appreciation of the service rendered by its members. THE REAL VANDERBILT FIGHT WAS THEN JUST BEGINNING TO TAKE SHAPE. In the subsequent battle that took place if either of these men ever lifted his voice in behalf of the Church, we have never heard of it. It is well known that even some of the lawyers who served the Church down to 1914 when the final decision was rendered, in the crucial hour of the battle when the pending issue was whether we should hang on to Vanderbilt after we had been stripped of all our real rights, threw the weight of their influence on the University side of the scale, thus aiding those who would have committed the Church to a ruinous educational policy of instructing its youth in schools controlled by outside agencies? A sound record on the Vanderbilt question means much more than having believed academically in the rights of the Church to control the institution before the real struggle was on. But, as we have stated, it is reported that Judge Bates has abjured most of this proposed radical reconstruction of our government, and the indications are that Judge Newman had little to do with the framing of this remarkable "Address." As we showed beyond controversy in a recent issue of the Advocate, this movement started in Nashville, four of its seven originators being laymen who hold their membership in the West End (the Vanderbilt) Church, and who had the Vanderbilt atmosphere all about them. This statement does not at all conflict with our previous representation that this agitation has been stimulated by the conditions existing in the Board of Missions, for it is well known that the dominant element of that Board has leaned toward the view that the Church acted unwisely in refusing to continue its connection with Vanderbilt University and has been somewhat sore over its having pursued that course.

GOOD OPENING AT CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The session of 1917-18 at Centenary College opened on September 19 with a larger enrollment than at the opening last year, in spite of the fact that quite a number of the last year student body had enlisted in the army and navy, and that all work below the high school grades has been left out this year; cutting off a number of younger pupils. The loss of students by the war has affected all the schools for boys, and in many of them the attendance is considerably reduced by that fact. This opening at Centenary under these circumstances is quite encouraging, and is evidence of increased interest in the College in its patronizing territory. One lady from Southern Louisiana has moved to Shreveport to enter her children in the College.

If further evidence were needed of growing interest in the College and its work, it could be found in the attendance and interest on the occasion of the opening of the session, when, in addition to all the resident Methodist preachers who were in town, several members of the Conference from other points and local ministers of other churches, there were present a number of prominent business men of the city and quite a gathering of ladies and young people.

An appropriate and impressive program was carried out, including music furnished by Mr. Fowler, the director of the choir at the First Methodist Church; inspiring addresses by Dr. Wynn, Dr. Sexton, Dr. Smith of the First Presbyterian Church, Dr. Dodd of the First Baptist Church, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Dr. John L. Scales, President of the Board of Trustees, Mr. O. A. Wright and Judge W. C. Barnette.

All these speakers, with impressive illustrations, emphasized the imperative demand of the times for men of large mould and high character, and the value of such institutions as Centenary in developing such men.

Announcement was made that on Sunday, September 23, the opening sermon would be preached at Noel Memorial Church by the pastor of that church, with which most of the College body is connected.

The student body appears to be a fine company of earnest, well behaved young people. The faculty is an excellent body of Christian gentlemen whose scholarship assures efficient instruction and whose character promises a fine influence on the students with whom they come in close contact in the home-like associations of the College. The only changes made in the corps of teachers were made necessary by the enlistment of two of last year's faculty in war service, Prof. W. W. Moore, Jr., in the army, and Prof. J. H. Rosenberger in an officers' training camp. These vacancies have been filled by the selection of Mr. Paul M. Brown, Jr., son of Rev. Paul M. Brown, of the Louisiana Conference, who, after graduating with the A.B. degree from Centenary, took his A.M. at Southern Methodist University with credit to himself and Centenary, and Prof. B. D. Battle, brother of Rev. C. A. Battle, of the Louisiana Conference, who taught for several years at Centenary, but for the last session has been with a Methodist College in Texas.

The military instruction, which was introduced last year, is generally approved by the patrons and will be continued during the coming session under the direction of Prof. Smith, who was in charge last year. It is notable that a number of the boys who enlisted in the army were promptly promoted to non-commissioned officers as a result of their general training and of the military drill given them at Centenary.

Doubtless the enrollment of the College will be steadily increased during the next few weeks, and there are evidences that the eyes of the people of this section are increasingly turned toward Centenary as they become informed as to its high educational ideals, thorough work, good discipline and high moral and religious influence. If every preacher in the Conference will call the attention of young men and their parents to the College as enthusiastically as the school teachers of the State are calling attention to the higher institutions of the State system of education, it will not be long before Centenary will have the patronage she deserves and a number of young men will be brought under the influence of higher ideals and influences.

ROBERTSON'S COURAGE.

When Rev. F. W. Robertson was warned by a woman that his "preaching would get him into trouble," he calmly answered: "I don't care." "But," she said, "Mr. Robertson, do you remember where 'don't care' brought the man?" "Yes," said Robertson, with utmost seriousness, "to a cross."

How the Body is Nourished.

The bodily process known as assimilation is well explained in these words: "As the blood, in its circulation, approaches any organ, the portions that are appropriate for this organ feel its attractive force, obey it, and leaving the others, mingle with the substance of its tissue and are changed into its own true and proper nature."

How important it is that the blood should be pure and rich, not loaded with worn-out and useless matters! Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies and enriches the blood, and does all it is possible for medicine to do in the way of perfecting assimilation and building up the whole system. When you have made up your mind to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, insist on having it—don't accept a substitute, for no substitute acts like it.—Adv.

A GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Friends of Rev. and Mrs. S. M. Thames recently received the following announcement: "1867—1917. Rev. Samuel M. Thames and Miss Mary E. De Loach, married September 5, 1867, at De Sotoville, Ala.—Fiftieth anniversary, 1123 N. West Street, Jackson, Miss."

Brother and Sister Thames opened wide the door of their hospitable home on this glad day to their many friends who came to celebrate with them their "golden wedding." Mrs. Connie Lloyd, the attractive daughter of the bride and groom, welcomed the guests in her most gracious manner and ushered them into the reception hall where a group of charming young girls dispensed delicious punch: then in the parlor we enjoyed the happy privilege of meeting the honored groom and his truly beautiful bride. Receiving with Brother and Sister Thames, were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. De Loach, of Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. T. H. De Loach and daughters, Miss Nell and little Georgette, of Demopolis, Ala.; Rev. and Mrs. B. F. Marshall and little daughter, Nell, of Marianna, Fla.; the Hon. and Mrs. J. D. Thames and little daughter, Gloria, of Vicksburg, Miss.; Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Henry, and Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Watkins, of Jackson, Miss. Mr. J. D. Thames, Jr., and Mr. Thames Lloyd, also Mr. Lloyd's wife and her mother, Mrs. Blackman, were present.

In the dining-room Misses Baldwyn Lloyd, Josephine, and Nell Thames, beautiful and talented granddaughters of the honorees, assisted by charming young friends, served delightful refreshments. These lovely young girls in their exquisite costumes furnished a most pleasing picture. From the profusion of gorgeous, golden-hued flowers, amid a wealth of ferns, that everywhere met the eye, one could easily imagine that a fairy had been there and "spilt her gold."

In the midst of this festal scene, all unawares a retrospective mood stole upon us and we willingly allowed ourselves to be led backward fifty years by Dame Fancy. With a wave of her tiny, golden wand, there was a beautiful marriage scene before us, and we saw the strong, handsome and brilliant-minded young bridegroom claim his pretty, cultured and attractive girl-bride. We heard the congratulations and good wishes of their friends. Another wave of Fancy's wand and the scene changed—we saw the happy couple in their parsonage-home (for the groom was a minister). Then she showed us, as only a fairy could, many incidents in the remarkable career of this consecrated couple. We saw them as they faithfully discharged every duty—as they met and wisely solved the many problems that confront the itinerant minister and his helpmeet—as the husband from year to year, and many times accompanied by his faithful wife, attended his Anuual Conferences, never missing a single one—as for twenty years he went in and out among the people as a presiding elder—as the wife faithfully and efficiently served her Church in almost every capacity—as they reared their interesting and useful family—as they rejoiced with the happy, wept with the sorrowing, visited the sick, counseled the erring, encouraged the faint-hearted, entertained the stranger, administered to the needy, broke the bread of life to the hungry, ever commanding by their pure and unselfish lives the love and respect of all. A final wave of her wand and Dame Fancy was good, and we were again with the gay and joyous company from which we had wandered but a short time before. We were indeed thankful for the privilege of "looking backward," for it helped us somewhat to understand the secret of the sweet peace, unalloyed joy, and perfect contentment the bride and groom of fifty years possess.

The large number who attended the celebration, the numerous messages of love and congratulations from absent ones, and the many handsome gifts all showed that their friends are legion.

May heaven continue to shower its choicest blessings upon Brother and Sister Thames, and may they celebrate just as happily many more anniversaries of their glad marriage day!

Jackson, Miss. A FRIEND.

CAUSE FOR THANKSGIVING.

Dear Dr. Meek: It was never more important in the history of mankind that we should have a good crop year than it was this time. Perhaps more prayers for good crops have been uttered this year than in any other year. In May and June drouths seriously threatened and in some communities public prayers were offered for rain.

God has graciously regarded our need and seems to have answered the many prayers. In most parts of our State crops are exceptionally bountiful and good. Even the wild berries and the wild crab-apples have come in abundance. Prices are also high, and never before were markets so good.

Now, what presses upon me is: What are we going to do with that with which God has blessed us in relieving our concern and in supplying us so graciously and bountifully? Is it far-fetched to suppose that if we fail to praise God for his goodness and fail to use the present crop for God's glory, that next year we may suffer distress and cry out in vain? Really, may we not expect a special curse to follow unfaithfulness now?

I am concerned that each individual consider these thoughts. I believe that our State and Church authorities ought to call formal attention to these matters and appoint a special day for thanksgiving and prayer. I am sure that our papers, religious and secular, should discuss our duties and dangers freely, calling for repentance and for proper use of what is entrusted to us. It is far better to do these things in good faith now than to lie in sackcloth in vain a year hence.

Fraternally yours,

Montrose, Miss. ROLFE HUNT.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTES.

By N. B. P.

A good sister, the widow of a Methodist preacher, has lately contributed $2000 to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension on the annuity plan, which amount added to her former contributions makes a total of $4300.

Mr. Wilbur P. Allen, of Austin, Texas, has sent $1000 to the Board of Church Extension as a memorial to his father. This $1000 will be added to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board, and will be known as the "Fred L. Allen Memorial Loan Fund." The income from the fund will go perpetually to the support of the superannuated preachers of the West Texas Conference.

* * *

A gentleman from Alabama has made payment of $1500 to the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on a proposed $3000 loan fund. The income from this fund during his life is to be added to the principal, and after his decease will go to the support of the church where he holds his membership, and to which he is a liberal contributor.

* * *

Dr. W. F. McMurry, of the Board of Church Extension, on his recent visit to California agreed with the Building Committee to the letting of the contract for the San Francisco Church, which building will cost $52,000 without the furnishings. The plans have been carefully prepared, and, on the completion of the building, our congregation will have a working plant in the city of San Francisco equal to any other Protestant church building in that great city. Our lot is located on Bush Street, near Jones Street, three and one-half blocks distant from the St. Francis Hotel, and one block distant from the Mary Elizabeth Inn, an institution under the control of the Woman's Council, and erected by Mrs. Elizabeth H. Glide. Plans are being prepared and arrangements made for the building, at an early date, of a Wesley House in San Francisco on the Valencia Street lot purchased several years ago by the Board of Missions. This enterprise has been made possible by the liberality of the Woman's Missionary Council, the Board of Church Extension, the Board of Missions and Mrs. Elizabeth H. Glide, and is an institution upon which the substantial women of our Church in the Pacific Conference have their hearts set. The completion of these two structures in San Francisco, together with the new property on Telegraph Avenue in Oakland, and our plant in Berkeley places our Church in position to be felt as a religious force in the cities around the Bay.

VERY EASILY ANSWERED.

Dr. Herbert L. Willett, of the Chicago University, is reported to have said in a recent sermon, "What would you think of an institution of religious education which proclaims its five fundamental points of teaching to be the verbal inspiration and inerrance of the Bible; the virgin birth of Jesus Christ; the substitutionary theory of the blood atonement; the physical resurrection of Jesus, and the second advent of Christ?" To be very direct and plain about it, we would think that there is surely an institution which believes in the Word of God, as Dr. Willett does not, that teaches some substantial hope for eternal life through the Lord Jesus Christ, and that does not invite men to destroy at their will the whole plan of salvation by grace and the evidence of that plan in the supernatural work of the Holy Spirit. It would surely be a fine institution, well worthy of the trust of Christian men.—Presbyterian Journal.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER BOWEN.

Dear Doctor Meek: I am better prepared to complete my fall work than I have been in several years. I am doing my very best to answer the requests and meet the many calls of my brethren to assist in meetings. My work grows so nicely all the time that I am moved to strive to do more and better work. I regret very much to disappoint any who desire my assistance. The time element must be considered. Best wishes for you and the Advocate. Yours faithfully,

J. A. BOWEN.

SAVIOR, HOLD MY HAND IN THINE.

By Mrs. H. B. Perritt.

Savior, hold my hand in thine,
Cleans me by thy power divine,
Keep me in the narrow way,
Never let me from thee stray.

Let my heart be light and free,
Let my faith and trust in thee
Brighter grow from day to day,
As I walk the narrow way.

Keep me ever by thy side,
Let me in thyself confide,
All my sorrows, all my tears,
All my hopes and all my fears.

When my soul is sore distressed,
Let me lean upon thy breast,
Casting all my cares on thee,
Savior, more than life to me.

When I cross the swelling tide,
Be thou very near my side,
Till my soul is lost in love,
In the heavenly world above.

(These verses can be sung to tune No. 53 in our Hymnal.)

Logansport, La.

GAVE HER JEWELS.

Emily Pullen, a ten-year-old girl, had a pair of diamond earrings which she received at Christmas. One day she approached her father, a jeweler, and said:

"Papa, I don't think I ought to keep my diamond earrings. They are not doing me as much good as they could do somebody who is in need, and I am going to give them away."

"Who are you going to give them to?" asked the astonished father.

"To the Red Cross of Russia, so that they can be sold and the money spent for the benefit of the sick soldiers."

He acquiesced, and the little girl sent her diamond carrings to Countess Cassini at Washington, who had organized a fair in that city to raise funds for the Red Cross Society of Russia.

Countess Cassini's heart was touched and she immediately wrote the little donor a long letter, saying:

"I shall not soon forget your generous act. The carrings were sold and the money went to the fair fund."—Illustrated Notes.

UNDER TEST.

Horace B Claflin, the dry goods merchant of New York, was alone in his office one afternoon when a young man, pale and careworn, timidly knocked and entered. "Mr. Claflin," said he, "I have been unable to meet certain payments, because parties failed to do by me as they agreed to, and I would like to have $10,000. I come to you because you have been a friend to my father, to my mother, and might be a friend to me."

"Come in," said Claflin; "come in and have a glass of wine."

"No," said the young man, "I don't drink."

"Have a cigar, then."

"No, I never smoke."

"Well," said the joker, "I would like to accommodate you, but don't think I can."

"Very well," said the young man, as he was about to leave the room. "I thought perhaps you might. Good-day, sir."

"Hold on," said Mr. Claflin, "you don't drink?"

"No!"

"Nor smoke, nor gamble, nor do anything of the kind?"

"No, sir!"

"Well," said Mr. Claflin, with tears in his eyes, "you shall have the desired money, and three times the amount, if you wish. Your father let me have $5000 once, and asked me these same questions. No thanks are needed; I owed it to you for your father's sake."—Unidentified.

THE FIRST WEEK.

By Frances Harmer.

Lois came down a little late for breakfast. She had stayed to try two ways of doing her hair! Her mother was packing her lunch.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Lois, "how I wish holidays lasted forever."

"I don't," laughed her mother, putting a screw of paper with salt and pepper nicely beside the hard-boiled egg; "I want my little girl to know something when she grows up!"

Lois had to smile, too, at that, and after a hasty breakfast she set out for the first day of school.

The September air and sunshine seemed as delightful as the June air and sunshine had done, and not so very different.

Her special friends were waiting for her, and there was a rush—almost a collision—and then an exchange of experiences.

"Oh, I had the most won-der-ful time!" cried Alice Swift; "we went to the Green Mountains, Vermont. It'll take months to tell you all we did!"

"But the sea!" put in Margaret Carter. "I'm sorry for any one who didn't go to the seashore. It was beyond words. And I can swim and dive, and walk in the water, and—"

"Look at Millicent West!" cried some one, passing them; "look at her!"

They all looked. They saw a fair, pretty girl, sitting on a bench, apparently deeply interested in a book.

"She's studying!" cried Lois. "Milly! They can't make us recite to-day!"

Millicent smiled, rose, and came to them.

"I know we're to begin Asia," she explained, "and I thought if I read the lesson over, I might know what Miss Grant said a little better."

Lois pulled Margaret back.

"Millicent flunked last year," she whispered; "I suppose she thinks she's got to study now!"

The bell soon rang; everybody filed into the school. The opening seemed long, but it came to an end. The classes seemed dull, Lois thought, but they did not last forever, and when three o'clock came, the girls poured out into the yard.

"Let's go over to the drug store and have a soda," invited Margaret, gaily; "Alice, Lois, you, Millicent?"

Millicent faced them.

"No, thank you," she said, "mother wants me to go right home, and have a rest and a little walk before supper, so that I can study well after."

"But you needn't study to-night!" urged Alice Swift; "they're never hard on us the first week!"

"No," admitted Millicent, slowly; "I wish they had been last year. That first week made me flunk."

"Nonsense," Lois spoke impatiently; "what we lose this week, we can soon make up."

"Well, perhaps you may," said Millicent; "I don't think I can. So I'll keep away from soda fountains—we do waste a lot of time there—at least till Saturday."

"What do you mean by saying the first week flunked you?" demanded Margaret.

"It really did. I never thought my exam. was much, but I did hope that my term marks would pull me up. They'd been just fair, for so long. Know why they didn't?"

"No. Tell us."

"Miss Grant showed me her mark book. I hardly ever made ten, but I'd plenty of sevens. Of course, with seventy-five as pass mark, that was too little, but there were some eights. And we went back, through the months, till we came to September, and the first week in October. They were fives and sixes, and two fours! If they'd been nines and tens I'd have squeezed a pass mark out!"

"Would you have thought it?" cried Alice.

"So, this first week, while they are lenient" ("they," of course, meant the teachers), "I'm working for tens!"

She nodded brightly, and started home.

"Will you come girls?" asked Margaret, but without enthusiasm.

"Not to-day, thanks," promptly answered Alice, "I've a map to draw, and if I work hard, I can get a ten for that. I like maps."

"Let's all go home, and work," advised Margaret.

"How soon you seem to have settled down dear," said Lois' mother, as she saw her daughter arranging her "study table"—books, ink, student lamp—immediately after supper.

"Yes, it's the best thing to do," agreed Lois, "the first week counts more than you'd think!"—Southern Churchman.

DOROTHY'S MUSIC.

"So Dorothy lost her voice, from the fright and exposure, and has never been able to sing since. What a pity her whole education went for nothing! I wonder she can be so cheerful."

Dorothy was a promising young singer in San Francisco, before the earthquake. Fleeing to the open fields, living among hard conditions for months, the loss of her singing voice had been hard indeed for the ambitious girl who had hoped so much from her music. But there was another side to her life, and her old singing-teacher saw it. He shook his head at the first speaker.

"Dorothy will always have music. Her education is in her soul. She cannot sing any more. But she speaks courage to her little sisters, and tenderness to her sick mother, and that is the sweetest music. I tell you I am prouder of that girl than of any pupil I ever had. She builds up harmonies in her life every day. Out of a terrible disappointment she has made a noble song of life."

Emerson says somewhere that the "sweetest music is not in oratories, but in the human voice when it speaks, from its instant life, tones of tenderness, truth and courage." Dorothy had found that secret and lived by it.—Forward.

LOVE LIKE CHRIST'S.

The Princess Eugenie of Sweden sold her diamonds that a home for incurables might be built. She prayed much for the conversion of one of its poor inmates. One day when the Princess visited her, the woman burst into tears and said, "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin. He has cleansed mine." "In those tears," said the Princess, "I saw my diamonds again."—Illustrated Notes

CENTENARY COLLEGE
SHREVEPORT, LOUISIANA

Fall term opens Sept. 19. Full College courses leading to degrees; also High School preparation for College entrance. Military Instruction offered. Comfortable dormitory, steam heat, hot and cold baths, good board at moderate cost. Faculty with university degrees. Health conditions unsurpassed. Christian influences.

R. H. WYNN, President BOX 6

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

Editorial

AS WE EXPECTED.

When the Nashville revolutionary agitation was started, we predicted to some of our friends that an effort would be made to capitalize it in the interest of organic union with the Northern Methodist Church, on the ground that there is so much disaffection with our government among us that we can well afford radically to reconstruct it—indeed, that the times demand this. We were not alone in this view, as one of our Commissioners on Unification wrote us that he rather suspected that the course of some of our Church papers toward this propaganda was being shaped by this consideration.

That these expectations were not mere wild imaginings is shown by the following quotations from Northern Methodist papers:

After referring to the so-called Laymen's Address, the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate (whose editor is on the Unification Commission) says: "These suggestions by leading laymen would have been interesting at any time. They are doubly so now pending the consideration of the plan of unification of the Church, South, and our own Church."

Discussing the same matter, the Western Christian Advocate (Cincinnati) states that a meeting of 200 laymen was held in Chattanooga (an error—a meeting has been proposed, but not yet held), and thus comments upon the alleged outcome:

"The courage of the leaders presents the dash and chivalry of the olden days. It bespeaks a new vision and an awakening to the growing spirit of democracy that now stirs the world. It is the spirit of the new South becoming vocal, threatening to break with the aristocratic past demanding change and reformation. * * * We do not know how this address will be received, but we do know that it strikes at the fundamental difference between the Church, North, and South, which will prove at the last to be the millstone about the neck of unification."

These utterances are in harmony with what has been the spirit of many representatives of the Northern Methodist Church ever since the unification question came to the front, and even before. Apparently a persistent effort has been made to mix up the two denominations as much as possible in the South and disaffect and divide our people. Some of their Bishops have gone through this section talking against our form of episcopacy whenever they have had an opportunity. And here we see again the intermeddling hand of their journalists. Can we afford to unite with a Church whose leaders are so ready thus to butt in and put the weight of their influence behind such a movement as that inspired by the Nashville-hatched junta? And how can any loyal Southern Methodist who does not want to see his Church torn to pieces and swallowed up by the Northern Church afford to lend assistance to this revolutionary agitation which obviously is tending in that direction?

A DISCREDITABLE RECORD.

The preliminary report of Mr. Osborn, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue of the United States Government, for the twelve months ending June 30, which was made public on September 3, was far from creditable to us as a Nation. The following are the figures that were given out concerning the production of liquors and the manufacture of tobacco into the several forms in which it is used:

Distilled spirits from every source—rye, corn, wheat, apples, peaches, pears, pineapples, oranges, apricots, berries, prunes, figs and cherries—164,665,246 gallons, an increase of 26,000,000 gallons over the previous year, yielding a tax return of $186,563,055.

Cigars of all descriptions and weight, 9,216,901,113—approximately ninety per capita—as compared with 8,337,720,530 the previous year.

Cigarettes 30,529,193,538, as compared with 21,087,757,078, an increase of more than 40 per cent.

Tobacco, chewing and smoking, 445,763,206 pounds, an increase of 28,500,000 pounds.

Even snuff went apparently to new high levels of production with 35,377,751 pounds, an increase of 2,200,000 pounds during the year.

The return to the Government in taxes on cigars, cigarettes, tobacco and snuff was $103,201,592, an increase of approximately $15,000,000 or 18 per cent over the previous year. These figures indicate great nation-wide prosperity, officials state, and in the case of cigarettes, a tremendous growth of the habit among women.

The production of beer, while exceeding that of the previous year, fell considerably below the high record of 66,000,000 barrels in 1914. Taxes were paid last year on 60,729,509 barrels at $1.50 per barrel and other taxes on brewers and retailers brought the total up to $91,897,193, against $88,771,104, during the year preceding.

This ugly record shows that there is yet plenty of work among us for reformers to do. We feel sure, however, that there has been a decrease in the consumption of intoxicants in prohibition territory, and we doubt if there has been an increase in the amount used in our Nation as a whole. It is not unlikely that the production of liquors has been much stimulated by the fear that the Government would, as a war measure, stop the making of it, and it is probable that our exportation of it to other countries has grown largely. It is well known that we are sending even to heathen lands, as Africa for instance, intoxicating beverages to such an extent that their money value is many times as large as the sum we are giving to Christianize their inhabitants—a fact which is a shame, and which should be a stinging humiliation to us. But happily there is a bow of promise in the sky respectng the liquor problem, namely, the growing prospect of National constitutional prohibition. If the amendment which the Senate passed is finally adopted, no intoxicating beverages can be manufactured either for home consumption or for exportation, and none can be imported to our shores. May God speed the happy day when this glorious result shall be consummated!

The showing made as to the consumption of tobacco is one which should provoke serious thought. Particularly depressing is the statement that cigarette-smoking is so greatly increasing among the women of our country. We can scarcely believe that this is true concerning the women of the South; but, as may be seen by reading Bishop Kilgo's statement concerning moral conditions in San Francisco which we published in the last issue of the Advocate, it seems to be a very common practice among those of the West.

DOES THIS LOOK AS IF VANDERBILT IS OUT OF IT?

We are reliably informed that a small company of laymen (mostly lay leaders in and about the Tennessee Capital) were called together in Nashville a few days ago, and that upon motion of a Vanderbilt professor a resolution was adopted in line with the revolutionary address which was determined upon in that city, but which, for declared prudential reasons, was recently issued from Chattanooga. In the same meeting the same professor was appointed to prepare a memorial bearing upon the matter to the General Conference.

It is also said that a ticket has been agreed upon about Nashville for lay delegates from the Tennessee Conference to the General Conference, which includes two Vanderbilt professors and other ardent Vanderbilt sympathizers.

When before in the history of our Church were such methods employed?

As we have stated, we have this information from a thoroughly dependable source.

AN ARTICLE WORTH READING.

The discussion on pages 3 and 4 under the caption, "Candid Declarations," by Rev. S. A. Nebiett, of Matanzas, Cuba, one of the foremost missionaries of our Church, is well worth reading. It touches upon the warfare which is being made against denominationalism in our mission fields (a matter to which we have referred several times in the Advocate), and shows how the great branches of the Christian Church, in spite of their splendid achievements and noble history, are being arraigned by these apostles of organic denominational union. It looked at one time as if our Church and its promising institutions in Cuba would be enguifed in this movement; but the brave and determined stand of our missionaries there seems to have averted this result for the present.

A REPLY FROM MR. ELEAZER IN HAND.

We have in hand a reply to our editorial on "The Nashville Revolutionary Propaganda," which appeared in the Advocate of September 13, from the pen of Mr. R. B. Eleazer, Editor of The Missionary Voice, which we will publish next week. The Editor was out of the city from Thursday night of last week until Monday, urgent personal matters having called him to Central Mississippi; but for this fact we might possibly have been able to print Brother Eleazer's rejoinder (which arrived in our absence) in this issue of our paper.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"Our work is moving along splendidly." So writes Rev. J. W. Raper, of Houston, Miss. Brother Raper is serving a good people.

Brother R. C. England, of Mantec, Miss., in renewing his subscription, takes time to write a few lines commendatory of the Advocate. We thank him for his kindly words.

Rev. R. P. Nehlett, our stirring pastor at Como, Miss., who was quite unwell physically in the midsummer, reports that he has now fully recovered, and that he is very busy in his "loved employ." He will, of course, carry a good report to Conference.

Rev. S. D. Howard, our faithful pastor at Winnsboro, La., sends us some subscriptions from his field, and adds the following note: "Things are progressing well with us." It is not unusual for the work to go forward where Brother Howard labors.

A correspondent informs us of the arrival in the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Armistead, at Sidon, Miss., of a fine baby girl. We extend congratulations to the happy parents, and pray that the Heavenly Father may watch over and bless the little one.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, was in New Orleans last Monday and looked in on us at the Advocate office. He had spent the preceding Sabbath at Crowley and Rayne. Brother Vaughan spoke encouragingly of the important work committed to his hands.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, the capable presiding elder of the Durant (Miss.) District, spent last Sunday at Cruger and Tchula. Brother Mitchell speaks hopefully of the work in the territory under his supervision. He expects the reports of the pastors at the Annual Conference to be considerably in excess of those of last year.

We have received from Dr. I. L. Peebles, of Meridian, Miss., an interesting leaflet, entitled "Some Reasons Why We Should Tithe, or Pay Not Less Than The Tenth of What We Make or Raise." It is a strong presentation of the cause of tithing, prepared for circulation among our Methodist people. These leaflets may be had at $1.20 per thousand.

Rev. J. C. Price, of Belcher, La., thinks that he will have a good winding up of the year's work. His letter brought us two subscriptions to the Advocate.

Rev. C. E. Downer reports an interesting meeting in progress at Eastabuchie, Miss., in which he is being assisted by Rev. W. M. Williams, of Collins, Miss.

At the late session of the Missouri Conference, Bishop Hendrix appointed Dr. O. E. Brown, formerly a professor in Vanderbilt University, Religious Work Director in the Army Y. M. C. A.

Rev. Martin Hebert, writing from New Iberia, La., sends us 2 subscriptions, for which he has our thanks. In his communication he says: "The French mission work is moving on hopefully."

The closing session of the New Orleans District Epworth League Conference was held last Sunday at 3 o'clock p.m. The conference was well attended, and the sessions were interesting and profitable.

Rev. C. H. Strait, our faithful pastor at Johns, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for 12 subscriptions, 10 of them being new. We highly appreciate this good service in behalf of the Conference organ.

Mrs. Jessie K. Hamblin, of Hattiesburg, Miss., in renewing her subscription, says: "I have been a subscriber to the Advocate for about 25 years, and I hope to be able to take it as long as I live. I appreciate and enjoy reading every issue."

Prof. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, thus reports concerning the beginning of the new session at Millsaps: "We have had a most encouraging opening. We have nearly as many students as we had at this time last year. They are a splendid body of young men."

Brother Robbie L. Woods calls our attention to the fact that in his communication to the Advocate in our issue of September 6 he was represented as referring to the 20th Chapter of Ecclesiastes, when it should have been the 12th chapter. We gladly make this correction.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., and Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of McComb, Miss., were in New Orleans last week. The former ran down to the Crescent City on business, and the latter was en route to Gulfport, where he had an engagement. We were glad to see these brethren.

There was an error in the list of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb's fourth round of appointments as they appeared in a recent number of the Advocate. The Houston Circuit quarterly conference will be held at Rhodes Chapel, Oct. 14 and 15, and that of the Nettleton Circuit at New Chapel, Oct. 28 and 29.

Brother J. F. Humphrey, of Varnado, La., was in New Orleans last Saturday and called at the Advocate office; but the Editor, much to his regret, was out of the city and missed seeing him. Brother Humphrey left a message in which he expressed agreement with us on the subject of Methodist unification.

Rev. Olin Ray, our pastor at Tunica, Miss., writes us as follows: "The work of the Kingdom is making progress in the Greenville District under the leadership of our efficient presiding elder, Rev. V. C. Curtis. Our work at Tunica is making encouraging headway, and we hope to have a good report at Conference."

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, writes as follows: "Rev. J. D. Wroten, of Benoit, Miss., has sent me a check to cover his educational assessment. He is the third man in the Greenville District to do this." Let the good work go on!

We take the following from the St. Louis Christian Advocate of September 19: "Rev. I. D. Borders, who has been pastor of Melrose Church, Kansas City, for the past two years, asked for a location at the recent session of the Southwest Missouri Conference, having volunteered for duty in the United States Army."

Rev. L. E. Alford, of Shubuta, Miss., was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last Tuesday. He had come to the city with Sister Alford, his wife, who will undergo an operation at the Presbyterian Hospital to-morrow (Wednesday). Let her and her anxious loved ones be remembered at the throne of grace.

A note from Mrs. Connie Thames Lloyd, of Jackson, Miss., states that Rev. S. M. Thames, her father, is in better health than he has been at any time this year, but that he is now by no means strong." May Heaven's richest blessings be showered upon this worthy veteran, and may he continue to gain in physical strength!

Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor of our First Church at Baton Rouge, says: "The Louisiana State University opened on Wednesday, September 19, and we had last Sunday morning one of the largest congregations that I have ever preached to here. The church was crowded. The Sunday school attendance was large and the offering good."

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate, sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. M. Guinn, Brooksville, Miss., 4; Rev. J. W. Dorman, Water Valley, Miss., 3; Mrs. Laura Lum, Hankinson, Miss., 3; Rev. S. S. Holladay, Zwolle, La., 4.

Rev. J. A. Poe, of Sidon, Miss., in a business letter to our office, thus refers to his work: "We are now in the midst of a revival meeting at Cruger, and Rev. W. O. Wagoner is doing some fine preaching. We expect to finish our fourth year in this charge within the next sixty days. This is an excellent people, and we have had four very pleasant years among them."

Rev. Leland Clegg says: "We began our meeting at Hillsboro on Sept. 16, with the pastor doing the preaching. Rev. M. L. White came to us on Monday and rendered valuable assistance. The meeting was said to be the greatest held at that place in years. There were 7 accessions to the Church and we baptized 6 infants. The preaching was doctrinal and earnest. Brother White is fine help in a revival."

On Wednesday, September 19, Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College, wired us as follows: "We have 80 young ladies in Margaret Hall; 41 in Cooper Hall, and 19 in Whitworth Hall. Others coming." This made on the opening day 140 students. We congratulate Dr. Cooper upon this fine beginning. It was a matter of regret to us that his telegram reached us after our last issue was practically off the press.

Mrs. John G. Rowland, who was a member of the Rayne Memorial Church of this city, and who was well known in Methodist circles in New Orleans, died at noon last Sunday, after a long illness. She is survived by her husband and three daughters—Mrs. J. B. Parker and Mrs. A. B. Gilmore of this city, and Mrs. J. B. Foster of Shreveport, and by two sons—Mr. Charles P. Rowland of Dallas, Texas, and Mr. Taylor Rowland of New Orleans. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

We are in receipt of a folder from Rev. James W. Rogers, our pastor at Beggs, Oklahoma, which announces the Second Annual Chautauqua that he has arranged for the people of that community. Among the speakers announced for evening hours are Rev. J. H. Ball, presiding elder of the Tulsa District; Rev. J. W. Rogers; Dr. N. L. Linebaugh, of Vinita, Okla.; Rev. H. P. Clarke, of Tigert Memorial Church of Tulsa; Rev. J. R. Abernathy, of Ocmulgee; Dr. L. S. Barton, of Boston Avenue Church, Tulsa, and Dr. A. E. Bonnel.

Rev. J. D. Wroten, our gifted young pastor at Benoit, Miss., writes: "I am glad to report that everything is moving along well in the Benoit and Beulah charge. Our assessment for the Conference claims this year was 10 per cent larger than that of last year; but our people, instead of complaining about the raise, when called upon paid these collections in full, the checks having already been forwarded for the various causes. I think it is just for it to be made known through the Advocate that this good people have responded so nobly to these calls."

We take the following from a letter received on Sept. 22 from Dr. F. N. Parker, Professor of Systematic Theology in Emory University: "Our work has opened well, though numbers of men have been kept away by war conditions. We are short of the number of students entering last year at this time, but not much." We are gratified to have this encouraging news from Emory.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Pleasant Hill, La., sends us two subscriptions to the Advocate, and in his business letter appends the following note: "Our third quarterly conference was an occasion of much interest. It was well attended, and the exercises were quite profitable. The congregations were large and our splendid presiding elder delivered some strong, helpful, and inspiring sermons."

EDITORIAL JOTTINGS.

Let us get rid of the expression, "Female College." A far better designation is "College for Young Women" or "Woman's College." An institution of learning is neither male nor female.

Bishop Tigert, who had some rank as a thinker and scholar, had a high opinion of Watson's "Theological Institutes." He refers to that work in his "Constitutional History of American Methodism" as "that masterly body of divinity."

"Christianity and the Man of To-day" is the name of one of the books recently issued by our Publishing House. It is from the pen of Rev. George Stanley Frazer, of Washington, Ga., and is a suggestive and strikingly well written volume. The price is $1, net.

Poets, dreamers, and doctrinaires are not the types of men to formulate a constitution for either a State or a Church. Men of analytical and constructive minds are needed for that kind of a task. Such a work is not one to be trifled with in an emotional or sentimental manner. It calls for sober, clear thinking, not for the singing of songs and handshakings.

A vote of the newspapers of the State in 1902 for the first ten Mississippians whose portraits should be placed in the Mississippi Hall of Fame gave (in the order named) the following results: Jefferson Davis, L. Q. C. Lamar, E. C. Walthall, J. Z. George, S. S. Prentiss, John M. Stone, George Poindexter, William L. Sharkey, Henry S. Foote, J. L. Power. That was, indeed, a splendid galaxy.

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

Lemons Whiten and Beautify the Skin! Make Cheap Lotion

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it. Make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to whiten; soften, freshen, and bring out the hidden roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful for rough, red hands.

Your druggist will sell three ounces of archard white at little cost, and any grocer will supply the lemons.

One of the most beloved members of the Queensborough Methodist Church passed to the Church triumphant on the evening of September 11, 1917. J. W. HATCHER was born in Crawford County, Georgia. He was married twice, each time to a Miss Causey. To the first union were born two sons and four daughters. Three of the children are now living, viz.: Lemon J. Hatcher, Mrs. Patia Ethridge, and Mrs. Bertha White. His second wife did not live more than a year after their marriage. Brother Hatcher was converted about twenty-five years ago and joined the Methodist Church. He left a record of devotion and faithfulness. He was consistent, loved and trusted by his neighbors and friends. A son-in-law related to him for twenty-seven years called him his best friend. He seemed to have a premonition of his death. He had told a few friends that he would not live long. He was sick only a few days. He knew whom he trusted. He was laid to rest in the Jewella Cemetery, Shreveport, La., to await the resurrection of the just. Every one had a good word for Brother Hatcher. May these words he his: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

H. W. LEDBETTER, Pastor.

CONDITIONS IN A NAVY CAMP.

Dear Editor: Thinking that possibiy some of the folks at home would like to know of the Christian influences of the Navy and about some of the work of the Y. M. C. A. in this field, I am prompted to write this letter.

When I enlisted in the Navy, I thought I was going to a place where there would be but few, if any, Christian influences—a place where I would have to fight my own battle alone if I was going to iead a Christian life. Now after a few days' experience, including one Sunday, I am going to give you my opinion. I am writing from the detention camp, where all enlisted men have to go for a few weeks hefore going into their actual training. While in this camp we have no shore leave, nor can we ieave the camp at ali. We are here with nothing to do but drill, do guard and mess hall duty, wash our ciothes, eat, and sieep. These days are the hardest days of the Navy life. But thanks to the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A., things are not as had as they might he. There is a large building in the camp which is accessihle to all men when off duty. In this building are found papers and magazines of a good, wholesome nature. These can be used in the building or taken to the tents. Writing material is furnished free. Bibles, Testaments and Gospeis are distributed free of cost. Good, clean games are played whenever any one wants to play them. Moving pictures of the right sort are shown ahout three times a week. A Navy debating ieague has heen organized, and there are several classes that meet during the week, including classes in French, History, Mathematics, and Bible. There are three Bible classes, I think. There is also a weekiy lyceum number to he put in soon. On Saturday afternoons and evenings all the meh are urged to write to their mothers, and to show the amount of writing done there are over 1200 enveiopes used in this one buiiding alone—and it only accommodates ahout half the men on the island. The entire number is ahout 4000.

Yesterday, Sunday, Septemher 2, was the hest day of all. There was a Bible ciass in the morning, taught by one of the enlisted men that is detailed in the Y. M. C. A. At 10 o'clock an address was delivered by Mr. Titus, Camp Secretary at Camp Fremont. This address was heard hy many, and much good was accompiished hy it. The subject was, "Jesus Christ, the Great Magnet." The effects of this speech are to be seen upon the drill ground this morning.

At 6:30 p.m., Sunday, there was held what was intended to be a young people's meeting. It turned out to be an old fashioned Methodist class meeting. There were 41 men present, between the ages of 18 and 25. But from that number there were about thirty testimonies from men of all classes, from the weil educated to those that had no education at ali. Some of these men had not been to church hefore that morning in four or five years, and among these were some of the ones who gave the hest testimonies and registered themselves as standing for the good and clean things and the things of Christ. It did my soul good to hear men speaking for the first time in a religious meeting and saying that they had definitely decided for Christ, some of them just that day, and others since being in the camp. Movements like this should he encouraged, and for this reason I am writing this, so that the people back at home can know and appreciate the work of the Y. M. C. A., and, doing this, may help it in a financial way. This help is needed, and no greater good can be done anywhere than right here.

Hoping that this may cheer some mother at home and thereby do some good for the cause, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
I. H. SELLS,
of Mississippi.

The Cause of Gray Hair.

Hair grows gray by reason of the same cause which produces dwarfed, yellow stalks of corn instead of strong, dark green growthy stalks—lack of nutrition. Hair, like the crops of the field, must be fed, either naturally from the scalp as the stalk of corn is fed from the soil, or artificial hair food may be applied as fertilizer is applied to the soil to enrich it. Unless your hair is supplied with natural oil—the food on which it suhsists—you may expect it to cease its flourishing and lose its natural luster, color and beauty. The hair must have food on which to live. Don't neglect it or it will lose its luster, become stiff and coarse and eventually gray. Begin now and prevent the appearance of age hy using a natural hair oil, "La Creole." It will keep the hair soft, fluffy and heautiful. Ask your dealer and if he can't supply you send $1.00 to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn., for a trial bottle.

ITEMS FROM THE JACKSON DISTRICT.

It has been several months since a report from the Jackson District has been made, but the preachers and church workers have not been idle. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Morse, with his heart fully in the work, has been bringing cheer and inspiration to all the pastors and churches. There are no dull moments during the session of a quarterly conference over which he presides.

Rev. M. F. Adams at Flora is gifted in looking on the bright side of things. His charge is in a section of the State that has suffered more than any other from the dry summer, and as a consequence crops are short. But Adams says prospects are bright as usual, and finances are in a hopeful condition. Good meetings have been held over the charge, resulting in about 15 additions to the Church. The pastor is the prime mover in the organization of a Boy Scout Troop at Flora, and he is scoutmaster. Fine work is being done with the boys in this movement.

Flora entertained recently the District Sunday School Institute, the program of which was rich with good things for the Sunday school worker, and the Flora Sunday school took on new life as a result.

Let me say that the pastors and Sunday school workers of the district who failed to attend that Institute through negligence did their work and schools an injury. Our leaders are furnishing us the suggestions and instructions to help improve our Sunday schools, and if we do not take advantage of what they offer, we are the losers.

Rev. A. S. Oliver on the Eden charge is happy in his work. He impressed his people with his worth last year, and they advanced his salary $250 this year. Dan Kelly assisted him in a meeting at Carter that Oliver considers one of the best he has ever been in. Twenty accessions resulted and a Sunday school and prayer meeting were started.

Splendid improvements have been made in church property on this charge. The church at Coxbury has been ceiled and seated. The parsonage has been well screened throughout, including both front and back porches. Up-to-date water fixtures, including the bathroom, have been put in. Under the leadership of this consecrated and enterprising pastor, Eden is becoming one of the most desirable appointments in the district.

Rev. W. H. Lane at Rankin Street is doing the steady work of a faithful pastor. His Sunday school is crowded for room and is in great need of larger and better equipment. A Junior League has recently been organized.

All departments of the church are working smoothly and successfully and are interested in the church making a full report at Conference. The Rankin Street Sunday school recently presented their pastor with a fine Oxford Bible.

Rev. F. L. Applewhite reports three good meetings held on his (the Sharon) charge, in which he was assisted by Revs. B. F. Lewis and W. H. Saunders. His people, thoughtful of the high cost of living and its severe drain on the preacher's pocketbook, frequently give "poundings" at the parsonage which are a great assistance to the preacher's living expenses.

The Harrisville charge is served by Rev. C. H. Herring. He reports all meetings held with good results. There were 22 accessions to the Church, and an Epworth League was organized. In most of these meetings the pastor did the preaching himself.

Gratifying progress is being made on the Brandon and Pelahatchie charge under the leadership of Rev. R. P. Fikes. A good revival was held at Pelahatchie, resulting in 17 additions to the Church. Our church at this point was dedicated on September 2 by Bishop Murrah, who preached one of his strong sermons to the delight and edification of the people.

Our pastor at Bolton, Rev. W. J. Dawson, has been pretty active as a revivalist this year. Many of the brethren have called upon him for assistance, and Dawson has held good meetings for them, too. He reports one meeting held on his own charge, resulting in 2 accessions and 5 infants being baptized.

Rev. W. H. Huntley brings cheering news from Yazoo City. In his helpmeet, Sister Huntley, he has an assistant that is making her life's influence felt for good in both army and church service. She is now reorganizing the junior department of the Sunday school on an up-to-date basis. Some headway has been made in liquidating an old church debt at this point, with bright prospects of soon having it all wiped out.

Rev. J. B. King and family at Florence have endured many afflictions this year. But all are well again and King reports all meetings held and the membership roll shows 29 added this year.

The Fannin charge under the leadership of Rev. G. G. Yeager is making progress. The pastor, with one exception, held his own meetings with good results and now feels confident that he will go to Conference with a full report.

Canton Methodism, under the leadership of Rev. B. F. Lewis, is making interesting and progressive history. No church in the Conference is organized more thoroughly for work along all lines. Few men in the connection know the Sunday school work of the church better than Lewis, and wherever he is stationed you may expect to find a model Sunday school. Plans have already been made to observe promotion day in a way to enlarge and perfect the Sunday school more than ever.

One feature of the Christian life of Canton that the Methodist pastor and people have shared in is union Sunday evening services held in the Courthouse square. From every standpoint these services have been a blessing to the churches and people participating. As many as 700 have attended an evening service, and the attendance has averaged between 600 and 500. ISOM

The Silver Tongued Orator of Minnesota, Charles A. Towne, Former United States Senator

Late Member of Congress from New York—Nominated for Vice-President

Recommends Nuxated Iron to All Who Feel the Need of Renewed Energy

Says That Henceforth He Shall Not Be Without It

Probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron—Over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone, to say nothing of the vast number who are using it in France, England, South America and other countries. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress; physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monseigneur Nannini, a prominent Catholic Clergyman, recommends it to all members of the Catholic Church. Former Health Commissioner, Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician; Dr. N. H. Hornstiue, for ten years connected with the Department of Public Health and Charities of Philadelphia, says the administration of Nuxated Iron in a number of stubborn cases where other tonics had utterly failed, only served to convince him absolutely of its remarkable and unusual power; Former First Assistant Post Master General of the United States, C. P. Grandfield, strongly endorses and recommends it to the tens of thousands of civil service employees who know his name and signature. Sarah Bernhardt—"the Divine Sarah," the world's most noted actress, has ordered a large quantity sent to the French soldiers to help give them strength, power and endurance.

Former United States Senator Wm. E. Mason says the results he obtained from its use in his own case were so beneficial that he feels it should be made known to every nervous, run-down man, woman and child. The famous "Cyclone" Davis, Member of the 64th United States Congress, says the effect of Nuxated Iron on him was almost magical, that after taking it, nothing seemed to tire him out no matter how strenuous it might be. Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, says he has never before recommended any remedy to the public, but that in the case of Nuxated Iron he would feel he were remiss in his duty not to mention it. Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says that in his recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women he has strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their weak, run-down, nervous, haggard-looking patients.

Ty Cobb, the greatest baseball batter of all time, took it to help give him renewed energy and great staying power. No matter what anybody says, you could not at this day, get such prominent men to endorse a remedy that has no value — doctors, lawyers, politicians, athletes—a great array.

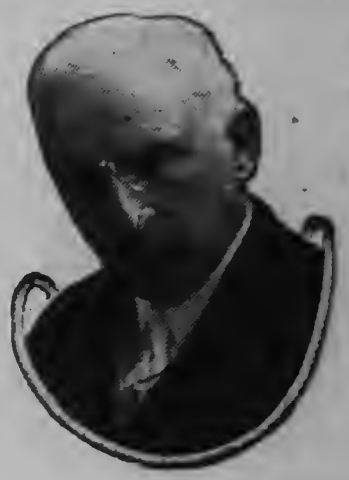
Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician who has studied both in this country and great European Medical Institutions, said: "Nuxated Iron is a wonderful remedy. Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty, and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the bouyancy of youth. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and run-down instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants, and alcoholic beverages, I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases, and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real, true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in iron in the blood. Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it."

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Former United States Senator Towne with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

What Senator Towne Says:

"As a member of Congress from New York, as a member of Congress and Senator from Minnesota, as participant in political campaigns and candidate for Vice-President, my nervous energy and reserve force were tremendously drawn upon. That I survived these trials and come into advanced middle life with the elasticity and strength of a boy is unquestionably due to the rigorous attention I have paid to the proper care of my body. Recently I have been taking Nuxated Iron and have found it of the greatest benefit as a tonic and regulative. Henceforth I shall not be without it. I am in a position to testify for the advantage of others, to the remarkable and immediate helpfulness of this remedy, and I unhesitatingly recommend Nuxated Iron to all who feel the need of renewed energy and the regularity of bodily functions.



Chas. A. Towne

MINNESOTA'S MAN OF MARK

Former United States Sentator, Charles A. Towne, graduated from the University of Michigan, twice elected member of the United States Congress, served in the United States Senate, nominated for Vice-President, takes Nuxated Iron; now recommends it to all who feel the need of renewed energy.

SATURDAY NIGHT NO LONGER FEARED; CALOTABS A JOY

Delightful Liver-Cleansing Without the Slightest Unpleasantness or Danger—New Calomel Tablet a Wonder.

Everybody is looking better, feeling better and doing better since Calotabs, the de-nauseated calomel tablet, has come into general use. For biliousness, constipation and indigestion the new calomel tablet is a wonder—not the slightest unpleasantness, yet all of the liver-cleansing virtues of the old-style calomel.

Calotabs is the easiest and most pleasant of all medicines to take. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, and a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no nausea or unpleasantness. You wake up in the morning feeling fine and with a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original packages, sealed, never in bulk. Price thirty-five cents for twenty doses. So good and sure that your druggist is authorized to refund the price if you are not thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—Adv

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Do Church People Pray?

An interesting answer to this question is found in a letter from a Chicago, Ill., publisher of a book of prayers. He spent $56.00 advertising his book of prayers in a list of religious publications, running a one-inch advertisement only two times. The orders came in in large quantities, and before the advertising had spent itself he was able to report that while orders were still coming in, he had already sold over 1700 books of prayers.

The fact that a book of prayers is in great demand among church people seems to indicate that they have a very intense interest in learning how to pray. It also shows that the church paper is closely read by some mighty good people, who have great confidence in its advertising columns, as well as in its reading columns.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA AND PEPTIRON PILLS

Conditions that are both scrofulous and anemic are very common. Many persons whose faces are "broken out," cheeks are pale, and nerves are weak, suffer from them.

There is an effective, economical remedy in the combination of Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills, one taken before eating, the other after.

In these medicines taken in this way the best substances for the blood and nerves are brought together.

Sunday School

GROUPINGS AND NOMENCLATURE.

The General Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the annual meeting, July, 1917, adopted the following departmental groupings and names:

One, two, and three years—Cradle Roll.

Four and five years—Beginners'.

Six, seven, and eight years—Primary.

Nine, ten, and eleven years—Junior.

Twelve, thirteen, and fourteen years—Intermediate.

Fifteen, sixteen, and seventeen years—Senior.

Eighteen to twenty-three years—Young People's.

Twenty-four years and over—Adult.

Note 1. It is understood that these groupings shall in all cases be considered flexible, thus permitting the adjustment of departmental organization to local needs.

Note 2. The groupings of any particular pupil, however, is not to be determined primarily by age. His week day social relations and his mental and religious development are exceedingly important factors.

Note 3. It should be clearly understood that in the application of these principles to the local school the relative efficiency of the organization of the Junior and Intermediate Departments must be taken into account in placing the twelve-year-old pupil.

Note 4. The upper age limit of the Young People's Department shall not be understood to prevent the promotion into the Adult Department of those young people who, before passing twenty-four, shall have established homes of their own or otherwise have taken up the responsibilities and interests of adulthood.

Note 5. It is understood that in the administration of the Wesley Bible Class Department, young people and adults shall be grouped and Adult Certificates of Registration issued.

A HEALING SPRING AT YOUR DOOR.

Here is a very unusual and peculiar offer—one that you rarely meet with. It evidences the greatest faith on the part of its maker and inspires confidence. It is made by an earnest and enthusiastic man who not only thinks but knows from personal experience that he is right. He proposes to give you the equivalent of a three weeks' visit to a Mineral Spring of most remarkable restorative powers and make no charge if you are not benefited. His offer has been accepted by over a hundred thousand sufferers in all parts of the United States and his records show that only two in a hundred, on the average, report no benefit.

If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, kidney, bladder or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other condition caused by impure blood, take Mr. Shivar at his word and sign and mail the following letter:

Shivar Spring,

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Try this yourself then pass it along to others. It works!

Ouch! ? ! ? ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops soreness at once, and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels.—Adv.

DISTRICT MEETINGS IN MISSISSIPPI.

If you are ever invited to McComb, do not fail to go. It was our privilege to attend the Brookhaven district meeting there. To have as hostess our Mrs. Dunn and to be with Mrs. Decell was in itself a treat, but Mrs. Alford and her daughter, Mrs. Ratliff and her son and every woman and girl seemed eager to show every courtesy possible to every delegate present.

The secretary, Miss Kearney, had a splendid program. Not before have we heard mission study so enthusiastically stressed, proving that the women of this district are wise and farseeing. The McComb auxiliary demonstrated their estimate of the value of mission study and stewardship by a splendid display of posters drawn by their artist. Mesdames Galloway and Decell have done great things for the Young People there. Miss Kate Drake presented the Junior work. Surely her rich store of missionary information, her zeal, consecration and sympathetic understanding of child life speaks great things for our future leaders.

We wonder if it is possible that any other Conference is so blessed with a corresponding secretary with head, heart and ready book so full of the work as ours? We think not.

Miss Annie Alford, who has finished her course at Scarritt, making a splendid record, told us of her daily, her studies and work, and awakened in us anew the great desire to tell every girl who has a yearning to really count for something, whether as home or foreign missionary, or as a Sunday school teacher, or keeper of the home, to have their attention turned to this great school that trains for efficiency in our King's service.

Last, but not least, came the young people's work, and although the planned program could not be used, we trust many delegates resolved as did the one from Wesson, to have a young people's missionary society.

Next we went to Wiggins. A great surprise awaited us at the door of the church, for we were ushered into a room with its walls lined with garments beautifully made by the Y. P. M. S. for the Wesley Houses. What happy little hearts will beat under these garments! May the sweet alabaster of this deed of love to the little ones of many nations constrain them to love our Savior, too.

We wish every Y. P. M. S. could meet the Wiggins young people and could have enjoyed with us their presentation of the program we had arranged for them. They were specially privileged in having as their leader Miss Mae Sells, who at this writing has gone on for her second year at Scarritt. The Wiggins auxiliary is going to be a power for they "put first things first." They have a splendid study class, and a well organized Y. P. M. S. and rally to their pastor, Brother Sells.

Mrs. Johnson, our president, came up the first evening, and talked of the work in our seven fields, making it so interesting and comprehensive. There we were presented to none other than our Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, of Nashville. If all of us "careless women" had been there as she talked from the thirty-second chapter of Isaiah we would have "trembled," repented and gone to work in earnest. When she told of what she had planted by many waters with her dime, our hearts beat with some joy, for that despised little dime, we had for years been speeding on its way, had also planted seed for us—from Mexico to China. Would that more had been invested thus!

The Hattiesburg District was wise when it came to Magee, Simpson County, for its meeting. Aside from being in a town that has received and is keeping the prize for being the cleanest town of its class in the State, we were entertained by the people who made this possible and it does not need to be said that none more progressive can be found. A splendid program, a large number of delegates, the presence at each service of the presiding elder, the pastor and our Conference Secretary, as well as a large delegation of Y. P. who took part in our young people's rally made this meeting ideal. The Magee Y. P. in the part assigned them have special mention.

A most enjoyable feature of the many courtesies shown us was an automobile trip to the State Tubercular Hospital, when every car was loaded with lunch baskets, freezers or watermelons and delegates, ready for lunch on the lawn as we enjoyed the ozone that shall prove life-giving to the patients who shall soon be coming to this new institution.

Mrs. H. O. MIDDLETON,
First Vice President.

MORPHIA TRADE WITH CHINA.

Though the opium trade with China has come to an end, Great Britain, according to a statement by Rev. G. S. Muir in "Medical Missions at Home and Ahroad," is supplying China with large quantities of morphia, which may be popularly described as concentrated opium. It is about ten times as effective or destructive, and being scentless and bulkless, lends itself to illicit traffic. Two firms in Edinburgh and one in London are the sole makers in Britain. They sell it to, or export it to the order of, middlemen, the destination being chiefly Japan, whence it is smuggled into China. A proportion of the drug is no doubt used for medicine, and as such is an untold blessing. But the bulk is intended for the Chinese market, and is known by all concerned to be used for vicious purposes there. It is a lucrative business. In 1915 nearly six tons were shipped to Japan—two-thirds of the total export. The average dose for a subcutaneous injection is a quarter of a grain, but taking the average annual exportation and allowing half a grain per injection, enough has been provided to drug daily 500,000 persons. Moreover, most of the morphia sent to China in recent years has gone by parcel post via Siberia, and is not tabulated by the customs authorities, or, at least, not divulged. It is, therefore, safe to say that the amount supplied from Britain annually is sufficient to demoralize a million of Chinese.—Missionary Review of the World.

"SONS OF ITALY," HOME MISSION STUDY BOOK.

To him who reads this book with open mind the Italian immigrant will never be a "Dago" again, but a brother-man in dire need of love and sympathy. Ignorant of our language and customs, exploited by landlords and labor agents, herded and driven by heartless bosses, shown less humanity than the beasts they drive and less care than the tools they use, the Italians in America are made to live before us by one of their number who knows. It is not a pleasant picture, but one we need to see, and of absorbing interest withal.

The writer, Prof. Antonio Mangano, Director of the Italian Department of Colgate Theological Seminary, is himself an Italian immigrant who has become an American Christian citizen of the most worthy type. Having traveled the road himself, in the meantime keeping in intimate touch with the life and struggles of thousands of his countrymen in America, there is perhaps no other man so well fitted to write and interpret the story in all its aspects.

The writer has a rare faculty for clothing bare facts with the flesh and blood of human personality. The reader has not gone six lines into the book till his heart is gripped by the story of Tommaso, the immigrant boy, landing friendless and alone at Ellis Island. Hard upon this follows the story of Savelli, the Italian section hand, and then that of Filomena, the factory girl, each drawn from life and illustrating vividly some vital phase of the problem.

The book is very comprehensive, the chapter headings indicating its range: "Italian Colonies in America," "Italian Life in Italy," "Religious Backgrounds," "The Italian as a Citizen," "Assimilating the Italian," "Italian Protestant Churches," "The Italian's Contribution to the America of To-Morrow."—Missionary Voice.

HUSBAND OBJECTS TO OPERATION

Wife Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Des Moines, Iowa.—"Four years ago I was very sick and my life was nearly spent. The doctors stated that I would never get well without an operation and that without it I would not live one year. My husband objected to any operation and got me some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and commenced to get better and am now well, am stout and able to do my own housework. I can recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who is sick and run down as a wonderful strength and health restorer. My husband says I would have been in my grave ere this if it had not been for your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. BLANCHE JEFFERSON, 703 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.

Before submitting to a surgical operation it is wise to try to build up the female system and cure its derangements with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it has saved many women from surgical operations.

Sold for 47 years.; For Malaria, Chills and Fever. Also a Fine General Strengthening Tonic. 50c and $1.00 at Drug Stores

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES.

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength) and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Dear Brother Meek: I have been thinking for some time that I would give you an account of my work. My first meeting was at Wesley Chapel with Brother Lastie Hoffpauir as my helper. We were hindered a good deal, but I think that much good was accomplished. We had two accessions. My next meeting was at Long Straw, with Brother Smith from the Simsboro charge to help me. The meeting grew in interest and in attendance, and if it had continued longer I believe that we would have had a much larger ingathering. I received two fine boys into the Church. My next meeting was at New Prospect, with Brother Jordan to assist me. I received 6 members there. My last meeting was at Vienna, with Brother Smith to assist me again. The interest was intense, and the meeting produced a profound impression on the community, which will abide for many days. I received 10 members here, making 20 members as a result of the meetings, and I think that I will get some others. My experience this summer has confirmed me in the conviction that we, especially those of us on the country circuits, do not have enough time to reap what we might if we could stay and labor longer in our protracted meetings. I am coming to the close of my fourth year on the Elmore Circuit. I believe that we are in love and charity among ourselves. I have many precious friends here. The memory of their love and friendship will remain with me while life shall last. I will soon be packing up and arranging my business so as to be ready to go at 24 hours' notice.—W. E. Akin, P. C.

Lintonia Charge, Miss. Conf.

Dear Brother Meek: Beginning July 1 and closing August 5, we conducted revival services at the four appointments of the Lintonia charge, viz., Bethany, Tranquil, Anding, and Lake City. In these meetings we were ably assisted by the following brethren of the Conference, A. S. Oliver, J. F. Campbell, and J. W. Chisholm. Much might be said in praise of these young men; but suffice it to say they preached the Word faithfully. Bethany is a modest chapel situated in a beautiful grove of native oak, six miles east of Yazoo City. Services were held from July 1 to 8, Rev. A. S. Oliver assisting. One was received on profession of faith and baptism. Many were deeply impressed and gave evidence of much interest in their spiritual welfare..... From July 8 to July 15 services were held at Tranquil City, twelve miles east of Yazoo City. Rev. J. F. Campbell was our helper. One member was received by certificate. The ladies reorganized their Missionary Society, and twelve ladies joined the organization.....Fifteen miles south of Yazoo City, on the Y. & M. V. railroad, in the quiet little town of Anding, our next meeting was held. Our church building here was destroyed by fire last fall, but through the courtesy of our Baptist brethren we held our meeting in their neat and comfortable house of worship. Our third quarterly meeting was held July 22-23. Our capable and faithful presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Morse, preached two excellent sermons. Rev. J. W. Chisholm reached us on Thursday, July 26. He gave us two sermons. Owing to sickness and other hindrances, we decided to close the meeting earlier than we had planned.

Lake City is ten miles north of Yazoo City, on Wolf Lake, a beautiful body of water about 16 miles long and from 200 to 300 yards wide, ranging from 5 to 15 feet deep, and noted for its splendid variety and quantity of fish. Our modest chapel is on the border of this beautiful lake, and adjoining it is a six-room, well finished, and, I am informed, at one time well furnished, parsonage. This splendid property had been given up as being no longer the property of the Church, but investigation of the title showed clearly that such was not the case, but that it belonged to the Lintonia charge.

On July 28 we began our meeting with Rev. J. W. Chisholm as helper. In plain, impressive and unmistakable terms he gave the old Methodist gospel with its tongue of fire. A number professed a saving faith in Christ, three of whom were baptized. The meeting closed on August 5 at 11 a. m. with a delightful communion service. By a favoring providence we hope soon to house our congregation at Anding, the old public school building and grounds having been deeded to us by the trustees of the consolidated Anding public school, in consideration of the loss of our church building while being used for school purposes last fall.

It is well located and is a fairly good-sized building, so constructed as to be capable of such improvements as can easily be made so as to make it fairly well adapted to use as a church. Fortunately the church had insurance of $600, which has been collected and which is now on deposit—this amount less $25 paid, or virtually given, to the Trustees of the Anding school as a token of appreciation of their generous recognition of the Church's loss. While being used for school purposes, we hope to be able with this sum to make all the improvements needed. To God be all the glory!

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

WONDERFUL EGG PRODUCER

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs" and you will be delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, Poultry Expert, 6406 Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million-dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request and the "More Eggs" costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day or ask Mr. Reefer for his free poultry book that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry. Adv.

GALLMAN, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: The work on the Gallman charge has been a source of great pleasure this year to us. Our good brother, Rev. J. L. Smith, left the work in a splendid condition when he rounded out his quadrennium last year. He paved the way for our reception in a very cordial manner, and everything has been well with us. The people of the charge will always remember his faithfulness while in the pastorate here at Gallman.

We have held a revival meeting at each appointment, except one; and I must confess that I was very agreeably surprised at the results. Rev. L. L. Roberts assisted us in three of these meetings, and 40 members were received into the Church as a part of the visible results during his campaign. Brother Roberts is a splendid preacher and is in fine favor with the people of Hazlehurst. We were assisted at the Gallman Church by Rev. T. J. Norsworthy. I had never been associated with Brother Norsworthy and had never heard him preach. I am glad to say, however, that his work was satisfactory in every particular; his preaching was forceful and earnest, and his sermons were well thought out and were accompanied by the spirit of evangelism, showing well the marks of due preparation from an intellectuaul viewpoint. We did not expect a large ingathering at this meeting—two or three children we thought might join—but when we had closed out the last service we found that we had received 31 into the Church. Brother Norsworthy stands by the Church and by the pastor, and any pastor needing the services of an evangelist will make no mistake in securing him. Up to this date we have received 38 into the Church, and 90 per cent of these were on profession of faith. We have one more meeting to hold, a few more appointments to meet, and we are expecting to gather in 100 for God and for the Church this year. The finances of the charge are coming along nicely. Our people seem to be loyal to the cause. Pray for us.—C. A. Schultz, P. C.

A HAPPY OCCASION.

Dear Mr. Editor: I want to write you an account of a very enjoyable occasion. On the 12th of September, fifty years ago, Brother Hinton (he is known as "Uncle Bud" to a great many friends—young and old) and his wife were married. So last Wednesday, his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, and friends, to the number of 104 persons, gathered to celebrate their golden wedding. It was a very pleasant and happy occasion. They came with happy hearts and glowing faces to congratulate our dear brother and sister, and to wish them God-speed, and many returns of their wedding anniversary. Old friends and neighbors were there, and new ones also, and, with pleasant conversation and happy reminiscences, the time was spent until the noon hour, when all were invited to a table 60 feet long, built out under the beautiful trees, and groaning under the weight of good things to eat. After dinner all enjoyed themselves for several hours, and we came away, some with moistened eyes, but happy hearts, thanking God for the two useful lives he has preserved to us. This is the fourth golden wedding lately celebrated in our neighborhood, not one of the couples living more than a mile and a half from the others, and three of the husbands are brothers.

Eight persons at the anniversary celebration on the 12th inst. were from 67 years of age up to 82, and in the membership of their home church, Wesley Chapel, there are 12 members ranging from 70 years old up to 85; and their characters are golden in their ripeness and beauty, and the fragrance of their reputation is as precious ointment poured forth. It has been one of the most appreciated privileges of my life to minister to this company of saints, and the memory of their acquaintance and fellowship will ever be one of the precious possessions of my life.

Fraternally,
W. E. AKIN.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

A Missionary Institute for the preachers of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, was held at Duncan, Miss., September 12 and 13, 1917, with a splendid attendance.

In the absence of Rev. W. M. Campbell, host of the institute, who was unable to be present on account of sickness, the faithful people of Duncan provided for every want of the preachers, and made their stay a most delightful one. Thanks to these good people!

The Program Committee had provided a splendid program, the discussions of which were most helpful. Great interest in the missionary activities of the Church throughout the district was manifested. Deep and soul-stirring sermons were preached by Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Greenville, and Rev. J. W. Ward of Rosedale.

The quarterly reports from the various charges showed a decided advance in all departments of Church work. Special note was made of the great increase in church membership over that of the previous year.

The meeting was a success in every way. Both the presiding elder and pastors were optimistic over the prospects for the year's work, believing that a splendid report from the entire district will be made at the coming session of the Annual Conference.

Why Take Risks?

Many cases of gangrene and blood poison result from the neglect of small sores, cuts, bruises, skin abrasions, etc. Numerous deaths occur from blood poison due to infection of slight wounds. Whether the wound is painful or not, treat it immediately with Gray's Ointment which, for ninety-six years, has been an indispensible family remedy. It allays pain, heals the wound and frees you from all danger of troublesome after-effects. It is invaluable for treating abrasions and eruptions of the skin, boils, ulcers, burns, bruises, cuts, sores, etc. Mrs. N. E. Coleman, Mt. THE EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE AT DALLAS.

By Rev. W. W. Drake, who by request represented the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

A significant and successful conference of representatives of the educational work of our Church west of the Mississippi River was held at Southern Methodist University on September 25. It is believed by those who participated in its sessions that it will be effective in bringing about more hearty co-operation and greater efficiency in our educational work in the Southwest. The gathering was initiated by the Board of Trustees of Southern Methodist University, in the passage of a resolution at its last session, inviting the representatives of all the Methodist male and co-educational colleges west of the Mississippi which confer the A. B. degree, and of the Conference Boards of Education in the same territory to meet with representatives of the University and plan for closer co-operation between all the institutions concerned. In response to this invitation sixty persons, representing nine colleges and the Conference Boards of Education in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, and Oklahoma, met in Dallas on the date appointed. In addition to distinguished educators like Dr. C. M. Bishop of Southwestern University, Dr. Paul Linn of Central College, Dr. Reynolds of Hendrix, Dr. Hyer of the University, and other college men and a number of Conference representatives, there were present Bishops Mouzon, Atkins and McCoy, Dr. Stonewall Anderson of the General Conference Board, and Dr. Bennett of the Department of Supply and Training. Louisiana was represented by a full delegation, including Dr. John L. Scales of Shreveport, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College; Dr. R. H. Wynn, President of Centenary; Dr. J. M. Henry, Chairman of the Louisiana Conference Board; and the Conference Secretary of Education. Dr. John P. Scott of Shreveport, a member of the Educational Commission, also looked in on the Conference.

The sympathy of the delegates was expressed for Bishop Mouzon, who was present in spite of having been up the entire preceding night, in attendance upon his daughter who was operated upon for acute appendicitis.

There were many expressions of the hospitality of Dallas and the University in the cordial reception extended to all the visitors, the array of private automobiles to convey all the delegates out to the University and the elaborate luncheon tendered by the Adolphus Hotel to the entire Conference—a mark of the appreciation in which matters connected with the University are held in the city. It is no wonder that Dallas is proud of the University, for it is from every point of view, commercial, social and moral, one of the biggest things in Dallas. Situated about five miles from the business center of the city, on a beautiful campus of one hundred and thirty-five acres which is secured to the control of the M. E. Church, South, and can never be alienated from the use for which it was designed, it holds a commanding position for the future of the city. In addition to the campus, the University owns five hundred acres of land adjoining, constituting a magnificent potential resource which, with the development of the surroundings, will greatly enrich it. Dallas Hall, the main University building, dominating the entire surroundings, is a magnificent building, pronounced by Bishop McConnell, of Denver, on a recent visit, to be the finest combination of practical utility and Greek beauty of which he has any knowledge. The woman's dormitory was recently inspected by a committee from the University of California, which was touring the country in search of suggestions for the building of a woman's dormitory for that institution. After thorough inspection, they decided to go no farther, as this building met all requirements.

One of the interesting features of the Conference was the attendance upon the chapel exercises, at which the large chapel was filled by the student body, and interesting addresses were delivered by Dr. Linn of Central College, Bishop McCoy, and Bishop Atkins. The enrollment at the University, though not quite complete, gave indication of reaching just about the same level as last year, despite the encroachments of the war. Fifty-six young men have enrolled in the School of Theology.

In opening the sessions of the Conference, Bishop Mouzon outlined the purposes for which it had been called, namely, getting together the educational forces and leaders of this section, co-operative effort to get Methodist young people into Methodist colleges, emphasizing the purpose of the University to co-operate with the colleges, not seeking in any way to secure students who should be in other colleges, planning together for an adequately trained ministry for the work of this generation, and the building up of all our institutions in the Southwest. Addresses were delivered by Judge Cockrell of Dallas, a member of the Educational Commission; President Hyer; Dr. Bradfield, editor of the Texas Advocate; Dr. Anderson, Dr. Bennett, and Bishop Atkins, besides a general discussion, participated in by various delegates.

Among the impressive notes of the Conference was the fact, generally recognized, that there is everywhere in this time of ferment a new interest in education, and particularly in Christian education; that there are plenty of students available to fill all of our institutions, and that, with three or four exceptions, all the educational institutions of our Church are in pressing need of financial re-enforcement, particularly in the form of endowment. Evidently our people, especially those who have been blessed of God with large and growing wealth, must learn to think in sufficiently large figures of this imperative and vital interest of the Church.

The deliberations of the body found concrete expression in several definite actions: A resolution introduced by Dr. Anderson recognized the necessity for a permanent endowment of half a million dollars for the School of Theology of the University, and petitioned the General Conference, pending the securing of such endowment, to levy an assessment on the church adequate to the maintenance of the School of Theology. It was distinctly understood that in making this request the Conference was simply dealing with the needs of the western section, and did not intend to discriminate against any needs of the Candler School of Theology. Another resolution called for General Conference action, recognizing the financial needs of all the institutions of the Church and creating such connectional agencies as will help effectively to secure the needed re-enforcement.

The Conference also passed a resolution defining the mutual relations of the Southern Methodist University and the colleges in its territory, urging the colleges to secure the attendance, as far as possible, of ministerial candidates after their graduation, at the School of Theology, and, on the other hand, stating the sense of the Conference that the University should not seek undergraduate students from the territory occupied by other colleges of the Church. This action was an endorsement of the position assumed by the University, pledging itself not to seek for students for its undergraduate classes who ought to be in other colleges, and will insure a relation of hearty co-operation between the University and the colleges of this section. The further statement was made by Bishop Mouzon that it is the policy of the University to turn students east of the Mississippi River toward Emory University.

By further resolution, a permanent organization of an educational conference for our colleges and Conferences west of the Mississippi was effected, the details to be worked out by a committee on organization, which was appointed.

In addition to the formal sessions, the luncheon on the roof garden of the Adolphus Annex furnished the opportunity for pleasant fellowship and enthusiasm for the work in which the body was engaged. During the luncheon brief ex tempore addresses were made by Dr. Linn, of Central College; Dr. Keen, the Dean of the Academic Department of S. M. U.; Dr. Dobbs, Dean of the School of Theology; Dr. Bennett, Dr. Reynolds, Dr. James Thomas of Arkansas, Dr. Morgan of Oklahoma, and Dr. Henry and Rev. W. W. Drake of Louisiana.

The Conference may be regarded as a step toward the mobilization of the educational forces of Southern Methodism for the conquest of the great, growing empire of the Southwest.

BISHOP HOSS SPEAKS.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have just read Mr. Fritts' "The Men Behind the Movement" in your issue of September 27, and I must say that it is a very remarkable document. If taken at its face value, it proves, if it proves anything, that the leaders in the so-called "Laymen's Movement" belong very largely to an oligarchical clique. But I charge boldly that it is not a fair representation of the facts in the case as viewed by all of the alleged signers. I do not believe that 136 laymen have intelligently, and with a full knowledge of the whole matter, lent theselves to the endorsement and circulation of a pamphlet which brings an array of charges of the most serious character

ADVERSITY HELPFUL.

"The tears we shed are not in vain:
Nor worthless is the heavy strife;
If, like the buried seed of grain,
They rise to renovated life.
It is through tears our spirits grow;
'Tis in the tempest souls expand,
If it but teaches us to go
To Him who holds it in His hand.
Oh, welcome, then, the stormy blast!
Oh, welcome, then, the ocean's roar!
Ye only drive more sure and fast
Our trembling bark to heaven's bright shore."

REFRESHMENT FOR CRITICS.

A certain man placed a fountain by the wayside and hung up a cup near to it by a little chain. He was told some time afterwards that a great art critic had found much fault with the fountain's design. "But," asked the man, "do many persons drink at it?" Then they told him that many poor people, men, women, and children, constantly slaked their thirst at the fountain. He smiled and answered that he was little troubled by the critic's observation, adding only that he hoped that on some sultry summer's day the critic himself might fill the cup and be refreshed. —Illustrated Notes.

MORE LIKE HIM.

All healthy Christians are steadily approximating to complete accord with the divine nature. They are growing up into their living Head, "from whom all the body fitly framed and knit together, through that which every joint supplieth, maketh increase in love." They speak the truth in love, and they love the truth. They find a message from God in each of the providential events, however small, of every day, and have so valid a sense of the actual personal presence of the Savior as to be able to talk over all things with him, obtaining power for the days and peace for the nights. Their spiritual life takes on ever larger and larger proportions, as their union with its Source grows closer.—The Riches of His Grace.

REAL CHRISTIANS.

The man who has religion will be normal. If his religion be real he is bound to carry it from the church into his every-day life. If it be worth having, it is something that will not be quarantined in the sanctuary or confined to the prayer meeting. The religious man can be trusted in a business transaction, in the store or in the office, just as much as he can be trusted when listening to a sermon. If, however, Jesus is only an exemplar, only one among many moral teachers, all of whom are about equally good; if he is not a redeemer who has made an atonement for sin and who demands of us sorrow for sin and genuine repentance and faith toward God, then we are not so sure about the basis for man's ethical structure.—Herald and Presbyter.

TRIUMPHS.

There are more triumphant death-beds than we count, if we only remember this—true fearlessness makes no parade. Oh, it is not only in those passionate effusions in which the ancient martyrs spoke sometimes of the panting for the crushing of their limbs by the lions in the amphitheatre, or of holding out their arms to embrace the flames that were to curl around them—it is not then only that Christ has stood by his servants, and made them more than conquerors—there may be something of earthly excitement in all that. Every day his servants are dying modestly and peacefully, not a word of victory on their lips, but Christ's deep triumph in their hearts—watching the slow progress of their own decay, and yet so far emancipated from personal anxiety that they are still able to think and to plan for others, not knowing that they are doing any great thing. They die, and the world hears nothing of them; and yet theirs was the completest victory. They came to the battlefield, the field to which they had been looking forward all their lives, and the enemy was not to be found. There was no foe to fight with.—F. W. Robertson.

THE MODERN AGE.

Dear Doctor Meek: In this age of fads and fashions one is often made to ask the question, Is modesty a forgotten virtue? And in view of some of the things that we have to witness, we are almost inclined to say that it is. This seems to be an age when people are trying to do all they can to shock the modesty of the conscientious. It is thought to be all right for people to do anything that they want to do, and one must not venture to criticise them.

Many tell us that this is a new age and that with it we have the new woman; that this is the age when woman has come into her rightful place; that if she sees fit to discard the old-fashioned, antiquated skirt and substitute pants therefor, it is nobody's business but her own, and that no one has the right to criticise her for so doing. If she sees fit to go to the public swimming pool and go in bathing with a lot of men—very often that she does not even know—why, you must not say anything about it! I was talking with a railroad engineer last year, and he was speaking about being in the swimming pool at Canton, Miss., one night when a man whose daughter was in the pool said to him, "What do you think about my daughter being in the pool? Don't you think it is all right?" He answered, "It is all right for your daughter." "You don't think it would be all right if it was your daughter?" "It would not be all right if it was my daughter." This is often the opinion of the world about many things which some of us seem to think are all right. We often excuse ourselves for not condemning people who do questionable things on the plea that they could do worse.

Then, in connection with the present-day picture show we are often forced to ask, Is modesty a thing of the past? When our girls and women, in company with boys and men, go to these places, and after witnessing scenes that almost make a crowd of men blush, discuss them with perfect unconcern with the men and boys, it is not surprising that the young men of to-day do not have the same high regard for young ladies that young men once had. You may take the advertisements of almost 90 per cent of the picture shows that are put upon the screens and you will find that they always have a scene bordering on the vulgar and invariably upon the suggestive. If in these posters they send out such scenes, which it is natural to suppose are not the worst, what, about the worst that will appear upon the screens? Yet, we are told that they are very educative. Yes, but is it not too often in the wrong way?

Then there is the modern dance. It is beyond all comprehension and absolutely impossible for one to understand how our women can ever make up their minds to dance the modern dances. They are indecent to the very extreme, to say the very least of many of them. A woman is compelled to lay aside all modesty to dance many of them. To say that they are suggestive is to beat the devil around the stump in order to keep from characterizing them as we should. You can not look on many of them without saying that they surely originated in the very dives of infamy, which is the case. Is it not time that the Churches should cry aloud and spare not in regard to some of these things? The Methodist Church has always been the most outspoken of all Churches against such things, and shall we hold our peace and allow another to take our crown? God forbid that such should be the case.

In view of these observations, we are caused to long and wish for the old-fashioned woman with her modesty in its pristine purity. What she possesses is the greatest of all womanly charms and graces—that is, modesty. She is satisfied to fill her place as the greatest and purest of God's creation, and thereby to call us men to higher and better lives by trying to be worthy of the women of the land. The lime-light of the day is not worth the price that they have to pay for it. Let them gain ever so much of the liberty for which so many are pleading to-day. They will be losers after all. It is not woman's rights or woman's privileges that we need most to-day, but it is a realization of her high and exalted place in the world and a return to her modesty of the past.

Do we respect the women of our land to-day as we did in the past? It is not necessary for me to attempt to answer this. If we travel on the street-cars and trains we shall get the answer to the question. As woman has forged her way to the front in her clamor for what she terms to be her rightful place, she has in like ratio lost her place in the hearts of men. Now she can find her seat or stand, just as she pleases, when she boards a street-car or a train. "Oh," says one, "we should not lose our galantry as men." True. But have we not already lost it? I think we have. I am compelled to confess that I have not the same regard for the masculine woman that I have for the modest, timid woman, and my heart is often made to burn within me on that account. Yet, after all, am I to blame? And the answer comes, I think not.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MR. FRITTS.

(The two letters printed below came unsolicited to the Advocate office last week, but, knowing Brother Upton, we cannot say that we were surprised to receive them. He is an influential member of the present Louisiana State Legislature and one of the truest and most worthy laymen within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference. We do not doubt that there are other loyal men who have been similarly misled by Messrs. Eleazer, Fritts, and their associate revolutionists. —Editor of the Advocate.)

Slaughter, La., Sept. 22, 1917.

Rev. R. A. Meek, New Orleans, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: The enclosed copy of a letter to Mr. B. F. Fritts, of Chattanooga, Tenn., is self-explanatory, and I trust that you will kindly publish it along with this request. I desire to be relieved from a position that I neither anticipated nor desired. Fraternally yours for all right,

L. L. UPTON.

Slaughter, La., Sept. 22, 1917.

Mr. B. F. Fritts, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Kind Sir: Some time back I received a card, along with an address, relative to a Laymen's Movement having for its object a number of changes in the polity and laws of the Southern Methodist Church. Some of the ideas I was willing to endorse, some I was not, and others I had but meager information about. In the letter, or printed matter, was a statement that literature giving information, and perhaps discussing matters, would be sent. I was requested to sign the card and return the same. Thinking to secure information, I signed and returned the card as requested. No further literature or information has come to me; but, a few days since, I was informed that I was one of the sponsors for this movement, and was requested to attend a meeting in Chattanooga.

I wish to say, most emphatically, that I had no such intention, and I desire any sponsorship that has been accredited me to cease at once, and that my name be stricken from the published list of signers and from any connection with this movement. What I have been able to ascertain, without the promised information, leads me to the conclusion that I have no sympathy with this movement. I want nothing whatever to do with anything or any movement that originates anywhere around or about Vanderbilt University, or that has the Vanderbilt bear-marks or brand, even though it may bear the counter-brand of Chattanooga.

Furthermore, there are too many years of life behind me and too few ahead to be chasing any phantoms. The old Methodist banner was good enough for my father, for his father before him, and other relatives for generations back, and it is good enough for me. True, that old banner may be a little scarred and not quite modern, in the opinion of some; but the scars and tatters have come from many a victorious battle. The old banner may seem to need a patch here and there, but I shall not try to make them, lest I make a botch of the whole job. It is a glorious old flag, and many thousands of the most heroic have battled under its folds. If you won't fight under that grand old banner you won't fight at all. Rally around the flag, boys!

Respectfully,

L. L. UPTON.

IN APPRECIATION OF JUDGE EDWARD MAYES.

Death has illustrated His love for a shining mark in the removal from these earthly scenes of Judge Edward Mayes.

Millsaps College desires to record in enduring form its tribute to him and its appreciation of the splendid service he has rendered it.

For fourteen years Judge Mayes was the dean of the law department of the University of Mississippi, and for many years subsequent was the dean of the law department of Millsaps College. His services in both these departments were of the very highest character, and he has molded the youth of this State and fashioned them after a splendid pattern. There are thousands of lawyers in this State who will never cease to rejoice that they received the benefits of his legal instruction.

As a law teacher, he had few equals in the Union. The ability which he displayed for a quarter of a century in this field was beyond all praise, and he developed in his law classes not only fine lawyers but splendid characters as well. No man ever left his classes without having a high and exalted estimate of what a lawyer should be morally as well as mentally.

As a lawyer, he was profound in all the learning of the law and simply magnificent in his capacity of clear and strong presentation of its principles to the Court. His statement of a case was a demonstration. His mind was one of remarkable analytical power. No lawyer ever surpassed him in the faculty of clear, lucid statement. Mr. Wirt, on the occasion of the death of Chief Justice Taney, said in his tribute to him: "He had a moonlight mind; by which," said he, "I mean the moonlight of the Arctics—a mind with all the light of day without its glare." That was a just and an exact definition of the quality of Judge Mayes' mind. His bearing as a lawyer before the Courts and his brethren of the bar was most admirable, and such as to excite and retain the unstinted admiration of all.

As a man, he was most lovable, gentle, and courteous to all men. No one ever saw the slightest exhibition of anger in him. He was the very soul of equanimity at all times and under all circumstances—the model of perfect self-control. He was capable of turning off an absolutely amazing quantity of work in his profession, and, in addition to this, he achieved great distinction in educational work as Chancellor of the University of Mississippi, and otherwise—finding time, in the midst of all this work, for literary composition of the very highest order.

Recalling all these sacred memories of him, we hereby resolve:

1. That in his death, not only this State, but the nation suffers an irreparable loss.

2. That Millsaps College has sustained a loss peculiar to itself in the withdrawal of his great talents for legal and literary leadership.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be presented to his family, and, fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be published in the Jackson Clarion Ledger, Jackson Daily News, Commercial Appeal, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

(Signed) A. H. WHITFIELD,
G. L. HARRELL,
J. M. SULLIVAN,
Committee.

I should count myself fortunate if my home were remembered for some inspiring quality of faith, charity, and aspiring intelligence.—H. W. Mabie.

MR. ELEAZER REPLIES.

An Open Letter to the Editor.

To the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, New Orleans, La.

Dear Sir: Your five-column editorial of September 13th has just come to my attention, in which you ascribe to me the authorship of the movement for the revision of Southern Methodist polity. You do me overmuch honor. I frankly admit that I would hold the successful leadership of such a movement a thing to be coveted, believing that one could render our Church no greater service. I cannot, however, claim any such distinction, since what part I have had in the matter has from the first been shared with others.

Nor was the letter of March 1, signed by myself and six others, accompanying a brief article intended for the Church press, the beginning of the movement, as you assume. To the best of my knowledge, the idea first took shape at a Summer Assembly in another State in 1915. A little conference of seven men was held—five preachers and two laymen—at which the situation was gone over carefully and a general plan of publicity laid out. No further steps were taken, I believe, until the winter of 1916-17, when some of the original "conspirators" reopened the question and invited others into council. The article and letter, signed by myself and six others, was merely an offshoot, in the nature of a private venture. It was not the "real thing" at all. Finding the larger movement shaping toward the same end, my friends and I abandoned our private enterprise and awaited the larger developments, which are now beginning to speak for themselves.

So much by way of disclaimer of the exclusive credit you ascribe to me. I am not worthy of it.

Another personal matter. You say "Brother Eleazer has been known throughout the Church as a rabid Vanderbilt partisan." I do not know what you mean by the term "Vanderbilt partisan." If you mean that I sided with Chancellor Kirkland and the revolting Trustees, then your charge is false absolutely and without qualification. I challenge you or anybody else to cite any word or act of mine that justifies it in the slightest degree. Is that plain enough? If you mean that I approved the Court's decision denying the Church's ownership of the University, I denounce that also as utterly false and equally groundless. I have held all along, on the contrary, that Vanderbilt University was and ought to be the property of the M. E. Church, South, and that the Church has been robbed of its own. If that makes me a "Vanderbilt partisan," what are you, pray?

But Vanderbilt is gone, the case is closed, and I have never heard of anybody who proposed to reopen it. I must believe, therefore, that your effort to raise the Vanderbilt ghost is merely an attempt to divert attention from the real issue. The Vanderbilt case is in no way involved in this movement, and if it is raised at all it will not be by us.

Now as to the charge of secrecy and conspiracy. Does anybody think we were foolish enough to suppose that we could send out forty letters about such a matter—which is about the number we seven sent, I imagine—without having the information leak promptly? On the contrary, we knew perfectly well that somebody or other would pass it on straight to those who were eager to hear it. Don't imagine that anybody is surprised at what happened. We expected nothing else. "Conspirators" and "plotters" do not send out multigraph letters to a page of names torn from some directory. We were not ready to go into print right then, to be sure, but we had nothing to conceal. In that letter we invited signatures to a paper prepared specifically for publication in the Church press, as the letter plainly states. Where is the conspiracy, please; the dark plotting you talk of?

You imply that I have done something culpable in that, while Editor of the Missionary Voice, I have ventured as a private individual to express my convictions as to the Church's welfare. I fail to see your logic. Your five-column editorial of the 13th expressed your convictions, did it not? And they were expressed editorially, too; officially, not personally, as mine were. Must we understand that it is perfectly all right for you officially to devote pages to attacks on this movement, but wholly improper for me even in a private capacity to declare myself in favor of it? Is it all a question of which side one happens to be on?

To be sure, some of my friends, when shown the letter I was preparing to send out, warned me that to do so would cost me my head. "Very well," I said; "if that be a fact, it only proves more conclusively that this thing is desperately needed. If a man may not express an honest opinion adverse to the 'system' without being made to suffer for it, then it is high time the 'system' were changed." Should I indeed find myself slated for slaughter because of my connection with this movement, I shall at least go down with the clean conscience of one who refused to consult his personal safety at the expense of his conviction of duty to the Church.

The editorship of The Voice I have held as a sacred trust and have striven honestly to administer it as such. But am I thereby estopped from believing that our Discipline would be the better for certain changes, from saying so to some of my friends, and from asking them, if I choose, to join me in a public statement to that effect? Had I been suggesting a change in the marriage ceremony, say, would Dr. Meek have devoted five columns of his valauble space to my obnoxious activities? I trow not. But since I have suggested that it might be better to elect our Bishops for a term of years rather than for life, I am a dangerous conspirator, a dark lantern artist, a breacher of trusts, and a Vanderbilt partisan! Ah, Doctor, I think that no origin this movement could have had, however regular, would have been pleasing to you, and that nobody who espoused it, however honest, could have been to you other than a conspirator and an enemy of the Church. No explanation will satisfy you, no assurance of sincerety be accepted. We must just content ourselves to get along without your approval, knowing that we are in good company.

But, Dr. Meek, I am not the issue in this campaign. I am only an incident. These are the questions to be faced:

Shall 2,000,000 Southern Methodists be left still without any legal voice in their local government and without elective representation in any of the larger Church bodies? That is the condition now. Do your favor its continuance?

And the Annual Conference—where assessments are laid, where policies are shaped, where all constitutional legislation is finally passed upon—shall our millions of lay membership still be left with a negligible degree of representation in that highly important body? Would such a course be either wise or fair? That is the issue, Doctor. What do you say?

Shall we still elect our Bishops for life and retain no power to relieve them of office, however unfortunate our choice may have been, except by preferring and proving charges of immorality or malfeasance? Along with whatever influence they may exert in making laws, shall they continue to exercise also the power of the Supreme Court to construe laws, to pass on their constitutionality, and to arrest legislation, and finally also the power to administer them? Would you favor such a concentration of authority in the hands of the President of the United States—letting him preside over Congress and over the several State Legislatures, exercise all the functions of the Supreme Court, and appoint all the Federal office-holders? That is the issue, Doctor. Where do you stand?

Do you think the Bishop should be left with absolute power to override the unanimous vote of the Cabinet and of the Annual Conference in the making of appointments? Should the preacher in the ranks have no chance at all? That is a far more important question, Doctor, than anything I may have said or done. Face up! Where do you stand on that?

No, Doctor, I am not an issue in this movement. Nashville is not an issue; nor Vanderbilt Universilty. Your five-column editorial was wasted on men of straw. Somebody's eyes may be blinded by the dust beaten out of straw men, but the penetrating mind will not be deceived. You must meet the issue, Doctor. As well do it now and stop throwing dust in the air.

By the way, why didn't you publish that list of 186 signers? You had space enough and to spare for certain other names. And why did you mutilate Mr. Fritts' letter asking that you publish the names? How does your action about that comport with your demand that the laymen publish in the Church press all they have to say? Were you sincere in that demand? If so, come across! Print Mr. Fritts' letter correctly, and print the names!

Just one more word: I understand that you sent out rather widely your paper of Sept. 13—putting a copy, perhaps, into the hands of every presiding elder in the connection. Is that true? If so, will you be fair enough to send to the same addresses the number containing my reply. You have impugned my motives, questioned my loyalty to the Church, and accused me of improper conduct as a servant of the Church. You have given wide publicity to these charges. Will you now be fair enough to give me a hearing before the same audience? Surely you will.

Yours very truly,

ROBERT B. ELEAZER.

THE EDITOR'S REJOINDER.

Mr. Eleazer begins his article with the oft-used method of hard-pressed disputants, namely, by inveighing against the great amount of space devoted to him and the revolutionary propaganda in which he has been so active. As a matter of fact, nearly two columns of the editorial in our issue of Sept. 13 were given to the reproduction of the billet-doux written to laymen by Brother Eleazer and his co-revolutionists, and it took almost two columns more, elsewhere in the paper, to print the Fritts "Address," which came in part, at least, from R. B. Eleazer, who was one of the signers. This gave the Editor of the Advocate a little more than three columns to review communications that filled four columns, to say nothing of the Cook phamplet, which was a document of considerable length, and other side literature which came incidentally within the scope of his remarks. It seems a little queer that after he had given so much attention to this matter for months, after his strenuous and almost tearful appeals in its behalf, our brother should now insist that it was not of enough importance for us to use a few columns for a discussion of it.

Somewhat of a Misrepresentation.

He represents us as having ascribed to him ALONE the distinction of having started this agitation. We did nothing of the kind. We stated that he was "the moving spirit" in setting it in motion—we did not say that he was the ONLY person who had anything to do with it; on the contrary, we gave the names of six other Nashville gentlemen who co-operated with him in launching the movement, four of them being members of the West End (the Vanderbilt) Church. But he was undoubtedly the most active of the illustrious seven Nashvillites. Did he not write the first letter sent out on March 1? Was not his name the first one attached to it? And at the close of it were not the following words written: "ADDRESS R. B. ELEAZER, BOX 218, NASHVILLE, TENN.?" And was not the "Who's Who" letter, bearing date of March 9, written and signed by him alone? And did not the communication of May 24 emanate from him, having no other signature except his? Every one of these questions must be answered in the affirmative. Our brother cannot repudiate his own communications, above his name, written with his own hand. And now we respectfully submit that the man who conducts the correspondence in stirring up an agitation, who composes the letters that are sent out and receives and handles those that come in, is "the moving spirit" in working it up.

Some Interesting Disclosures.

But our brother tells us that the little Nashville coterie and the work that it did under his leadership was not the beginning. Note what he says: "To the best of my knowledge, the idea first took shape in a summer assembly in another State in 1915. A little conference of seven men was held—five preachers and two laymen—at which the situation was gone carefully over." Mr. Eleazer warmly resents the idea of secret work, but let it be noted that he does not tell at what assembly or in what State this noble movement was first dreamed of, or who these gentlemen were that had the proud distinction of having the initial vision of so splendid a service to the Church; and further on in his article he tells of "a page of names torn from some directory," but he is careful not to state from what directory. And observe also that, according to Mr. Eleazer, this movement in its genesis was a "clerical," rather than a "laymen's" movement, the preachers having a more than two-to-one majority—as to why it was decided later to launch it as a laymen's undertaking, our brother leaves us entirely in the dark. But we should be grateful to him for making it clear, as some of us had suspected, that ITS PATERNITY WAS CHIEFLY CLERICAL. How many of these original seven Methodist opponents of autocracy were from Nashville and from about Vanderbilt, we are not informed. If we knew this, it still might be obvious that the Nashville atmosphere generated the first faint buddings of this liberty movement, on the principle announced by the writer who said, "You can get a man out of the piney woods, but you can't get the piney woods out of him."

But let us listen to our interesting correspondent: "No further steps were taken, I believe, until the winter of 1916-17, when some of the original 'conspirators' reopened the question and invited others into council. The article and letter, signed by myself and six others, was merely an offshoot, in the nature of a private venture. It was not 'the real thing' at all. Finding the larger movement shaping toward the same end, my friends and I abandoned our private enterprise and awaited the larger developments, which are now beginning to speak for themselves."

Mr. Eleazer Badly Mixed Up.

It seems to us that our confrere of The Missionary Voice, in making this statement, got things considerably mixed up. Apparently he would have us believe that the 1915 secret conference "at an assembly in another State" was a part of "the real thing," but that the Nashville-hatched junta "was a small private venture." Yet he tells us that some of the men who figured in the assembly conclave helped to bring the Nashville-Vanderbilt junta into being. And a glance at the letters that we published in the Advocate of Sept. 13 will show that some of the men who were in the Nashville junta passed over into the Chattanooga organization, their names being signed to the first address issued from there. And this also is worth jotting down: That the Nashville "private venture" was in the outset seemingly bigger than the Chattanooga "real thing," the first communication of the former carrying seven names, and that of the latter only five, and two of these belonged to the Nashville coterie.

Nor is this yet all. Brother Eleazer in his explanation refers only to his letter of March 1, and the accompanying statement. Not a word does he say about his "Who's Who" letter of March 9, nor of his letter of May 24. So significant is the latter that we are moved to reprint it:

"Nashville, Tenn., May 24, 1917.

"Dear Brother: You will remember the correspondence we had some weeks ago with regard to certain proposed corrective legislation. Since that time the movement has assumed a much wider scope, looking now not only to our Church press, but to the publication of a series of pamphlets on vital phases of the general question at issue, namely, that of introducing a greater degree of democracy into the Church.

"A full statement concerning the plan will be mailed to you in a few days, I understand, by the Chairman, Hon. Creed F. Bates, of Chattanooga, with the request that you be one of a score or more representative laymen to stand sponsor for the movement. You will find that the legislative program proposed is much more in keeping with your views than the one I sent you. It will probably not meet your approval at every point, but I feel sure you will be in hearty accord with the general principles involved, and that you will be glad to add the weight of your name to the movement.

"Personally, I am convinced that something must be done and done quickly, and that the men who get behind this movement will render an invaluable contribution to the welfare of the Church.

"I confidently hope, therefore, that you will promptly reply to Mr. Bates' request, with consent that your name be used.

Cordially yours,

"ROBERT B. ELEAZER.

"P. S.—Very wisely, I think, the movement proposes to keep completely away from the Vanderbilt case, while all discussions, of course, will deal as far as possible with principles rather than with persons."

In the light of the foregoing recitation of facts, how does Brother Eleazer's statement, "My friends and I abandoned our private enterprise and awaited the larger developments," appear? As has been stated in the first note issued from Chattanooga, which bore the date of May 26, two of the five signers were Messrs. Parks and Smith, members of the West End Church of Nashville, who had also signed Mr. Eleazer's first letter of March 1. This looks as if they were endeavoring to help forward the so-called larger movement, instead of "waiting on it." And Mr. Eleazer went them several howshots better in this direction. As the letter above (which was written two days before the first Chattanooga communication was sent out) shows, he sought to pioneer the way for the new managers of the agitation; and in effect he speaks of "THE MOVEMENT" as one and the same with that concerning which he had previously written the parties now addressed, except that it had developed into larger proportions. Observe also that he was perfectly familiar with the proposed legislative program, considered it preferable to the one that he had formerly submitted (there seems to have been more of it), that he evidently approved of the purpose to issue and mail out pamphlets, and that he earnestly appealed to those to whom he had been writing to sign the address that was to be issued by Mr. Fritts, and which has since appeared. This, too, when that address plainly stated that an organization was to be effected throughout the Church, the names of its members registered, and a convention or caucus held later, after the manner of peculiar politicians. And this appeal, let it be noted, was made to men before whom he had already paraded his importance in the Church in the following language: "The undersigned is Editor of The Missionary Voice, the Official Organ of the Methodist Board of Missions; official member of the Belmont Church; former President of the Nashville Methodist Union." (Black letters ours.)

Such was the course of Mr. Eleazer. And now for him, after all this, to try, as apparently he does, to limit his responsibility to a paper which he declares was merely intended for publication in the Church press, and to detach himself from this so-called larger movement, with its several ugly phases, is both surprising and humiliating. A more pitiable and vain wiggling in the public prints to extricate one's self from entanglements into which one has voluntarily gone, and seemingly, become alarmed about, we do not remember ever to have seen.

The truth is, as Brother Eleazer describes this movement, there was "a first shoot," an "offshoot," and a "larger shoot," and we find him in all three of the "shoots." However, after the movement has been gotten under way and turned over to a company of Nashville and Chattanooga directors, and after he had done his level best to tie on to it all the laymen (and Lay Leaders) with whom he had been corresponding, Brother Eleazer got into the background, and afterwards his name appears far down in the list of signers of the Fritz deliverance to the Church. Why the Editor of The Voice thus determined to take a rear place in this glorious army of democracy after his plume had been so gallantly waving in the forefront, we will not venture to say. We do know, however, that it had been suggested to him that fighting for democracy was a somewhat dangerous business and that the "autocrats" might take off his head as an official editor, for has not he himself told us as much?

The Question of Secrecy.

As has been stated, Mr. Eleazer scouts the idea that the Nashville propaganda was to be "secretly or guardedly" projected. Why, then, did he admonish the persons to whom he wrote that "no publicity should be given to the matter just yet?" Of course, if the movement was to effect the ends in view it would ULTIMATELY have had to make its appeal to the Methodist public. But the private correspondence conducted by our brother did not "leak promptly." It was started on March 1, and it was some time after the first Fritts letter had been issued, dated May 26, that the thing seemingly began to leak a little. We have reason to believe that we were one of the very first officials in the Church who caught on to the covert procedure, and we got the first hint of it about the middle of June; and the gentleman through whom this information filtered was most insistent that it should not become known that he had disclosed anything concerning the Nashville junta's plans and procedure. And the public was kept in the dark concerning the matter until Judge H. H. White made his notable deliverance in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of September 13. It seems to us that a propaganda which was entirely concealed from all, except the persons picked out to be communicated with about it, for THREE AND A HALF MONTHS, and of which the public was kept in utter ignorance for SIX AND A HALF MONTHS, until a layman opposed to it unexpectedly turned it up, was pretty well handled from the standpoint of secretiveness. Mr. Eleazer's suggestion that, with all the official machinery he had at his disposal, he could not pick out forty men whom he could expect not to betray his confidence, lacks much of being convincing to us. And as we have already pointed out, our brother is still secretive, telling us about revolutionists, "an assembly," "a directory," etc., but keeping wholly out of sight anything like definite information. If this is his method now, why should he so vigorously object to having it stated that he used this same method in the past?

Indefensible Methods Used.

Mr. Eleazer desires to know if, because he is Editor of The Voice, he is "estopped from believing that our Discipline would be better for certain changes, and from saying so to some of his friends" (the persons written to seem here to be called "friends"—Ed. Adv.), and asking them to join him in "a public statement to that effect." Certainly, he is not. Every Methodist has a right to advocate changes in the government of our Church in a proper manner—by means of petitions, memorials, respectful articles in the Church papers, and we think even by public pamphlets or circular letters of the right kind—but, as the reader has seen, unhappily Mr. Eleazer did not stop with the use of these legitimate methods. He joined in the issuance of an address which has publicly indicted and misrepresented nearly the whole of our polity; which has arraigned our episcopacy, by implication accusing our Bishops of doing improper things in secret sessions (It is all right for him to charge the Bishops with secret work, but it is outrageous to insinuate that he has engaged in anything of the sort); which proposes to institute investigations, to effect a Church political organization, to register the names of members, to keep them in touch with one another, and even to hold meetings or caucuses when adjudged to be advisable. If there was ever before such an effort as this in the history of our Church, we do not know when or where it was.

And it should be carefully noted that our brother has completely ignored our affirmation that the Laymen's Movement, an organization of our Church closely related to the Board of Missions, has been largely used in the interest of this propaganda, with the active co-operation of Brother Eleazer, editor of the official organ of the Board of Missions. According to Mr. Fritt's own statement in the Advocate last week, half, or more, of the 186 signers of his address are Lay Leaders. When there are only a few hundred such "Leaders" in the Church, against hundreds of thousands of other laymen, the significance of these figures cannot be brushed aside.

The Editor's Position on Various Questions.

Mr. Eleazer's attempt to try to place our open and straightforward editorial utterances, without the least reference to our official position as an editor, on a parity with his private and guarded efforts to organize a political faction in the Church, in which he paraded his official position to influence the persons communicated with, and co-operated in laying hands upon the Laymen's Missionary Movement for this purpose, is so utterly absurd that we will waste no time in discussing it. Nor shall we trouble ourself to reply in full to the numerous questions that he puts to us concerning the polity of our Church, as we have already expressed ourself in the columns of the Advocate concerning most of the things about which he enquires. We have not the least objection to more laymen in the Annual Conferences if sent there by the votes of the laity, and we would like to see the officials of the quarterly conference elected by the membership of the Church, though possibly some of them ought to be nominated by the pastor. Our brother's representation that a Methodist congregation has no voice in the management of its local affairs will not at all bear analysis, since considerable power may be exercised by both the Church conference and the quarterly conference, which are composed of its members. To be sure, it may not choose its own pastor, nor can the preacher choose his charge. Such a right of choice by pastor and people would disrupt our itinerant system and place our Church on a congregational basis.

We believe in a life tenure for our Bishops, and have already given our reasons therefor, and we believe that our episcopacy should exercise an untrammeled appointing power, under law and the supervision of the General Conference, which has certainly worked well in the past. It should be kept in mind that a Bishop is seldom elected until he is past fifty years of age, that he is usually in office for only a few years, and that he does not long exercise supervision in the same field. Those who wish to keep Bishops on trial awhile before anchoring them beyond on recall in the episcopacy should remember that they have already been on trial in the itinerant ministry for a long number of years, and that they have been thoroughly tested as ambassadors of Christ. Our correspondent's attempt to run an analogy between the work of our Bishops and that of the President of the United States is a very lame piece of argument. The President is one, the Bishops are many; the Annual Conferences have no legislative powers like State Legislatures; nor do the Bishops have any voice or vote in the General Conference, not even being able to name a committee except by permission. They can arrest no legislation unless they think it is unconstitutional, and then it is only arrested that it may go to the Annual Conferences that the will of the people may be more definitely ascertained. Our brother's statement that a preacher has no chance under our system, as it is now administered, is positively puerile. The history of our Church abounds in illustrations of how men may rise from the rank and file of our ministry to positions of great prominence and large usefulness in the Connection. Indeed, as a producer of majestic men, fitted for noble service and high place, we know of no other agency which has surpassed the Methodist itinerancy, upon which our brother and his co-adjutors would now lay violent hands.

The Vanderbilt Question.

Our statement that Mr. Eleazer has been known throughout the Church as "a rabid Vanderbilt partisan" was based upon representations made to us by some of the leading men of the Church—men who have occasion to go frequently to Nashville and who ought to know whereof they speak—the impression that we voiced concerning his attitude in the Vanderbilt controversy has undoubtedly been widely prevalent. Certainly we did not intend to misrepresent our brother or to do him any injustice; and if we have done this, we most sincerely regret it. However, we did not specificially accuse Mr. Eleazer of having "SIDED with the revolting trustees" or of having "approved of the decision" of the Supreme Court of Tennessee. We spoke of his general attitude, and stated what we believed to be dependably true. And it seems to us that our correspondent's disclaimer is rather guarded and that it leaves uncovered a large sphere in which he might easily have shown himself to be "a Vanderbilt partisan." He might not have gone the whole distance of "siding" with the Board of Trust in its course, and yet have sympathized with some of its contentions; and we have heard it said that even some of the trustees felt that the Court went too far and that they did not endorse the whole of its opinion. Where did Brother Eleazer stand in the great fight that was waged to have the Church to hang on to Vanderbilt University after it was stripped of all its charter rights therein, and thus to tie it on to an educational system which it could not control? Where did he stand when the Church was down and out, and Dean Tillett was seeking to use Methodist preachers to scatter his advertising literature abroad and as canvassing agents, and when he was proposing to place every Methodist theological student in some Nashville Methodist Church, thus making these churches, in the language of Dr. Ivey, "stalking horses for Vanderbilt?" Where has he stood with reference to the appointment of Methodist professors and students to the University? Does he endorse the actions of the Bishops in refusing to confirm the Cole lecturers and to name beneficiaries of the Atkinson fund? Has the course of some of the Missionary Secretaries in delivering lectures at Vanderbilt and in advising candidates for mission work to attend it, instead of our own Church schools, had his sanction or condemnation? Brother Eleazer challenges us to cite one word that he has ever written that showed him "siding" with the trustees or approving of the decision of the Court. Reversing the challenge, we ask him, occupying as he does a conspicuous place in the Methodist circles of Nashville and on the tripod, to produce a single public utterance that he has ever made, amid all the shameful proceedings at the Tennessee Capital, in defense of the course of our Bishops in the memorable struggle, or of the rights and honor of the Church. If he had found a voice thus to speak even mildly for Southern Methodism, there would scarcely have been any possibility of his position being misunderstood. But we desire to say if our brother can show that his skirts are clear respecting the several phases of the Vanderbilt issue concerning which we have interrogated him and that our informants referred to were in error, we will fully apologize publicly for our mistake and do our best to make the amende honorable.

Our confrere says that the Vanderbilt issue is closed and has no place or part in this revolutionary propaganda. We have not recently said or intimated that the fight for the ownership or control of the institution will be reopened, but certain phases of its relation to the Church are still acute questions, as for instance the appointment of professors to it? Is not all possible pressure now being brought to bear upon Bishop McCoy to try to influence him to give Dr. Tillett such an assignment? And is not the Vanderbilt spirit aggressively hostile to our Bishops, and ready to strike at them in every way that is open? Vanderbilt out of it? Then, why the recent meeting of laymen in Nashville in which a Vanderbilt professor submitted a motion in harmony with Brother Eleazer's revolutionary scheme, and was appointed to prepare a memorial to the General Conference in keeping with it? The truth of the business is, the Vanderbilt spirit and influence scattered throughout the Connection are the chief inspiration and support of this revolutionary movement. We may have shot at "men of straw" in our editorial utterance appearing in the Advocate of September 13, but somehow it seems to have set at least one man of flesh and blood afire, and his name is Robert B. Eleazer.

Some Other Matters.

Our brother wishes to know why we did not publish the list of signers of Mr. Fritts' address. We do not at all mind telling him. It was not for the want of room, though we were greatly taxed for space in that issue of our paper, as an examination of it will indicate. It was because we believed that the list contained the names of some excellent men who had signed the pernicious document without realizing fully what was involved in it, and we did not desire to bring them under the fire that we knew would be concentrated upon this movement unless we were sure that they had committed themselves to it with their eyes wide open. The fine letter from Hon. L. L. Upton which we are printing in this issue of the Advocate shows that we were not mistaken in this view, and demonstrates the wisdom of our course. But how about the alleged mutilation of Mr. Fritts' letter? That was a private communication to the Editor which was sent us without the least suggestion that it should be published. It is customary in printing such papers as the so-called Layman's "Address," to introduce them with such a parenthetical note as will make their meaning clear to the public. In the present instance, we saw that by printing Mr. Fritts' personal note to the Editor, we could accomplish this end very well, so we decided as a matter of convenience to use it, but as we did not intend to print the names, it was not necessary in order to clearness to print his request to publish the names along with the "Address." Hence we eliminated a half line, or possibly a line, in which this was asked (nothing else was contained in the few words stricken out)—this being done from a letter, any portion of which, or none of which, we had a perfect right to use. Some of our editors in publishing the "Address" used none of this letter at all. This petty quibbling shows how hard pressed our correspondent is.

Our paper was not sent to all the presiding elders in the Church, as our brother conjectures—we wish that it had been—but there were some brethren who thought it would be well to let it be known in certain sections how and where this movement had originated, and who paid to have copies of that number of the Advocate sent to a few persons scattered about over the Connection. As soon as we saw Brother Eleazer's complaint at this point, we wrote him that we should be glad to perform a similar service for him upon the same terms, reaching the same parties as nearly as possible, but up to the present time we have heard nothing at all from him.

A few words more. We have not impeached Mr. Eleazer's motives except as this may have done incidentially in the printing of his letters, and in directing attention to the course that he pursued. As to whether he has been loyal to our Church as it is now constituted, and has properly used his position as one of its official editors, our readers may judge for themselves. We did not at all use some of the epithets that our brother applies to himself, such as "dangerous conspirator," "dark lantern artist," etc.; nor did we remotely suggest that he should be relieved of the editorship of The Missionary Voice—so far as our observation has extended, no one has raised that question in the Church press except Mr. Eleazer himself. We wonder if this can be another illustration of the truth embodied in the Wise Man's saying: "The guilty flee when no man pursueth."

512 Camp St. NEW ORLEANS

The Great Battle

IN PROHIBITION KANSAS.

"There are 7000 men in training at the Fort Riley camp in Kansas," says "Capper's Weekly." "There will soon be 48,000. So far there has not been one case of drunkenness since the camp was opened more than a month ago. No other army camp in the United States has such a record, because it isn't possible to do this without a 'bone-dry' law. Fort Riley is well within the borders of Kansas and booze-sellers cannot get at the men.

"By order of the War Department, selling liquor to a soldier is punishable by a fine of $1,000 or a year in prison. Yet, severe as this penalty is, it does not prevent saloonists from selling liquor to soldiers in other parts of the country."

HON. LLOYD GEORGE TALKS.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, reports that in the week ending May 17:

Submarines destroyed twenty-seven British cargoes, mostly over 1600 tons.

Brewers destroyed twenty-seven British food cargoes, totalling 9000 tons.

The granaries of Canada were crammed with wheat waiting for British ships, but there were no ships to bring this people's food.

The rum quay at London docks was crammed with casks of rum to last till 1920, but a ship arrived with 1000 casks more.

A woman was fined five pounds for destroying a quarter loaf.

Brewers were fined nothing for destroying millions of loaves.

Poor people waited in queues to buy sugar in London.

Cartloads of sugar were destroyed in London breweries.

IN THE LIGHT OF HISTORY.

The infamous and un-American proposal to discriminate between beer and wine upon the one hand and whiskey upon the other must depend upon absolute falsehood for its support.

It is not true that the wine-drinking country of France consumes less spirits because of its wine drinking. It is not true that the beer-drinking country of Germany uses less spirits than the United States because it drinks more beer. It is not true that drunkenness is not to be found in these countries.

Wine rotted the greatness of Rome. Wine and beer, or barley-wine, sent Egypt to a drunkard's grave. All of the drunkenness of ancient history, all of the drink disasters of ancient history, were due to fermented liquors only, for whiskey was not then known.

The horrible pictures of Samarian debauchery in the Bible show the results of universal wine drinking. "Their wine is the poison of serpents and the cruel venom of asps," said the Bible in Deut. 32:33. "Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow?" asked Solomon, but whiskey was not invented for many centuries after Solomon's death. Alexander's brilliant career was closed by the drink that we are told is responsible for the "fact" that there is no drunkenness in France. Nero's orgies were not served with whiskey, but wine.—The Voice.

A WORTHY CAUSE.

Dear Dr Meek. We are making some headway in obtaining subscriptions for the Mississippi Conference Training School located here at Montrose. Brother James Hand, of Purvis, will donate a carload of lumber for the boys' dormitory, and one of our students, Rev. W. J. Stokes, will give the lot to build it on. I am anxious to get this dormitory built during the next few months. Those who desire to help in money, lumber, or brick, should communicate with me early. I am too much pressed with duties in the schoolroom to solicit money face to face. Prompt and voluntary contributions will be especially appreciated.

We are now doing twice as much Bible teaching as heretofore, and we will organize a class in the Sunday school teacher-training course.

AN OFFICIAL PROCLAMATION!

"Mobilizing for Service" is a phrase that is upon every lip to-day. The resources of the nation are being laid upon the altar of humanity's welfare. Nothing is to be withheld which is needed to "make the world safe for democracy." Believing in the righteousness of our cause, every American citizen stands ready to do his or her part in America's sacrificial struggle.

If this national purpose is to be kept lofty and unselfish it must be linked up with the religious motive. The term "Big Drive" is not merely a catchy name. It stands for the fundamental principle that patriotism must have underneath it a religious enthusiasm: If the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, can mobilize into the ranks of the Epworth League 100,000 more young men and women during the next five months, we shall be performing a service not only to Christ but to the nation in this supreme hour of her testing.

Therefore, we, the members of the General Epworth League Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, call upon our pastors and young people to enter with enthusiasm and determination into this Church-wide campaign for recruits for Christ and the Epworth League. The League has won its place. Its contribution to Church leaders, Missionary recruits, cultural development, and Christian experience unite in a mighty appeal for a "Big Drive" that shall win thousands for the army of the Lord.

AN UNWISE MOVEMENT.

Dear Doctor Meek:

That the so-called "address" to the M. E. Church, South, lately published in the Advocate, was very unwise and uncalled-for, is evident for the following reasons: 1. Its object is revolutionary, the attempt being an effort to change a system of Church government, which has been so wonderfully and signally blessed of God during the past in carrying the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to the poor, the needy and the unsaved. Its purpose is to change that which has been ordained by God as one of his chosen channels, a branch of the Church of the living God, through which means the everlasting gospel is to be preached. They have taken upon themselves the awful responsibility of laying violent hands on and of changing that which has evidently met with the approval of the Lord, and on which He has set his seal of divine blessing and favor, showing that the M. E. Church, South, was divinely guided and providential. The Church is of God, and "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

2. Another reason why the Nashville and Chattanooga laymen are wrong in their "address" is because they are in error as to the needs of the Church. The great need of the Church to-day is not democracy, or more lay authority, nor is it a needed change in the episcopacy; but it is more spirituality; more of the love of Christ; more of the enduement of power which comes from faith in God and in his inspired word. Now if these laymen had undertaken for their purpose to bring about these desired blessings on the Church, it would have been commendable. But, instead, their purpose is an unholy one and savors of the world and politics. The Church is of Christ, who said, "My kingdom is not of this world;" neither is it to be fashioned and patterned after the things of this world, and worldly-minded men should have no part in guiding its affairs and saying what is best in its sacred trust of "spreading Scriptural holiness over these lands."

HALF-WAY SURRENDER.

A missionary in Swaziland, in South Africa, told a native that feathers make a good bed. The native went to his kraal and spread a few feathers on a board, and when he awoke the next morning he was stiff and sore and complained that the missionary was "a liar." The trouble was not in the missionary, but in the fewness of the feathers. In our Christian life, if we sow sparingly, we reap sparingly. If we rob God and his poor of the fellowship that belongs to them, doing only what we must to keep up the appearance of righteousness, we need not wonder if, at times, we only have joy enough to keep us miserable in our souls. But, on the other hand, the hilarious giving of the second mile means joy and victory in our own lives, a living fellowship with the Lord, and the gospel of those who will not have it unless we practice such giving.—Christian Witness.

WHEN TOMMY GOES TO SCHOOL.

When Tommy goes to school it takes
  Mamma and Kate and me
To start him off, because he makes
  Quite work enough for three.
Katie must find his coat and cap;
  I try to hear his rule.
It's always an exciting time
  When Tommy goes to school.

Mamma must cut his sandwiches
  And lay in quite a stock,
While Katie warms his rubbers well
  And I must watch the clock.
He eats his breakfast first of all,
  While ours is getting cool.
It's always an exciting time
  When Tommy goes to school.

Next Katie brings his handkerchief;
  I tell him he'll be late.
Mamma then kisses him goodbye
  Just as it's half-past eight.
And Katie, buttoning up his coat,
  Says, "He's naebody's fool!"
It's always an exciting time
  When Tommy goes to school.

THE DOG THAT SAVED A SOLDIER.

Attached to a French command was a dog named Michael, larger, stronger, more intelligent than the others and of a gentle nature that made him a general favorite. Michael, although most "sociable," centered his affections upon a young French soldier named Henri. Every day at the soup hour Michael would appear carrying a tin can and place it beside Henri, who would fill it as he did his own, and they would dine together.

The day came, however, when Henri failed to return, and as the men stumbled back again to safety, Michael scanned with anxious eyes each pale, haggard face, his sensitive nostrils quivering with dread.

When the last man had been accounted for and Henri was still missing, the animal darted toward the battlefield and after some time returned, greatly excited, and carrying an old half glove which belonged to his friend. He could scarcely wait for the attendants to bring a litter before he started off again, his great, intelligent eyes imploring them to hurry.

In a remote part of the field they found the young fellow lying still and cold. After a hasty examination the attendants left him for dead, hurrying away to succor the living, but Michael refused to be convinced. Again and again he returned for assistance, but in vain, so he mounted his solitary guard, his face almost humanely expressive of grief.

The attack took place about sundown, and it was not until late that night that comparative quiet settled down upon the trenches.

Suddenly the moon flashed from behind a cloud, and the alert sentinel peered sharply about, then brought his rifle swiftly to his shoulder.

Not twenty feet away, creeping slowly toward the trenches, but halting abruptly every minute, loomed a large, dark object. The sentry advanced cautiously, finger on trigger, demanding curtly, "Who goes there?" followed by the stifled exclamation, "Michael!"

Michael it was, gasping, panting, but still the same old dog Michael—but not alone. Behind him, parts of his uniform literally torn away by the dog's teeth, lay Henri, dragged from the battlefield, inch by inch, by the devoted animal. And, miracle of miracles, the boy was actually breathing.

How the animal had accomplished such a Herculean task and escaped the vigilant eyes of the field attendants will forever remain a mystery, but suffice it to say that little, fragile-looking Henri ultimately recovered, to challenge death once more at the front.—Our Dumb Animals.

ELIZABETH'S CHOICE.

This is a true story about a little girl named Elizabeth. She was ten, and she had a sister, Lucy, who was eight, and a little sister, Frances, who was only four.

They were very nice little girls and they loved one another dearly. Elizabeth was generous and unselfish, and often sacrificed her own pleasure to make her sisters happy.

Grandma liked to reward Elizabeth for her unselfishness, and so one day she said to Aunt Daisy:

"I have asked the little girls to come over this morning and get the presents we brought them from Europe. I am going to let Elizabeth choose the one she likes best. I think she deserves a reward for sending Frances driving with Aunt Mary yesterday in her place. She was very good to give up her treat to make her little sister happy."

The little girls soon arrived, and grandma kissed them and helped to take off their coats and hats. Then she led them into the living-room. The three gifts were lying in their boxes on the table: a torquoise ring, a little pearl locket, and a bracelet with a tiny cover on it.

"Oh, how lovely!" cried Elizabeth. "Weren't you good to bring us such pretty presents, grandma?"

"Which is for me?" asked Lucy, with shining eyes.

"Me choose, grandma?" said little Frances, with an engaging smile.

"No, dear," answered grandma. "Elizabeth is to have first choice this time, because she was so good to let you go with Aunt Mary yesterday. Come, Elizabeth; which do you like best?"

Elizabeth clasped her hands and drew a long breath of excitement and rapture.

"They're all so beautiful," she said. "May I really do just as I like about choosing, grandma?"

"You certainly may, dear; this is your choice."

Elizabeth looked at the gifts again closely, and touched each with a careful finger, lingering over the locket. Then she glanced at Lucy's wistful face, and at Frances, who was resting her little nose on the edge of the table in her endeavor to see the pretty things.

"Which do you wish you had, Lucy?" Elizabeth asked suddenly.

"Oh, the ring, the ring!" cried Lucy, dancing up and down.

Elizabeth took the ring from its box and handed it to her, and was nearly choked by Lucy's "bear-hug."

"Which do you like best, Frances?" Frances stood on tip-toe and waved a fat hand.

"I fink I'd rayver like the bracelet," she said. Elizabeth clasped it on her chubby arm, and Frances gave her a big, big kiss.

"Then this is mine," said Elizabeth, joyously, taking up the little pearl locket. "It's just what I wanted, grandma. Thank you a hundred times for it."

As she kissed grandma she whispered, "It's lots of fun to have first choice, isn't it?"

Grandma looked at the little sisters dancing for joy, and then at Elizabeth's radiant face, and smiled.

"It is when you are generous," she said softly.

What do you think of Elizabeth's choice.?—Amy V. Beal, in Christian Register.

NOT SO GREEN AFTER ALL.

At a recent trial, the Western Christian Advocate notes that one of the witnesses was a green countryman, unused to the ways of the law, but quick, as it proved, to understand its principles. After a severe cross-examination, the counsel for the prosecution paused, and then, putting on a look of severity, exclaimed:

"Mr. Killins, has not an effort been made to induce you to tell a different story?"

"A different story from what I told, sir?"

"That is what I mean."

"Yes, sir; several persons have tried to get me to tell a different story from what I have told, but they couldn't."

"Now, sir, upon your oath, I wish to know who those persons are."

"Well, I guess you've tried 'bout as hard as any of them."—The Classmate.

With the Christian it is ever "better further on."

DEMOCRACY VS. AUTOCRACY.

A View of Conditions, 1917.

By Rev. W. S. Harrison.

The hostile forces of the world are now
In fatal grip of battle's proud array,
And history halts to note which side shall bow
To car of destiny at closing day;
The world is standing by to take its fate,
And ages hence will reckon from this date

Not since the Nazarene in sorrow fell,
Diffused with grief in dark Gethsemane
To free the earth from proud domain of hell,
That men from tyrant sin might yet be free;
With crown of thorns and pains of cross, by grace
He "finished" freedom for the human race.

Not since that awful time has so much weight
On leaden hours hung, as hangs to-day
On all the tragic hours, while trembling fate
In balance waits on valor's deadly fray!
While freedom must be man's eternal right,
It must be yet maintained by gallant fight.

Since men began to note the climbing years,
The two ideals of government diverse
Have fought for dominance thro' blood and tears,
And each has claimed by might of sword and purse
In hostile camps with hostile flag unfurled,
That this or that is best to rule the world.

These forms of government distinct have grown
Concrete in strongest nations on the globe;
The seeds of war from earliest ages sown
Have reached equipment fell, a hellish robe;
The greatest armored pow'rs in all the world
By fate of war are at each other hurled.

All agents ill that fertile brains devise,
That have the mark of promised deadly aim,
With fatal gas, or guns of mammoth size,
Are ready helps in this death-dealing game;
All forces move intact with fatal pace
As if in league to kill the human race.

The far-famed battles of the gods of old,
When wrath divine inflamed the heavenly minds,
And though they tossed the mountains bold,
Are here surpassed by arms of modern kinds—
These modern giants by passion whirled
Are tossing now the fates of all the world.

Our faith to God of nations must ascend
As only Source from whom we may expect
Controlling power to guide the fateful trend,
And out of chaos bring the best effect,
That in the roll of future peaceful years,
The race be spared like drafts of bitter tears.

THE BARRED BOOK.

The only book in literature forbidden in American schools is the Bible. It is the only book in literature containing first-hand teaching concerning the personal, immanent God. Every philosophy is freely taught in our schools except the philosophy of Jesus. When we consider the general present enlightenment, I am ready to maintain that never, in any period or in any nation, has there been seen a policy so bigoted, so prejudiced, so subversive of public morals, as the barring of the Bible from the schools. I suppose ours is the only nation on earth whose schools are entirely divorced from religion. But a worse fact is, we are proud of it!—Wallace Nutting, D.D.

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

BISHOP HOSS SPEAKS.

against certain of our Bishops. If these laymen are intelligent Methodists, as I know that some of them are, they would, if fully informed, certainly know that the only brotherly and lawful method of arraigning a Bishop in the Methodist Church is to bring definite accusations against him before the General Conference. They have assumed a rather grave responsibility in lending their endorsement to the groundless charges of a penny pamphlet. For myself, I make bold to characterize these charges as unjust and untrue, and I invite my brethren either to retract what they have done, or else to appear before the Committee of Episcopacy next May and make good their allegations. To their views on the matter of Church Government, they have a conceded right, but to make themselves the instruments of a personal assault upon me, they have no right under the sun. I am an old Methodist preacher. For fifty years I have managed to keep a reputation for probity and faithfulness and devotion to the Church which I am perfectly willing to have compared with the record of any of the laymen whose names Mr. Fritts so ostentatiously parades before the public, including his own. If Mr. Fritts is in doubt of this, let him make the test. Against him I have said nothing, but he has assailed me. If he thinks that he has divided and diminished his responsibility in the premises by getting other unsuspecting laymen to join in this most unfair and unlawful piece of work, he is much mistaken. Responsibility in such cases is individual. It can not be divided.

That some at least of the 156 signers of his "Address" are guiltless of any evil intent in the premises is beyond doubt. The following letter from Col. Creed F. Bates speaks for itself:

New York City, N. Y., July 17, 1917.

My Dear Bishop Hoss: Yours of 22d ult. to me at Chattanooga has been forwarded here, where I have been for some time under medical treatment. In reply will say that some time ago at the solicitation of some friends in Chattanooga, and on their sole desire, as conveyed to me, of obtaining from the laymen an expression as to enlarged representation, I consented to use of my name alone as the one to whom such expressions might be addressed. In a few days thereafter, I declined to be connected with the matter in any way, and so advised them. I am not familiar with Dr. Cook's pamphlet referred to by you, but I do know you; and as you have been the constant, and sometimes sole champion and defender of our faith on every battlefield and in every forum for over half a century, my warm personal friend, and a man I delight to honor and whom I am proud to claim as one of our own, it would seem scarcely necessary for me to say, which I do, that under no circumstances could I knowingly be connected with anything reflecting on you in the slightest.

With assurances of regard, I am, sincerely,

CREED F. BATES.

That there are many others who, if interrogated, would equally with him deny the correctness of the attitude in which they have been placed, is most likely.

As to Mr. Eleazer, Mr. Fritts does by no means give a full account. If he had done so he would have told how he has sought to use The Missionary Voice to assail the policies of President Wilson. There are some of us who have a vivid recollection of the poor fiasco in which he attempted to get a public meeting in Nashville to speak out against the President of the United States ended. Let Mr. Eleazer deny this if he is minded to do so.

Very truly yours,

E. E. HOSS.

Muskogee, Okla., Sept. 27, 1917.

GOLDEN WORDS.

There are some people who seem to think that education and learning are the only things needed to uplift mankind and usher in the Millennium—there are actually some preachers and Church papers that talk this way—but character far outweighs culture, and goodness is a more valuable asset to society than intellectuality. We commend to those who have a wrong conception of this matter the following golden words spoken by the Hon. W. J. Bryan:

"There never was a time when the people needed the inspiration of the Bible more than they do at the present day. And there is not a community which cannot be purified, redeemed, and improved by a better knowledge and larger application of the Bible in their daily life. No money that is invested pays so large a dividend as that spent in the moral uplift of the community. I am inclined to believe that we have overestimated the value of mental training and underestimated the value of the heart's development. A good heart can use a very dull mind and make that mind serviceable to society; but a bad heart cannot make a good use of any mind, however brilliant."

WHY THIS?

Mr. B. F. Fritts, of Chattanooga, has sent seemingly to nearly all the papers of our Church an article, entitled "The Men Behind the Movement," which has been published by them as Mr. Fritts' production; but the Midland Methodist of Sept. 26 carried the same article accredited to "A Layman." A query: Why did Mr. Fritts wish to have his article circulated anonymously in his home territory? Or, was the man signing himself "A Layman" the real author of it, and has Mr. Fritts been standing sponsor for it over the Church generally to enable him to keep in the background? Some explanation is in order.

PAY THE PREACHER IN FULL.

With good crops and good prices for farm products, every charge in Louisiana and Mississippi ought to determine to pay its pastor's salary in full this year, and all the Church assessments besides. Since they are salaried men, with little or no chance to do other work, our preachers urgently need all the money promised them, in this time of high prices for all the necessaries of life. Let the stewards everywhere do their best to secure for these faithful itinerants all that is due them.

BISHOP HOSS'S CHALLENGE.

In adopting and circulating as one of its pamphlets, the Cook brochure, the so-called Nashville-Chattanooga Laymen's organization has virtually made itself sponsor for the charges against some of our Bishops embraced in that notorious document, which contains many misstatements. Bishop Hoss is entirely within his rights in inviting these gentlemen to take the legal and proper course and bring these charges before the Committee on Episcopacy at the next General Conference, where they can be met by the Bishops, instead of circulating them underhandedly over the Church. We do not see how the true and worthy men who thoughtlessly signed the Eleazer-Fritts paper can continue to allow themselves to be made parties to this unmanly and vicious attack upon the noblest and truest of our Chief Pastors. As will be seen in this issue of the Advocate, two of the signers, Judge Bates and Hon. L. L. Upton, have set themselves straight concerning this matter. They have certainly done the high-minded and honorable thing. And we dare say that there are others who will do likewise when they realize the true inwardness of this movement and see that they have not been fairly dealt with by the leaders who projected it.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

President J. W. Beeson reports that Meridian College, Meridian, Miss., has had the best opening that it has had in a number of years.

Bishop W. A. Candler was present for a short time during the recent session of the Louisville Conference in the interest of Emory University.

Bishop H. C. Morrison, of Leesburg, Fla., will spend next Sunday in New Orleans and will occupy the pulpit of the First M. E. Church, South, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Rev. Leland Clegg sent us the following telegram from Harperville, Miss., last Monday morning: "A great meeting is in progress here. It is being conducted by Rev. T. J. Norsworthy."

Rev. J. M. Alford, of Bunkie, La., sends us an interesting report of his work, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week. He is bringing things to pass in his present field.

A recent issue of The Port Gibson (Miss.) Reveille contained the following item of news: "Mrs. M. B. Sharbrough is in Memphis to attend the marriage of her niece, Miss Josephine Ellis, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. M. Ellis."

A correspondent writes us as follows: "A Methodist physician who desires a good location for the practice of his profession may obtain valuable information by addressing a note of inquiry to Box 86, New Augusta, Miss."

Rev. M. M. Black, Commissioner for Millsaps College, in a personal note to the Editor, says: "I have recently visited New Albany and Columbia, Miss., in the interest of the work committed to my hands, and met with fine success at each place."

We are indebted to the following friends, to whose good service no reference has been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions, sent in within the past few days: Rev. W. A. Hays, Decatur, Miss., 5; Rev. A. S. Brisco, Nettleton, Miss., 2.

Remember that October 13 will be "Work Day" for both our Orphanages this year, and that the next day, Sunday, will be "Harvest Day." Let every Methodist church and Sunday school in Mississippi and Louisiana make these days count for the utmost possible.

That worthy itinerant and true Southern Methodist, Dr. T. B. Holloman, of Vicksburg, Miss., reports that all is well in his field, and that he is stepping fast and high in making ready for the coming session of the Mississippi Conference, which will meet in his excellent church.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of New Augusta, Miss., writes: "I have just closed my meeting at Cox's Chapel, and, despite the confusion incident to the activity of the 'Holy Rollers' in the community, we had a profitable series of services, resulting in 6 accessions to the Church. I did my own preaching."

Rev. G. D. Anders, of Indian Bayou, La., tarried in New Orleans for a time last Friday and favored the Advocate office with a call. He was on his way to the Palmer Camp Ground, in Southeast Mississippi, to assist Brother Meigs in a camp meeting there. He was looking well, and seemed to be happy in the Master's work.

A banquet will be given in the Social Hall of the First M. E. Church, South, of this city on Tuesday evening, October 9, with a view to perfecting and strengthening the New Orleans District Church Extension Society. Dr. W. F. McMurry, of Louisville, Ky., will be the guest of honor and the principal speaker on this interesting occasion.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. Chas. P. Moss, our pastor at Tchula, Miss., says: "Rev. W. W. Mitchell, our presiding elder, was with us last Sunday night, Sept. 23, and he was at his best."

The fourth quarterly conference was held the next day, and everything was reported in full up to date." Brother Moss has made a fine record in his present pastorate.

Dr. George S. Sexton informs us that the ceremonies incident to the laying of the corner-stone of the new Representative M. E. Church, South, in Washington, D. C., will be conducted October 7 and 8, with Bishop Warren A. Candler in charge of the exercises. The building is said to be about half way up, so that it will present a fine appearance on this notable occasion.

From the Lincoln County Times of September 27 (published at Brookhaven, Miss.), we take the following note: "Rev. T. W. Adams of Hattiesburg spent last Tuesday here with his daughter, Miss Mabel Adams, and his many friends. It is good to know that Mr. Adams is in fine health after his attack last spring, and that Mrs. Adams also is much improved physically."

From a note from Rev. J. L. Decell, of McComb, Miss., it appears that he has lately found it necessary to have his tonsils removed. He was getting on well when he wrote us. Brother Decell informs us that at the recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Board of the Mississippi Conference at Biloxi, no Field Secretary to succeed Rev. J. L. Neill was named.

Sister T. H. Morris, writing from Dallas, Texas, states that she and Brother Morris have been in that city all the summer, and will likely remain there this winter. Brother Morris, we regret to state, has been very ill, but he is now reported to be better. Let the brethren remember him at the throne of grace. The address of Brother and Sister Morris is 2913 Welborn Street, Dallas.

Rev. J. R. Murff, our pastor on the Iuka (Miss.) Circuit, is having a successful year. He has had some excellent meetings. The spiritual life of his people has been greatly quickened, and there have been a number of accessions to the Church. There is a Sunday school at every church in the charge, and from two to five persons are taking the Teacher-training Course at each appointment.

Dr. T. J. Bailey, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Mississippi, has just had to come from the press a volume entitled "Prohibition in Mississippi." We have not yet had time to examine this publication, but this we hope to do in the near future, when we shall have more to say concerning it. Persons desiring to secure this volume may address Dr. Bailey at Jackson, Miss.

Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., who is one of this State's great lawyers, is being kept very busy these days, his two sons, one of whom is a very promising young attorney, having volunteered for service in the Army. Our church at Alexandria is also fortunate in numbering among its members Hon. T. W. Holloman, who is a partner of Judge White in the practice of law and an active and useful Christian worker.

We have in hand a communication from Rev. K. W. Dodson, our pastor at Minden, La., concerning the entertainment of the Louisiana Conference, which will meet in that city on November 28. Brother Dodson desires to learn who are coming other than those whose names appear in the Conference Minutes. Let the brethren write him without delay. The full statement referred to will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. T. B. Winstead, of Burns, Miss., sends us several subscriptions to the Advocate, and writes as follows concerning his charge: "Our meetings are nearly all over and some of them have been good ones. We have had as helpers Rev. W. A. Hays, Rev. W. W. Graves, and Rev. M. R. Jones, and I conducted one revival myself. Our last protracted meeting will be held at Polkville, where we will have Rev. Dan E. Kelly with us. We are expecting a great time."

From a note from Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, we take the following: "I have just received a check from Hon. L. K. Carlton, Treasurer of the Board of Stewards at New Albany, Miss., to cover the educational assessment on that charge. This is the second remittance that I have received from the Corinth District." Hurrah for Brother Pope and his worthy flock! Who next?

The Lexington (Miss.) Advertiser of last Friday contained the following item: "Sergeant-Major Charles Jaco was up from Jackson yesterday on a visit to his parents, Rev. and Mrs. B. P. Jaco." This 20-year-old volunteer soldier had never missed a roll-call, or drill, or failed to perform any other duty since his enlistment, until he left for this 7-hour visit to the folks at home. Brother Jaco has another son and three sons-in-law who have been drawn for service in the Army.

From a letter from Rev. J. B. Randolph, written from the Orphans' Home in Jackson, Miss., we extract the following: "The Board of Directors of the Orphanage met here on Sept. 27, and elected Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Canton, Manager. I, of course, will continue in charge until the close of the coming session of the North Mississippi Conference." Brother Randolph has made an excellent record as Superintendent of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage. He will return to the pastorate this fall. Brother Lewis, the new Manager, is one of the leading members of the Mississippi Conference, and will no doubt give a good account of himself in the new field of service into which he has been called.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation from Rev. R. O. Brown to attend the opening of our magnificent new church at Clarksdale, Miss., next Sunday, October 7. Among other things, Brother Brown says: "We are greatly rejoiced at the consummation of this enterprise. Our new house of worship is a beauty and up-to-date. We have fourteen classrooms, two choir rooms, a pastor's study, a kitchen, a dining room, a parlor, a junior assembly room, and a primary department. The cost to date (including a $7000 pipe organ to be installed in the next two weeks) is nearly $65,000." We congratulate Pastor Brown and his growing flock upon this splendid achievement, and thank them for their kind invitation, though, much to our regret, circumstances will not permit us to be present on this happy occasion.

Rev. M. L. White, our faithful pastor at Homewood, Miss., writes: "This has been a busy summer and fall with me. In August meetings were held at Homewood, Carr, High Hill, and Gasque Chapel. In the first three revivals I was assisted by Dr. Hunt, Rev. J. M. Corley, and Rev. W. J. Dawson. These brethren rendered good service. The meeting at Gasque Chapel was conducted by the pastor and the several local preachers. About 75 persons joined the Church as a result of these meetings. Among these additions was Rev. L. M. Sharp, a Baptist, who is now at Millsaps College and who has been recommended to the Mississippi Conference for admission on trial. I have assisted Brother Miller, Brother Leland Clegg, and Brother S. E. Flurry in three meetings in which 49 persons joined the Church. These preachers are fine workers to be associated with in laboring for the Master."

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO HELP.

Please arrange for your Sunday school to observe the World's Temperance Sunday, Nov. 4. We will supply you with up-to-date helps on the temperance question if you will write our office requesting us to do so. Just one Sunday school in Louisiana has shown any real interest in the work of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League this year. That school is at Oak Ridge, La. Pastors, superintendents, and teachers are requested to bring this matter before their schools next Sunday, or as soon as possible, and let us know the result. On with the battle! The distillers agree with General Sherman as to what war is.

MEETING OF WOMAN'S CITY MISSION BOARD.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Woman's Board of City Missions was held at St. Mark's Hall on Tuesday, Sept. 25. In the absence of Mrs. J. B. Parker, the president, Mrs. W. W. Holmes presided. Representatives from the different Southern Methodist churches were present. The Italian congregation, which for some years past has been meeting at St. Mark's Hall, is to have a new temporary church building on Rampart and Gov. Nichols Streets. The Board is not ready to announce just when the new St. Mark's Hall will be built, but the settlement will remain a feeder to the Church and the spirit of co-operation will continue.

Mrs. D. O. MYATT,
New Orleans, La. Corresponding Secretary.

ALL ABOARD FOR WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Anti-Saloon League of America will convene in its annual session on December 10-13 in Washington, D. C. Every congregation of every denomination is entitled to one or more delegates. Will your church be represented? If not, why not? Special rates on all the railroads are expected. Congress will be in session and may be discussing National Prohibition. Please see that your congregation is represented. Let's have a Louisiana train filled with delegates bound for Washington to participate in the fight against the Church's greatest foe. Write and tell us how many will go from your church.

A. W. TURNER,
Supt. La. Anti-Saloon League,
Box 32, Shreveport, La.

The Kentucky Annual Conference has declared in favor of merging with the Louisville Conference.

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

LEMONS BRING OUT THE HIDDEN BEAUTY

Make this lotion for very little cost and just see for yourself.

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white this way: Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quarter pint of skin complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it should help to bleach, clear, smoothen and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost and the grocer has the lemons.

Sunday School

JAPAN IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL IN 1918.

It seems that some confusion has arisen in regard to the Missionary Special in the Sunday school for 1918. Some have thought that the Sunday school Special for next year is to be Brazil. Others have understood that it is to be Japan, and it is well to set forth clearly what the Board really has in mind in regard to the Missionary Special in the Sunday school in relation to the above mentioned countries. It has been decided that the Sunday School Foreign Missions Special for 1918 is to be Japan, and the Special for 1919 is to be Brazil. However, because of the graded Sunday school literature, the year really begins with the last quarter, opening the first of October. So, when we speak of the 1918 Special for Japan we really mean that beginning with October, 1917, and running up to October, 1918, Japan shall have right of way in the Sunday school, and contributions for foreign missions made in the Sunday school are to go mainly to the Japan Mission. And beginning with October, 1918, and running to October, 1919, Brazil is to have right of way in the Sunday school, and that foreign mission contributions made in the Sunday school for that year shall go mainly to the Brazil Mission. This overlapping has doubtless caused the confusion.

This in no wise affects Home Mission Specials in the Sunday schools for 1918, which is the work among Mexicans in Texas.

All Sunday school superintendents and members of the missionary committees in the various Sunday schools should make careful note of this and present it to their Sunday schools so clearly that all may understand.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following are the resolutions that were adopted by the Eighth Annual Conference of Chairmen of Sunday School Boards and Field Workers, in session at Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 20 to 23, 1917:

One.

That the Sunday School Editor be requested to have prepared and issued a leaflet on the first half of the tenth point of the Standard; and another leaflet containing suggestive plans for increasing the amount raised by our Sunday schools on Children's Day.

Two.

That our Committee on Legislation be requested to take into consideration the matter of legislation requiring that the Teacher-Training Course of our Church be made a part of the prescribed Course of Study for preachers entering the Conferences.

Three.

That we recommend to the Conference Boards the issuing each year of pennants to all schools and districts that reach the requirements of the Standards, the pennants bearing the inscription, "Standard School (or District), 191...," in large type, and "M. E. Church, South," in small type underneath. And we request the Department of Sunday School Supplies to prepare pennants and be ready to supply them to the Conference Boards at a nominal price.

Four.

That the Committee of the General Board which has in hand the matter of Standards be requested to prepare Graded Standards for both schools and districts, to be correlated with the Standards of our general departments.

Five.

That the General Sunday School Board be requested to arrange a plan of sub-district organization for the use of such districts as may find the present district plan insufficient. (This Board is asked to do this in order that a uniform plan may be followed throughout the Church wherever such sub-district organizing is done.)

Six.

That we commend the plan for an annual meeting in each Annual Conference of the district officers with the members of the Conference Sunday School Board, and request the General Sunday School Board to formulate an authoritative plan therefor, including a simple system of reports, and suggestions as to the financial support for our district organization.

Seven.

That, in order to encourage departmentalizing the Sunday schools, we interpret the latter part of point five of the Standard to mean a school the departments of which meet at least the lowest rank established by the departments of the General Sunday School Board.

Eight.

That, until the General Sunday School Board interprets or changes the Standard of Efficiency, and in order that our application of that Standard may be uniform, as well as serve to bring every school to the highest possible degree of completeness, we believe point three of the Standard should be interpreted to mean that all classes composed of pupils twelve years old and over shall be organized and enrolled as Wesley Classes before the school be graded as "standard" on that point.

Nine.

That we request the Superintendents of the Departments of Wesley Bible Class, and Teacher-Training, to take steps necessary to the issuance of their certificates and diplomas and all other special recognition only in the name and under the authority of our own Church, or as may be correlated to any action that may be taken by the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations.

Ten.

That we gratefully appreciate the development of Junaluska and take pride in it as a great meeting place for the workers of our Church. In order to meet a tremendous need in bringing the mass of our workers here, most of them of moderate means, we respectfully ask the management to take steps at once, if possible, to provide ample accommodations where board can be secured for an average of from $1 to $1.50 per day, such as is furnished at Ovoca, Blue Ridge, and elsewhere.

Eleven.

That, as our periodical, the "Workers' Council" is of first importance as a means of increasing the efficiency of our schools, and the field man has a splendid opportunity of increasing its circulation, we set 7000 new subscriptions as a goal for the next Conference year.

Twelve.

That we recommend to the various

It Works! Try It

Tells how to loosen a sore, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

NUX, IRON, PEPSIN AND SARSAPARILLA

The combination of two great medicines, Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron, by taking them in conjunction, one before eating and the other after, brings into co-operation the above-named substances, best for the blood, nerves and digestive organs.

This combination is especially recommended in cases that are scrofulous, or rheumatic, anemic and nervous, or where the blood is both impure and pale, deficient in iron—one of the most common disease conditions of the present day.

In cases where a laxative is needed, Hood's Pills should be taken. They work in perfect harmony with Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron, and are mild and efficient.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2. and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 65 cents and gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, be sure to ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio.—"I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. So I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 178 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely.

It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

VAIDEN AND WEST, N. MISS. CONF.

Dear Doctor Meek: Soon we will meet again in our annual gathering. How time flies! I seldom appear for admission into your columns, but I am sure a welcome will be extended me for a few dots from Vaiden and West Circuit.

Last year this charge was served by two men, but this year by myself only. Rev. W. M. Commander had in his charge three of the churches, which he served with acceptability, and he is mentioned oftimes by friends most affectionately. We have two parsonages on this charge, one at Vaiden, in which we live, and the other at West. The latter has been rented, and the proceeds will go towards improvements on the house and lot.

Our meetings have all been held: some were good, and some better. At Vaiden, we had the pleasure of listening to our old-time friend and spiritual father: the Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Drew, Miss. He is some older now than when I first recollect him, when he served the Corinth District in 1890, and when the fire flashed from the sparkling anvil. But he still has the vigor of youth. Rev. John W. Robertson of Cochrane, Ala., led the singing, and did it well. From Monday until Saturday following, the work needed could not be done. But much good was accomplished, and as a result six were added to the Church on profession of faith.

On the fifth Sunday in July, I was assisted at West by Rev. J. W. Robertson, who did half the preaching, the pastor doing the other half. In "Brother John's" songs he was a great help, and so were his messages from time to time. He is a good helper. As a result of this meeting, ten members were received, one by certificate, and nine on profession of faith. In four other meetings, the pastor did all the preaching. The Lord was with us, and much good resulted therefrom. Six persons were received at Emory on profession of faith, and the Church seemed much strengthened.

The people who make up this charge are a good people, and deserve a better service than it is possible for any pastor to give them under the present arrangement.

Our presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Mitchell, is a growing man. He is faithful in looking after his district and its interests. His preachers grow more and more in love with him, as they see his wisdom in managing the work of the church.

HENRY M. YOUNG.

FROM DUCK HILL, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: Let me say just a word about my work. I have one more meeting to hold. I will be with Brother Graves on the Montpelier Circuit next week. The Lord has been with me in my meetings this summer. I was with Brother Floyd at Bethel on the Holcomb Circuit. We had a great meeting. There were 23 additions to the Church. I went from there to Brother Wood, at Bethlehem Church, on the Winona Circuit. There we had an old-time revival which resulted in 23 accessions to the Church. Some of the people said that this was the best meeting that they had had at that church in ten years. I have had a good meeting at every appointment on my charge. I expect to go up to Conference with a full hand. Pray for us.

WORLD MOVES FORWARD WITH LONG STRIDES.

Peace has its Victories no Less Than War—Science Robs Calomel of its Nauseating and Dangerous Qualities—Calotabs the New Name.

Here is good news for the sixteen hundred million of people in the world who have livers to be cleansed, systems to be purified and biliousness, constipation and indigestion to be corrected. Calomel, the only successful liver medicine, has been robbed of its griping, nauseating and dangerous effects. Calotabs, the new name, makes calomel taking a real pleasure.

In future ask your druggist for Calotabs, the de-nauseated calomel tablet. He is authorized to refund the price if you are not "perfectly delighted" with Calotabs. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, a swallow of water—that's all. No taste or unpleasaintness of any kind. You wake up in the morning feeling fine, with a hearty appetite. Eat what you please and go about your work.

The genuine Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages—never in bulk. Price thirty-five cents for twenty doses. Your money back if you are not thoroughly delighted.—Adv.

SELF-POISONING.

Did you know that when you allow a slight case of constipation to continue you are poisoning yourself? The pores of your skin cannot carry off all the impurities of your body, and you should never force them to do more than their share by not keeping your bowels open. When constipated take Van Lax for your liver. It cleanses your entire digestive system. It does not gripe or nauseate. Contains no Calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant in taste and results. It is the ideal treatment for constipation and auto-intoxication or self-poisoning. Try it. Sold everywhere in bottles 50c. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's.

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 60 cents.

MOHAMMEDAN OR CHRISTIAN—WHICH?

It will be determined within half a generation whether Africa is to be a Mohammedan or Christian continent.

I think there is no land more than Russia that holds the fate of the coming years' situation, as it is in the belt of power where we find Japan and China, Germany, France and England, this country and Canada, blending the strongest strains in Europe and Asia, having the three most powerful religions of the world, Christianity, Judaism and Mohammedanism; having a people with marvelous capacities for vicarious suffering, for adventure and heroism; having what I regard a people the most religious of any people, unless it be the British Indians, and I do not know that I should make that exception. I see on the horizon no land with larger possibilities for the coming day.

All Europe is in the melting pot. Old things are passing away. Notice my language: All things may become new, not as a result of magic, not because of chance, not because of this war, but because throughout all Christian Churches there shall be sufficient leadership to take hold of these nations of the Near East, of all Europe that may need our ministry, as well as the Far East and Southern Asia and Africa and Latin-America to lead them out into this new age.—John R. Mott.

A HYMN WITH A MISSIONARY POSTSCRIPT.

The hymn, "He leadeth me," has much to commend it to those who love the cause of missions. It has been translated into many tongues and is known and loved around the world. Its author, Professor J. H. Gilmore of Rochester, N. Y., has given a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Gilmore Hattersley, and a son, Professor David Gilmore, of Rangoon Baptist College, to missionary work in Burma; and it has the distinction, unique among hymns, of having had added to it a missionary postscript after it had been singing its way around the world for fifty years.

In response to a request for information in regard to the hymn and its postscript, Professor Gilmore writes as follows:

"The hymn, 'He leadeth me,' was written in 1862 in the very darkest period of our Civil War. I was supplying the pulpit of the First Baptist Church in Philadelphia for a few Sundays, and was expected to give a somewhat extended talk at the midweek service. I began to give an exposition of the Twenty-third Psalm which I had given elsewhere two or three times before. But that night I did not get farther than the words, 'He leadeth me.' I saw a depth of meaning in those words that I had never seen before. I felt then, as I feel now when this terrible war is being waged in Europe, that it made no difference where we were led if we were only sure that God was leading us.

"After the meeting broke up, a few of us went into the house of Deacon Watson, next door to the church, where I was stopping, and we went on talking about the blessedness of being confident of Divine leadership.

"While the good people talked, I took out my pencil and wrote, 'He leadeth me,' just as it stands to-day with one exception: I made it a hymn of six-lined stanzas. My wife sent it to The Watchman and Reflector. Mr. Bradbury saw it and added the two lines.

'His faithful follower I would be,
For by His hand He leadeth me.'

"About the postscript. It was not written on the fiftieth anniversary of the hymn, as has been stated. But something did happen on that fiftieth anniversary which I like to associate with the hymn. As I have said, the hymn was written in 1862; in 1912, just fifty years later, my daughter Ruth married the Rev. Linn W. Hattersley and sailed for Burma, to devote her life to foreign missions.

"Naturally I was feeling deeply interested in foreign missions at that time, and the postscript may have taken shape then, though I think it was a little later. In 1914 the one hundredth anniversary of Adoniram Judson's entrance on his work in Burma was celebrated in Boston, and my son Doctor David C. Gilmore, who has been a missionary to Burma for more than a quarter of a century, was to be one of the speakers. I gave him some copies of the Missionary Postscript, thinking they might be useful, and a lady who was present at the Judson Centennial has told me how greatly the missionaries enjoyed singing the new verses of the old familiar hymn.

"You will be warranted, I think, in saying that the Missionary Postscript to 'He leadeth me' was inspired by the consecration of Professor Gilmore's daughter to foreign missionary work just fifty years after her father wrote the hymn, and that it was first sung at the Judson Centennial in Boston, in 1914.

"I might add, in closing, that some have objected to 'He leadeth me' on the ground that 'there is no Christ in it.' It was partly to counteract that objection that I wrote.

'Jesus, our Savior and our Lord,
We bow to Him with glad accord.'"

The Missionary Postscript.

Jesus, our Savior and our Lord.
We bow to Him with glad accord.
'Tis His to point us out the way;
'Tis ours to follow and obey.

Refrain:

He leadeth me, He leadeth me,
By His own hand He leadeth me;
His faithful follower I would be,
For by His hand He leadeth me.

He leads us on to foreign lands,
'Mid Arctic snows, o'er tropic sands;
And we, obedient to His will,
Will follow where He leadeth still.

3.

Obeying His divine command,
Sustained by His Almighty Hand,
'Tis ours to usher in that day,
When all the world shall own His sway.

A NEW WORKER AT BILOXI WESLEY HOUSE.

Miss Hasler writes that Miss Mattie Wike, formerly deaconess at Flat River, Mo., has been sent to Biloxi to assist her in the work there. The Wesley House at Flat River was recently blown away by a cyclone, and the continued riots among the foreigners necessitated closing the work. Flat River's loss is Biloxi's gain.

The kindergarten and day nursery have opened well and the various classes for the older children show an encouraging enrollment.

We are rejoiced to learn that Miss Hasler's health is greatly improved, having spent some time in Fountain Head (Tenn.) Sanitarium during the past summer. No wonder these faithful women break down physically—the burdens and responsibilities which they assume and the strain upon their sympathies are, indeed, very great.

They lay themselves upon the altar when they enter this service of their King, and we should not be sparing in lavishing upon them our love, prayers and material gifts.

The Church Paper on the Farm.

A manufacturer of agricultural implements in Wisconsin advertised in the church papers, of a certain Southeastern State, using large copy through a single season. At the end of the season the manufacturer wrote of this advertising campaign that it had been astonishingly successful, that his business had increased in that State by over $50,000.00 in a single season. He was advertising a transplanter machine. Another manufacturer in Baltimore, Md., put on a campaign through the church papers to advertise a machine having to do with cotton culture. He was overwhelmed with inquiries, and made sales in excess of his ability to produce the machine.

A Charleston, S. C., house dealing in fertilizers announced a selling expense of much less than 6 per cent on sales made direct to the consumers from advertising in church papers, and the calculation was made before the full returns from the church paper advertising had had time to come in. These illustrations might be multiplied many times. It shows that some church papers are highly regarded on the farm, and constitute most effective media for pushing business in substantial farm homes.

Like a Boy at 50 Bubbling Over With Vitality—Taking Iron Did It

Doctor says Nuxated Iron is greatest of all strength builders—Often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 100 per cent. in two weeks' time.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 45 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 after taking Nuxated Iron a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the bouyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or run down, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prizefighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Field

Chatham, La.

Dear Brother Meek: We have recently closed our fifth revival on the Brooklyn work, and God has blessed our efforts. There were some 18 persons reclaimed among the present membership, and 46 united with the Church—32 of them by baptism. Our work is moving forward in every way, and we feel deeply indebted to Brother C. E. McLean and others for their earnest and effective efforts among our people, but still more so to our Heavenly Father for his wonderful blessings. Requesting an interest in the prayers of our co-laborers, I am

Fraternally,

S. J. McLEAN.

Harperville, Miss.

Dear Doctor Meek: Our work moves along admirably, and we are gaining ground in many respects. The Agricultural High Schools at Lena and at Harperville have opened with an attendance of 75 and 105, respectively. Our Sunday school records bear testimony to the fact that we have the largest attendance in our schools from the boarding patronage that we have ever had. We will organize three Wesley Bible classes at Harperville to-morrow. We are in close touch with these ambitious boys and girls, and we are made to believe too that we are constantly drawing them closer to Christ and into a deeper love and admiration for our great Church. We are starting a campaign for the Advocate which promises to be effective. —L. Clegg, P. C.

Auburn, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I have closed out my revival meetings for this year. We began our meeting at Ebenezer on the third Sunday in July. We had an interesting series of services. We commenced our meeting at Johnston Station on the first Sabbath in September. It was claimed by some of the oldest citizens that it was the best meeting held at that place for years. Brothers E. A. King and Martin McCormack did the preaching, both Millsaps College men. They were licensed to preach last year under my ministry. They are preparing to enter the Conference. I predict a bright future for them. I feel sure that they will be heard from in the near future. The singing at Johnston was of a high order and gave tone and character to the meeting. I am sure that great good will be the outcome of these meetings. The Lord was with us from start to finish. To God be all the glory. Success to you and the Advocate that stands by Southern Methodism in this day of lofty thinking, apart from the scholars of the past who believed in the inspiration of the Bible with their whole hearts.—Robert H. Barr, P. C.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste products be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver failing to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the action of the liver and the bowels, and with careful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular action.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, constipation and indigestion: Because they do not cause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Because their use does not derange the stomach, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

OUR PREACHERS IN Y. M. C. A. WAR WORK.

John A. Rice. D.D., LL.D.

The Young Men's Christian Association has shown excellent wisdom in establishing training centers for the men who are to go into war work.

The center for the South this summer was Blue Ridge, North Carolina, where, through the kindness of a friend, my family and myself had the privilege of a delightful vacation. I saw, first-handed, the splendid discipline to which even preachers of long experience were subjected in preparation for this new work. Would that the Church could learn the importance of special training for special service!

Out of about eighty men at Blue Ridge, twenty-one, I am glad to know, were Methodists. Here they are:

Barton, J. H., Pine Log, Ga.
Carter, Rev. Cullen T., Bell Buckle, Tenn.
Cowart, Walter C., Savannah, Mo.
Dadman, Rev. E. T., 311 Berkley Avenue, Norfolk, Va.
Gillian, Otis L., Carrollton, Va.
Green, Lemuel Bailey, 703 Lapsley Street, Selma, Ala.
Goforth, Roby Glenn, Lenoir City, N. C.
Grogan, J. O., Opelika, Ala.
Hall, Earnest F., Prospect, Va.
Harmon, Nolan B., Jr., Magnolia, Miss.
McCollum, J. Giles, care of P. A. Sidell, Main and Jefferson, Dallas, Texas.
McDonald, C. L., Dublin, Texas.
Middlebrooks, C. L., Elamville, Ala.
Mims, Samuel McPherson, 530 12th Avenue, Tuscaloosa, Ala.
Powell, Rev. Bert A., Timmonsville, S. C.
Rippy, M. Leo, S. M. A., Dallas, Tex.
Ruff, Robert Hamric, Moorhead, Miss.
Rutland, R. Eugene,
Smith, Marvin L., Johnston, S. C.
James, Rev. J. C., Greensboro, Ala.
Powell, Paul S., Louisville Conference.

I am in receipt of a letter from one of them, in which he says, "I never had such a fine outlook for real work in my life. It would do your heart good to see the men crowding our buildings every night. Each man is enthusiastic and busy every waking hour."

It is easy to see what magnificent results will come from personal touch with the men under circumstances so auspicious. Those of us who have boys in the service will appreciate more and more, as the months pass, the splendid work done by these ministers of love and hope.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

We take this opportunity to thank our friends for their kind remembrance of us in our recent bereavement. The good people of Franklinton did everything in their power to lighten the burden of our sorrow. Our little girl was two years and four months old, and, being a general favorite in the home and in the community, her going away has left a vacancy in our hearts that the world can never fill. Very truly,

J. A. McCORMACK AND WIFE.

Fiery Eczema and Skin Eruptions Readily Yield to This Old Remedy

Sucessfully used for fifty years.

Eczema and similar skin troubles come from a disordered, impure condition of the blood, and they can only be cured by giving the blood a thorough cleansing, and removing from it all traces of impurity.

This is why S. S. S. has been used so successfully in hundreds of cases of Eczema and other skin eruptions.

This wonderful remedy is without an equal as a blood purifier, being probably the oldest blood medicine on the market. It has been sold by druggists for fifty years.

RICHARD W. FREEMAN was born in Griffin County, Georgia, on August 29, 1841, and passed to his heavenly home from a sanitarium in New Orleans on September 5, 1917. For some time he had lived with his son at Luling, La. He was married to Miss Cornelia Jordan in 1865, who was born in Dallas County, Ala. Two sons and two daughters were born to them. One son, two daughters, and their mother are left to mourn their loss. Brother Freeman was converted in early life and joined the M. E. Church, South, of which he was a consistent member until death. He filled every office in the Church that a layman can during his life. He was a good citizen, and an affectionate husband and father Brother Freeman was a Confederate veteran, having fought in General Jackson's corps under General Lee He was a faithful soldier during the conflict, being wounded four times, and surrendering with General Lee at Appomattox. His church membership was with us at Robeline—he was a charter member of our church there, and there we laid his remains to rest. He loved his Church, and even when he could not attend the preaching services, he read the Nashville and New Orleans Advocates, along with his Bibie, and thereby fed his soul. We point the bereaved ones to Jesus, and pray that the Holy Spirit may comfort them. T. D. LIPSCOMB.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RESOLUTIONS.

Conference Sunday-School Boards the use of a strictly Methodist program on "Go-To-Sunday-School Day," and that the offering on that day be applied to Conference Sunday school work.

Thirteen.

That we recommend to our Sunday schools that they observe only such general "special days" as may be endorsed by the General Board or its Executive Committee, or by the Conference Board.

Fourteen.

That, because of the absolute necessity that in our work in the field we shall do all in our power to increase the circulation of our literature, and because there has arisen considerable confusion incident to the fact that the Graded Lessons are in one Department while the Uniform Lessons, song books, and general Sunday school books are in another, and because we need to have all these supplies in the hands of trained Sunday school workers who can understand and assist our workers in their orders and in suggesting books and helps for them, and because we believe this will greatly increase the efficiency of the work and prove a successful business proposition, we earnestly request Smith & Lamar, Agents, to combine all Sunday school literature, books, and supplies, into one Department and place trained Sunday school workers in charge.

Fifteen.

That we request our representatives in the Sunday School Council to endeavor to bring about the formation of State Councils as auxiliaries to the Main Council.

Sixteen.

That we are in hearty sympathy with the policy of the General Sunday School Board in its enlarged plans of work and increased support, and pledge our co-operation.

Seventeen.

That we request the publication of these resolutions and such other acts or conclusions as this body may decide upon. A. L. DIETRICH.

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

SHIVAR SPRING AS NATURE MADE IT. NOW PROTECTED BY SANITARY SPRING HOUSE.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucomaines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

The Results.

Read the following letters which are fair samples of tens of thousands that are received at the Spring, then accept Mr. Shivar's guarantee offer. It gives you the equivalent of a three-week's visit to his celebrated Spring, with no charge for the water should you report no benefit. Sign your acceptance on the coupon below.

FROM NEW ALBANY.

Dear Doctor Meek: We held our fourth quarterly conference for New Albany Station last Monday, Sept. 24. Our Treasurer, Mr. L. K. Carlton, has sent each of the Conference treasurers a check for the entire assessment against our Church. The presiding elder and pastor have fared as well as the benevolences; hence the New Albany Church can about say, "We owe no man anything."

We are planning to close up the fourth year with a great revival, to begin October 7, with Brother G. A. Klein to do the preaching. So far, there have been something like 200 people added to the Church here during the past four years; and we are trusting that many will be saved during the revival we have in prospect. Our four years here have been unusually pleasant, and God has prospered His work. The spirit of our people is splendid; they are responsive, aggressive, and spiritual. Some good brother will find here a large, ripe and pleasant field in which to labor next year.
S. L. POPE, Pastor.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever and the grip, is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.—Adv.

"THE DISSOLUTION OF DOGMA."

Under this caption Dr. Lyman Abbott, in a recent number of the Outlook, discussed the tendency of the present day toward the deterioration of denominationalism. When the war broke out we were horrified at the reports of the ill-treatment of human beings, but now such news strikes our ears without arousing much sentiment because of its commonness. To have contemplated a few years ago with normal pulse and respiration the disintegrations of Churches and the burying of their distinctive teachings as a reality would have been regarded as a mark of an unbalanced judgment; but now we meet such discussions at every hand, and they no longer horrify us with their threatening aspects. But the orthodox faiths have weathered many storms, and we believe somehow they will be saved from these menacing evils. Not long since we heard hammering at the doors of the Churches for admission of those who had torn leaves from the Bible and who wanted recognition for their spoliations; they had bereft the Scriptures of all miracle; they had dethroned Christ, perverting the facts of the person of God and making the Savior of the world a mere man. Names of French and German accent were heard upon the lips of teachers to accentuate their peculiar bias. But to-day, strange as it may seem, the world seems to believe more than ever in the Christ of the Bible. Perhaps it will never fully recover from some of the astute critical studies of certain books of Holy Writ, but personal faith is more possible from the standpoint of Christ than some years ago. As crises have been weathered under great strains already, this one threatening to break down denominationalism, which is a menace, however, to all faith and organization, may be passed safely if those who believe in prayer will constantly abide at the throne of grace.

Perhaps no great writer along religious lines in America tries more eloquently to echo the trend of thought in the minds of certain prominent Church leaders than Dr. Abbott. Therefore, when he says that there is a movement to dissolve dogma one may rest confidently on the fact that certain Church dignitaries, influential, able to control large sums of money, are making gigantic efforts in that direction. Dr. Abbott is a reader of the public prints in a large fashion; he has the newspaper instinct, and what he says may be taken with the knowledge that it is novel, if possible. He states: "The old theological controversies have passed away. The problems are not solved, but they no longer interest. The phrases of the schools have lost their meaning. Unitarian and Orthodox, agnostoc and believer, natural and supernatural, do not mean what they once meant. .....Not merely denominational partitions are crumbling. Jew, pagan, and Christian discover in each other spiritual kinship. Julius Rosenwald is endowing Young Men's Christian Associations on a magnificent scale. Tagore's ministry deepens the spiritual life of the Christian Church."

These passages from Dr. Abbott do not indicate a change of heart in searching for a deeper faith, but they lay bare the sparsity of fixed belief and evidence the all too-prevalent tendency to bend to the powers that be. Paul lived among pagans more versatile in their "ministry" than Rabindra Nath Tagore, the Bengali poet of decided Epicurean bent, but he did not discover much spiritual kinship among those of Agrippa's type or among those upon Mars Hill; he lived among Jews very prominently connected and as influential in their spheres as Mr. Rosenwald is in his, but he set forth the differences between his teachings and their views, instead of emphasizing their similarities. The force of Christianity has ever been its peculiar teachings which stand over against the common thoughts of men in sharp and vigorous contrast; the power of the organized Church has ever discovered its secret in its peculiar doctrines, vastly removed from those of other organizations. Just as soon as the utilitarians who are dabbling in religion succeed in subverting the use of the great organized Churches and in making of them reform societies, or a unified reform body, with no distinctive teachings, that moment will the force of Christianity be lost. There could be imagined no deeper insult to the cause of Christ than to place it on a footing with the beliefs of Unitarians, agnostics, naturalists, Jews, and pagans, talking of it concordantly with them in the same breath, representing it as having lost something of its former meaning and as more in accord with blashphemous heresies. There is scarcely a minister among the true Churches of America, we hope, who is willing to go this far with Dr. Abbott. We still believe in the distinctive teachings of Christianity; millions still have a peculiar faith in their Savior, and the thought of losing the identity of their sustaining faith in the vile scum of pagan looseness is fairly repulsive.

But Dr. Abbott has some ground upon which to base his superstructure of a hybrid religion—this pagano-Christian idea, which he considers an ideal state for the future. However far removed we are from it at present, the tendency to unite the various denominations irrespective of their individual dogmas is a step in that direction. Perhaps it is well to have in our midst far-seeing individuals of Dr. Abbott's type, for they serve to warn the Churches of the peril awaiting them if too much liberty is granted. Should not the present agitation to unite denominations, and then to form combinations with unbelieving and secular organizations, fail, Christ would be made of no effect and the results of his ministry would be swept off the earth.

HELP THE LOUISIANA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

The statement from Rev. A. W. Turner, superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, in last week's Advocate, that but few of our churches and Sunday schools in this State are helping financially the great cause which he represents, merits attention. Scarcely any State in the Union needs the assistance of the Anti-Saloon League more urgently than Louisiana, and our pastors and Sunday school superintendents should see that the World's Temperance Sunday, Nov. 4, is properly observed, and that a collection is taken for this important work. What would become of the National Organization of the Anti-Saloon League if all the States should neglect to contribute to its maintenance? Certainly Louisiana should do its part in keeping it up, since it has done, and is doing, so much to help suppress the open saloon within its bounds. In helping the National organization, we are helping ourselves in the most effective way possible. We hope that the World's Temperance Sunday will be made to count for much by our people, and that Brother Turner's heart will be made to rejoice because of the sinews of war that are sent to him as a result of its observance. Brother Turner's address is Box 32, Shreveport, La.

"RED LIGHT DISTRICT" TO BE ABOLISHED.

The insistence of the National Secretary of War, Mr. Baker, and the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Daniels, has led the New Orleans City Council to take action which will abolish the "red light district" of this city within the next thirty days, this being done, of course, in the interest of the soldiers and sailors quartered near here. This is, indeed, gratifying, for the restricted district of New Orleans is said to have been for many years one of the most notorious in the United States. Mayor Behrman, in announcing the action of the City Council, took occasion to emphasize the point that it was to be attributed to the influence of the Washington authorities, and not to any conviction of the local officials that the segregation plan is not the best way to handle the social vice problem. We hope, however, that, having got rid of this awful evil as a legally recognized thing, the citizens of New Orleans will never again permit it to be accorded the sanction of the law. We have a strong conviction that it is far better to outlaw immorality than to license and authorize it. It at least puts upon it, if it does not suppress it, the stamp of public condemnation.

It is said that this action will cast adrift perhaps some 750 profligate women. Here is a problem for the Christian people of this city to which they should be quick to address themselves. This will, in all probability, furnish a golden opportunity for them to rescue some souls that are fast sinking beneath the dark waves of sin. Jesus came to save the worst of transgressors.

A FACT WORTH NOTING.

One advantage of the Southern Methodist form of government is that it tends to make our preachers courageous in combating popular evils. A Methodist pastor is not afraid of being dismissed by his congregation if some of its leading men should dislike his pulpit utterances. Some years ago a prominent Baptist layman who was an ardent prohibitionist, in speaking of a fight against the saloons in a town in which the liquor traffic was strongly entrenched, remarked to us that the Methodist minister was the only clergyman there who would open his mouth in behalf of the cause.

"WHAT WILT THOU HAVE ME TO DO?"

Hast Thou, my Master, aught for me to do
To honor Thee to-day?
Hast Thou a word of love to some poor soul
That I may say?
For see, this world that Thou hast made so fair
Within its heart is sad.
Thousands are lonely, thousands sigh and weep,
But few are glad.

And which among them all is mine to-day?
O guide my willing feet
To some poor soul that fainting on the way,
Needs comfort sweet;
Or into some sick-room, where I may speak
With tenderness of Thee,
And showing Thee and what Thou art, O Christ,
Bid sorrow flee!

Or unto one whose straits call not for words,
To one in want, in need,
Who asks not counsel, but would take from me
A loving deed.
Surely Thou hast some work for me to do;
O open Thou mine eyes
To see how Thou wouldst have done it,
And where it lies!

—Southern Churchman.

SPIRIT-FILLED.

The last step in the prayer life is by far the most glorious of all. It is then that we come to realize that our lives are but a ceaseless expression of the Spirit's prayers. Then down deep beneath the threshold of the conscious self we know the Spirit of the Father—the Spirit of Jesus—is ever striving to work out the "sweet will of God." When we commit our prayers to Him as well as our works and ways, a new day dawns upon the heart—everything begins to glow with the glory of God.—Unidentified.

FOLLOWERS BECOME LEADERS.

As my guide climbed the mountain he carried a hatchet and cut gashes in the trees here and there along the way. That is called "blazing," and it marks out the path for the next time. There are few wildernesses now that are not traversed by many blazed paths. Moreover, every step I took in following my guide I was wearing away the moss and underbrush and packing the ground, and helping, though ever so little, to make a distinct path for those that would come after me. And that is what every follower of our heavenly Guide is doing in this world—helping to make a path that will make the next Christian's "walk and conversation" easier and safer.—The Congregationalist.

THE SKY OF LIFE.

Patterson Du Bois.

God's mercies are always more numerous than we see them. We choose to call one thing or another a benefit and a blessing because it happens to fit our desires, or, at least, our ideas of what a blessing ought to be. But we are too insensible, too shortsighted, to see all the stars of God's goodness in our sky. Only here and there do we perceive a point of light, a larger or a lesser sun or planet. But had we finer spiritual vision, we should perceive the innumerable points of light in what are now to us but the dark interstellar spaces. The highly sensitized plate of the astronomical photographer reveals a countless multitude of stars where a field glass, or even a telescope, fails to discover aught but blank space. We have not gone so far yet in our spiritual perceptions—we are not yet so spiritually sensitized—as to see our sky a blaze of light. But each new revelation, each new star, or group of stars, as it appears above our horizon, ought to be an evidence that the dark is not darkness, but light unperceived. The sky of life is not merely studded with mercies. It is itself mercy.

Whenever you decide on a course, trusting God and asking Him to block you if you are wrong, go on; for if it were not His path for you He would have told you. Dare to go on.—F. B. Meyer.

"GOING FOR THE BISHOPS."

By Bishop E. E. Hoss.

After a good deal of notification, the papers have at last published "The Laymen's Address," though by what right the document can claim to be entitled to so ambitious a caption it is rather difficult to determine. If it had been put forth as the address of a certain dissatisfied faction of laymen in the Church, the obection to it would have been less serious. As a matter of fact, it did not originate with laymen at all. Nothing is more certain than that it had its birth not far from the rooms of the Board of Missions at Nashville—and was written by a gentleman drawing a comfortable salary from the Church. The real precursor of it was a paper issued some months ago by Rev. Ed. F. Cook, who has never been slow to assert to the uttermost limit his own authority as a Missionary Secretary, and who heralded his departure from the service of his Church, and his flying leap into the Moody Institute at Chicago, by making a furious and most unjust assault upon certain of our Bishops. To this diatribe I have already paid some attention—more, doubtless, than it deserved—in your columns. With greater wisdom, perhaps, the rest of my colleagues have answered it with a most significant silence, being evidently controlled by the sound principle that the Bishops of the Methodist Church are amenable only to the General Conference, which may, if it sees fit, put them on trial for any faults of character or administration, but only according to definitely-prescribed legal methods. No one of them, as far as I am aware, has ever objected in the least to such a proceeding. But all of them, I suppose, would seriously resent an arraignment through a penny pamphlet by Mr. Cook or by anybody else.

A few preachers and laymen about Nashville, not one of whom has a connectional standing of any great importance, have been very busy for the past six months in giving whatever force and prominence their names could add to this unbrotherly and malignant utterance. Several of these gentlemen, to my certain knowledge, have been the bitter partisans of Vanderbilt University, and have joined most heartily in the condemnation and censure of the Bishops who stood true and firm to the interests of the Church on that issue. If this statement is denied or doubted, I am prepared to make it good to the satisfaction of even my Holston friend, Rev. Robert P. Shuler, who can easily see through a grindstone when there is a hole in the center of it.

The outcome of all the labors of these followers of Mr. Cook is that by a most industrious beating of the bush they have been able to scare up 186 Methodist men who are willing to become the signatories and sponsors of the precious document now under review. I am quite sure that, even with my scanty knowledge of the Church, I could have furnished them off-hand with 500 names of laymen who are so dissatisfied with Methodism and its officials that they would have signed almost any paper that could have been prepared and presented to them. But even that number, or ten times that number, would hardly be sufficient to shake the steadfastness of the more than 2,000,000 convinced and loyal Methodists who are reasonably-well content with our Church government, and not at all suspicious nor mistrustful of the men whom they have chosen to administer it.

First and last I have had the honor of knowing many great laymen in our Annual and General Conferences; such as Thos. Branch, Thos. J. Magruder, Governor Thos. J. Jarvis, General Robert B. Vance, Dr. James H. Carlisle, Governor Alfred H. Colquitt, Chief Justice James Jackson, Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, Colonel W. L. Nugent, Judge J. Wofford Tucker, Col. E. W. Cole, Judge J. Milton Brown, Colonel John F. House, Colonel Asa Holt, Senator Trusten Polk, Governor Thos. Seay and Governor B. B. Comer. These are only a few that I might name. If any one of them ever undertook to play the part of an agitator or disorganizer I never heard of it. With all their hearts they believed in Methodism—its doctrines and its economy. It is left for Mr. Frank H. Fritts, against whom I have no word to say, except that I wouldn't just choose him to lead any great reform in Church or State—it is left for him, I say, to head the procession of disgruntled brethren who are doing their best to give currency to the calumnious accusations that the enemies of Methodism have been rolling as sweet morsels under their tongues for 100 years. This same sort of stuff can be heard at any time at a Hardshell association in the backwoods, or at a two days' meeting in Zion Church on Deepwater Creek. If I must listen to it at all, I prefer to hear it there, where it is usually spoken with a tone of bitter and uncompromising sincerity and severity.

The unconcealed purpose of Mr. Fritts and those who agree with him is to pack the approaching session of the General Conference; for how else can they hope to carry through their program? By their own words they mean to have, first, "publicity," or the washing of an accumulated lot of soiled Methodist linen in the front yard, for the delectation of the nostrils of the general public. Then they are going to demand "investigation," which, if Mr. Cook's pamphlet is a fair specimen, will also fill the air with malicious charges against men who have all maintained in their past lives a good repute for probity and uprightness. The net results of all these activities is to be "recorded in legislation."

I sincerely hope that the ministers and laymen of the Church will be wise enough and strong enough to do what they have usually done in the past, that is, to choose their representatives on the general principle of competency and character, not because they are the trumpeters of any special fads, nor the advocates of any so-called reforms, which, if carried into effect, would be sure to upset many of the historical tenets for which our fathers fought.

Such men as Asbury and McKendree and Soule and Paine and McTyeire and Keener were no mere "prentice hands" in Church building. They expected their work to last, and they buttressed it with statutory enactments and organic law. If the Cookites and Frittites really think that they can overturn it in a day and night, they "have another think coming." Whatever changes are made in the Discipline will have to be made in strict accordance with the provisions of the Discipline itself. Any attempt to sweep things by main force will be met by the strong barricades of law. The Bishops will not, of course, undertake to enforce their own will, but, unless they are weaker men than their predecessors, they will maintain by all the power of their office the sovereignty of the law. If they should be weak enough to be swayed from this position by any clamor or menace from any quarter, then the sooner they are got rid of the better.

The first demand that is put forth is for an equal number of laymen and ministers in the Annual Conferences. Nobody has any serious objection to that. But the laymen should be chosen by the whole body of the laity, and not by any ambitious cliques who are hankering after prominence. Let the principle of democracy begin to operate at the very bottom. Ex-officio membership in the Conferences is a violation of the first principle of sound democracy.

The second demand is for full lay representation in the cabinet. Nothing more wrong in principle, nor more vicious in practice, could be imagined. No layman brings himself or his family under the operation of the law of the itinerancy. That he should nevertheless sit back at home, and follow his secular business, and yet claim the right to say to the preachers, "Go to this place, or that," is absurd. The itinerancy has its heavy burdens. The man who assumes its vows binds himself for life to the most serious tasks imaginable; and not himself only, but his wife and children he includes in these vows. Certainly he has the right to have his fields of labor assigned to him by his brethren who have assumed the same pledges. Laymen have their place in Church work, but they can not venture without presumption to take part in the matter of making the appointments.

It is further insisted that the Bishops shall be elected at the utmost for four years, with the possibility of re-election. What an infallible bid for demagogy that would be! Every General Conference would present an open field for electioneering, and every weak and designing man once put into the Episcopacy would be exposed to temptation of wire pulling and maneuvering during the whole quadrennium to secure a second term.

I am reaching the end of my journey. It is a very little thing to me personally what my revolutionary brethren may succeed in doing. Long before they can accomplish their designs, I shall stand in the presence of the King to be judged for the deeds done in the body. But the thought of the harm and damage that may come to the Church which I have loved with a passionate devotion for more than fifty years, and have served with my best ability during the greater part of that time, goes to the core of my heart. I could not be still and watch these assaults upon what I conceive to be its very citadel, without dishonoring the principles for the maintenance of which I have given my whole life without reserve or qualification. May God defend and protect the right!—Texas Christian Advocate.

SHALL WE BE SLACKERS IN OUR GIFTS TO MISSIONS?

To the Pastors and Laymen of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Our Annual Conference session is but a few weeks off, and in most of our pastoral charges much yet remains to be done in the way of bringing up the assessments, especially for the benevolences. In many instances churchmen are using the war, the Red Cross work, and the Liberty bond issue as excuses for falling behind in their contributions to missions. In reality, however, our country was never more prosperous than it is to-day, and in our own State a kind Providence has favored our people with the best crops in years. Ours is an agricultural State, and at no time previous have our farmers enjoyed the advantage of better prices for their products. Let us then not be content with anything less than full collections for the Lord's work.

Beyond all question, America is now confronted with the greatest opportunity of the ages for leadership in missionary enterprise and in great constructive and reconstructive tasks. In this day of world-conflict the primacy in missionary activity has passed to the Protestant Churches of North America. Hence for our beloved Methodism to fall short in missionary offerings in this crucial hour would be a tragedy.

Inasmuch as our missionaries are being very seriously affected by high prices, which in nearly all our mission fields have become almost prohibitive, our General Secretaries urge that wherever possible a special offering be taken and forwarded at once to Nashville to form a part of the war relief fund of $20,000 which the Mission Board finds it necessary to raise for our missionaries. In a recent letter to the Missionary Voice, Dr. A. P. Parker, of Shanghai, China, says: "The rise in the price of silver and the subsequent fall in the amount of silver dollars that we get for our gold drafts strikes us very hard. Thus our salaries are less by more than thirty per cent as compared to less than a year ago. On the other hand, the prices of everything that we have to buy have advanced. Coal that we could buy less than a year ago for $10 (Mexican) per ton now costs $17 per ton. Butter that we could buy for 85 cents (Mexican) per pound now costs $1.10 per pound. Flour is now so costly that we cannot afford the American product, and have to live on that which is made in China from native wheat. Our salaries are not sufficient to meet our necessary expenses. I do not write in any complaining spirit, but matters are really becoming distressing."

No European country, unless it be France, is carrying heavier burdens of war taxation than is England. Yet Mr. John R. Mott states that the London Missionary Society last year cleared off a large indebtedness, and carried on its work without retrenchment. The Wesleyan Missionary Society received the largest income it has ever had in its history, and the Methodist Church in Canada had a larger income in 1916 than it had ever had during the prosperous days of peace. It is gratifying to note that a similar spirit of sacrifice and of liberality is beginning to manifest itself among Southern Methodists. In a recent appeal to the pastors of Southern Methodism, our General Secretary, Dr. W. W. Pinson, gives the following encouraging news: "We are sending out the largest number of missionaries that have gone for many years. Large special gifts are coming to the Board. To date there has been no diminution in the regular income for the year."

Fathers and mothers to-day are freely giving their sons in defense of Christian ideals, our rights as a nation, and the liberty of mankind. Millions are being contributed by Americans of all classes for that worthy charity, the Red Cross work. Shall it be said that the sons and daughters of Methodism in Mississippi who rejoice in the purity and saving power of the gospel are slackers in their efforts and contributions for the extension of the Master's Kingdom, which offers the only adequate remedy for the world's ills? God forbid. Yours in the Master's cause,

M. M. BLACK,
Sec'y Board of Missions, Miss. Conference.

FROM BROTHER DODSON.

Dear Brothers of the Louisiana Annual Conference: The good people of Minden are looking forward with happy anticipation to your coming to the Annual Conference on November 28. Minden is an old town of the Southern type. It was settled in 1837 by sturdy, good people, and their descendants still live here—a splendid, good people, too. You will receive a very hearty welcome to our town; you will have a warm place in our heart and each one of you shall have a good home.

So far as the writer of these few lines is concerned, there is no occasion quite so grand as an Annual Conference occasion. There is so much pleasure and inspiration in shaking hands with the brethren, and feeling the pulse-beat of love and sympathy.

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

We include in these remarks the laymen who are delegates to the Conference. Some of you are now in the "annual tug" to bring up everything in full, and I trust that you will all be able to do so.

Those in the home in which the Bishop will be entertained are looking expectantly forward to his coming. The lady of the home says that she read The Nashville Advocate while he was its editor and has read everything he has written since that she could get, with pleasure. So, he too will receive a real, hearty welcome.

No connectional man is left out. Dr. McMurry will be here and will tell you of his great offer to all preachers who have their collections for Church Extension in full. Be sure to have them full, for you will be glad when he tells you.

I should like very much to have all the names of those who are coming, whose names do not appear in Conference Minutes. With love and best wishes to all, Your friend and brother,

Minden, La. K. W. DODSON.

SCATTER BLESSINGS.

Mary's ointment was wasted when she broke the vase and poured it upon her Lord. Yes; but suppose she had left the ointment in the unbroken vase? What remembrance would it then have had? Would there have been any mention of it on the gospel pages? Would her deed of careful keeping have been told all over the world? She broke the vase and poured it out, lost it, sacrificed it, and now the perfume fills all the earth. We may keep our lives, if we will, carefully preserved from waste; but we shall have no reward, no honor from it at the last. But if we empty it out in loving service, we shall make it a lasting blessing to the world, and we shall be remembered forever.—J. R. Miller, D.D.

THE CALL TO THE CAUCUS.

(The following is an exact copy of the letter that was sent out to the signers of the so-called "Laymen's Address," summoning them to the caucus held in Chattanooga on September 27. Let the reader notice particularly the italicized parts of it, the Italics being ours. The program announced is just about such as would be expected from a company of secular politicians. Who ever thought that such a program as this would be unblushingly undertaken in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South? Note that this letter is sent out on the stationery of the Lay Leader of the Holston Conference.—Editor of the Advocate.)

Conference Lay Leader
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 12th, 1917.

Dear Brother: The movement for certain changes in the polity of our Church, of which you are one of the sponsors, has reached the point where closer organization and co-operation are absolutely necessary. Permanent officers must be elected, issues and methods discussed, definite plans of campaign laid out, and committees created to prosecute them vigorously.

The address has been sent to all the Church papers with the request for publication. The Nashville Advocate carried it in full last week, with very favorable comment. Some of the Conference organs are not receiving it so favorably. We must mobilize at once to defend our position and press the issue.

To that end, the one hundred and eighty-seven signers of the address are called to meet at Hotel Patten, Chattanooga, Thursday, Sept. 27, 1917, at 10 o'clock a.m., for a day of conference. It is of importance that every man be present if possible. Great issues are at stake. We have inaugurated a movement that is vital to the future of our Church. We must stand together and see it through successfully.

Put other things aside for this once, and come. Please let us know by return mail your purpose to be present. Any interested layman whom you care to invite will be welcome.

Yours for a greater Methodism,
CREED F. BATES.

ANOTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SO-CALLED LAYMEN'S COMMITTEE.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 29, 1917.

My Dear Brother: At a called meeting of the signers of the lay address to the Church, held in Chattanooga on September 27, the following supplementary statement was drafted, and the undersigned was instructed to send the same to the Church papers, with an earnest request for publication. We trust you will be able to find space for it in the next number of your paper.

Yours very truly,
J. H. SMITH, Secretary.

Laymen Make Supplementary Statement to the Church.

At a called meeting of the signers of the Lay Address to the Church, held at Hotel Patten, Chattanooga, on September 27th, the following supplementary statement was authorized with regard to the Movement for Methodist Revision:

Reaffirming our loyalty to the Church and our whole-hearted desire to promote its best interests, we commit ourselves again to the spirit and purpose of the Address and commend it to the thoughtful consideration of all our preachers and laymen. We believe that in general the suggestions of legislation therein made are practical and timely, and that they will commend themselves favorably to the vast majority of our people, both clerical and lay.

Limitation of the episcopal term of office, the introduction of some degree of democratic government in the local church, larger lay representation in the Annual Conference, some modification of the appointing power, the creation of episcopal bleeding Belgium beneath the iron heel of his soldiery, with the cry of outraged women and murdered children rising on the air wherever his despicable banner waves, with his death-dealing bombs thrown upon sleeping non-combatants, with poisoned wells and gases killing the innocent, and his submarines filling the seas with the floating carcasses of mothers and babes, the Kaiser TALKS OF HIS LOYALTY to the highest interests of civilization and of his intimacy with almighty God. "Actions speak louder than words," and the true measure of the loyalty of these "leaders" to the Church is what they have done and what they propose to do. Have they not struck, in an underhanded and unprecedented manner, at the very vitals of our Methodist polity —the things that have been its strength and glory? Have they not libeled the history of our Church, saying that American Methodism was born and typed when absolutism reigned throughout the world, whereas it was cradled along with the American republic, the proudest achievement of democracy that can be found beneath the stars? Surely, they ought to apologize for this base slander of the splendid past of our noble communion and its sainted dead. Considering the type of preachers behind this movement, does any informed man believe its directing agencies are "loyal" to the doctrines of Methodism? We do not doubt that, if they could, they would revise the sacred and Scriptural standards of our faith with a hand quite as reckless as that with which they would knock into smithereens its tested and historic polity?

To what in Methodism are these revolutionary leaders loyal? Let them catalogue specifically the things for which they stand, that we may look at them. Where was the loyalty of these Nashvillites, who are now so devoted to the interest of Southern Methodism, when the fight for the ownership and control of Vanderbilt University was on? Where was it when Mr. Carnegie slapped the Church in the face, telling her, in effect, that she had no business in the field of higher education, and threw his million dollars into the scale against her when the lawsuit was pending in the supreme court of Tennessee? Where was this loyalty when the Nashville papers reeked and run over with scurrilous attacks upon the Chief Pastors of our Church? Where was it, when the insulting and infamous "Bishops' squirm" was danced and the streets of Nashville were paraded to celebrate the victory of Kirkland, Carnegie & Co., in having successfully wrested from the Church her property? Aye, where was the loyalty of R. B. Eleazer, J. H. Smith, James H. Parks, J. A. Craig, and the others of the seven men who started this notorious agitation in that shameful period of diabolism and darkness? If any one of them then had a vestige of loyalty it seems to have been cowardly hidden away under a bushel where it could not shine. And Bishop Hoss, the Church's peerless leader, who happily yet lingers with us as the truest of the true and the bravest of the brave, says: "Several of these gentlemen, to my certain knowledge, have been bitter partisans of Vanderbilt University, and have joined most heartily in the condemnation and censure of the Bishops who stood true and firm to the interests of the Church on that issue." We are inclined to think that the things in Southern Methodism to which these dominating revolutionists are loyal bear about the same proportion to the grand superstructure of our Church, that a bung-hole does to the average barrel.

Yet after their secret propaganda, after circulating their pamphlet attacking our Bishops, after their private caucus in Chattanooga, and their proclaimed purpose to conduct a political campaign throughout the Church with a view to revolutionizing its government, these men insist that they should be treated as if they had proceeded in a normal and straightforward manner to secure needed changes in our Discipline, and as if they had been moving all along upon high lines. Here again we have an exhibition of the brazen German spirit—Germany seeming to think that she can do anything that she wants to do, however barbaric and outrageous, and yet that she should be dealt with as if her methods were above reproach and her repudiations of sacred obligations of no consequence. These revolutionary leaders need to learn that they cannot make secret warfare upon the institutions of Southern Methodism, libel its history, malign its leaders, reflect upon its ministers, and corrupt its organized agencies, and, while these things are yet unapologized for, expect the true and loyal element of the Church to counsel with them as reformers moving upon a high plane, and to keep their lips shut concerning their indefensible methods, the wrong that they have done innocent men, and the vast injury that they have inflicted upon the Church which they affect to love by utterly misrepresenting it before the public.

Personally, we do not care for the part of the denunciation of this little bunch of men (some two dozen) who caucused in Chattanooga, that was intended for us. The supporters of honest and rugged Grover Cleveland said, "We love him for the enemies he has made;" and a man's opponents are not infrequently a tribute to his character and his service. We count the denunciation of these traducers of our history and our government a badge of distinction and honor—one which we are proud to have fastened upon us. This is not the first denouncement that the ring at Nashville has spewed out upon the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate (we may publish some others later, that the public may see them)—we are getting to be rather accustomed to such spittings-forth—though usually they have been made under cover.

In conclusion, we desire to say once more, most emphatically, that we except from the strictures contained in this utterance all the good and true men who signed the first "Address" sent out by Mr. Fritts, without realizing what had gone before or comprehending the true significance of this discreditable agitation. What we have said has been meant to apply to the directors of the Nashville-hatched junta, not to those who have been inveigled into a remote connection with it. The former, we think, fully deserve all the criticism that has been visited upon them in the Church press, and more. They have written the most shameful chapter in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—a chapter which, in some respects (as, for instance, the way in which the Laymen's Missionary Movement has been used to scatter abroad the seeds of calumny and sedition), is positively Jesuitical and scandalous." If the College of Bishops were to undertake to lay hands upon some organized arm of service in the Church, to make war upon the Board of Missions, and to control the next General Conference to accomplish their ends, there would be a howl from these agitators and the clerical directors behind them that would be heard from Dan to Beersheba. But when these men themselves—those in the open and those invisible in the background—would play a similar role, with the Bishops and our itinerant system as the victims, it is downright wicked for any editor to lift his voice in remonstrance. If in the coming years we are to have organized factions with caucuses, and committees, and campaign bureaus, and endeavors to manipulate the machinery of the Church, after the fashion that these agitators are seeking to introduce among us, sad and humiliating indeed will be the future of Southern Methodism. And the way to prevent this is to put the stamp of our disapproval, quickly and strongly, upon this first attempt to set up in our beloved Zion a political machine, with plans and methods akin to those of contending parties in the secular world.

EDUCATIONAL ASSESSMENTS AND CENTENARY SUBSCRIPTIONS.

While we are making the final drive for our Conference assessments, it may be well to call attention to the importance of our educational assessments in the Louisiana Conference. The collection of these assessments in full would mightily strengthen our institutions by assisting considerably in their maintenance. Both Centenary and Mansfield need the re-enforcement that would come from assessments in full. And why can we not reach this goal when the unprecedented prices for all farm products is filling the country sections with money; the very sections which have generally shown the largest deficits on the collections? If we do not come up in full with our collections this year of plentiful money, something is evidently wrong either with our interest in God's work, or with our efforts to raise the collections.

Last year as a Conference we raised less than 48 per cent of our educational assessment. We simply must have this year not less than 55 per cent or 60 per cent in order to meet our absolute obligations; and we need the entire assessment. Let every pastor, if he finds it impossible to secure the entire assessment, strive to get at least a substantial increase over last year's figures.

Allow me to call attention to another phase of this matter. The minutes of our last Confreence show that the Conference as a whole paid about 60 per cent of its assessment for the Bishops, 66 per cent on Conference Claimants, 54 per cent on Foreign Missions, 51 per cent on Home and Conference Missions, 55 per cent on Church Extension and less than 48 per cent on Education. I do not know whether the people in some charges refuse to give to our educational work, or whether the pastors arbitrarily divide the lump collection, giving more to one and less to another in the division, or how this difference comes, but the educational assessment last year got considerably less of its proportionate aomunt than any other of the collections. I would not have a special discrimination in favor of this interest, but I am asking for a square deal. There were twenty charges last year which reported nothing on this assessment. There were only twenty-seven that paid it in full. Let us see if we can not make a new record on all our assessments this yaer, and in cases where the full assessment can not be secured, give every interest its proportionate share of collections taken for Conference assessments as a whole.

I should like to call attention to another matter of importance. A considerable number of the personal subscriptions taken for Centenary College during our Conference session remain unpaid. Will not each subscriber arrange to pay these by the time our Conference meets in Minden?

Fraternally,

W. WINANS DRAKE.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE OPENING.

The opening of Millsaps College was up to the expectation of the most hopeful. At the close of the first week the attendance was just nine short of the same date last year.

On the opening day addresses were delivered by Judge A. H. Whitfield; Mr. J. W. Broom, of the State Department of Education; Mr. G. B. Power, present Clerk of the Lower House of the Mississippi Legislature, who came up just twenty-five years ago for registration.

Two new members of the faculty appeared for the first time on the morning of the opening: Prof. A. P. Hamilton, who will teach German and Greek, and Prof. D. J. Savage, who is the new Head Master of the Prerparatory School. The former is a graduate of Southern University and comes to us from the Woman's College at Montgomery, Ala., while the latter is an alumnus of Millsaps College, having graduated in the class of 1914 and having taught since then in the Missouri Military Academy at Mexico, Mo. A new feature of the opening this year was the introduction of military training and the presence also of Major Workhizer, retired, of the United States Army, as instructor in military tactics. It was especially gratifying to see present several of the students of last year who volunteered for service in the army and who are at present at Camp Jackson, just outside the city limits. The classroom work is in full swing and all seem to be getting right down to work. The Senior Class has twenty-two, as against twenty-six last year. The literary societies and the Y. M. C. A. have made a good start for the year.

PRAYER BRINGS PEACE.

Live a veritable life of prayer. Make prayer the chief part not only of your life, but of your service. Have answers to prayer as a constant experience. Be like the young man in a Conference in India, who said, "I used to pray three times a day; now I pray only once a day, and that is all day." Keep your feet busy all the day, your hands ceaselessly active, your head full of matters of business, but the heart never out of communication with Him.—Illustrated. Notes.

If the spring puts forth no blossoms, in summer there will be no beauty, and in autumn no fruit. So if youth is trifled away without improvement, manhood will be contemptible and old age miserable.—Blair.

WELL-EXPANDED LUNGS NOT ENOUGH.

Pure blood is indispensable to the health and strength of the lungs. The delicate structure of these organs makes it necessary. When the blood is impure the lungs lose their tone, and even if they are permitted to expand freely, they have not the power fully to perform their important work. The fact is, there is nothing more necessary in our physical economy than pure blood—the kind of blood that Hood's Sarsaparilla makes. This medicine is the good old reliable family remedy for diseases of the blood, scrofula, rheumatism, catarrh, and low or run-down conditions of the system. At this time, when coughs and colds are so prevalent, Hood's Sarsaparilla is an invaluable tonic. Get it to-day, and begin to take it at once. Accept no substitute.—Adv.

The Home Circle

TWO TIN CLOCKS.

Grandfather and Arnold were sitting on the verandah of Arnold's home, waiting for the rest of the family to get ready for church. Grandfather was enjoying his visit, for he and Arnold were the best of chums.

"What time is your Sunday school held?" asked grandfather.

"At twelve o'clock—right after preaching service," answered Arnold; "but I'm not going to stay to-day."

Grandfather looked at him in surprise. "Aren't you well?" he asked.

"Oh, yes, but I don't feel like it. It's too pleasant out of doors."

"I thought from your letters last winter that it took something pretty serious to keep you away from Sunday school," said grandfather. "You wrote how you waded through the drifts during a regular blizzard one Sunday; and another time, when you had to stay at home on account of the grippe you seemed nearly heart-broken."

"Oh, there was a contest on then—the reds and the blues! I was on the blue side and we won—true blues, you know; I didn't miss but one Sunday for five months, and I got six new scholars!"

"Good!" exclaimed grandfather. "How many have you got since?"

"I haven't tried since," replied Arnold. "When the contest was on every new scholar counted ten points, and I did some hustling, I tell you—asked all the scholars in my school if they went to Sunday school anywhere, and, if they didn't, I got them to come to ours. It was against the rules to get them from another Sunday school."

"I suppose you don't miss a Sunday very often," remarked grandfather.

Arnold looked a little embarrassed, and he felt relieved when grandfather went on without waiting for an answer. "Ever notice the little old clock on grandmother's kitchen shelf—the one she cooks by?"

"Without any glass over its face?" asked Arnold.

"Yes, that's the one," laughed grandfather. "Hard-looking ticker, isn't it? Your Uncle Bob bought it when he went away to school. He needed an alarm clock to get him up in the mornings when he didn't have mother to call him. His 'little tin clock,' he always called it. It went through the academy with him, and when the four years were over it bore the marks of many a scuffle. Its glass was gone, its sides were dented, and the end was broken from one of the hands. Bob thought it was too shabby to keep, so he threw it into the waste-basket with some paper, old shoes and other rubbish. When his trunk had gone and he was ready to leave for home, he sat down a minute to take a last look at his room. It was very quiet, and in the stillness he heard the little tin clock ticking faithfully on in the waste-basket. He dug it out, put it into his coat pocket and brought it home, still ticking.

"Mother laughed when he set it on the kitchen shelf by the side of a new 'tin clock' which I had purchased for her a few days before. The new clock was what Bob's had been when he bought it—bright and shining. Beside it Bob's looked worse than ever; but his ticked just as merrily as the new one. Did you ever think how much company a clock is, and how quickly you notice when it stops? Nothing will make a fellow feel more homesick. 'When I heard that little tin clock of mine ticking in the waste-basket,' Bob said, 'I couldn't bear to leave it. It seemed like throwing over a good old friend. It keeps dandy time!'

"'We'll put it up in the back chamber,' said mother.

"Well, the new clock worked fine all summer, but in the fall, when the nights were cool, we often found it stopped in the morning, though it had been wound the night before. We would set the hands along to the proper hour and shake it to start it going. For half a minute, perhaps, it would tick, then stop and refuse to go until it had been put on the stove and thoroughly warmed up.

"Then it began to get contrary if it didn't rest just so on the shelf, and we had to prop it up a little in front. We oiled it. Then we had it cleaned. Whenever anything was done to it it would go better for a time, then bother again. Finally we got tired of so much warming and coaxing. When mother wanted it to tell her if the eggs had boiled long enough, or if the cake was about done, just as likely as not it would be off duty.

"One day, when she was cleaning house, she brushed the dust from the 'little tin clock' in the back chamber, and, for the fun of it, wound it up. She thought no more about it until she was getting breakfast next morning, with the kitchen clock warming on the stove, as usual. Then overhead we heard the 'little tin clock' sound its alarm. It was seven o'clock, and it was telling Bob to get up, just as he had set it to do, though he was a hundred miles away. In less than two minutes that little old clock was on the kitchen shelf, and it has been there ever since—battered and scarred, but dependable. Whenever Bob comes home for a visit he looks at it and says, 'Little tin clock, you're all right!' What became of the other clock I don't know. We didn't consider it worthy even a place in the back chamber."

As grandfather finished his story Arnold's father and mother came out on the verandah, ready for church, and no more was said about either clocks or Sunday school until preaching service was over. Then Arnold said, "I'm going to stay to Sunday school, grandpa. I've been thinking about those 'tin clocks,' and I'm going to be like Uncle Bob's."—Ida Blaisdell Tibbetts, in St. Louis Christian Advocate.

WHY MYRA'S REPORT WAS GOOD.

Bertha G. Woods.

"I'm most sure Myra isn't going to keep up with our grade," Alice said to her mother. "She's the nicest little girl, but she does make funny mistakes in her lessons, mamma. You just ought to hear her spell, and her writing is dreadful! The other day Miss Smith had us write letters to her about our vacation, you know, and if you'll believe it, Myra began 'Miss' with a little m instead of a capital, and Smith with a little 's'."

"Myra hasn't been going to school very long, has she?" Alices mother inquired.

"No, mamma; she started in only two weeks ago, but I'll tell you what I think." Alice dropped her voice a little. "Myra isn't half so quick and bright as some of the other girls. Now there's Sadie, her cousin. She's just the same age, and they've been in school just the same time, but her letter to Miss Smith was fine. She didn't make any such funny mistakes."

"Well, we'll see," mother said wisely. "Perhaps Myra will surprise you yet."

But the next day Alice came home from school with something more to say about Myra's "funny mistakes."

"We wrote our letters to Miss Smith on the blackboard to-day, and you ought to have seen how funny Myra's was. She began Monday with a little m!"

"Well, well!" said mother. "And did she write Miss Smith's name with little letters, too?"

"No, mamma; she got that part right this time. But she didn't know the days of the week had to begin with capitals."

Still another day and Alice had something else to tell mother.

"Myra isn't getting along so very well with her number work. She said to-day that three times eight was twenty-six! But she told me that she was going to study the three table like everything when she went home."

"Myra got 'perfect' in number work to-day," Alice announced next afternoon. "Miss Smith says she knows the three table best of any of us now. And it's a funny thing, mamma, but her Cousin Sadie got a low mark in arithmetic. It wasn't such a very big mistake, but it's the same one she's made several times, and Miss Smith said that's what she doesn't like—to have us go on making the same mistake over and over again."

"I see," said mother, thoughtfully.

It was at the end of the month that Alice reported with mingled surprise and satisfaction that Myra had received one of the very best reports in school.

"Most all her marks were good, and Miss Smith read them out to the rest of us. She said she felt proud of Myra—she'd been afraid at first that Myra wasn't going to be able to keep up with our grade, but that she had done finely. She never'd seen anybody improve so fast. And the reason, Miss Smith said, is because Myra never lets herself make the same mistake twice. She said that kind of girl always comes out right in the end. It's a funny thing, mamma, but Sadie didn't have such a good report. She passed in everything, but she didn't have such high marks as Myra did. Miss Smith didn't say anything about it, but I know what Sadie's trouble is. She goes right on making the same mistake over and over again!"—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

"To live well in the quiet routine of life; to fill a little space because God wills it; to go on cheerfully with a petty round of little duties, little avocations; to smile for the joys of others when the heart is aching—who does this, his works will follow him. He may not be a hero to the world, but he is one of God's heroes."

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO EMORY UNIVERSITY.

Rev. Ruth Selby, of Jackson, Miss., Commissioner for Emory University, sends us good news concerning his work, viz: "I have lately had the pleasure of receiving two $500 subscriptions [illegible] from two laymen of the North Mississippi Conference, Mr. A. B. Shelton, of Lambert, and Mr. M. L. Smith, of Moorhead. These gentlemen, loyal to the Church, were glad to make these contributions for what they understand is the greatest enterprise that the Church has on hand at this time—Emory University. The University is appealing to the hearts of the people all over Mississippi, and I have splendid prospects for the immediate future. I am getting on well with my work."

This matter can very well be applied. The future of Southern Methodism is largely bound up in Emory University, our greatest educational institution. There ought to be many gifts to it from Mississippi. Brother Selby has shown himself to be "the right man in the right place." Let the brethren lend him and the noble cause which he represents an active helping hand.

A BREECHES DEBATE.

There is a "Breeches Bible," so called because of the translation of a verse in Genesis which represents Adam and Eve as taking fig leaves and making for themselves breeches. Out in Texas the Nashville revolutionary propaganda has developed what might be termed a breeches debate, the participants being Rev. R. P. Shuler and Dr. W. D. Bradfield, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate. The point at issue between these two doughty disputants was whether certain restrictions upon the Methodist Episcopacy would be a "limitation" or an "elimination." Warming up to the subject, Brother Shuler said:

"A tailor may place certain 'limitations' upon my trousers, which does not mean that he will prohibit my wearing them. I may wear them with four pockets or two, full in the legs or close, touching my shoe-tops or on the ground, supported by a belt or an old-time checked string across my shoulders."

This brilliant argumentative foray Dr. Bradfield met as follows:

"Yes, just so. But suppose the tailor should put his limitations at the wrong place, would Brother Shuler continue to wear them? Suppose the tailor should make his 'limitations' by taking the posterior out of Brother Shuler's trousers, would that be a pretty effective prohibition of his wearing them? It all depends upon where he tailor puts his 'limitations' whether he has eliminated them further use."

We are inclined to think that the honors in this instance should go to Dr. Bradfield. Indeed, we would have no doubt at all about it were it not for the fact that we fear there are some brethren among us who are so anxious to be Bishops that they would be willing to wear the Episcopal breeches even with the "posterior" eliminated.

ERRATA.

Several mistakes occurred in our "December" to Mr. E. D. Eleazer in last week's Advocate. In one paragraph where we wrote "secular" politicians we were made to say "peculiar" politicians, and in the last paragraph the word "incidentally" was written "incidentally." The date of the advocate containing Judge White's article on the so-called "Laymen's Movement" was given as September 13, when it should have been August 9, so that the time that the public was entirely in the dark concerning the Eleazer revolutionary movement after the first letter was sent out was about five and a half months instead of "six and a half months." However, the latter figures are correct as to the time that elapsed before the public was given documentary proof of the origin of the movement; and, as will be remembered, according to Mr. Eleazer the scheme began to be formulated, guardedly or secretly as far back as some time in 1913. We make this correction without having had a suggestion from any source in the interest of strict accuracy and not because we think that any injustice has been done any one by our having assigned the wrong date to Judge White's article.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Pennwood, Miss., assisted Rev. W. N. Thomas in an interesting meeting at Osyka, Miss., last week.

The Louisville Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held a few days ago, voted down a memorial to remove the time limit.

Rev. E. B. Daniel, of Ida, La., is rounding out a good year's work, and states that he expects to carry a clean balance sheet to Conference.

Next Saturday will be "Work Day" for our Louisiana and Mississippi Orphanages. Let every church and Sunday school in these two States be certain to observe it. We must see that the orphan children of the Church are nobly cared for in this time of war prices.

The following friends, of whose kindness no mention has been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. P. P. Lutes, Acona, Miss., 2; Rev. J. M. Carter, Lake, Miss., 2; Rev. J. D. Harper, Opelousas, La., 2.

In a note to our office inclosing us 2 subscriptions, Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Meridian, Miss., says: "Rev. J. A. Bowen is with us in a meeting at Central Church, which started on Sunday, September 30." Brother Bowen is a favorite in Meridian, where he has done effective revival work before.

In renewing his subscription, Mr. Alex H. Farrar, of Centerville, Miss., says: "The weekly visit of the Advocate to our home is appreciated by every one of us. It is the most welcomed visitor of several periodicals whose companionship it is our privilege to enjoy." We are grateful for these kinds words.

We regret to learn that Rev. Henry M. Young, our worthy pastor at Valden, Miss., has lately had an attack of illness lasting about two weeks, but are pleased to know that he is again able to be about his "loved employ." There is no shorter itinerant in the North Mississippi Conference than Brother Young.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, under date of Oct. 5, says: "Whitworth has an enrollment of 261 students. A few more will probably enter during this term. We have the promise of a great session." We are gratified to have this good news from historic Whitworth and her worthy President.

Rev. M. A. Burns, of Pleasant Hill, Miss., gives us several subscriptions from his charge, and thus refers to conditions in his field: "Our work is moving along nicely. I think that we shall wind up in good shape for Conference. We have had good meetings this summer and 25 members have been added to the Church."

Rev. J. P. Foster, of Shreveport, La., who serves the Baton La Corte charge, writes: "Things are moving along finely with us and the outlook is excellent for a full report on all lines at Conference. Congregations are better than they have been at any time since I have been connected with this pastorate. We had four additions to the Church last Sunday."

A note to our office from Dr. W. H. Hunley, our accomplished pastor at Yazoo City, Miss., brings the news that he has been down with malarial fever, but that he has about recovered. We trust that he will continue to keep well and that he will have a great rounding-out of the year's work. Dr. Hunley's letter brought in three appreciated subscriptions to the Advocate.

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, a highly esteemed veteran of the North Mississippi Conference, who now resides at Long Beach, Miss., says: "I feel very lonesome without a regular work. However, I have preached some this year. I greatly enjoy reading the Advocate." We hope that we may have the pleasure of seeing this long-time friend at the North Mississippi Annual Conference at Oxford.

Bishop E. C. Morrison, of Leesburg, Fla., occupied the pulpit of the First Methodist Church last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock a. m. and delivered an eloquent discourse from the text, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." The Bishop was greeted by a large and appreciative audience. He was en route to Texas to meet an episcopal engagement.

The following note is from Rev. D. E. McDonnell, our pastor at Kosciusko, Miss.: "I am now wrestling up my quadrennium here. I feel that this has been the best year of the four. This is a great people. They have promised to bring up everything in full and I believe that they will do this." Brother McDonnell's letter brought us eight subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we make grateful acknowledgment to him.

We are in receipt of the following note from Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference: "Rev. J. E. Thomas, pastor at Amory and Nettleton, has just sent in a check to cover his educational assessment—the first from the Aberdeen District." Brother Thomas is generally at the forefront in all good work. Who will next report to Brother Broyles?

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Pleasant Hill, La., writes: "To-day, Oct. 1, we laid to rest Sister J. J. Pike, the mother of Rev. C. E. Pike, of Rayne, La. She crossed over the river in the bright triumph of a Christian faith. Brother J. J. Pike himself lies at the point of death. He is prepared and restored." Our sympathies go out to those concerned with this stricken home, and we pray that God may have the sorrowing and anxious ones in his gracious keeping.

Rev. Chad D. McGehee, our capable young pastor at Ackerman, Miss., writes us as follows: "The $2000 debt on our church at Ackerman has been paid off, and the damage done by the storm last April repaired. Bishop W. B. Murrah will dedicate this church on October 21. The church at Weir has been completed, with the exception of a little work on the interior. Our finances are considerably ahead of last year and we will go to Conference with all obligations paid in full."

Dr. J. T. Sawyer, of this city, has lately received a letter from Rev. M. L. Jenkins, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, who resides in Minneola, Texas, in which he says he has been suffering from a severe attack of illness for some weeks and has lost flesh and strength. He does not feel able he is in his 76th year to undergo an operation that would likely prevent a fatal ending of the malady with which he is afflicted. Let the brethren remember this stricken soldier of Christ in their prayers.

Rev. W. S. Harrison, of Starkville, Miss., who is on the honor roll of the North Mississippi Conference, and who frequently brightens our columns with contributions from his able pen, has recently been doing some excellent work in behalf of the Conference organ. He forwarded to the office a few days ago 2 new and 14 renewal subscriptions, for which we extend to him our thanks. Brother Harrison says: "Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of Tula, Miss., will begin a meeting in Starkville on October 14. We are praying and hoping for a great awakening."

Dr. W. P. McMurry, Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South, spent last Monday and Tuesday in New Orleans. He came to the city in the interest of important work and to be the guest of honor at a banquet given by the Church Extension Society of the New Orleans District. Dr. McMurry was in his usual good health and spoke most encouragingly of conditions throughout the Church. This is written before the holding of the banquet, which is to take place at our First Church tonight (Tuesday night).

Rev. C. L. Park, pastor of the Kosciusko (Miss.) Circuit, who is bringing things to pass in his field, reports as follows: "We are making some progress with our work. We have adopted a plan for the remodeling of our church at Ethel, and a building committee and a soliciting committee have been appointed. It will be an up-to-date little church when completed. It will have three Sunday school rooms — so arranged that all of them can be opened up and made a part of the main auditorium. We expect to have this work finished before Conference."

From a personal note to the Editor from Rev. Burke Culpepper, of Memphis, Tenn., one of the leading evangelists of our Church, we take the following: "This has been one of the best years of my life. God has greatly blessed my labors and I have seen thousands converted within the past few months. I have worked in a number of different States during the year. One of the greatest meetings that I have ever conducted was held in Elizabeth City, N. C., last month." Brother Culpepper is this week leading a series of union revival services at Jackson, Tenn.

The corner-stone of our Representative Church in Washington City was laid last Monday, with Dr. George S. Sexton, of Shreveport, La., acting as master of ceremonies. Bishop W. A. Candler officiated, and addresses were delivered by Dr. T. N. Ivey and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas. A large number of Southerners were present, including the following Louisianians: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Peavy of Shreveport, Representative and Mrs. Riley J. Wilson of Harrisonburg, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Moore of Mansfield, and Mr. H. H. Ahrens of New Orleans. This handsome new house of worship, which is being rapidly completed, will cost more than $250,000 and will be a credit to Southern Methodism.

THE PERIL OF PRIVILEGE.

God has committed the establishment of His Kingdom on the earth to men. To be a colaborer with him in this establishment is undeniably man's highest privilege. The consummation of the Kingdom's establishment may be rendered perilous by the mero indifference of those who enjoy the privilege of partnership.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for nearly three-quarters of a century, has unquestionably been an ever widening channel through which men have exercised this sacred privilege. There isn't a page of her history which needs to be apologized for. While there may be no incontestable records of perfection altogether, yet many thousands of church spires and more than two millions of souls stand with sacred eloquence to testify the world over, that "The Message of Christ," "The Song of Perfect Love," and "The Passion of the Burning Heart," which have gone from around her altars in chapel and home, have not been without "much fruit."

The "times" as they relate to this channel are portentous. We are nearing the vortex of amalgamation and revolution. The most sacred and effective precedents are flung to the winds and a loud cry after the new cart (II Sam. 6:3) is gone up from over the land. We should count it a high privilege, and realizo its gravo responsibilities, that we are counted worthy to be put into these times.

The question as to whether the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall continue to maintain its identity, and yet lay up in store the rich things of grace for the establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven, will without doubt be considered, and probably determined, by the approaching session of the General Conference, to be held in Atlanta.

It has become a trite saying that the General Conference of 1918 will be more far-reaching in its effect than any held since 1844 and 1846. Indeed there are four things which converge the situation into a crisis: (1) Unification; (2) the possibility of revolutionizing the laws governing the episcopacy, lay representations, and General Boards; (3) the swapping around and parceling out of missionary territory; (4) the re-writing or restating the Constitution of the Church so as to make certain provisions, and clearly distinguish the constitutional from statutory laws. Either one of these would present no little task; and, having the four along with many other important matters, makes the undertakings of the next General Conference stupendous.

This forces the conclusion that to be honored with the privilege and charged with the sacred responsibility of naming the men who shall compose the next General Conference is not to be taken in hand "unadvisedly and indiscreetly," but "reverently and in the fear of God."

It does not take maturity to see that which ever way these issues before the Church are to be settled, the men who represent their Conferences in the General Conference are to have a large, if not the deciding, part in the final outcome. Away with politics and up with principle! Through with sentiment and out with convictions! In this grave hour, for the electorate to be indifferent or sentimental would prove perilous. To allow anything but intelligently and truly formed convictions, whatever they may be, to determine our choices in this crucial hour when such weighty and far-reaching issues confront us, would verge upon the criminal.

What an exalted privilege, God-given opportunity, and eternally-freighted responsibility, we have in registering the desires of our hearts, as to what course we prefer our old Ship of Zion to take as she hoists her sails, with Emmanuel's banner afloat, and glides out into the currents of the new to-morrow. God forbid that we should make her journey perilous by treating our electoral privileges lightly or with indifference!

McComb, Miss. J. LOYD DECELL.

TO OUR PASTORS, SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS, AND CHRISTIAN WORKERS IN LOUISIANA.

This Saturday, the 13th, is "Work Day" for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. Sunday will be "Harvest Day," when, we trust, collections will be taken in all our churches and Sunday Schools for the Orphanage. We sincerely hope that every Methodist and every friend to our cause will contribute liberally to our work. We have 123 children depending on the result of this day's effort for their food, clothing, schooling and comfort for the entire winter now approaching. We have solemnly contracted to provide for these children in our Orphanage, believing in the generosity of our people. We are confident the help will come, but we urge the most generous response ever made. Our expenses are now 50 to 75 per cent greater than ever before. The gifts from our people must be correspondingly greater if we are to meet our obligations and carry forward our work. If you fail to help, others may also do so, by the same right, and then the helpless children must suffer. If all will help, and we secure the aid we need, we will be enabled to continue the great work we are doing for the many children dependent on the Methodists of our State. The Superintendent of the Baptist Orphanage of our State has just resigned because of inadequate support for his work. Although we have a larger institution and a smaller membership in our Church, we do not believe our people will force us to the same action.

Trusting in your most hearty co-operation, believing in your unwavering loyalty to our cause, and looking to you for the support essential to our work, I am, Your faithful servant,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Supt. La. Methodist Orphanage.

Ruston, La., Oct. 6, 1917.

MAD ANTHONY.

"Certainly I will be with thee." When you visit Valley Forge you will see there the finest equestrian statue in America, if not in the world. It is that of General "Mad" Anthony Wayne. He is upon the ridge almost in sight of his own little home, watching over the valley for the approach of the enemy. He was noted for his devotion to Washington. He had implicit faith in Washington's ability. "General," he replied one day, when Washington had assigned an especially hard undertaking, "I will storm hell if you will lay the plans." This is the spirit that conquors: the kind of service that God wants. He not only furnishes the plans, but He promises us the power, and He wants that place stormed. Wayne's secret of success was his trust in his great commander. And our strength will be our trust in our Great Commander. (Eph. 6:11, 12, 16; John 12:31.)

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

Juice of Lemons! How to Make Skin White and Beautiful

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as sallowness, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful to smoothen rough, red hands.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

ABNER NEIL KING was born in Covington County, Miss., on April 30, 1863, and died on Sept. 10, 1917. He was married on Dec. 21, 1893, to Miss Maggie Miller. He united with the M. E. Church, South, at about the age of 21. We miss in Brother King a good man. Though naturally quiet and reserved, he loved the Church, and was punctual in attending its services. He had been in ill health for several years, but his last illness was not long. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. M. Williams. He leaves a wife and eight children to mourn his departure. In his death a devoted family circle is broken. May the sorrowing ones live so that the family may be reunited in the home above.

His Pastor,
R. T. PICKETT.

One of our most beloved members of the Munnerlyn Chapel Church passed to the Church Triumphant on the evening of October 1, 1917, at 10 o'clock. CHARLES WESLEY RUTLEDGE was born in Alabama on March 17, 1855. He was married to Miss Vina McKinzie on Nov. 11, 1875. Of this union 9 children were born, 5 of whom survive, as follows: Mrs. R. A. Hale, Miss Tobartha E., and Mr. Charles B. Rutledge, and Mrs. E. C. Howard, who live near the old home place, and Mr. John W. Rutledge, of Camp Beauregard. Brother Rutledge united with the Church at the age of 19 and was a consistent worker in the same until death overtook him. He was a steward and Sunday School Superintendent for about 20 years. He knew in whom he trusted. He was laid to rest in the Munnerlyn Chapel Cemetery, to await the call of all that sleep in Jesus. Every one had a good word for Brother Rutledge, and, "those who knew him best, loved him best." May these words be spoken to him: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

E. B. DANIEL,
Pastor.

MORE JACKSON DISTRICT ITEMS.

Rev. T. A. Ferguson is serving the Camden charge, located in the northeast corner of the district. He reports three good meetings held which were really helpful to the Church. The pastor feels very hopeful that the Camden charge will make a full financial report at Conference.

Rev. R. E. Rutledge at Vaughan serves another one of the border charges. Three good meetings have been held in this charge, resulting in 9 accessions to the Church and in 4 infants being baptized. This scribe believes that the baptizing of infants as a result of revivals indicates splendid work done in the home.

Rev. S. N. Young and his people on the Satartia charge are not idle. Church work in this charge is really progressing. Good revivals have been held, resulting in 17 additions to the membership. The people are good about attending Church. Young reports seven Sunday schools in his charge. The good women of one of his churches have been organized into a Woman's Missionary Society. This charge paid $26 at the Children's Day services. The pastor feels confident of full collections at Conference.

Capitol Street, Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor, is active and growing. One hundred and seventy-seven members have been added this year—124 of these by vows. The laymen of this church are well organized for work, and in the pastor's absence, on Sundays and on prayer meeting evenings, conduct the services for him. During September, in accord with a mapped-out program, they conducted all the weekly prayer meeting services. The Woman's Missionary Society and Epworth League of this church are using the opportunities offered them for active service to the soldier-boys encamped there. Recently the Epworth League entertained 150 of the soldiers with a pleasant eveing and a bountiful supper. The Woman's Missionary Society is supplying the hospitals of the First and Second Mississippi Regiments with bed linens. This congregation, in conjunction with the Presbyterian and Baptist congregations of West Jackson, held the evening services in Poindexter Park during August, which services were successful and delightful from every standpoint. The attendance on these services averaged more than 1000 at each service.

Galloway Memorial and Dr. W. G. Henry are winding out a quadrennium of service. This magnificent church building was completed during Brother Henry's pastorate. It contains within its membership some of the most active and efficient church workers in the State. Dr. Henry knows how to develop his laymen and get good service from them. During the year, under his direction, the laymen conducted a week's series of services that were greatly helpful. While the pastor was off on a vacation, with one exception, they held all the regular services of the church. The good women of the church recently held an "All Day Meeting" of their Missionary Society that netted quite a number of new members. They also have been busy and useful in "doing their bit" to give aid and comfort to the soldier-boys in their midst. This church has had added to its membership this year 110. Of these 65 were hy vows.

Madison Station, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., pastor, is progressing smoothly. Twenty-four have been added to the Church—13 by vows. A live prayer meeting at Tinnin is one result of a meeting held there. The Sunday school work is making real progress and the outlook is for a full report to be made at Conference on all finances.

The co-operative spirit of our Government has touched some of the leading pastors of Canton, and at their call a Pastors' Association to be composed of all the Protestant pastors of Madison County has been formed. They are to meet once a month for mutual helpfulness, suggestions, and inspiration. This organization takes in five of our pastors: T. A. Ferguson, F. L. Applewhite, B. F. Lewis, M. F. Adams, and H. P. Lewis, Jr.

Hair Needs Food

just as every other living thing does, and, just as every other living thing, it will die if it is not fed. Hair food takes the form of the natural oil on which it subsists. Fifty years ago the Creoles of Louisiana, who prided themselves on their hair, discovered a recipe for beautiful hair. By the use of this natural hair oil, "La Creole," they kept their hair beautiful, light and fluffy. This secret has been handed down through generations and presents the very best hair food and hair disease remedy. Does your hair fall out? Is it coarse? Is it stiff? Has it lost its natural luster? Then ask your dealer for a bottle of "La Creole" hair dressing. The price is only $1.00 and it will be the life of your hair. If he can't supply you, write at once to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

STOP THAT PAIN!

The few misguided people who argue against the relief of pain as a first step in treatment, either have never suffered from any pain themselves or else they do not know what they are talking about.

It is all right to realize that pain may be the danger signal for some more serious complaint and it is well to look deep into the reason for pain, but the first step is to gain as speedy relief as possible in a safe way.

Pain is the greatest ally that disease has. Pain is the artillery, it batters down the nervous defenses of the body so that disease can safely take hold of the body.

But not only does pain do physical harm to the body, but it also does moral harm which may be tremendously far-reaching in its effects.

The nagging effect of pain is such that it will change the disposition of a person to such an extent that they will become a burden to themselves and to everybody else. The person who has normally the sweetest temper may be readily turned into an irritable crank by a succession of unrelieved headaches or pains.

Stop that pain by using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills according to directions. They are effective, safe and harmless. They can be purchased at any drug store, and the druggist is always willing to return the purchase price if the pills fail to relieve pain. You are the judge yourself. It will cost you nothing to try.

"He who trusts in God will have a heart of good cheer."

To the Advertiser Who is a Church Member.

Has it ever occurred to you that the church people who pay pastors' salaries, build churches, buy organs and carpets, operate Sunday schools, maintain foreign and home missions, and other church work, are the wealthiest people in the community, the most intelligent people in the community, the largest buyers in the community, the people whose trade is largest and who to a larger degree than any other class, dominate the trade of the lower classes?

Has it occurred to you that these efficient church members who are so wealthy and so influential, and so liberal and such large buyers are readers of their church papers? You are one of them. But there are hundreds of thousands like yourself. Their trade is more worth having because they are more honest on the average, because they are wealthier on the average, and their buying is larger on the average than the average of classes which are without church membership. Isn't it better to advertise to these better classes through the church papers without wasting circulation on the indigent classes who cannot buy? Then again, if the church paper has great prestige in your home, if you regard it more highly than you regard secular literature, if you hold it to a higher standard of morals and of righteousness, do you not realize that your advertisement would have greater prestige in the homes of religious people into which these church papers go, if your ad is printed in a church paper? The church paper can give you large circulation, but it also gives you circulation of the greatest possible prestige among the very people whose trade you want. If you are a local advertiser with a narrow trade area, you cannot afford to use a church paper which circulates over an entire State, but if your business covers one or more States, and if your business is on an article which sells to the substantial tax-paying and professional elements, the church paper is your one best purchase for publicity.

Many successful businesses have been built on that type of publicity alone. Try it.

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 100% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European medical institutions, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided, they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

A NEW CHRISTIAN ORGANIZATION.

By H. A. Christenberry.

On Sunday, September 2, while en route to the convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers, to be held in Dallas, Texas, four delegates, A. E. Leary, A. A. McCullum, E. R. Waters, all of Kansas City, Mo., and A. A. Alexander, of Milwaukee, Wis., decided to hold a Sunday school service. This was quite natural as all are Sunday school officers in their home churches. They issued invitations, and a total of fifteen responded.

A. A. Alexander, superintendent of Bethany Presbyterian Sunday school, Milwaukee, was chosen to teach the lesson, and took the lesson of the Good Samaritan for his topic, with the central thought of the lesson, "Love thy neighbor as thy self." An offering of $4.65 was received and given to the Red Cross upon arrival at Dallas.

The members, consisting of clerks and carriers, were so impressed with the idea of such meetings on the trains en route to conventions, that they decided to make plans for a permanent organization. At the Convention at Dallas they secured the cooperation of the officers, in having for the first time in the history of the National Association of Letter Carriers the morning meetings to begin with prayer, usually led by a layman.

Two meetings were held and a permanent organization was perfected. At the third and final meeting held in Dallas, they were fortunate in having with them Rev. H. L. Boulby, of the Lord's Day Alliance. He is to be their spiritual adviser and organizer.

The name chosen is "Post Office Workers' Christian Association." The aim of this organization shall be to promote Christian work among post-office employees, who will endeavor to encourage a daily Christian life among their fellow-workers, promote Sunday school and Church attendance, hold Sunday school services en route to, and at meetings, during each National Convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers.

The officers chosen are as follows: A. A. McCullum, Kansas City, Mo., President; A. A. Alexander, Milwaukee, Wis., Vice President and Superintendent Christian Work; H. A. Christenberry, New Orleans, La., Secretary-Treasurer; Rev. H. L. Bowlby, 203 Broadway, New York, N. Y., Spiritual Adviser and Organizer.

En route home, on September 9, the same men held Sunday school service in the chair car. There were 32 present, and an offering of $4.40 was sent to the Lord's Day Alliance.

At the initial meeting, several States and denominations were represented. At the last meeting 11 States and nine denominations were represented. In each case the representatives came from cities scattered from coast to coast and from the Lakes to the Gulf.

This is an invitation to any person reading this who works in any post-office to join this band of workers. Write any officer.

YOUR MISSIONARIES AT HOME.

"Oh, I wish I knew what missionaries really do; I wish I had their program from sunrise to sunset," wrote a young woman recently. I thought, How I wish she could see the cheery group of missionaries that I saw, as a new missionary, some months ago. I, too, wished that I might follow them in the routine days in each of their stations. As you would see them together you could imagine the variety of service they would render, coming from different States and countries and being daughters of many institutions of learning.

Just over here, we shall take a trip to some of their stations, and see this carretela all filled with bedding, clothing, books and food in front of the missionary's house. This means a long itinerating trip of several weeks. This busy wife will find many things to do, for she will teach God's Word, or show the women proper care of children, or, perhaps, how to bake bread as they gather about her little stone.

As many can not go with the evangelist husband, because of the ones that are to be cared for, what can she do at home? Women are constantly crossing her pathway, or entering her home who need to learn her ideas of sanitation, of bathing, and feeding children. As a physician, she finds a wide field for healing.

You will not fail to see this one who is finding abundant opportunity to teach Jesus to the patients that seek her husband's medical skill. Her valued work as translator is a great asset in dealing personally with needy souls in their own tongue, and her faith is sometimes surprised at the marked results.

Several of our women find wide fields in the hospital. The service of nurse all day long appeals to their hearts. The hospital is their stronghold to teach living truth. One of these daughters of the King has been busy "mothering" a group of girls at a dormitory and teaching them what a happy home life should be. Just near, in still another station, you will desire to see many tiny people sing and hear the kindergartner tell beautiful stories. Just one woman who is Station Treasurer, you will certainly desire to know, for the Mission Treasurer says she is the most efficient of all.

At a large institution far to the south you will care to tarry to see the scores, yea, hundreds, flie in and out of the classrooms, where the teachers, both men and women, await to give the needed instruction. How constructive the work that these women are doing is may be seen in the achievements of the pupils.

In still a different school, you will be eager to ask what the groups represent in the various classrooms. Why are so many provinces represented? This is the institution for the training of our Bible women. In one classroom is a Woman's Board Missionary teacher unfolding the Word, or teaching the girls to sing or play, or even giving minute instructions to those who are to teach in the outdoor Sunday schools.

And what shall I say more? "The time would fail me to tell" of the ones who are such gracious hostesses to those passing through, or of those who look after the distribution of the surplus material, or of the ones who do the chaperoning to the various outdoor meetings.

Do you now ask what we do? You must at least see that our sisters' hearts and hands are full. We need more missionaries.

Mrs. R. E. HOOPER.

To Drive Out Malaria And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 60 cents.

INVENTIVE GENIUS MAKES CALOMEL DELIGHTFUL.

Calomel, the Most Valuable of all Drugs, Now Purified from its Unpleasant and Dangerous Qualities—Calotabs the New Name.

The medicinal virtues of calomel are in no way connected with its nauseating and dangerous qualities, as is proven by the fact that the new calomel tablet, recently perfected, is wholly free from objectionable effects yet retains all of the liver-cleansing and system-purifying qualities of the old-style calomel. For biliousness, constipation and indigestion, and wherever calomel is essential, the new denauseated calomel tablet is a practically perfect remedy.

To inspire public confidence in this new discovery the manufacturers have authorized druggists everywhere to refund the price if the customer is not "perfectly delighted" with Calotabs. Sold only in original packages, sealed, twenty doses for thirty-five cents. One tablet at bedtime, with a swallow of water. No taste, no nausea, no griping. You wake up in the morning with a clean liver, feeling fine, and a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger.—Adv.

Postage Rates on Letters, Post Cards and Printed Matter To and From the United States Expeditionary Forces in Europe.

Office of the Postmaster General,
Washington, June 18, 1917.

Postmasters are informed that letters, post cards and printed matter originating in the United States or any of its possessions for transmission to the United States Expeditionary Forces in Europe are subject to the United States domestic classification, condition and rates of postage, and that letters, post cards and printed matter originating with such forces for transmission to the United States or its possessions are likewise subject to domestic classification, conditions and rates of postage, except as modified by the provisions covering letters indorsed "soldier's letter" and contained in Section 406, Postal Laws and Regulations.

No other than United States postage stamps are valid for prepayment of postage on matter herein described.

Mail addressed to members of the Expeditionary Forces should bear the complete designation of the division, regiment, company and organization to which the addressee belongs, as well as the name and address of the sender, and be fully prepaid by postage stamps affixed. Patrons should be instructed under no circumstances to attempt to designate on the addressed envelope the location of the unit. The correct manner of addressing such a letter would be as follows:

Return to Mrs. John Smith
—— Blank St.
New York City.

Stamp

JOHN SMITH, JR.,
Co. X, —— Infantry,
American Expeditionary Forces.

Postmasters shall forward all mail matter addressed "American Expeditionary Forces" to New York.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freezone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn, roots and all, dries up and can be lifted out with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that, while freezone is sticky, it dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

DAY OF PRAYER FOR HOME MISSIONS.

Thursday, November 22, 1917, is set apart by the council of Women for Home Missions as a day of special prayer for home missions. All auxiliaries are urged to observe this day as a season for special prayer for a keener sense of our nation's crisis and truer loyalty to national welfare and stronger conviction of personal obligation to save America for the world's sake. A program covering three hours will be issued by the Council of Women for Home Missions, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

These same programs may be secured by application to Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. In communities where the different denominations can be induced to unite in this season of prayer a very much larger influence may be felt. It ought to be a day when all home mission agencies can come together in special prayer.

Seashore District Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Seashore District opened Tuesday evening, Aug. 7, at Wiggins. No business was transacted at this time, but we had the unusual privilege of having one of our Council officers, Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, to address us. We also had our Conference president, Mrs. R. E. Johnson, to talk to us on "Work."

The first business session of the Conference was held Wednesday morning, with Mrs. T. T. Ford in the chair. Mrs. Ford led the preliminary devotional service. Song, "Publish Glad Tidings" was sung and prayer offered by Brother J. L. Selis. After the devotional service, business was resumed. Mrs. Claude Jones, of Long Beach, was elected Secretary of the meeting. Mrs. Ford then presented the work in a general way, and especially stressed the local work, or social service.

The meeting was open to any questions of information concerning the work. Following this, Mrs. McGregor, from the Hattiesburg District, gave in an interesting way the manner in which the work was done in her early days, and how it started, continuing by saying that Hattiesburg, her home church, was the first to take up the Mission Study work in the Conference. Mrs. Middleton reminded us of the significant five P's. She spoke briefly of the discrepancy of reports sent to Mrs. Lewis. Minor questions were discussed informally from the floor. Reports from the different auxiliaries were heard, Mrs. Claude Jones representing Longbeach, and Mrs. Tippin representing Gulfport. Written reports from Lumberton and Biloxi were sent in and read. Wiggins gave only a partial report.

Visitors and delegates greatly admired the display by the Junior Society, Miss Ruth Sells, President. Forty garments were completed and ready to be sent to the Wesley House. The Society consists of seven active members, besides the President. All of their work compares favorably with the work of larger churches.

On Wednesday afternoon the devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Mae Sells, at the conclusion of which Mrs. H. O. Middleton impressively rendered a solo, "Is He Satisfied With Me?"

Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Middleton spoke briefly on children's work, calling special attention to the Wesley House work. Following this, Mrs. Middleton gave quite an extensive and interesting talk on the Young People's work, of which she has charge.

Song and prayer concluded this profitable and gracious session.

Mrs. CLAUDE P. JONES,
Secretary.

SEPTEMBER ACTIVITIES AT ST. MARK'S HALL, NEW ORLEANS.

St. Mark's Hall disproved the impression that New Orleans is too warm for summer work. In the congested district, which is their field of labor, the following activities were continued through the summer months: Vacation School, Dispensary, Mothers' Club, play grounds, shower baths, Camp Fire Circle, Boy Scouts, and missionary societies.

The attendance at the Dispensary has been phenomenally large. All three physicians have been kept busy. Incidentally, 105 children have been vaccinated. The consulting room has a new floor, and the laboratory a new coat of calcimine. A cash gift of $10 from Miss Sadie Pipes, of Oak Ridge, La., will be applied on the new laboratory.

The Kindergarten opened on the 12th of September, and the former little friends came trooping back.

The members of the Woman's Missionary Society had an unusual treat at their September meeting. Mrs. Martha Gould, Factory Inspector, gave an informal talk on labor legislation in Louisiana, as it pertains to the work of women.

The Vacation School closed on August 29. Forty were in attendance on that day. After a program of songs, stories and games, the children were reluctant to say farewell.

The Sewing School opened on Sept. 29, and volunteer teachers are needed. Call Hemlock 1458 and give your name as a volunteer.

On Sept. 12th Miss Pettit, an accomplished musician, took charge of the new music department. It is hoped to build up a large class and that this musical feature will prove a real asset to the work.

Supplies.

All kinds of supplies are needed for the store and pantry, especially clothing for school children. Old linen and muslin can be used for out-clinic patients. Miss Gibson says the sheives in their fruit closet resemble those of Mother Hubbard's cupboard. The loan of a piano is an urgent need.

Statistics.

Number visits made, 332; number received, 438; number visits to institutions, 19; number cards and letters, 32; number telephone calls, 210; number books loaned, 50; average attendance at vacation school, 37; Camp Fire Circle, 13.

Receipts—Supply store, $5.50; Vacation School, 76 cents; Clinic, $21.75. Total, $28.01.

Clinic.

Number general clinics, 8; number new patients, 142; number old patients, 352; number Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat clinics, 2; number new patients, 16; number old patients, 8; number visits by nurse, 100; prescriptions filled through Sickies Fund, 1447.

RESULTS OF MISSIONS.

An intelligent, non-Christian Hindu said: "You missionaries don't know how much good you are doing in the country. It has been my business for over twenty years to listen to evidence in the villages in many parts of India. Twenty-five years ago no Indian villager would tell the truth on the witness-stand. One had to listen and make up his mind which side had the greatest liars, and then strike an average. But now all is changed. A large per cent of non-Christians will tell the truth on the stand, and, as to the Christians, 95 per cent are wholly trustworthy on such occasions."—Bishop Warne.

Sore Eyes Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Dust and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. At Druggists or by mail 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Tubes 25c. For Book of the Eye FREE ask Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

Pays 25c a Month for Perfect Health

For 15 years, E. A. Little, Bessemer, Ala., has paid 25c a month to keep in perfect health. Read what he says:

"I desire to add my endorsement of Granger Liver Regulator. I have not used any other medicine for fifteen years. I know it is the best for all liver complaints, and will cure any case of Indigestion known. When I first commenced to take your Granger Liver Regulator the Pegram-Patton Drug Co. was buying it by the dozen. Now I am told they buy it by the gross. I use one box each month and would not be without it for anything."

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. FRANK KNOBL, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. YOST, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. CLEMENTINA DUERRING, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

From the Field

Oak Ridge, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: On Sunday, Sept. 30, the Oak Ridge Sunday schooi was organized into a graded schooi, and we are just about up to the standard of efficiency. A teacher-training class is to be organized next Sunday, Oct. 7, and a Wesley Bible class has been started and is growing; so we feel that the Oak Ridge Sunday schooi is making progress.

The progress is due mainly to Mrs. S. P. Grant, who was our representative at our Sunday Schooi institute at Fayette. She came from the Institute surcharged with the atmosphere of the Institute and it's telling in her work now in her own Sunday schooi.

All things considered, we are making good progress along all lines at Oak Ridge. The Oak Ridge Agricultural High School is now in full swing, employing five teachers, including the instructor in agriculture. We are now on the "home stretch," and expect a full report at Conference.

—J. A. Wells, P. C.

Burnsville, Miss.

Dear Doctor Meek: Will you give a layman a little space in your valuable paper? Our revival, held at Bethel Church, on the Iuka Circuit (Corinth District), began on Sept. 16. Brother Wilson, of New Albany, Miss., did the preaching. The meeting grew constanly in interest and attendance. Our house would not accommodate the people at night. Brother Wilson is a good preacher, being so earnest and so filled with the spirit that his hearers are unconsciously affected hy him. We had an old-time revival in which all took part. There was one man fifty years old who was converted, together with his three sons and one daughter. There were more people praying for that man than I ever knew to pray for any other one man. He was so happy. The last service of the meeting was the best. The prayer and praise service was good. Sometimes there were three or four praising the Lord at a time. There were 17 additions to the Church, and 25 during the summer. May God bless and keep them all!—A Layman.

Bunkie, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have had a remarkable year at Bunkie. To date we have added 60 members to our Church. We have had the unique distinction of taking into the Methodist ranks Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Lutherans, Campbellites, Catholics, and Jews. At Marksville, the parish site of Avoyelles, we have a small membership, but it is composed of some very choice people. This is a densely populated Catholic community. In a few days we will begin a meeting here assisted by Rev. G. S. Harmon of the Mississippi Conference.

At Bunkie we will have Evangelist Dan Kelly, of Mississippi, the last of October. We are expecting great things to result from these two revivals. We have held revivals at Bay Hill and at Evergreen. We were assisted part of the time at one of these meetings by my brother, Rev. J. A. Alford, of New Orleans, who rendered valuable service. Aside from this, the pastor did all the pulpit work. Twenty-eight members were received at these two meetings, the other additions during the year having come in at our regular services.

At Bunkie we have the best Sunday school I have ever had. We are fortunate in having Prof. Stephen D. Thomas, the Principal of our High School, as our superintendent. He is very aggressive and consecrated, and is one of the most thorough and up-to-date Sunday school superintendents in the State. Although there are three other Sunday schools in Bunkie, we have a large Bible class; sometimes there are as many as forty or fifty persons in attendance. Here we have three organized classes, and at Bay Hill, our only country church, we have two organized classes. I most heartily recommend the organized classes. They are, unquestionably, the life of the church. Our good ladies at Bunkie have added a new room to the parsonage at a considerable cost, and have installed water-works, with hot and cold baths, etc.

Our Marksville church furnished the kitchen with a large, handsome stove. Our Sunday school classes at Bunkie have supplied some needed furniture for the parsonage. We have a live Missionary Society. Our women meet regularly and are doing a great work for the Master. The Board of Stewards very kindly advanced the assessment for the pastor $200. Some of our boys have been called into the service. They have gone with the prayers and blessings of the church and the Sunday schooi.

I am at present with Brother Henry in a meeting at Montgomery. I have assisted in a number of meetings this year, the last two—at Bienville and Haynesville—being the most successful. Henderson took in a dozen or more, and Sloan received 20 new members into his church. These, with a number of family altars established, were some of the results. I will go to Enterprise, Miss., to assist my brother in a meeting next week. As we see it now, this is going to be one of the greatest years of our ministry.—J. M. Aiford, P. C.

LETTERS THAT INSPIRE CONFIDENCE.

I wish very much that every reader of this paper could spend sufficient time in my office to read the thousands of letters which I have received from all parts of the country. I have printed several hundreds of them in a booklet, but I wish you could see the originals, for I would like to have you realize the wonderful results which they report in the relief of dyspepsia, indigestion, persistent headache, rheumatism, kidney, bladder and liver diseases, uric acid poisoning and other curable conditions due to impure blood.

Before my own health was restored by Shivar Mineral Water and I purchased this Spring, and before I received all these letters from sufferers, I didn't take very much stock in advertisements like this. I therefore cannot blame you if you doubt, but, my friend, I am absolutely convinced that the Shivar Spring is the greatest restorative mineral spring ever discovered, not excepting the famous Spas of Europe. I have shipped this water to thousands of sufferers in all parts of the United States and they almost invariably report either permanent restoration or beneficial results. That is why I make the offer contained in the following letter. Sign it now and mail it.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-L, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

FROM CAMPTI, LA.

Dear Dr. Meek: I hereby hand yon a short report of Campti charge. Our last quarterly conference for the current year was held last week. We made a very good showing for the past quarter. We have held three revival meetings with some degree of success. These meetings were held at Campti, Davis Springs, and St. Maurice. There were a few additions at each of these points and the spiritual life of the Church strengthened. The following brethren did the preaching: Rev. J. M. Alford, at Campti; Rev. W. W. Perry, at Davis Springs, and Rev. Mr. Corley, at St. Maurice. All of these brethren did splendid pulpit work, and were very much liked hy the people. This is my third year on this charge, and, npon the whole, I believe it has been the most fruitful. We have some loyal and active workers at each point such as are appreciated hy a pastor. May our heavenly Father continne to bless each of them and inspire them to even greater service! We hope to make a good showing of the present year's work in our annnal report. In behalf of Brother Briscoe Carter, our mnch liked and appreciated presiding elder, I will say that he has met every appointment with us and has rendered very efficient service. Brethren, let's be much in prayer that the Lonisiana Conference may be a great spiritual feast, and that the Holy Spirit may direct us in the great work to which God has called us.

Yours in His service,
E. L. CARGILL.

COSTS $156.30 TO EQUIP AN AMERICAN SOLDIER.

The cost of fitting out each infantryman for service in France is $156.30, and more than one-fourth of this expenditure goes into the cost of his fighting equipment. Figures made public by the war department show that the cost of the infantryman's clothing is $101.21, of his fighting equipment $47.36 and of his eating ntensils $7.73. Each infantryman will be equipped with fifty articles of clothing, 107 articies in his figting equipment and eleven eating utensils. The items under figting equipment are as follows:

Rifle, $19.50; bayonet, $2.15; hayonet scabbard, $1.13; cartridge belt, $4.08: 100 cartridges, $5; steel helmet, $3; gas mask, $12; trench tool, 50 cents; total, $47.36.

The figure given for a rifle is the cost of making the United States rifle, model 1903, generally known as the Springfield. The first 600,000 to 800,000 troops to go to France will carry this weapon. The so-called Enfield rifle used by British troops is heing manufactured to equip other American troops and is officially known as the "United States rifle, model 1917." This is being made on a cost plus profit hasis, so that no accurate figure for it can now be given. Items included under clothing with which each infantryman will be equipped are:

One bed sack, 98 cents; three wool blankets, $18.75; one waist belt, 25 cents; two pairs wool breeches, $8.90; two wool service coats, $15.20; one hat cord, 8 cents; three pairs summer drawers, $1.50; three pairs winter drawers, $4.88; one pair wool gloves, 61 cents; one service hat, $1.70; two pairs extra shoe laces, 5 cents; one pair canvas leggings, $1.05; two flannel shirts, $7.28; two pairs shoes, $10.20; five pairs wool stockings, $1.50; four identification tags, 2 cents; three summer undershirts, $1.50; four winter undershirts, $4.88; one overcoat, $14.92; five shelter tent pins, 20 cents; one shelter tent pole, 26 cents; one poncho, $3.55; one shelter tent, $2.95; total $101.21.

Items included under eating utensils consists of a canteen and canteen cover, cup, knife, fork, spoon, meat can, haversack, pack carrier, first aid kit and pouch to carry it.—Saugerties Telegraph.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitnte for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver jnst as snreiy as calomel, bnt it doesn't make yon sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmiess.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES.

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength) and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Editorial

A DEEPER NOTE NEEDED.

Jesus taught nothing more emphatically than he did the insufficiency of mere outward morality. He insisted at all times upon the spirituality of the moral law, showing that it reached down into the deepest recesses of the heart in its demand for purity and holiness. He held that a righteousness that did not embrace the inner motive was fatally defective, and inadequate to save. Whoever hated his brother was, according to his pronouncement, a murderer; whoever looked upon a woman to lust after her was an adulterer. None were clean whose souls were not ridded of evil thoughts, aspirations, and purposes.

And in proportion as the Church is spiritual does she adhere to this exalted standard of her divine Lord. When her ministry gives out only homilies on forms and ceremonies and the outward aspects of religion, to say nothing of secular themes, she is obviously in an unhealthful condition. Is not the deeper note of the Gospel, summoning the people to a complete crucifixion of self and the extirpation of all unholiness from the heart, the crying need of this day? Surely, this should be the message that frequently goes out from every Methodist pulpit. Nor is it enough for a minister thus to preach with his lips; he needs also to lead others into the realization of such an experience by the eloquent call of his own shining example. A holy ministry and membership, such as brought her power in the past, can alone make Southern Methodism a conquering force in the years to come. No other equipment can take the place of this.

AN APPEAL THAT SHOULD BE HEEDED.

The Nashville Banner represents Dr. James A. Bray, of Birmingham, Ala., Secretary of the Board of Education of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, as having made an earnest and eloquent plea before the session of the Tennessee Conference last week for more financial assistance for the eleven schools maintained by his denomination. By every token, this is an appeal to which our Church should generously respond. It is not enough for us to maintain Paine College and help perhaps two or three other institutions of this Church a little; we should bestir ourselves to see that its entire educational system is placed upon an effective basis. These are our colored people, being bound to us by many strong and sacred ties, and we should not forget our obligations to them in this time of the South's wonderful prosperity. It is incumbent upon us to do more for them in every respect, and the approaching General Conference should commit the Church to this task upon a large and adequate scale. Among the Negro Methodists of America there are none superior to these, and no other denomination of them is so fully in accord with the ideals and institutions of the South.

TRAILERS, NOT LEADERS.

In a recent issue of the New Orleans Advocate we gave quotations showing how the Pittshurgh and Western Christian Advocates, two official journals of Northern Methodism, had sought to take a hand in the so-called "Laymen's" agitation in our Church, apparently with a desire to give it a boost. Since then two other official periodicals of that denomination have carried editorials of a similar character. As we have before stated, this is in keeping with what has appeared to be the purpose of the Church, North, for some years, namely, to stir up as much as possible the spirit of disaffection among our people, with a view to weakening and disintegrating Southern Methodism. It is fortunate for our Church that the Northern Methodists are showing themselves so clearly in their true colors before the unification proceedings have progressed any further than they have. Obviously, the same unfair and unbrotherly spirit which in bygone years has led to the violation of nearly every compact made with the Church, South, still animates them. Think of the official organs of a large religious denomination throwing bouquets at such a movement in our Church as that led by Messrs. Fritts and Eleazer, with its ILLEGAL assaults upon some of our Bishops in "a penny pamphlet!" Why should high-minded men want to be united with a Church whose leaders have such conceptions as to Christian ethics and justice?

But the most ridiculous thing is that these Northern editors should seek to make the impression that the Northern Methodists have led the way in a march toward democracy. Our Church first adopted lay representation in the General Conference, and they were trailers, not leaders, in giving the laity a voice and vote in that great law-making assembly. AND THERE IS NOT TODAY A SINGLE LAYMAN IN ANY ANNUAL CONFERENCE IN THE NORTHERN METHODIST CHURCH. Their episcopacy is substantially the same now that it was in 1844, when they overrode the constitution of the undivided Church, to accomplish fanatical ends, except that they have weakened its itinerant feature and made it somewhat diocesan. Its powers are practically the same that they have ever been. As a matter of fact, theirs is an episcopacy of the General Conference, while ours is an episcopacy of the whole Church—of the people. This is the fundamental difference between the two. Rightly analyzed and understood—considering the source from which it comes and to whom it is accountable—our episcopacy is not one whit more autocratic (though it is more stable and more directly represents the people) than that of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

One of the Northern papers referred to suggested that the outcome of the Eleazer-Fritts agitation will be to establish in our Church an episcopacy like theirs. Hardly. Our people repudiated that form of episcopacy when Southern Methodism was born, and we scarcely think that they are ready to renounce the work of our fathers adopt it now. There may be a few renegades among us who are willing to do this, but they are a mere sprinkling among our more than 2,000,000 members, as these assistant agitators across the Ohio will learn if the matter is ever put to a test.

CHRISTIANITY ITSELF INVOLVED IN THE STRUGGLE.

The Manufacturers Record (Baltimore, Md.) of October 11, reproduces the following statement, taken from the New York Times:

"Writing in the Suddeutsche Konservative Korrespondenz of Karlsruhe, of which he is publisher and editor-in-chief, Adam Roder, the well known German publicist, voices the opinion that the ultimate object of the propaganda carried on by the Pan-Germans is the wiping out of Christianity in Germany and the establishing of a peculiar, made-in-Germany religion. After accusing the Pan-German annexationists of a bitter hatred to 'Semitic Christianity' and quoting liberally from their writings to prove his contention, Herr Roder arrives at the following conclusions:

"'The Pan-German view of the world is consciously aimed at the rooting out of the Christian religion and the system of ethics derived from it. A German religion is to arise, linked to the belief in Wodan of our ancestors, which, in turn, is to be so refined by the results of the modern theory of races and the teachings of the Darwinian theory of evolution that what remains will be Atheism, framed in high-sounding phrases. The German people, as the noblest and most favored of all races, as the highest manifestation of humanity, will have become its own god.

"'Christianity will be done away with, according to the ideas of Nietzsche, as the great weakening and enervating influence. The only great person is he who has power and uses it. Sin, redemption, repentance, the greatest and most profound things that human thought tries to fathom, do not exist for this company of heartless bullies, whose members, with monocles in their left eyes and rattling sabres in their right hands, challenge the world in order to place the German heel upon its neck in ancient Roman fashion.'"

Commenting upon this utterance, the Editor of the Manufacturers Record says: "For the last twenty-five years or more there has been a mental invasion of the United States by Germany, an invasion of atheism and agnosticism, an invasion of the false teachings of German philosophers and universities, which, prior to the beginning of the war, had filled our universities, and, to some extent, our theological seminaries and pulpits, with doctrines so rankly unorthodox and atheistic that the religious life of this country was in serious danger. This German invasion had been going on for twenty-five years, and no thoughtful man, uninfluenced by it, could study its power for evil without being deeply impressed with the fearful results which were being wrought in the religious views of the people of this country. The Manufacturers Record has repeatedly called attention to the growing power of this false teaching of the philosophers of Germany as one of the reasons why for a quarter of a century that country, though developing efficiency in material things, was losing all spiritual life." The Record further claims that the statement taken from The New York Times confirms its position that Germany's

IN PARADISE.

O, think of that assembly,
Their beauty and their peace;
Souls perfect, yet receiving
Love's infinite increase.
In full illumination,
Knowing as they are known,
The transitory ended
And the imperfect flown.

His joy is through them spreading;
His will their will sustains;
Joint heirs, in rich possession,
Of Christ's eternal gains.
With vision all unclouded,
They see Him face to face,
Share in His intercessions
And ministries of grace.

They rest from all their labors,
Yet serve Him day and night;
Their earthly forms are sleeping,
But they, in deep delight,
Wait for the Resurrection,
Of life the perfect Crown,
The time of Restitution,
Christ's triumph, and their own.

"From henceforth," saith the Spirit,
Write "Blessed are the dead;"
Believe that in Christ's kingdom
All change must higher lead;
And when in bitter anguish
You close some tender eyes,
Donbt not they are beholding
The King of Paradise.

—Noel.

BE AN INSPIRATION.

Let us always remember that hope in us kindles hope in others; that smiles beget smiles; that trust creates trust; that goodness awakens goodness; that love awakens love; and that in unseen but sure ways integrity, strength and honor in us plant seeds of honor, strength and integrity in numberless other lives, many of which we may know nothing of.—J. T. Sutherland.

THE HABIT IMPORTANT.

You do not feel in the spirit of prayer; you have no spiritual uplift; you are simply indifferent. Give that unhappy mood no heed. You know very well what you ought to do. You ought to present yourself before God; you ought to say your prayers. Do that, and the devout attitude, the bended knees, the folded hands, the quiet and the silence, the lips busied with holy words, will induce the consciousness of the Divine Presence and help you to pray in spirit and in truth.—George Hodges.

AN OUTSTANDING MIRACLE.

No truer "miracle" can be found than the continued existence of the Church. By miracle our Lord almost invariably meant "sign," the signature or handwriting of God in a natural way which none other could imitate. Were the Church not of supernatural origin and divinely sustained, she would not be living to-day. Never could she have survived the outward conditions which have upheaved the world, wrecked the mightiest nations, revolutionized the peoples of the earth. Much less could she have outlived the internal conditions, such as her own division, the failures of vast numbers of her constituents, their unfaithfulness to duty, and her faithlessness at times to her own mission. No matter from what angle looked at, she is the great wonder of the world. There is no way to account for her living but that of attributing it to the divine power.—Presbyterian Journal.

GETTING MUCH OUT OF A CHURCH SERVICE.

Some one who did not attend church very often gave as a reason that he could not get much out of a service. Much depends on what he went to church for and upon the spirit in which he went. To get something out of a service one must be willing to put something into it—prayer, praise and thanksgiving. Dr. Jowett puts the matter very pointedly thus: "What is my attitude to the Church of which I am a member? Is it entirely defined by what I can get out of it, or have I an equal concern as to what I can give to it? You will sometimes hear one man say to another as he leaves public worship: 'I didn't get much out of the service this morning.' Well, here is a very searching test to apply to such a man. What did you contribute to it? When we sit in the house of God, what is our conception of our relationship to the service? Are we merely critics or contributors? How do I regard my functions in the worship? Am I a performer, even though I am sitting in the pew, or am I there only to be entertained?"—Lutheran.

"FOLLOW ME."

By Rev. Jno. F. Foster.

The Christ conceptions of life, as shown in His own walk, was a self-emptying, a laying aside of His own glory, that He might, stooping thus, place Himself beneath the weight and burden of humanity. He conquered self, living sinless, that he might lift out of the soul-life of man the sting of sin, with its condemnation, and the power of its debasing influence, saving man from death and the death-dealing results of sin in his life. His view of life was not position or fame, influence or prestige, but a mastered self, spent in the service of another. Then, as He planned His life, His answer to the evil voices of life (calling to Him as they call to us, for He was tempted in all points like as we are) was, "Get thee behind me, Satan, for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and Him only shalt thou serve." Again, when they would make Him king and give an earthly turn to His life, veiling His view of living with another purpose, He left the multitude and went aside into a neighboring mountain. Also, when similarly tempted to allow earthly things to become His purpose in life, or become the means of diverting Him from His view of true living, He said to Satan: "Thou art an offense unto me."

His view of life's living was not its conserving, but its expending; not its saving, but its losing. Death as the door to living was His philosophy; death to self, and the concentration of self and all that one had or was on one point, viz.: The so living in dying to self, that His life might lift others and usher them into true life, lifting them to His own ideal, that they might live and cause others to live. He who lived for himself died, but he who died to himself, living for others, was he who truly lived. That which was truly worth while in His view was that living, which, forgetting self, was willing to be overlooked and lost sight of; being shoulders that another might climb; being foundation that another might stand. The out of right is the explanation of that which is in the right. The foundation is the support of the copestone. The one is seen, the other unseen. These lives are not always esteemed—seldom are—and, as in the past so in the present, one is beaten and another is killed. Frequently they are "despised and rejected of men." If they were of the world, the world would love its own, but because they are not of the world, their ideals and walks being apart, the world overlooks, forgets, and hates them. In the hereafter, however, when lives are seen in their true worth, stripped of the tinsel of earth, and results are properly valued, we shall see that the stone that the builders rejected hath become the head of the corner. Despised and dying, He was cursed, but from His death came the birth of a new thought and spiritual force, and the whole world lives because thereof. Following Him means all of this; but they that have fellowship with Him in His suffering shall be joint heirs with Him in His glory.

DOCTRINAL DIFFERENCES.

By Rev. W. T. Bazzel.

The followers of Christ seem to be hopelessly divided into sects, and controversies concerning doctrinal differences seem endless. Most Christians deplore these differences and would like to see all of God's people united in one organic body, but there is little ground for hoping that such a union will be consummated soon. So the following suggestions are not offered as a feasible plan for uniting all churches, but merely in the hope that we may become more charitable and tolerant, that we might all the more perfectly co-operate in leading men to accept our Christ.

All controverted doctrines which divide us may be divided into two general classes: 1. Doctrines dealing with questions too profound and mysterious in their very nature for any finite mind to comprehend. 2. Those points which the Bible does not explain in detail because of their non-essential character and relative insignificance.

As an example of the former class, take the doctrine of predestination—and what other doctrine has been a more prolific source of contention and divisions? A little unbiased thought will show that predestination goes beyond the range of the finite mind. Unquestionably, God foreknows, predestines, and foreordains. But to what extent has he predetermined events and actions? Who can answer? In order to answer definitely and fully, a man must examine and understand in full detail all the original plans of the Almighty; he must analyze the mind of God as a skillful chemist would analyze a lump of clay; he must reproduce a complete blue-print of every plan of the Great Architect of the universe and develop a clear mental photograph of all eternity!

As another example of doctrines based upon the unknowable, take the Trinity. Men have wrangled and wrestled with words seeking to fully define the constituent nature of the Godhead, when the fact would seem self-evident that no human mind can comprehend the Triune God. We may know him, love him and obey him without fully comprehending all his nature. A little child may know, love and obey his mother without fully comprehending the mother-nature. While he may realize her love and solicitude for him, and her authority over his actions, he cannot understand her hopes and plans and her high aspirations for his future, nor her heart-yearnings for his welfare. There shall come a time when we shall see God face to face, and shall "know even as we are known," but not now.

None of us being able to fully understand these things, we must of necessity differ in our imperfect views concerning them. Let us look into them diligently and discuss them freely, but let us not be intolerant over matters too deep for our finite vision to penetrate.

Another example of man's attempt to invade the realms of the infinite in his search for material for creeds is the various interpretations of prophecies concerning the time of the end and the future glories of Christ's earthly kingdom. Pre-millennialists and Post-millennialists are waging wordy conflict, regradless of the fact that in all the ages prophecy has never been fully understood until it became history. Prophecy reveals the dim outlines of coming events, but none can know the complete details until they are unfolded in their fulfilling. Let us search deeply into the mystery that enveiops the future; but let us not be so dead sure we know all the truth. As we search prophecies we shall inevitably form theories and get a mental picture of the precise manner of their fulfilling, but how vain to conclude that our own picture is correct altogether, and that all who differ with us are unworthy!

The three foregoing examples will suffice to show how we have become separated over questions concerning the unknowable, and divided by doctrines too profound for our perfect comprehension. Nor is it necessary that we understand these things fully now in order to be saved and serve our God acceptably. Thank God for a plan of salvation so plain and simple that the peasant, the savage, or the little child may find the way to glory as easily as the most erudite philosopher who delves deepest into theology and metaphysics!

Now for an example of the other class of doctrines—those upon which the Bible is not definite and clear. Take the mode of baptism. The Christian Church seems hopelessly divided as to whether immersion or affusion is the Bible mode, and it is made a condition of membership and a test of fellowship by some great denominations. Yet the fact is, the Bible does not anywhere describe the act of water baptism as practiced by the Apostles—does not measure the quantity of water necessary nor give complete directions as to the manner in which it should be applied. Of course, nearly every Christian has a very definite idea as to how they baptized folks during the days of the Apostles, and can quote a lot of Scripture trying to support his view. But let us note the following facts which are accepted by almost every one. Millions of Christians, including thousands of scholars, believe and teach that immersion in water is the Scriptural mode. Other millions of Christians just as devout, including other thousands of scholars just as learned, maintain just as positively that affusion is plainly taught to be the Bible mode. No doubt a large majority of professed Christians hold to affusion, but the minority who believe in immersion is a minority of millions, in every walk of life. Now, if Christians on both sides of this controversy are equally honest, learned, and devout (and who would dispute it?) are we not driven to the conclusion that the Bible is not perfectly clear and explicit upon the mode? Just think how easily one clear sentence would have settled it forever. If the Bible only contained some such sentence as this: "and when thou baptizest thou shalt go into deep water and there bury the disciple by dipping the whole body in the water." Or if it had said, "Thou shalt take water in a vessel and pour it upon his head." Or "Thou shalt sprinkle a few drops upon his forehead." Then in either case the meaning would have been sufficiently clear and the controversy could never have arisen.

Now, why did not Jesus or some inspired writer clearly define the mode? Well, unless God has forgotten or neglected a very necessary and essential doctrine, we must conclude that the mode of water baptism was a detail of no essential importance. If the mode be essential, then the way of salvation is not "so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, shall not err therein," but becomes a way so obscure that millions of sincere, devout and scholarly men have erred hopelessly therein! The real essentials of faith, repentance, hope, love, and obedience are so unmistakably plain that all Christian denominations teach them.

Other examples of doctrinal divisions concerning forms and practices which the Bible does not definitely describe might be given, but the above will suffice to show that nearly all divisions are either upon questions too great for us to comprehend or else too small for the Bible to explain in detail.

Some denominations thus surround themselves with doctrinal fences of one or the other class and thereby "fence out" all of God's children who fail to agree to their views. But all the doctrinal fences which separate Methodists from other Christians have been built by others. Most Methodists believe affusion to be the Scriptural mode of baptism, yet we recognize the fact that many good men think differently, and we do not make it a condition of membership, and we immerse all who so desire. Most of us believe infant baptism to be a duty, but we do not make it a condition of membership, and parents are free to follow the dictates of their own consciences. And there are thousands of loyal and active Methodists whose precise view on predestination, premillennialism, etc., are unknown even to the congregations of which they are members. We emphasize the fact that justification is by faith and not by forms and ceremonies, and that salvation from sin is wrought by Jesus Christ only, and that God requires us to live a holy, blameless life before him. If you accept the above, you have met every test of fellowship among Methodists and every condition of membership in the Methodist Church.

THREE CLASSES OF CHURCH-GOERS.

1. The Curiosity Crowd. This is a very shallow-minded and small-hearted bunch. This crowd is always on hand when a new preacher, or an evangelist, appears. As soon, however, as the novelty wears off this crowd sink into oblivion until it is rumored abroad that a new preacher is again to hold forth. Then they are seen to sally forth once more as though the Kingdom of God depended upon their presence in the sanctuary. And the new preacher, or evangelist, is sometimes deluded into believing that he is some great personality, because the crowds do follow him. But just wait till a few months have passed, and then visit the new preacher: you will find that all the wind has been taken out of his sails, and that he is seriously contemplating looking into new fields that he may have crowds to preach at (I use the words, preach at, advisedly)—that is, you will find the new preacher thus contemplating, in the event that he is himself a shallow-brained personality; otherwise, he will be thanking God for the fact that he has at last found out who are the "worth whiles" of his congregation.

2. The Entertainment Seekers. This class may be more or less intellectual, but they make the serious mistake of putting the Church services upon the same basis that the picture show is operated upon—to entertain. Therefore, just as soon as the minister ceases to be entertaining, looked at from the intellectual point of view, this crowd loses interest in church-going. They are impelled by a purely selfish motive, but delude themselves into believing that they are really pious.

3. Those Who are Working and Praying for the Advancement of the Kingdom of God. This class always stand by their pastor and assist him in the work of the Kingdom, though their pastor does not in all things please them. This class are big-hearted and big-brained enough to bury any little dislike that they may have for their pastor, because they recognze the fact that the Church, as an institution, is bigger than any one minister or layman and deserves the support of all men, even though everything connected therewith is not altogether according to their liking. Again, this class know that no one man can possibly please all the people all the time; therefore, they go ahead in their work of co-operation with their pastor, even though they may sometimes long for the co-operation of a minister who would be more congenial to them. Such church members are the "salt of the earth." It is they, together with the faithful pastors, who are helping God in the redemption of a lost world. Out of the thousands that followed our Lord, and were healed and fed by Him, there were but a small handful who stood by him in the hours of severe test; but, beginning with that small handful, God has continued to work upon the conscience of mankind until despotism, slavery and oppression have about been driven from their strongholds. Through them and their courageous self-sacrificing followers, God is slowly driving idolatry from earth, also. My short experience in the ministry has taught me to expect but little from the crowds, but with the faithful ones there is no limit to their response, save when necessity compels. I thank God for the faithful laymen who have always stood by me in my feeble efforts to advance His kingdom. I am sure that this, too, is the sentiment of all pastors who have made the observations herein discussed.

AUTUMN WOODS.

Willie C. Page.

On chestnut trees, burrs open wide,
With leaves a yellow glow;
The nuts drop duiiy to the ground
As through the woods I go.
I hear the dove sing low and sweet—
Small voices, all in tears,
That sigh for grace of summer gone,
And sob aioud with fears
Of winter. Yet, however sad,
The winds, or trees that nod,
Or leaves that drift—yet autumn brings Nobility—and God.

Lexington, Miss.

Dr. L. S. Massey, the vigorous Editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate, has been giving his readers some excellent discussions of the theme, "The Democracy of Methodism." We wish that these illuminating utterances could be read by every preacher and layman in Southern Methodism.

CHRISTIANITY ITSELF INVOLVED.

success in the present war "would mean the destruction of civilization and of Christianity itself, since there would be no possibility, for generations to come, for the world teaching of the religion of Christ if Germany, with atheism, dominated the world."

This impresses us as most excellent lay preaching. Indeed, this utterance of our distinguished contemporary is strikingly suggestive and thought-provoking. We have all along held the view that it was Germany's departure from the true religion of Christ that corrupted her ideals and made possible the plunging of the world into the present horrible conflict: but it had not occurred to us that the utter extinguishment of Apostolic Christianity was one of the cherished goals definitely aimed at by her leaders. Yet, that this is true is not at all unbelievable, for, after having repudiated the Christian faith, thereby losing its vitalizing power, and after having formed a contempt for it, the next logical step would be to uproot and exterminate it, if possible.

The position that if Germany, with her atheistic teaching, should prevail in the present mighty struggle, Christianity throughout the world would be given a tremendous setback, seems to us to be incontrovertible. This, in our opinion, would result, not only because Germany would be certain to type the religious faith and activities of the countries brought beneath the sway of her government, but also because her prestige would likely be such as to give her scholars and philosophers a far greater influence in other independent nations, like our own, than they have ever had. The fact (if this view be correct) that Germany had become a world menance to the religion which Christ laid down his life on the Cross to establish, and which is humanity's only hope, may throw some light upon the question as to why the all-wise Heavenly Father has permitted this cruel war to break out and rage to so fearful an extent. It may be that this was the only way that the Christian Church could be rescued from the insidious dangers that were threatening to paralyze and destroy it. And if this view be accepted, he who fights against Germany and her allies is not only assisting in combating despotism in government, but is also aiding in perpetuating and extending Christianity on the earth. And this conception gives the weightiest possible reason why the Central Powers must be defeated, no matter what may be the sacrifice and cost to accomplish that result. Regrettable as such a condition of things might be, men might live under an autocratic form of government and enjoy some measure of prosperity and happiness; but without the influence of the Gospel of Christ, human existence would degenerate into a state appalling to contemplate—a state, of which some idea may be formed by looking at the situation in the most benighted heathen lands of to-day.

We earnestly hope that the complete wiping out of German rationalism will be one of the results of this frightful and bloody war, and that this obliteration will extend to our own land as well as to those of Europe. That, as The Record has said, this vicious species of infidelity has been transplanted in the United States is undeniably true, and it is yet flourishing in many of our institutions of learning. Prof. Leuba's recent investigations of the religious views of the scientists of our country demonstrated this beyond question. Even Methodist colleges, particularly those of the Church, North, have been considerably infected with this deadly contagion. Happy will it be for our people if they learn from Germany's awful fate that safety and progress may be had only by adhering to and practicing the simple precepts of the pure, Scriptural Christianity! Nothing could be more absurd than the notion that the religion of Christ was so imperfectly revealed by him and his Apostles that nearly all the convictions of preceding generations concerning it were erroneous and that it needs a radical reconstruction at the hands of the savants of our day. It is not Germany alone that has a "Kultur" that causes men to lose their intellectual balance, and that lures them into paths that lead only to spiritual impotence and ruin. The memorable words of our Lord, "Without me, ye can do nothing," apply with as much force to scholars, as they do to persons of meager attainments in learning.

Well worth meditating upon in this connection is the following utterance of St. Paul to the Church at Corinth: "And I, brethren, when I came unto you, came not with excellency of speech, or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling. And my speech and my preaching were not with the enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power, that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."

CHURCH EXTENSION IN NEW ORLEANS.

On Tuesday evening, October 9, at 6:30 o'clock, at First Church, this city, 125 Methodist men, comprising the ministers and leading laymen of the several churches, sat down to a delightful banquet. The menu was prepared by the Calendar Club of First Church, and was all that could be desired.

As the last of the good things were disappearing, Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, arose, and in an address which showed a very keen understanding of the situation, and which was substantiated by statistics displaying the relative strength of the several Protestant denominations in the city, spoke of this field as a great opportunity for Methodism. He stated that the purpose of the meeting was to organize a local board of church extension.

The presiding elder then introduced the guest of honor, Dr. W. F. McMurry, as "the greatest church extension secretary in the world." Dr. McMurry made a very forceful and practical address concerning such a board as was contemplated, citing the St. Louis board, and the great success which had attended its work. He showed how, in any city, co-operation and concentration would prevent blunders in the location of churches, and deliver the full strength of a united Methodism upon any one point it should be deemed wise to develop.

At the conclusion of Dr. McMurry's address, questions were asked which elicited further information as to the practical workings of such a board as should be organized here.

A resolution was unanimously adopted that a local board of church extension be organized and the presiding elder was asked to have each quarterly conferences of the churches represented elect a man for every 100 members, or fraction thereof, to serve on this board. It is expected that the board will be fully organized at an early date, to take up the problems of church indebtedness and church building in New Orleans.

A very fine spirit of fellowship prevailed among the men from the various churches, and it was felt, as well as expressed, that the problems of any one church here are the problems of all the churches, and that Southern Methodism must be one if it is to do the work God has called it to do in this city.

IMPURITY AND PROFANITY.

It is hard to say which is worst, the impure or the profane word. The swearer may often make no impression save for the moment, while the obscene leaves a defiling stain upon the soul that many waters can not wash out, nor years wear away. As to the foolish talking and jesting one hears everywhere, how can it be else but condemned? It is difficult to draw the line between reasonable and sinful indulgence here. To say that all joking and mirthful jests are wrong is absurd. The quick witted reply, and humorous word, when springing forth kindly and without offense, are enlivening, and the proof of life; but the habitual jester, who bends all his powers to the paltry end of exciting a laugh, is all froth and healthful for none.—Unidentified.

"PILE ON MORE DUST."

Dear Doctor Meek: After reading Bishop Hoss's great utterance in last week's New Orleans Advocate and what you had to say about "The Chattanooga Caucus," I imagine I felt about like the Jew did who visited his friend Isaac the next day after Isaac got married. Isaac was out in front of the house moaning and throwing dust in his hair, and his friend wanted to know what in the world had happened, just the next day after his marriage, that caused the bridegroom to make such great lamentation. Now, Isaac was not allowed to see his wife before he married her, so Isaac said, "Just go in and see my wife." His friend went in, and after taking a good look at the bride, he returned where Isaac was and said, "Pile on more dust, Isaac." So I want you and every other loyal Methodist to "pile on more dust," and keep piling it on until every Methodist preacher and layman will know the awful plight we are in.

Now as to the Vanderbilt matter, let me say that there is something in the very name "Vanderbilt" that seems sacred to me. I did the work of three of my Conference Courses in that University, and it gives me a feeling of sadness I cannot express to think that "our Vanderbilt" has been taken from us, and that, by the Church's pretended friends. How are such outrages upon the Church to be stopped? And how can any true Methodist be still when there is so great a danger confronting us as is at this time? YES, "pile on more dust," and I will pile on some when it comes time to elect delegates to the next General Conference. I hope that every preacher when he casts his vote for a man to represent him at the General Conference will vote for men who stand for the true principles of Methodism, instead of voting for a man because of personal friendship. So far as I am concerned, I want to know that the man I vote for will represent, and not misrepresent me, in his work in the General Conference.

Yours in Christ,

Lauderdale, Miss. J. H. MOORE.

THE CONFLICT ADJUSTED.

In a communication received this (Tuesday) morning, Brother T. W. Holloman, Treasurer of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board, calls our attention to the fact that both the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board and the Anti-Saloon League of this State are asking our Sunday schools to observe special programs and take offerings on Sunday, Nov. 4. Brother Holloman states that he has conferred with Rev. A. W. Turner and that it has been agreed that the Sunday school program shall have the right of way on the Sabbath mentioned, and that our Sunday schools be requested to carry out the program of the Anti-Saloon League as soon thereafter as possible, remitting the collections then taken to Rev. A. W. Turner, at Shreveport, La. We will publish the whole of Brother Holloman's statement in the next issue of the Advocate.

A MEDITATION.

Our Lord "emptied himself." He laid down his life. He endured the Cross. Have we ever sacrificed any wish, any ambition for Christ's sake? Have we ever sacrificed anything for Christian work? Have we ever promptly refused a profitable business proposition in order to be of definite Christian service? Have we actually ever sacrificed any money for a good cause? Have we ever really denied ourselves something that we very much wanted and took the money for some one else more needy than ourselves? If not, we do not and cannot know the meaning of this word "love."—The Inner Circle.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MR. B. F. FRITTS.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 6, 1917.
Mr. B. F. Fritts, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dear Sir: When I received the following communication, dated Chattanooga but postmarked Nashville, requesting the use of my name in promoting a revolution within the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, accompanied by a postal card addressed to you for my signature, I was suffering under limitations which prevented such a response as I felt moved to make; I now avail myself of the fact that the subject has at last reached the public to reply to you thus openly:

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 25, 1917.
Mr. J. D. Barbee,
Greenville, Miss.

Dear Brother: Please read carefully the enclosed statement to the Church. We venture that in the main you will heartily agree with it as does almost everyone who has seen it. You have douhtless heen feeling, just as we have, that there is an imperative need for some such legislation as is here suggested. We believe that the time is ripe, and that immediate steps should be taken to hring it about. The statement enclosed, together with Dr. Cook's booklet (a copy is being sent you under another cover), is to introduce the movement to the Church and will he widely distrihuted. We want you and a hundred other leading laymen to whom this letter is going, to sign this statement with us to give the movement momentum and help insure its success. You want it to succeed, we know. Are you willing to "do your hit?" Your name now will he worth ten times as much as later. You will never have a better opportunity to serve your Church. Sign the enclosed card and mail it to-day. You will never regret it.

When your letter was received, I then felt outraged, not only that such an assault should he contemplated upon the time-honored institutions of our great Church, but that, though the humblest and most unworthy among my hrethren, it should have heen assumed for a single moment that I could he induced to lend myself to such a proceeding. I was specially grieved to find the honored name of Col. Creed F. Bates paraded in the forefront of the movement. For a great many years Col. Bates had been an object of my highest esteem; and, heing a Holston man, I could not understand his apparent willingness to join, among other things, in an unmerited attack upon Bishop Hoss, to say nothing of Bishop Candler, neither of whom needs to be a Bishop in order to he a great man, and both of whom could unquestionahly have achieved greater distinction, with accompanying wealth, in secular pursuits. Imagine, therefore, my happiness to find that I had not heen mistaken in my estimate of Col. Bates when I read in a recent number of the New Orleans Christian Advocate his repudiation of so dishonoring a connection and his warm and well-merited endorsement of Bishop Hoss. Holston men, while independent and accustomed to stand up stoutly for any opinions they may hold, against all comers, have in most cases heen also noted for their chivalry and devotion to the ideals and leaders they have chosen to follow. It was the father of this same Bishop Hoss who voluntarily accompanied Bishop McTyeire when he first held the Holston Conference to protect him from insult and injury at the hands of the very people with whom the ultra-unionists are now seeking to unite us upon practically any sort of hasis. If I am mistaken in this, Bishop Hoss can correct me.

Dr. Meek has added another to the long list of benefits he has conferred upon the Church by exposing the origin and animus of this revolutionary propaganda. To those who have watched the proceedings with an intelligent eye, it has been no surprise to learn that the focal center of this disintegrating influence is found to be in the Board of Missions, which has been helieved to be for many years largely a political machine and which has "evoluted" into an "oligarchy" that would put to shame those of which history tells us. Its hand is in everything. It knows no master. This talk of democracy, drawing inspiration from such a source, is enough to make Wilheim II smile in glee and the shades of the doges of Venice shout for joy. And the most amazing thing about the whole outfit is that they are really marching under the most oppressive autocrat who has ever heen elected to the episcopacy of our Church. Politics, indeed, makes strange hedfellows.

Mr. Eleazer, the gentleman who seems to have brewed this witches' hroth, is unknown to me. He seems to he a fungus that has fastened itself upon the green bay-tree in recent years. But I have read his paper, The Missionary Voice, and it has never had the sound of a Southern Methodist voice to my ears. As I have read it, The Voice might just as well he the organ of the Unitarians. To he sure, it has a great deal to say about the "Kingdom of God," and its particular adherents are much given to shouting for that Kingdom in contrast with the Southern Methodist Church. Hence, the inquiry naturally arises, why, then, if the Southern Methodist Church is not a true hranch of the Kingdom of God, do these gentlemen remain in it? What are they doing there? One suspects the reason to he that no parsnips would be buttered on the outside—the Kingdom of God has no material treasury.

What ahout this demand for democracy in the Church? A little reflection ought to convince one that it is the merest moonshine, and nothing more than a political slogan. Every layman who has taken an active interest in the Church knows that our pastors are constantly using their utmost efforts to get all the laymen to take part—any part—in the Church's activities. Similarly, such men know that the presiding elders use their utmost endeavors to get the lay delegates to attend the District and Annual Conferences, and they are aware also of the poor results. I was never a district steward, yet I think I am correct in saying that I have attended district stewards' meetings where I was the only layman present. And in an intimate association of many years with the rank and file—front rank, rear rank, headquarters, and hindquarters—I have never heard a layman object to our government in any of its parts. The truth is, the people have confidence in our Bishops, presiding elders, and preachers, and are content to leave the government of the Church largely in their hands. The laymen do not want to he members of most of the Conferences—they will not attend. This shouting for democracy in their names is simply an effort to destroy our Episcopacy hy men who can not control it. That it may finally succeed, as you have affirmed it will, may well be helieved, unless the rank and file of our preachers and laymen repudiate these leaders who are betraying the Church. The only serious criticism I have heard of our Bishops from loyal men has heen that in their administration they are swayed too much by a magnanimity which leads them to continue in positions of importance, and often against their judgment, men who are disloyal and injurious.

The truth is, my dear sir, Southern Methodism is honeycomhed to such an extent with disloyalty of various types, hut having a common center, that it might he wise for it to pass through the hands of a receiver, and that it would perhaps emerge from such an experience purified of much that now menaces its welfare. With its episcopacy under constant fire, its educational institutions largely in radical hands, its connectional forces, in the main, supporting its institutions hy a wasteful regularity in drawing stipendiary emolument, and its General Organ playing all tunes hut its own, what is to prevent complete hankruptcy? Who can imagine McFerrin, Summers, McTyeire, or Hoss circulating such a sheet as the General Organ under its present direction? That the Church of Soule, Paine, Pierce, and McTyeire should have come to such a plight is a marvelous and shocking experience, and it is a complete answer to those shallow optimists who tell us that the world is in all respects growing hetter.

I do not know you, Mr. Fritts, any more than I do your fellow-patriot, Mr. Eleazer. You may be in some respects a most excellent man. But you endangered your soul when you yoked up with that democrat. Would it not he wise, in view of what comes after death, to restrain the joyful rage of the reformer? To he sure, you may not helieve in the fire that is not quenched, hut if there should prove to be a flame after all, you might, nevertheless, burn.

I am, dear sir, with perfect satisfaction with the doctrines and polity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and perfect confidence in its Episcopacy, and most of those occupying places in it,

Sincerely,
J. D. BARBEE.

Church News

Mrs. Cynthia T. McFerrin, widow of the renowned Dr. John B. McFerrin, died at Nashville, Tenn., on September 18, at the age of 90 years.

Dr. J. C. C. Newton, President of the Kwansei Gakuin of Japan, and his wife are now in the United States, having arrived in San Francisco on August 15.

It is stated that Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, of Labrador, who has spent some time at the front in France, expects soon to make a lecture tour through the United States to tell the story of relief work in the French republic.

Evangelist D. L. Coale recently conducted a revival meeting at Corpus Christi, Texas, in which there were more than 100 conversions and 75 additions to the Church. Brother Coale is one of the most spiritual and effective of our General Evangelists.

August 20 marked the twentieth anniversary of the death of General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army. It is said that during this time this remarkable organization has made a record fully up to that of any equal period in its history.

At the late session of the Kentucky Conference a commission was named to confer with a like commission from the Louisville Conference with a view to acquiring and publishing a Church-owned paper. This action seemed to contemplate the purchasing of The Central Methodist, now owned hy Rev. W. A. Swift and serving the two Kentucky Conferences as their organ. The resolutions adopted also laid the predicate for an effort to consolidate the Ceneral Methodist and the Midland Methodist, which serves the Tennessee, the Holston, and the Memphis Conferences.

Dr. C. C. Woods, after 57 years of effective service, took the superannuate relation at the recent session of the Southwest Missouri Conference. Dr. Woods was Associate Editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate from 1898 to 1914, and Editor from 1914 to 1917. He has now become Editor Emeritus, the Assistant Editor Dr. Arthur Mather having become the active Editor. We regret Dr. Woods' retirement from the control of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, which he directed with a steady hand; hut we welcome his successor to the Editor-in-chiefship and wish him a large measure of success.

THE COST OF CHARACTER.

Many people have fine dreams of moral and spiritual beauty which never become anything more than dreams, hecause they will not work them out in pain, struggle, and self-restraint.

Here is an incident from a private letter: "One day lately one of my little music pupils, an old-fashioned, sweet little girl about nine years old, was playing scales and octaves, when she turned to me and said: 'Oh, Miss Graham, my hands are so tired!' I said: 'Never mind, Norma; just try to play them once or twice more. The longer you practice them, the stronger your hands will grow, so that after a while you will not feel it at all.' She turned the gentle little face wearledly to me and said: 'Miss Graham, it seems as if everything that strengthens hurts.' I gave her something else, but I thought: 'Yes, my dear little girl, everything that strengthens hurts!'"

The child was right. It is true in music; it is true in all art; it is true in the making of character; everything that strengthens hurts, costs pain and self-denial. We must die to live. We must crucify the flesh that we may find spiritual gains.—J. R. Miller.

The Great Battle

AN EMPTY CALABOOSE.

The Little Rock papers recently reported that for the first time, in so long a time that the oldest policeman could not remember, the door to the city calaboose stood wide open, because there was not a prisoner to occupy it. And this is a city of more than sixty thousand inhabitants and with an army of United States soldiers here at Camp Pike. A remarkable tribute to prohibition.—Geo. Thornburgh, Superintendent Arkansas Anti-Saloon League.

A LIQUOR VIEW OF REAL RELIGION.

When the churches expel the charlatans who pose as evangelists and worship above all else the almighty dollar; when they put the Bible back on the pulpit instead of the Year-Book of the Anti-Saloon League and preach the gospel as Christ preached it instead of trying to surpass Eva Tanguay in their gyrations, they will learn that the influence of religion, potent as ever, is deep-rooted in the heart of man, and no great campaign of newspaper advertising will be necessary to fill the pews, now so painfully empty, at the services. The minister who drives half his congregation from church by preaching constantly a false economic theory is false to his trust."—(North American Wine and Spirit Journal.)—Brewers' Journal, Sept. 1, 1917.

STRIKES AT MR. HOOVER.

Under a bitter article on "American 'War Beer?'" the Brewers' Journal for September assails Mr. Herbert Hoover, food controller of the nation, because of his purpose to save 35,000,000 bushels of barley per year by ordering the reduction of the alcoholic content of beer. The Journal says:

"We and many others have repeatedly demonstrated that there is a surplus of American-grown barley, large enough to supply the English, French and Belgian brewers with all the brewing material required, for the civilians and soldiers battling for freeing the world from despotism and militarism, and yet this Mr. Hoover proposes to compel us to make and drink war beer as they have it now in Germany."

This, Mr. Hoover, fitly represents the spirit of the brewing industry and its attitude toward any governmental authority which would limit it for the sake of conserving human food. A brewer can see nothing in barley but brewing material, but sensible folk see food in it, and because Food Controller Hoover implies that there is to be a reduction in the alcohol content of beer in order that there may be more food for men, women and children here and abroad, the Brewers' Journal speaks of him as "a disguised, parson-led prohibitionist."

An industry to which the life and health of the people is nothing at other times cannot be expected to have any great interest in the life and health of the people in a time of war.—The American Issue.

INVERSION AND MISSTATEMENT.

Rev. Sidney H. Babcock, in the Texas Christian Advocate.

The pamphlet of Doctor Ed. F. Cook is a clever piece of inversion—an unmitigated misstatement.

I.

The pamphlet charges that the Bishops have denied the Board of Missions the right to function under its constitution and have obstructed the program of the Board in proportion to the constructiveness of their policies.

One need go no further than the pamphlet for proof that some members of the Board of Missions were not content to function under the constitution authorized by the General Conference, but by by-laws and policies of their own choosing sought to arrogate to themselves prerogatives belonging to the Bishops and to the General Conference.

That much-coveted prerogative of "fixing the appointments" was claimed by the Board. But Doctor Cook's astute argument of employer and employe fails in the face of the law. The general law is specifically written into the constitution of the Board of Missions so as to cover all missionaries. (See Nos. 400 and 401, Discipline.) The Board of Missions are to employ missionaries exactly as an Annual Conference admits members, subject to appointment by a Bishop.

The one incident upon which the pamphlet relies to convict the Bishops of being obstructionists was their opposition to the Mexican policy of union enterprises involving delimitation of territory. Passing by the absurdity of trying to establish so serious a charge by a single incident, let it be noted that this policy contravened both the prerogatives of the Bishops and of the General Conference. While the resolution concerning this matter recognized the authority of the General Conference, yet it is evident that the whole policy would have been carried out unless the Bishops had intervened. But the policy utterly ignored the right of the Bishops to fix the bonndaries of the charges and districts. Herein are revealed:

1. That the Bishops have at no time contravened the Board in the exercise of their undisputed authority.

2. That the Bishops interposed their objections not as obstructionists, but solely as conservators of the law of the Church. The question here is not whether the Board or the Bishops are best qualified to fix appointments and determine policies, but is solely a question of law. The Bishops decided the law and acted accordingly. It was an act of disloyalty on the part of the majority of the Board to insist on their policy after the Bishops had decided that it was contrary to the law. Plainly, Doctor Cook has inverted, misstated, and misapplied the facts. He is in the attitude of supreme disloyalty.

II.

Twenty-five or more pages of the pamphlet are used in an effort to show that the Bishops' superintendency of missions has been desultory and inefficient.

In support of the charge Doctor Cook argues for a resident Bishop mainly by exhibiting letters from missionaries. Obviously, these letters were written with the plea for residencers in mind. The question of residencers versus itinerant general superintendents is debatable. On either side the missionaries have a right to be heard. Furthermore, they are within their rights to introduce as evidence specific acts of Bishops or lack of action in support of their contention. But to amass letters written in plea for residencers to support charges against Bishops who were acting under an entirely different system is to completely misstate the issue and is wholly unjust to the Bishops. It must be remembered that our Bishops are acting under a constitutional provision of an itinerant general superintendency. It would be unlawful for them to set up residence in a mission field for the purpose of assuming charge of the mission. And the first man to disagree with such an administration would be the first man to invoke the law against it. The same Bishop might be more or less efficient as a residencer than as an itinerant. The chances are he would exhibit the same qualities under either system. The question is, have our Bishops, under the present system, been desultory and inefficient? It will be impossible for Doctor Cook or anybody else to support that charge, because it is not true. Alpheus W. Wilson laid the whole foundation of modern missions. The Church is living to-day on the labors of that great apostle of missions. Warren A. Candler founded the Cuban mission and stirs the Church from one end to the other with his incomparable missionary sermons. E. Embree Hoss has given the most sustained and effective missionary service of any of the older Bishops. What could have been more unselfish than when he put the ocean between himself and wife, both being sick, at the call of the great work he loves? It would be impossible for these men or for any of their colleagues to whimsically skip about on any task committed to them.

III.

The third inversion and misstatement is that the Bishops raised the issues. It is unthinkable that Bishops whose brains are of such high voltage should contend for prerogatives that had never been challenged. The statement of Doctor Cook that every effort to keep the issues before the Board had met with the pronounced opposition of the General Secretary may be taken at full value. It also indicates that some one other than the Bishops raised the issues.

It is also to be noted that the pamphlet contradicts itself. The first part contends that the General Board of Missions is the proper administrative authority and that the Bishops are obstructionists. The last part contends that both the General Board and the missionaries are incompetent and that the Bishops ought to be residencers with full authority for a strong administration. Therefore, in the face of such contradiction, the whole argument of the pamphlet inverts. Instead of establishing any of its propositions, it argues conclusively against all of them.

REV. AARON DOUGLAS BELL.

Rev. Aaron Douglas Bell, son of Rev. and Mrs. Jno. W. Bell, was born in Iuka, Miss., on May 9, 1890, and was baptized when twenty days old by Rev. W. S. Lagrone. He was received into the M. E. Church, South, in early childhood and was licensed to preach in May, 1915. He died at the home of his parents in Okolona, Miss., on June 15, 1917. After completing his high school work, he attended the Branham & Hughes School, and later was a student at Millsaps College. He was a bright student, and it was comparatively easy for him to make rapid progress in all his school work. After leaving college, he taught school in Oklahoma and Mississippi. In early manhood he felt unmistakably that he was called to preach. Like very nearly all men, he resisted that call, and probably no one who ever resisted had a fiercer struggle than did he. It was a tragic conflict and lasted until two years before his death, when he yielded and was licensed by the Aberdeen District Conference. His health was seriously impaired at that time, and he was able to preach but one time before his death.

In the early winter of last year, he went West, hoping to be restored to health. It was to no avail, and he returned home to die. He was calm and unafraid when death drew near. When he could no longer speak, he signaled for a pen and paper and wrote assuring words to his sorrowing parents and loved ones. "The victory is won," was his final message, as he turned his eyes of faith toward the Son of God. May the Father's love and grace sustain the bereaved loved ones!

ST. FRANCIS AND THE BIRDS.

Over the ocean, long ago,
In the land of Italy,
Lived a good man named St. Francis,
Francis of Assisi.
Neither silver nor gold had he,
His roof was the sky above,
But he helped the sick and needy,
And told them of God's love.
And all men he called his brothers,
The birds and the flowers, too,
And one day he preached to a flock of birds
A sermon good and true.
They fluttered and twittered about him,
And when he was old, 'tis said,
A choir of larks sang to him
As he lay on his dying bed,
For the birds and the flowers all loved him,
They know their friends, you see;
He was kind to man and bird and beast,
St. Francis of Assisi.

ROBERT'S DREAM.

By Dora Hardy Killam.

Robert threw himself down in the shade of the big chestnut tree and wiped his perspiring face with his handkerchief.

"It's awful hot," he said, "an' chasing squirrels make a fellow tired. It's fun to see 'em run an' jump."

It was very quiet under the chestnut tree and up among the boughs a little vireo chanted, "You see, you hear, you understand," over and over again. Robert had just decided that he would go to the house and ask mamma for a cookie and get his bicycle, when a funny chattering voice said, "Oh, here's a fine fat little boy! Let's make him run."

"Won't that be fun?" cried another chattering voice.

"Let's throw chestnut burrs at him," chattered many voices. Robert looked about him and to his surprise found he was surrounded by squirrels. But such squirrels! They were much bigger than he, and he saw that they had immense chestnut burrs in their paws. Before he could speak to them or even shout, they began to pelt him with the burrs. The burrs pricked his face, stung his hands, and clung to his legs.

"Run!" shouted the squirrels, "we want to see you run."

Faster and faster came the chestnut burrs and louder and louder grew the chattering, and Robert ran and ran but always in a circle.

"It's great sport to make fat little boys run," chattered the giant leader.

Somehow, Robert had lost his shoes and stockings and oh, how the burrs hurt his feet! He tried to call his mother but he could make no sound and he began to wonder if he could run another step when all the squirrels chattered "Jump!" For a second he hesitated, but he heard a mighty chattering of "Jump! Jump!" and the terrible burrs pelted him.

Robert made a leap and felt himself falling and then he heard his mother say, "Here is Robert asleep with his feet all cramped under him and a green chestnut burr in his hand. It must have dropped and he closed his hand over it."

"No," said Robert, rubbing his eyes, "the squirrels threw them at me."

Mamma laughed and said that he had been dreaming. That night when mamma and papa went to kiss Robert good-night, Robert said, "I won't make the squirrels run and jump any more. I guess they don't like it."—Our Dumb Animals.

PASS IT ON.

"You're a great little wife, and I don't know what I would do without you." And as he spoke he put his arms about her and kissed her, and she forgot all the care in that moment, says a wise exchange. And, forgetting all, she sang as she washed the dishes, and sang as she made the beds, and the song was heard next door, and a woman there caught the refrain, and sang also, and two homes were happier because he had told her that sweet old story, the story of the love of a husband for a wife. As she sang the butcher boy who called for the order heard it and went out whistling on his journey, and the world heard the whistle, and one man, hearing it, thought, here is a lad who loves his work, a lad happy and contended.

And because she sang her heart was mellowed, and as she swept about the back door the cool air kissed her on the cheek; and she thought of a poor old woman she knew, and a little basket went over to that home, with a quarter for a crate or two of wood.

So because he kissed her, and praised her, the song came, and the influence went out and on.

Does your clerk do well?

Tell him that you are pleased, and he will appreciate it more than a raise. A good clerk does not work for salary alone.

Teacher, if the child is good, tell him about it; if he is better, tell him again; thus, you see, good, better, best.

Pass on the praise now. Pass it on in the home. Don't go to the grave and call, "Mother." Don't plead, "Hear me, mother, you were good, mother, and smoothed away many a rugged path for me."

Those ears cannot hear that glad admission. Those eyes cannot see the light of earnestness in yours. Those hands may not return the embraces you now wish to give.

Pass on the praise to-day.—Agenta Hustler.

MOTHER'S HELPERS.

Mother had a bad headache and had gone upstairs to lie down. The children were in the sitting-room talking it over.

"I am sorry for mother," sighed Marjory.

"So am I," said Teddy.

"How sorry are you?" asked David. "I am so sorry for her that I am going to fill the wood-box as full as it will hold and get a lot of kindling, and start the fire for supper."

"Oh," said Marjory, "now I see what you mean. I am so sorry that I am going to ask her to let me get supper. I can make toast and tea, and scramble eggs."

"I'll help set the table and wipe the dishes," said Teddy. So mother got a nice rest that helped to drive away the headache.

"I don't think that people are really sorry for one," said David, "unless they are willing to help."—Southern Churchman.

LARRY'S PETS.

I wonder how many of you ever had a pet chicken?

I know if you have ever had one you will enjoy hearing about Larry's pets. For Larry has a whole flock of chickens. They have a very nice home, with green grass to run about in and a high fence of wire netting to keep them from getting out and being hurt or lost or killed. It keeps hurtful things out, too.

Larry has every chicken named, though I am sure I could never remember all the wonderful names he has given them. You see, he knows every one of them separately; but they all look very much alike to me or to anyone who doesn't know and love them as Larry does.

Pretty soon it will be supper-time, and they will hear Larry coming with food; then they will run to meet him, and he will feed and talk to them.—Shepherd's Arms.

"CLEAN HANDS."

"See, papa, my hands are clean." Thus said a little boy of three years, as he came running to his father's study one day straight from the kitchen, where his mother had given him a thorough hand-and-face-washing—as mothers alone know how to do. The little fellow was very proud, and held his hands up so his father could see for himself. After getting a little pat or two on the back, and his father's approval, the little lad went out again. His father began to think.

"My hands are clean—clean hands!" Would that the boy could always say that. "Clean hands" are a symbol of clean conduct. How sad it is when boys soil their hands and their lives with bad deeds. Clean hands stand for an upright life, and the words are often used in the Bible in that way. The hand is the instrument with which we do our work, so clean hands stand for clean, honest work. Boys who keep their hands clean will never be ashamed of themselves, and their fathers will be proud of them.—Unidentified.

GOD'S LULLABY.

A dear old nurse who had become deaf and nearly blind said to one who pitied her: "You are mourning for me, my dear, but there's no need. I am as happy as a child. I sometimes think I am a child whom the Lord is hush-a-bying to my long sleep. For when I was a nurse girl my missus always told me to speak very soft and low, to darken the room, that her little one might go to sleep; and now all noises are hushed and still to me, and the bonny earth seems dim and dark, and I know it's my Father lulling me away to my long sleep. I am very well content, and you must not fret for me."—The Watchman.

HE WENT TO MEET IT.

Christ gave himself up with passion to his passion. Resignation is but a poor word even when used of Christians. It is not a word that can be applied to Christ at all. He did not wait to see the bitter hour creep slowly and surely up. He went out to meet it. He set his face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem.—W. Robertson Nicoll.

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

REMEMBER THE ADVOCATE.

We hope that our pastors in looking after the various interests of the Church as the Conference year comes to a close will not forget the New Orleans Christian Advocate. It is a matter of great importance to secure the renewals of those who are now receiving the paper, and also to obtain as many new subscriptions as possible. Let every preacher do his best for the Conference Organ. This is a very trying time on religious weeklies. The Texas Advocate, though its constituency is the largest in the Church, stated in a recent issue that last year was one of the hardest in the history of that journal. A Church paper cannot easily adjust itself to a period of high prices, for the reason that if the subscription price is raised, its circulation is certain to be decreased and its advertising made less profitable. This is a time when every friend of the Advocate needs at once to lend it an active helping hand. Only by keeping up and extending its circulation can it be successfully maintained amid the abnormal conditions now prevailing. We are counting on you, brethren.

ONE OF ITS PERILS.

In his admirable work, "A Study of Christianity As Organized," Dr. John A. Kern sets forth in an informing manner both the advantages and perils of a connectional form of Church government such as ours. Touching upon the dangers incident to it, Dr. Kern says: "Its connectional organization offers peculiar temptations to strong-willed men or clever ecclesiastical politicians, whose spirituality may be corrupted and whose usefulness more than impaired by the passion for prominence and power. 'Every cowl may dream of the tiara.' Under a congregational government the opportunity of ecclesiastical ambition, with its subtle self-delusions and fateful effects, is reduced to what would seem to be its lowest dimensions, while under a strongly centralized and officered government it reaches its maximum."

The truthfulness of these words is sometimes impressively driven home upon one in a year immediately preceding the assembling of a General Conference. For instance, we heard not long since of a prominent minister whose eye is said to be on the episcopacy who had a rally of his friends in a certain city to see what could be done to promote his interests. But despite such occasional occurrences, we believe in our system of government and would not surrender it for any other. The proper correction in such cases is due publicity at the right time. As a rule, a man is not apt to be elevated to high office in Southern Methodism if it is known that he is a self-seeking aspirant.

THE PRESBYTERIAN JOURNAL DISCONTINUED.

Because of inability to rent the valuable commercial property in New Orleans which has been bequeathed to the Presbyterian Synod of Louisiana for the purpose of maintaining a religious paper in this city, The Presbyterian Journal, which was established about a year and a half ago, has been discontinued, its earnings alone not being sufficient to meet the expenses of its publication in these abnormal war times. We shall miss the bright pages of this weekly, which was true to the best ideals and traditions of the South, and which was in every respect one of the most creditable and wholesome periodicals that came to our office. Dr. George Summey possesses editorial gifts of a high order, and his retirement from the tripod is much to be regretted. It is to be hoped, however, that he will not permit his facile and brilliant pen to remain idle.

A SUPPRESSION OF THE FACTS.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate of October 10 contained a straddling editorial on the so-called "Laymen's" agitation, from which we take the following: "If the signers of the address supposed that private correspondence should first test whether there were enough of them who were agreed in their contentions, to ask a hearing through the Church papers, they have attained their object. The stage is prepared and the debate is called."

One would think to read this statement, or Dr. Mather's entire editorial for that matter, that the Eleazer-Fritts agitation consisted of nothing but a little private correspondence that the brethren involved might confer with one another, and the issuance of a courteous address to the Church with a view to getting certain matters before the General Conference in a manner entirely above criticism. The following facts, which it would seem are bound to be known to Dr. Mather, are entirely ignored:

(1) The "Address" in question, which was widely circulated under cover, contained a terrific arraignment of our Episcopacy and its methods of work, some of its implications concerning the secret sessions and unit rule of the College of Bishops and other things being most discreditable insinuations. It did not stop with the proposal to issue an address to the Methodist public through the Church press, but declared for conducting investigations, for the issuance of pamphlets, and for effecting a factional organization, to register names, to keep the members in touch with one another, and to conduct a campaign—a thing wholly unknown before in the history of Southern Methodism. This organization is largely a secret one, as was attested by the recent meeting held in Chattanooga behind closed doors, and by its own avowed purposes, stated as follows: "Permanent officers must be elected, issues and methods discussed, definite plans of campaign laid out, and committees created to prosecute them vigorously."

(2) This movement was largely set in motion by Mr. R. B. Eleazer, Editor of The Missionary Voice, the official organ of the Board of Missions, through the Laymen's Missionary Movement, an organization of the Church brought into existence for high and worthy ends and closely related to the Board of Missions. (Does the Editor of the St. Louis Advocate think that this using of one organization of the Church to make war upon another was a proper procedure?)

(3) The "Address" referred to, in effect, endorsed the Cook pamphlet, and the leaders in this movement have made themselves sponsors for that document and scattered it all over the Church. This pamphlet contains serious charges against some of our Bishops, which could only be made lawfully to the General Conference. (In speaking of the course of these agitators as if it had been entirely proper, does Dr. Mather mean to give his approval to an attack of this kind upon the Chief Pastors of Southern Methodism? Is it not useless for him to talk about preventing "a reflection on the administration of any Church official," when practically he has already pronounced innocent those who have made grave accusations against certain of our Bishops, traducing them throughout the entire Connection?)

Seemingly, our confrere needs to learn that the suppression of facts in a public statement may do quite as much violence to the cause of truth and justice as if what had occurred were actually misstated. Is there no obligation upon the editor of a religious periodical to deal candidly and fairly with the public?

THE LAST THING THEY WANT.

We rather think that about two General Conferences made up largely of plain, hard-working preachers, with a good sprinkling of circuit riders, would cure most of the ills of Southern Methodism. There has to be a new coming up of officials from the great body of the people, every now and then, to keep the government of a State or Nation pure and devoted to the true interests of the masses. Is not this equally needed in the Church? The few in high places are much more easily spoiled and led astray than the rank and file of a great constituency. In the saving common sense of the latter are found the best safeguards of a civilization, and all the essential public agencies that it embraces. For instance, the vast body of our preachers and people are thoroughly sound as to the doctrines of Methodism and are loyal to its polity, but their will is not registered to the extent it should be in the directing of its affairs. They ought to assert their strength through the well-ordered governing media of the Church, refusing to let any one confuse or mislead them. It is not they who are raising a clamor to revolutionize the Church—that is being chiefly done by men who want to shape things so as to accomplish some un-Methodistic end that they have in view, or perhaps to win more power for some board or organization that they are dominating. The real rule of the preachers and people is about the last thing that they want.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop Hoss had an interesting contribution, entitled "Our Great President," in a recent issue of the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Rev. J. W. York, of Moorville, Miss., writes: "The work is moving along finely in this charge. We are getting things in shape for Conference."

Rev. J. M. Alford, of Bunkie, La., was in New Orleans last Monday and called at the Advocate office; but, being out, the Editor, much to his regret, missed seeing him.

Dr. S. A. Steel, of Shreveport, La., had a strikingly breezy and brilliant article on "The Passing of Unification" in last week's issue of the Baltimore Southern Methodist.

Rev. P. H. Howse informs us that his address hereafter will be No. 400 Fortieth Avenue, Meridian, Miss. Brother Howse reports that God has honored him by giving him many good meetings this summer.

Under date of October 13, Rev. J. H. Ingram, of Ruleville, Miss., says: "We are now in our new brick church. We will have a Sunday school rally to-morrow." Brother Ingram has wrought nobly in his present growing field.

Rev. B. D. Watson, of Pine Grove, La., thus reports concerning his charge: "My churches are doing splendid work. They are going to pay their assessments. There have been lots of improvements made in this charge this year."

Bishop W. B. Murrah, of Memphis, Tenn., recently visited his son, Capt. W. F. Murrah, who, with his company, is encamped at Greenville, S. C. The Bishop states that the late session of the Louisville Conference was quite interesting and satisfactory.

Brother Richard Wharton, of Verona, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, takes time to add a few commendatory words. He lives in a community where Methodism has produced not a few noble men and women. Biessings on him and the flock of which he is a member!

The "red light district" has been abolished in Vicksburg, and Shreveport is to have a referendum to settle the question. Let the good work go on.

The First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Alexandria, La., has a membership of 930. The goal of this congregation is to reach the 1000 mark by the time of the Annual Conference.

Brother J. C. Woodward, of Carriere, Miss., was in New Orleans Wednesday of last week and favored our office with a pleasant call. He spoke in appreciative terms of his pastor, Rev. J. T. Weems.

The National Prison Reform Association will meet in New Orleans in November. Rev. J. L. Sutton, who is much interested in prison reform work, is active in seeking to awaken an interest in this notable gathering.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of the Gibson Memorial Church of Vicksburg, Miss., gives us several subscriptions to the Advocate, and adds the following postscript to his letter: "We are busy making preparation for the Annual Conference, and we expect to be ready for the occasion."

Rev. H. A. Gatlin, our popular pastor at Tylertown, Miss., has brought us under obligation to him for 9 subscriptions to the Advocate, with a check to correspond. We scarcely need to say that Brother Gatlin is giving a good account of himself in every respect in his present field of labor.

The Advocate's patronizing Annual Conferences will meet as follows: The North Mississippi, at Oxford, Nov. 21; the Louisiana, at Minden, Nov. 28; the Mississippi, at Vicksburg, Dec. 5. Bishop Murrah will preside over the two Mississippi Conferences, and Bishop Hoss over the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe (La.) District, in sending in his fourth round of appointments says: "We are making progress on all lines, and the indications are that the district will be in advance of last year. The preachers are all hard at work, and are trying to bring up everything in full."

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate, sent in within the past few days: Brother E. A. Flowers, Meadville, Miss., 5; Rev. W. H. Henderson, Bienville, La., 6; Rev. M. W. David, Leakesville, Miss., 3.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, sends us the following note: "Acona is the second charge in the Durant District to send in its educational assessment. Rev. P. F. Luter is the pastor." This is a good example, which many other pastors should follow.

Mr. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., spent last Friday and Saturday in New Orleans, having come to the city to replenish his stock of merchandise. From here, Brother Streater went to Vicksburg to attend the National Memorial Reunion. He was looking well and spoke optimistically of business conditions in Central Mississippi.

President Wilson has issued a proclamation naming Wednesday, October 24, "Liberty Day." He urges the holding of a public meeting in every community with a view to kindling the fires of patriotism in the hearts of the people. Our entire citizenship should show an active interest in food conservation and in the raising of the new "Liberty Loan."

Mrs. H. L. Akin, of Bernice, La., in a communication extending her subscription to the Advocate, expresses high appreciation of the recent utterances of Bishop Hoss in our columns. She is not by any means alone in the sentiment to which she has given voice. We are happy to state that the latest news concerning the Bishop's physical condition is quite encouraging.

The Baptists have acquired for their Bible Training School, which is to be opened in New Orleans next January, under the presidency of Dr. H. B. DeMent, lately of Greenwood, S. C., the major portion of the present Newcomb College property which fronts on Washington Street, the purchase price being approximately $100,000. The possession of this campus and these buildings cannot be had until next fall, so until then the School will be conducted in the basement of the Coliseum Place Baptist Church.

Rev. B. E. Meigs, of Saucier, Miss., gives us 5 subscriptions to the Advocate, for which he has our thanks, and in his business letter adds the following note: "I am very busy these days. I am figuring on full collections from this charge. I have received 105 members during the year, and I know others who will join before Conference. You may expect more subscriptions to the Advocate within two or three weeks." Brother Meigs is a diligent worker and one of the growing young men of his Conference.

Rev. S. A. Brown, of Kosciusko, Miss., who some time ago underwent a serious operation in a sanitarium at Winona, Miss., under date of Oct. 9, writes: "I am improving daily. I weigh 150 pounds and feel fine. I preached last Sunday for the first time in eleven weeks. Without holding a protracted meeting, I have received 16 persons into the Church on profession of faith and have baptized 12 adults during the year. I am hopeful of carrying a clean balance sheet to Conference." We are indeed happy to have this good message from Brother Brown.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Alexandria, La., writes as follows: "The Lord is graciously blessing us in the work here in the face of many difficulties. About 200 members have been added to the Church during the past two years, there is more activity in every department, our membership is constantly growing more spiritual, and large congregations are attending our services. We have plans on foot for considerably enlarging our church plant, and the pastor will doubtless be given an assistant in the near future to help in carrying on the young people's work and in looking after the Methodist soldiers at Camp Beauregard." Our church at Alexandria is most fortunate in having the capable leadership of Brother Coleman at this time, when one of the cantonments of the United States Army, at which thousands of troops are being trained, is located near-by.

A letter from Sister S. M. Thames, of Jackson, Miss., brings the regrettable news that Brother Thames went out for a short walk a few days ago, and, as a result of stepping on a banana peeling, slipped down and broke his left hip. She reports that at first he suffered intensely, but that he is resting more quietly now. Much anxiety is felt by the members of the family concerning him, however. Let the brethren remember this worthy veteran and his solicitous loved ones at the throne of grace. Sister Thames states that prior to his accident Brother Thames had seemed stronger than at any time during the year, and that he was looking forward with pleasant anticipations to attending the session of the North Mississippi Conference at Oxford, and that it will be a bitter disappointment both to him and to her not to be able to be present on that occasion.

We are indebted to Rev. V. C. Breithaupt for the following item of interest: "Rev. W. W. Drake, pastor of the Noel Memorial Church of Shreveport, La., assisted by Mr. James B. Grembling, who has charge of the inspirational song services, is conducting a successful revival in his church. Large congregations are attending and the interest is increasing with every service. The meeting will continue through this week, and the indications are that the membership of the church will receive a spiritual uplift from the soul-stirring sermons being delivered by the pastor. Every department of the work of this congregation is making good headway. The Busy Men's Adult Bible Class is making a big 'drive' to have 100 men in regular attendance by January 1. This growing flock is wide-awake, and advertises in the local daily papers to arrest the attention of the non-church-going public."

OVERWORKED.

"The Bible is my creed" is a much overwrought and unmeaning claim. It is the creed of all sincere Christians. There is not an evangelical church on earth that does not hold to this. It is invidious for any to claim it as if they were the only ones. If a denomination seeks to express its view of the Bible in a formal credal statement, its first principle is that the Bible is the source of all authority and truth.—Presbyterian Journal.

GOD'S INCONSPICUOUS PEOPLE.

There are some people of whom it would be impossible to write a biography worth reading. They have done nothing striking, nothing that would be considered of sufficient value or interest to put into a book. They have lived plain, simple, obscure lives, out of the world's sight for the most part. Yet they have gone about doing good continually. Every day they have left behind them a story of kindness shown, of help and cheer given, of gentle impressions made, of inspirations imparted to others' lives. In their quiet, inconspicuous way they have done more to touch the lives of others with good than many who are always in the public eye. As God looks down upon them their lives are most fruitful of good. The world is sweeter because they have lived in it and passed through it.—Westminster Teacher.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Louisiana & Arkansas Railway announces reduced rates and special schedules on account of the Louisiana State Fair at Shreveport, La., Oct. 31 to Nov. 5, 1917, inclusive. Train No. 204 will be held at Shreveport until 6:25 p. m. every day during the Fair, and trains 3 and 4 will be held at Minden for the connection. Passengers from stations Hope, Ark., to Winnfield, La., inclusive, can attend the Fair and return home the same day. It's your Fair, so be there.

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

Comb Sage Tea in Faded or Gray Hair

Some young Common garden Sage and Sulphur darkens so naturally nobody can tell.

Everybody says our beautifully darkened glossy and attractive hair is the result of using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell I have applied—it's so easy to use too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Lemons Beautify! Make Quarter Pint of Lotion, Cheap

Here is told how to prepare an inexpensive lemon lotion which can be used to bring back to any skin the sweet freshness, softness, whiteness and beauty.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold cream. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the best skin whitener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands, and see for yourself.

Obituaries.

Because of over 200 words in excess will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Your obituary will be sent to us with the money necessary with the obituary. This will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituary will without correspondence about same, be cut down to 200 words. We cannot make exceptions. Resolutions of respect will be charged for at one cent a word.

ANNIE HUART (nee Landon) was born in Pike County, Miss., on Jan. 21, 1851, and departed this life on July 1, 1917. She was married to J. E. Huart on Nov. 15, 1876. To this union five children were born, four of whom survive her. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1886. She loved her Church. In the home she was an ideal wife and mother. The relatives and neighbors will long feel the loss of her. Back of Sister Huart's smiling countenance was the indwelling Christ, and from His life within emanated the light that shone in her face for the time element in the formation of character proves what is within. "Out of the heart are the issues of life." As every force in nature carries with it its atmosphere so does every man and woman. One could only have pure thoughts in her home. To the bereft husband and four sons, permit me to say that only God can ease and calm the disturbed soul under such sorrows in life. To Him I commend you, and I pray that there may be another family reunion some day—a day which is not followed by night, and a coming together never to be separated one from another. Her pastor.

E. E. BASS.

THOMAS HENDRIX LEWIS was born in Georgia on Feb. 1, 1841, and moved to Mississippi in early life, and with his father located near Lexington. His father was a local preacher true to his calling and a man of power. He did much good in the Liberty Chapel neighborhood, where lived Bro. Thomas, his faithful wife and children left their membership, was their pastor for three years and always enjoyed a visit to their Christian home. They were true to their Church and their power for good was felt in it and their community. He was a good husband, a kind father and a citizen highly esteemed by his neighbors. He lived in country and fought through the Civil War in the Southern army; he lived with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Futrelle, who kindly cared for him in his latter days. He suffered much for long months, and for many days was helpless, but they kindly supplied his every want, as far as possible, until August 21, 1917, when he passed from this world of sorrow, in great peace. He has gone to join his father, mother and other loved ones who preceded him to the better world. There he waits a welcome for brothers, children, grandchildren, and other dear ones left behind. Don't disappoint him. Be true to God and meet him where death is unknown and sorrow never comes, and where the flowers bloom in eternal spring.

W. J. CHEATANT.

JOHN W. DeLOACH was born on Sept. 21, 1851, in Simpson County, Miss., and lived the greater part of his life in his native county. He was married to Miss Mamie Vaughn on March 1, 1882. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1871, and served as an active steward for 31 years. At the request of his life-long friend, Ben Purser, the pastoral conference requested him on the roll. His sound conversion was never a question with him. He knew that he was saved. His Bible was read with devotion and care so that God's promises were committed to memory. His charity was very liberal, being to orphan or widow or without help when he could relieve them. The home life of this good man was marked by fidelity, kindness and love. All there delighted to do him kindness. Many attacks of disease and long spells of illness tested his spirit as well as his body, but no word of complaint was heard as to the kindness of friends or goodness of God. Death to him was not an enemy but a friend to let him go home. So that when it came on last Sunday morning, July 29, at 3 P. M. he was ready and went peacefully to sleep. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Carl James, the writer conducted the burial service at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. M. Alexander in Lexington, Miss., from whence his body was carried to the local cemetery to await the resurrection.

WILLIAM BURGESS MORELAND was born on March 4, 1841, in Lamar County, Ala., and came to Mississippi in early life. He was married to Miss Amanda Baldwin in Monroe County, Miss., on April 7, 1867. To this union there were born six children—three sons and three daughters. Brother Moreland's wife and all his children survive him, and all of the children are married, save one son and one daughter. After a married life of fifty years, he was the first largest in the home and the first member of the family to die save one little granddaughter. Brother Moreland had been in declining health for about ten years, and the end came peacefully on June 1, 1917. He was converted under the ministry of Rev. J. [illegible] Stone at old Palmetto Church, west of Verona, some 45 years ago, and began at once to lead in public prayer, and was soon licensed to exhort. This office he held for years and as an exhorter he did much good. We had him to rest near us home at Nettleton, Miss., where his favorite passage of Scripture, John 14:1-3, was read and his favorite songs, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "I Think Of The Home Over There," were sung. Brother Moreland was a faithful, considerate husband and a good father. He was greatly loved by his family. In his declining years the devotion of his good companion and his children was most inspiring and shows the blessedness of a well-ordered Christian household. May the rich mercies of God be with the members of this stricken home!

Pontotoc, Miss. W. M. YOUNG.

PEARL RATHEL, daughter of Mr. J. A. and Mrs. M. C. Rathel of Lexington, Miss., was born into this world on Oct. 1—passing from sweet babyhood, through happy childhood and winsome girlhood into lovely womanhood, in which her beautiful and helpful life was a delight to all. On the same day of the same month, 1900, she was born into the spirit world. With great tenderness her body was committed to mother earth's bosom. From hosts of loving hearts and many friendly hands came a profusion of most beautiful flowers to mark the sacred spot. As these flowers were gathered in the maturity of their beauty and fragrance, and borne into the realm of affection to live forever in memory; so was her life of affection to live in memory forever; so was she gathered by the angels that her life in its sweetness might bloom forever in the light of a greater day. Our horizon here is marked by hills and mountains round about us. Our light breaks over upon us for a while but it soon draws down again, leaving us in the valleys of night. Often about us a mantle spreads over us to cover our thoughts in mysteries. And so it is to the earthly while we remain here. But when we are freed and rise higher we shall see that the sun never rises nor sets, but shines forever.

"And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light; and they shall reign forever and ever." "Then shall be brought to pass the saying, 'Death is swallowed up in victory.'"

Skin Diseases

such as Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter, Itch, Acne, etc., are caused by parasites. To properly treat these diseases, you must kill the parasites. Tetterine is extensively prescribed by the best physicians because it kills these parasitic germs, thereby putting an end to skin troubles. It is a fragrant salve and is absolutely harmless. A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth), into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have a full pint—a family supply—of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NERVOUSNESS AND DISORDERS OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

The energy that gives life to the body is known to be nerve force. It is this hidden energy that creates the difference between the living and the dead body. It is the indefinable something that the body is robbed of in death.

Irregular distribution of the nerveforce is responsible for many of the disorders of the system. Consequently any remedy that has the power to soothe the irritated nerves, thus regulating the supply of nervous energy, is of inestimable value.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is such a medicine. It not only soothes the irritated nerves, but it induces a more regular distribution of the nerveforce, and thus assists the bodily organs in performing their proper functions. Furthermore, it induces a natural sleep, which is nature's greatest tonic and strengthener.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is especially recommended in cases of Sick, Bilious and Nervous Headache; Epilepsy; Fits; Irregular, Profuse and Painful Menses; Neuralgia; Sciatica; Sleeplessness; Melancholy; Backache; Nervous Irritation and Nervous Dyspepsia.

For more than 25 years Dr. Miles' Nervine has been largely used, and the success that it has met with on all sides is the best proof of its merit.

If you think that Dr. Miles' Nervine is suited to your case, procure a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, which you will find wrapped around the bottle, and then if you are not benefited return the empty bottle, one only, to your druggist and he will return your money in full. The Miles Medical Co. repays him the full retail price, so there is no reason why he should not return your money promptly.

How Long Are Church Papers Preserved?

A sidelight on this question is afforded by the experience of a certain mail order sewing machine concern which advertises in religious publications. Some years ago the name of the company was changed and the names of the sewing machines offered in the advertising were also changed. Similar changes were, of course, made in the advertising. Some three years later that sewing machine advertiser sold five sewing machines in one month under the old name, to people who enquired, enclosing coupons from the old advertising which had not been printed for more than three years past.

Those five coupons at least had been preserved for over three years. This is a rather common experience of mail order advertisers, but the church papers are preserved for a long time, and frequently bring results in advertising a long while after the issue might be regarded as having been forgotten.

An editor of a South Carolina church paper once wished to replace certain lost copies of his publication in his office file. The publication was fifty-five years old. He wrote a little editorial in which he asked the subscribers if they could not supply them from their files. Dozens of replies were received, some of them indicating that they had files running back the full fifty-five years with only occasional dates missing. Very few of them were willing to part with their files for any other purpose than to replace the office file of the publisher, but they were willing to sacrifice their files for that purpose and that purpose only. This will give some idea of how much a church paper is valued in many church homes, and also how long it is kept after the date of issue. In thousands of homes the church paper is bound and becomes a part of the permanent library.

The added advertising value resulting from this appreciation on the part of the subscribers of church papers is quite appreciable, and will be readily recognized by wide-awake, general advertisers.

Iron Is Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

A Secret of the Great Endurance and Powers of Athletes

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician who has studied widely both in this country and Great European Medical Institutions when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Sunday School

THE DIVISIONAL SECRETARY AND INTERNATIONAL "GO-TO-SUNDAY-SCHOOL-DAY."

Sunday, November 4, having been selected as Go-to-Sunday-School-Day for the whole country, we Methodist people are very anxious that our folks should join heartily in the efforts being made to gather into our Sunday schools on that day the largest number of people ever at Sunday School on any one day.

And to help toward making it interesting and helpful to those who are present in their Sunday schools that day, the Conference Sunday School Board of Louisiana has had prepared a fine program to be used during the first fifteen or twenty minutes of that morning's session of the school, and are sending them to all schools (through the superintendents) without extra cost to the schools. These programs have been prepared with the idea of presenting to our Methodist people information in the shape of facts and figures about our own work that will tend to make them more ardent Christians and more loyal Methodists, because they will have a greater knowledge of what their Church has done and is doing to bring in the Kingdom.

I trust that every Methodist Sunday school in Louisiana is already planning a definite and aggressive campaign to secure an attendance on November 4 that will break all records heretofore made. And if they do that and make good use of that fine program with the splendid picture of John Wesley on the front page, they will have one of the best days in their history. Please observe every detail of the program, leaving out no part, for it is not too long for any school's "opening exercises," and it takes it all to make it complete.

You will note that the offering on that day should be used to help pay the assessment on your charge for the support of your Conference Sunday school work, and as that work is Methodist church-building of the best type, I urge that this detail of the program receive careful attention also. Your Board needs these funds and is making splendid use of them.

Do your best and I'm sure God's blessing will be yours abundantly.

THE PRAYER THAT COUNTS.

True prayer lifts the soul out of itself. A selfish prayer is a prayer that will never reach God or benefit man. The essence of prevailing prayer is to forget self, and stand in the presence of God, at one with his Spirit, and so laying hold upon his infinite power.—The Classmate.

CALOMEL ROBBED OF NAUSEA AND DANGER.

Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved—Unpleasant and Dangerous Qualities Removed—New Variety Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of medical science is a purified calomel, known as "Calotabs." The old-style calomel, as all doctors know, was the best and most generally useful of all medicines. The new variety, known as Calotabs, is purified and refined from all objectional qualities, and is most delightful in effect.

One Calotab on the tongue at bedtime, a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no danger. Next morning you awake feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please. There is no restriction of habit or diet. Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages; price thirty-five cents. Your druggist recommends Calotabs, and will refund your money if you are not delighted with them.—Adv.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach remedy in the whole world and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

Hurrah! How's This

Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

SIX MILLION DOLLAR INCREASE.

The foreign mission gifts of the Protestant Churches of the United States and Canada amounted last year to $25,554,768, an increase of $6,760,777 over the total for 1915, which was $18,793,991. This is a wonderful increase in view of the fact that the European war has disturbed conditions in America so widely and given rise to so many calls for relief. These churches are supporting 10,601 missionaries in foreign lands, against 10,497 in 1915. Native workers numbering 49,305 aid in the work as pastors, evangelists, and teachers. There are 11,863 organized native churches under the charge of the several American boards and 1,170,559 communicants. The native Christians themselves gave last year to the work $4,750,681, or more than four dollars per member. This is conclusive evidence of their sincerity, were evidence needed, particularly in view of their universal poverty. The number enrolled in mission Sunday schools was 1,212,287.—Missionary Bulletin.

"The deeds that we do, whether good or evil, return to us again and give us our reward. They may tarry long on their journey, but there surely dawneth a day when they do stand before us, and in their hands they do bear the gift—life for the good, death for the evil."

A MODERN ZACCHAEUS.

Half a century ago a British Government official in India, who had saved something over fifteen thousand dollars out of his salary as Inspector of opium manufacture at Malwa, began to think on the iniquity of the traffic, and the wrong which his government was perpetrating in holding a monopoly of its export to China for purposes of revenue.

So he resigned, and to clear his conscience, gave the sum of over three thousand pounds to the relief of opium victims in China. To-day at beautiful Hangchow, a few hours south of Shanghai by rail, you may see a splendid hospital with many branches, where Dr. D. Duncan Main, of the Church Missionary Society of England, is at work. It grew out of the opium refuge built with the official's gift. Happily the British government in India no longer stains its hands with the nefarious drug.—Forward.

Splendid Tonic for the Stomach and Liver.

If you suffer from a sluggish liver, chills and fever, jaundice, take that old-time, reliable remedy, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator. It is a dependable tonic for the stomach and liver. It contains no Calomel or other injurious drugs. Purely a vegetable compound. Buy a bottle of Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, price 50c, and watch your spirits pick up. It invigorates your sluggish liver and puts you on your feet again. BIBLE IMMIGRANTS.

The children of Israel were all immigrants. They wandered in the wilderness, and at last found the Promised Land. Abraham was the first great immigrant, a pathfinder of faith and freedom, who left his own land to discover the city that had "the foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Ruth, too, was an immigrant drawn into a foreign land by the power of love and friendship. Ruth 1:16. The law of Moses provided for the stranger and the immigrant; the mercy and goodness of the land were to be given equally to them. "Ye shall have one statute, both for the sojourner, and for him that is born in the land." Num. 9:14.—Forward.

SOMETHING BETTER.

A scholar, it is said, translated the entire New Testament back into Greek, the language from which our modern version was taken. It is spoken of as a rather curious and remarkable accomplishment, but one cannot but feel that the time might have been spent more usefully in translating its teachings into everyday life.—Forward.

"There are forty million church members in the United States. According to 1916 statistics, this is an increase if 746,669 over the year before. Of this number about five hundred thousand came into Protestant churches."

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

SHANGHAI CHILD WELFARE EXHIBIT.

Interest in child welfare and public health work has been greatly stimulated in Shanghai through the exhibit given by the Christian Home Club of the Shanghai Baptist College under the direction of the wives of the faculty members. Illustrated lectures were given on the proper methods of washing and dressing babies, the preparation of their foods, and the best remedies for infantile diseases. Examples of the proper playthings and toys for children were arranged on long tables, while the world's best children's stories, translated into Chinese, were on sale at another table. In the public health exhibit were charts and illustrations setting forth the dangers to human life from flies and mosquitoes, and pointing out the risks people take in using public towels, wash-cloths and cups. A model meal was prepared on a table, and attention was called to the lack of sanitation in the ordinary method of serving Chinese food, and the necessity of using separate dishes and separate chopsticks for each person. Sanitary sleeping arrangements made another exhibit, and the advantage of proper sleeping garments and mosquito netting curtains were demonstrated. Explanation of all exhibits were in Chinese as well as in English. So much interest was evinced and such great crowds attended the exhibit that the committee has decided to maintain a permanent exhibit for the use of the public.—The Missionary Review of the World.

A SOCIAL SURVEY OF A LITTLE ISLAND NEAR TAKAMATSU.

There were 647 houses in the community; of these 147 were occupied by very poor people. The others were not especially well-off in this world's goods, either. Twenty-five of the 147 couples had had no kind of a marriage ceremony. There were 80 illegitimate children. The average income per month for a husband was about $5.02. Forty-five men and five women confessed that they partook of sake, while 75 men and 25 women were users of the "weed." Most of these 147 couples did not have so much as two small rooms for their abode. Do you wonder that blindness, superstition and immorality are common? Christianity can change these conditions.—S. M. Erickson.

NEWTON DISTRICT MEETING.

The district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Newton District convened at Montrose, Sept. 26, 1917. Mrs. Hill, the new district secretary, presided over the meeting. Devotional exercises were conducted by Brother Moore, whose presence and help during the conference was very much appreciated.

After enrollment of delegates, we heard a message from the new district secretary which touched the hearts of all.

Adult societies reported from Laurel, Bay Springs, Decatur, Newton Y. P., Montrose Y. P., Forest and Newton. These reports were interspersed with talks and suggestions from the delegates. The children's work was ably presented by Mrs. Walker. Mrs. Cottrell talked on "Our Work," giving a general review of it in an impressive and interesting manner. A Round Table on "How can we make our meetings interesting and attractive?" was a very helpful feature of the program.

The time having arrived, we were adjourned for dinner. A pleasant social hour over the picnic lunch which the Montrose ladies had prepared was much enjoyed by all.

The afternoon session opened with singing, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go." Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Hayes, participated in by Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Middleton.

Mrs. Ferguson represented the Meridian Wesley House. Forest Y. P. reported a nice box and $5 in cash ready to be sent to the Meridian Wesley House. Mrs. Ferguson explained from charts the disposition of our finances. Mrs. Middleton then made a plea for our preachers and their finances.

A lively discussion on the most important office in the auxiliary was left in an undecided state, for each felt confident that her own was the most important. She was of the "same opinion still," without even a chance of convincing against her will.

Mrs. Cottrell made a strong and earnest plea for prayer for the boys and men of our Church who have gone forth to help uphold the ideals of our great Christian nation.

After a short intermission, another devotional exercise was conducted, preliminary to the presentation of the Young People's work, by Mrs. Middleton and "her girls." It brought us in closer touch with the young people and gave a clearer vision of what their splendid consecrated leader is trying to do for them.

The ladies of Montrose were lavish in their hospitality and our appreciation for their many kindnesses was beautifully expressed in a few choice words by Mrs. Gibson. We were dismissed by prayer by Brother Moore.

Although we regret very much the loss of Mrs. Clark, our former district secretary, we feel that God always provides some one to carry on His work, and are so grateful that He sent Mrs. Hill to us.

Mrs. ALMA ABNEY, Secty.

A MITE-BOX OPENING.

On Saturday, Sept. 29, this being the close of the third quarter, the Junior Missionary Society of the Mt. Olive M. E. Church, South, had a "mite-box" party. We assembled at the home of our leader, Mrs. J. C. Calhoun. There were about thirty present. We played several games, being divided into two parts, babies and juniors. We then opened the mite-boxes and found we had a total of $4.16. The prize-winner was James McIntosh, who had $0.73. The prize was a hand-painted picture. Delightful punch and cakes were served, after which we went home feeling proud that we were members of the Junior Missionary Society.

ELSIE EVANS.

We are proud of the fact that we have such a splendid, enthusiastic Junior Society at Mt. Olive and so glad that this little girl wrote us of their work. In a letter to the Editor of this department, she tells of other things the little folks have been doing. They've made money and put curtains and a rocking-chair in their parsonage; also bought a drugget and portieres, besides some song books, and still have a balance of $3.20. Isn't that just splendid?

NEVER TOO OLD TO LEARN.

The story of the sixty-year-old man who recently enrolled in the Summer Law School at the University of Michigan is capped by that man of even greater age—William McK. Brittain—who at the recent commencement of the College of the City of New York received the degree of bachelor of arts and won honors in addition.

At Michigan, the mother of a young woman who took the same degree in June had attended lectures regularly through the year. She asked for no credits, was not aiming at a degree, studied for the pure pleasure of achievement. It is a matter of record that a woman of nearly eighty matriculated at the University of Wisconsin several years ago.

Fifty years ago a woman who desired to enter an advanced school was advised that she was "too old" for the work at forty-three. Reminding "the head" that Queen Victoria learned Hindustani at a greater age did not win a more favorable answer. That could not happen to-day. Educational doors do not close because of the years.—Detroit Press.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter-pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel, like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment, and, above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

VETERANS' ASSOCIATION TO MEET.

The Veteran Ministers' Association of the North Mississippi Conference will meet in the Methodist Church at Oxford Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 21, at 3 o'clock. Rev. John Tillery Lewis will preach the sermon, after which the business meeting will be held. All ministers who have been preaching forty years or more and all sons of veterans are members and are requested to meet with the Association. Yours respectfully,

S. M. THAMES, President.
JOHN RITCHEY, Secretary.

BIENVILLE, LA.

Our work is progressing very nicely this year. We have had some good revivals, and have received 50 persons into the Church on profession. This charge has moved up along all lines, and we are expecting to carry to Conference the best report that has gone up from it in several years. The Southern Methodist Church is good enough for me yet, and when I get to the place that I get too large for it, instead of attempting to reform the Church, I will try to reform myself, or go to the Northern Church or some other that is more in conformity with my notions. May you live long to fight our battles for us, and for the good old M. E. Church, South.

Fraternally yours,
W. F. HENDERSON, Jr., P. C.

A STATEMENT.

To the Membership, Mississippi Annual Conference:

The undersigned has just been appointed Associate of the Food Administration Section of Co-operative Organizations with the specific duty of bringing the seriousness of the food situation to the attention of our people in this portion of the State. I need not stress the point of production so much as that of economy in using what is produced. The need of our country to-day, in addition to the men who have gone out to uphold the honor and dignity of the flag, is food with which to feed these soldiers and to leave an abundant supply for those who remain at home. Then, too, we must see that our Allies are furnished with food. In fact, the winning of the war will depend largely upon the food supply. Great crops have been produced within our bounds this year. We should harvest everything that can be eaten either by man or beast, and then use the same with the greatest economy. The spirit of saving should be abroad in our land more than ever before. We should save—save every day—until it becomes a habit with us. The idea of saving here does not imply the hoarding of food, but the proper economy in what we use, that the surplus may be released for the use of our Allies. There will be a food conservation campaign October 21-28 for the purpose of enrolling every family in the United States in the Food Administration, and every Methodist family in Mississippi should have its name inscribed upon this roll of honor. It is earnestly desired that every preacher in the Conference present on Oct. 21 both the need and the plan of food conservation. Do this, brethren, for the cause that is common to all of us. I realize that you are called upon very often to share your time with various interests, but I believe that you would do well to give a few minutes on the above date to this patriotic undertaking. Cards will be in the hands of all the churches in due time.

Very respectfully,
G. L. HARRELL,
Conference Leader and Associate of the Food Administration.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

Constipation

You are apt to think lightly of a slight case of constipation. Did you know that constipation is incipient auto-intoxication or self-poisoning? You cannot be too careful, for constipation without treatment is liable to become the source of far more serious ills. To be entirely healthy and have a clean body, it is necessary to keep the bowels clean and the liver active. When constipated, take Van Lax, for it is the ideal treatment for constipation. Contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. Does not gripe or nauseate. It is pleasant in taste and results. Sold everywhere by the best dealers. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

TOO HOT FOR THEM.

Sir Henry Lucy tells in the Cornhill Magazine a good story that he had from Nansen, the explorer. It amusingly illustrates the hardy health of the Laplanders.

Part of Nansen's equipment for his trip across Greenland consisted of two sleeping-bags made of undressed skins. On the first night of the journey Nansen and his two Norwegian companions got into one of the bags, pulled the mouth tight across their necks and so slept in the snow with only their heads out.

Before retiring to rest Nansen saw the three Laplanders he had engaged for the expedition cosily tucked into the other sleeping-bag. When he awoke in the morning, almost numb with cold, he observed that the bag in which he had tied up the Laplanders was empty and that they were nowhere in sight. He was afraid they had deserted him, and scrambling out of the bag, went in search of them. He found the three men fast asleep behind a hillock of snow that they had scraped together as a protection against the wind. They protested that the bag was "too hot" for them.—The Classmate.

IN FAR-AWAY ARIZONA.

In the great State of Arizona many people live far from neighbors and other associations that make life interesting and happy. A colporteur found one woman who had not been to church for twenty years. On a lonely ranch she had brought up eight adopted children, teaching them reading, writing and arithmetic herself. She was glad to receive the gift of a Testament. Perhaps some day there will be a church near enough for her to attend and hear the gospel preached. —Kind Words.

"For two years Thackeray did all his writing with one pen, which also served him for writing two novels. Oliver Wendell Holmes used a gold pen for more than thirty years, during which he wrote 12,000,000 words."

You Can Shake Loose from The Tortures of Rheumatism

By using S. S. S.

The germs of Rheumatism are in the blood, which is laden with millions of the minute demons of pain, causing untold suffering and bringing its victim from vigor and strength to almost helplessness. To get real and genuine relief from this disease, these disease germs must be completely routed out of the system through the blood.

S. S. S. has been used for fifty years with satisfactory results in the treatment of Rheumatism. It acts directly upon the blood, which it promptly purifies of all disease germs. It is a powerful antidote, and eliminates from the blood all trace of rheumatic germs, building up and strengthening the run-down system.

Write to-day to our medical director, who will give you valuable advice regarding the proper treatment of your own case. Address Swift Specific Co., Dept. I Atlanta, Ga.

If Back Hurts Use Salts for Kidneys

Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers you —Meat forms uric acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

"He is the freeman whom the truth makes free,
And all are slaves besides."

There is somcthing to do for Jesus wherever man is found.

* * *

If you would make the most of yourself for time and for cternity, let God have his way with you.

* * *

It matters little whether life be long or short, if it fulfills the Father's will, and leads to a home in the sky.

* * *

Germany's march to ruin has been made under the flaunting banners of what was proudly and ostentatiously called "PROGRESS." New paths are by no means always safe naths.

Patmos was a drcary place, but upon its barren shores St. John had his richest experiences and his grandest visions. It is not infrequently the case that when the Christian has least of the things of earth, he is most in touch with Christ and heaven.

The Christian worker should never despair, for Jesus labors with him. He who fed the great multitude with the five loaves and two fishes, can use weak instruments to achieve far-reaching results in this day. The faithful often accomplish vastly more than they are aware of. The Book of Life on high will contain many an entry of which this world knows nothing.

* * *

A Christian minister should be, first of all, a holy man. A Christly character speaks more eloquently than the most gifted human tonguc. Without deep piety, no preacher can hope to fulfill worthily his calling. Well may he often search his heart and hold himself to a strict account. It was majestic Paul who feared that after preaching to others he might himself become a castaway.

* * *

A church ruled by the worldly element in it is in a most dcplorable condition. The only cure for such a statc of affairs is for the Bishop and presiding elder to assign to it a deeply spiritual pastor and sustain him in his efforts. The superiority of the Methodist system of government is seen in that it can take proper care of such cases, if rightly administered. Such a congregation could not be expected to call the type of preacher that it really needs.

* * *

Some apparently hold that to stand for nothing and to vicw wrong-doing with complacency is an exhibition of the spirit of Christian love; but it is not so. "God is love"; yet he marshals all the forccs of the universe to combat evil, and no sin, unrepented of, ever escapes punishment at his hands. Dr. B. M. Palmer, the great Presbyterian preacher, declared that a man's feeling of resentment at injustice and harm done to others is in proportion to the soundness and robustness of his moral nature. Thcre is nothing in the Scriptures that justifies "pacifism" in the warfare between right and wrong.

"THE LIVING GOD."

"My soul thirsteth for the living God." This was the cry of the Psalmist in a time when he was sorely burdened and perplexed. Men often forget God and fcel that they can get along without him in the day of strength and prosperity; but when disastcr comes and they realize that their needs are beyond the reach of human help, they are much more disposed to turn their thoughts to him. It was on the Isle of St. Helena, after he had been overthown and stripped of power, that Napoleon began to meditate upon Christ and made those remarkable utterances concerning him which are so much quoted.

The expression, "the LIVING" God is a most significant one. It was doubtless intended to place the Heavenly Father in contrast with the heathen gods of wood and stone. There was no help in them; but the God of the Psalmist could see and hear and bless. It was his mighty arm that upheld the earth and sky, and he would not fail to stretch it forth to give deliverance to his servant.

And God not only lives, but he will be forever alive. All else that we know anything about is doomed to decay and death. If we put our trust in men, however strong and capable they may be, in a little while they will go hence and their power to aid us will cease to exist. The whole framework of nature, under the influence of the corroding tooth of time, must finally fall in ruins. As Shakespeare has said:

"The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which inherit it, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind."

But God is eternal and unaffected by the flight of time—he is the unchangeable One. And no man can have any reasonable hope beyond the tomb except in him. Because he lives, his servants shall live also, passing with him into a glorious realm where death can never come. So, it is for the "LIVING God" the weary soul, surrounded by the transient and passing things of earth, thirsts and cries out; and he alone can impart to it a confident trust and a sweet peace.

MAY BE EITHER GOOD OR EVIL.

It is the fashion of some Christian workers to boast of their optimism. Well, optimism is a good thing if it has a reasonable basis to justify it; but a shallow optimism that ignores existing conditions, when one ought to grapple with them and seek to better them, is a harmful weakness. A leading New Orleans banker said to us a few days since: "The most dangerous man in the business world is the optimist who has in his hands large financial interests." And if this be true in that sphere (and we do not doubt it), must it not also be true where the far vaster interests of God's Kingdom are at stake? The appraisement of either optimism or pessimism must be made in the light of the prevailing situation and its effect upon the individual. If either of them blinds him to duty so that he does not do what he ought, it is an evil; but, on the other hand, if either of them stirs him to right action, it is a helpful influcnce. This much, however, we know: easy-going men, satisfied to let things drift and take their own course, have never done much to lift the world upward toward God and the light. Great achieving comes only through travail of soul.

THE CHURCH AND SECULAR LEGISLATION.

There is a decided tendency in this day to have the Church take an active part in influencing the legislation of the State. Some speak as if this were an entirely new thing, and an evident indication of progress in the way of Church activity. Those holding this view seem to have forgotten that there was a time when all the affairs of States were largely under the domination of powerful ecclesiasticisms, and that later in some countries this regime gave way to one in which the secular governments came to be in the ascendency, with the Churches very largely under their control. As a rule, however, within its recent decades, it has been held in Protestant lands that the separation of Church and State, each being independent in its own proper sphere, is the ideal arrangement—the one which best safeguards the purity and spirituality of the Church, and which enables it to serve the entire social order most effectively. In the light of the foregoing statements, it will be seen that this disposition upon the part of some Churches to dabble in the work of secular law-making is not a new undertaking for religious bodies, but is rather an attempt to revive a discarded function, which was exercised upon a much larger scale in the long ago.

Nor are we ready to concede that this trend toward the old order of things is to be accepted as unmistakable evidence that the Church is to be more largely useful in the coming years. There are, to be sure, some things which are so entirely immoral, as for instance the licensing of the liquor traffic, that the Church can well afford to speak out emphatically concerning them and to exert the full measure of her influence toward their complete suppression by legislative enactment, and it would really be culpable upon her part not to do this; but there are many other issues which, though they affect the welfare of society, are to be determined by considerations of expediency, and about which even the best of men may hold different opinions. For the Church to break into this sphere and constitute herself a partisan on one side or the other, is to involve herself in many unnecessary entanglements and to bring about harmful divisions in her own ranks. The wiser thing for her to do is to create a Christian citizenship through the spiritual agencies at her command, which will dominate the legislative assemblies and crystallize into laws such measures as will promote the well-being of the people. Thus may she accomplish indirectly, without in the least endangering her own peace and prosperity, what it would be hazardous and improper for

AN EVER-CHANGING WORLD.

By W. Robertson Nicoll.

They talk about the solid earth,
But all has changed before mine eyes;
There's nothing left I used to know,
Except God's ever-changing skies.

I've kept old ways and loved old friends,
Yet one by one they've slipped away;
Stand where we will, cling as we like,
There's none but God can be our stay.

It is only by our hold on Him,
We keep our hold on those who pass
Out of our sight across the seas,
Or underneath the churchyard grass.

SUPERHUMAN, BUT HISTORICAL.

Ours is an historical religion. Our religion consists in the belief that at a certain time, at a certain place, at a little spot on this world's surface, the Son of God came down from heaven to us. That is the Christian religion. It is belief not in a good man named Jesus Christ doing anything, bnt in the manifestation and sacrifice of God Himself.—Bishop Ingram.

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE.

If there be but a slight difference between the Christian and the secularist, it is because the Christian has not been "transformed by the reing of his mind," for though bearing a new name he carries an old nature. We instantly detect a foreigner by so small a sign as an accent or a posture; and the Christian is known to men of the world by a glance or a tone, by a frown or a smile.—J. Parker.

OBVIOUSLY DIVINE.

Philosophical argument, especially that drawn from the vastness of the universe in comparison with the insignificance of this globe has sometimes shaken my reason for the faith that is in me; but my heart has always assured and reassured me that the Gospel of Jesus Christ must be a divine reality. The Sermon on the Mount cannot be a mere human production. This belief enters into the very depth of my conscience. The whole history of man proves it.—Daniel Webster.

ONE'S BEST SERVICE.

The best half of life is in front of the man of forty, if he be anything of a man. The work he will do will be done with the hand of a master, and not of an apprentice. He can seek and use opportunities which he did not have and could not have in youth. The trained intellect sees everything in just measures. The trained temper advances with the calm and ordered pace of conscious power and deliberate determination. Every year of his life may be happier and more hopeful than the last.—London Hospital.

THE INVISIBLE WORLD.

We are surrounded by things invisible to us. Unseen is the air that laps us about and unseen the ether through which vibrates to us the light of distant stars.

A drop of crystal water, pendent at our fingertip, is alive with beings invisible to the naked eye, while the heavens are filled with stellar worlds which the most powerful telescope can bring into our ken only as the merest dots of light.

Even the ray of sunlight, passing through a prism, is broken into a spectrum of rainbow hues whose margin fades into the invisible, eluding every quest of science.

Invisible, save in the effects produced, is the mighty power of electricity which God has placed at the service of man, to drive for him with lightning speed the massive engine wheels or bear his messages with flying feet, a servant ever at command. The flashing spark may give momentary notice of his passing, or the brilliant incandescence tell us of his presence, but he himself remains a mystery.

What wonder, then, that in God's creation there should exist as well an invisible spiritual world of which we have authentic knowledge, not merely from the sacred Scriptures, but likewise from the manifold supernatural visitations that have at all times abounded within the Church of God?

What wonder that in God's creation there should exist beings far mightier than we, with intelligences surpassing our own, with power and beauty and splendor that dazzle the mind, pure spirits who surround the throne of God, lifting up their threefold, "Holy, holy, holy!" yet not disdaining to come down to earth on their missions of mercy and to perform towards us their services of love: "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent to minister for them, who shall receive the inheritance of salvation?" (Heb. i, 14).

Solemnly we are warned, because of them, not to despise God's little ones: "For I say to you," our Divine Lord tells us, "that their angels in heaven always see the face of my Father who is in heaven."

More certain than the things of sense is that invisible world to the eyes of the Christian who lives by faith. What joy to know, moreover, that there is bestowed upon us, for guardian and protector, a splendrous spirit from the throne of God! Do we give him in return the reverence, love, obedience, and gratitude that are his due? What joy to know that we, too, may be with him fellow citizens of that city which, as we read in the Holy Book, "hath no need of the sun, nor of the moon, to shine in it. For the glory of God hath enlightened it, and the Lamb is the lamp thereof."—The Sunday Visitor.

BACK TO CHRIST.

In past years we have become familiar with the cry, "Back to Christ." One could wish for nothing better than that the world should go back to Christ and sit at His feet and learn of Him. The sins and sorrows of the world surely bear witness that the world has tried to get along without Him. The present war is not the work of the Prince of Peace. Wherever the field of human life has been laid waste, the ravage is due to sin. The devastation wrought by sin is now staged on such a colossal scale that we have the most convincing object-lesson in all the world's history of what sin is and what it does. The cry, "Back to Christ," therefore meets a sympathetic response from all who bemoan a world's rejection of its best Friend. The slogan seems to be the proper one for such a time as this. By all means let us get back to Christ for the purifying of our souls, the pardon of our sins, the healing of our sorrows and the inspiration and direction of life.

But a sinister motive lurked in that cry, "Back to Christ." It was the voice of an enemy which sounded that slogan. It came from those who wanted to get rid of the doctrine of the Apostle Paul. They charged Paul with perverting the Christianity of Christ. They balked at the solid meat of the Word on which the great Apostle fed his converts. Their aim was to ride roughshod over all that Paul has contributed to our priceless spiritual heritage and so to break down the solid structure of New Testament Christianity. Hence the cry, "Back to Christ." What seemed to be the one message for the modern world was really but a phase of a movement designed once more to strike the heart out of our Christian faith. We are therefore not agreeble to getting along without Paul, that great ministering servant of Christ, whose ministry was a continuance of the ministry of Christ and through whom some of the many things which Christ longed to tell His disciples but for which they were at that time not ready, have been revealed for our illumination and comfort.

With the above explanation, we are willing to go "back to Christ," and it is comforting to find that the Christianity of Christ is the same as the Christianity of Paul. The latter bnt delivered what he had received. Even the Sermon on the Mount, which, in the judgment of the superficial, wonld give us nothing more than a treasury of ethics, is brimful of claims and implications which to those who have eyes to see place Jesus as high as the most ardent utterances of Paul. We can but rejoice with joy unspeakable that this early utterance of our Lord gives us so very, very much and reveals so conspicuously the wonder of our Christ.

Take for example the well-known saying of our Master, "Think not that I came to destroy the law and the prophets; I came not to destroy, but to fulfill." In this statement of purpose, Jesus is at once lifted far and away above the greatest of the prophets and still farther above all His modern presumptuous critics. The average reformer is largely a destroyer. He may have a noble passion for righteousness and break down many popular idols, but all too often his best work ends with destruction. In the kingdom of God and by heaven's standards, the mere destroyer, however lofty his aims, never ranks very high. It seems that many people who listened to Jesus expected Him to take the ax which John the Baptist had said was laid at the root of the tree, and begin hewing away at all that bore the earmarks of age. As the Master in those matchless beatitudes described the qualities of those born of God, the people were prepared for the slogan, "Down with everything that is up," but their expectation was doomed to dismal disappointment. Christ calmly disavowed any destructive intention and expressed it as His purpose to fulfill all that the people anticipated He would try to destroy.

In this attitude of Jesus to the law and the prophets we have a standard by which we can take the measure of our present-day prophets whose diatribes, sugar-coated with pleasing fiction, are among our best sellers, being commended by patronizing writers even in the religious press and by blind preachers not a few. These prophets, who might better be spoken of as profiteers, evince no purpose to fulfill. They are the advocates of destruction. They do not even stop with Paul. They are not content to bombard the Church, the creeds, the great theologian of Christian history and all that is precious in our religious heritage. They dare to attack even Jesus Himself, calling Him a child of His age, exposing His supposed limitations of knowledge and appraising His teachings as a patchwork of odds and ends which are traced with assurance to various origins. We bnt remark that these modern chaps are all full-fledged destroyers. They have the ax at the root of the tree and wax rich while a gullible public adorns the parlor table with their latest rantings concerning the "passing" of Christianity and the dawn of a new "religion of the future." At a time when all the forces of civilization have been harnessed by a ruthless nation into weapons of destruction in furtherance of a quest of utter self-glory, it is quite in keeping with all the destruction going on, for our self-styled prophets to hurl their verbal shrapnel at the one Gospel which offers the world a promise of relief. Concerning all these ravings of blind, deluded men, we can but point out that the very destructiveness aimed at in their propaganda labels them transient tissues of falsehood, mere vaporings of over-heated minds, which will never figure in any deliverance or better way of life.

Far above all the babel of earthly confusion, stands the incomparable Christ, saying, "Think not that I came to destroy the law and the prophets; I came not to destroy, but to fulfill." Here we have Jesus ranging Himself in sequence with all past revelation, recognizing its function and value, and claiming to bring out its spiritual meaning and to fulfill the purpose for which it was given. We cannot reflect on this attitude of Jesus and the claims which it involves, without feeling an irresistible impulse to break forth into doxology at the wonderfulness and surpassing pre-eminence of Jesus. Here was the law aiming at ideal character. Jesus claims to realize what the law intended; hence claims to be sinless. Here were the prophets promising a coming deliverer, pointing to a Messiah. Jesus claims to fulfill the promises of the prophets, hence claims to be the Messiah. He speaks a strange language in expressing His life-purpose. He uses the words, "I came," as if to express that His coming was that of one who existed before He came and whose coming was His own voluntary act. And as we read on in that Sermon on the Mount and see how Jesus claims to determine rank and dignity in the Kingdom of God and who shall and who shall not enter therein, and as we hear Him speak of the far future, the passing of things visible and the permanence of the law, we feel like Peter did when he confessed, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God."

We have surely too much of destroyers. The tribe of the ax is legion. The air is full of voices calling us hither and yon, craving our credence for this and for that. But through the mist of darksome counsel we see Jesus, who came not to destroy, but to fulfill. We see Him filling full all past requirements and prophecies, every present demand of holiness, all that law and prophets intended, aimed at and pictured. We see Him fulfilling all righteousness. We see Him bearing the burden of man's guilt; suffering the just for the unjust. We feel His hand upon us and, wonder of wonders, He brings us to God and we have life in His name. And so we faint not, though the whole world be devil-ridden and false prophets speak vain things. For this Christ is our Savior and our God.—S. B., in the Christian Intelligencer.

THE PASSING OF UNIFICATION.

Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

I have been a very earnest opponent all along of the purpose to unite the two great branches of American Methodism, and, therefore, I am very happy to see that the prospect of it is fading away. I have not been opposed to it from any lack of appreciation of the great advantages of unity, and far less from any lack of admiration of the great Methodism of the North, but because I believe that union to mean anything had to be based on substantial agreement, and because I knew that such agreement does not exist between these two branches of Methodism. No people were ever situated like the Southern people, and no civilization ever had such a problem to solve as the problem of the Negro. The Southern people have decided that the proper way to solve this tremendous problem is by keeping the two races separate; the Northern Methodist Church has decided that it is to be solved by mixing the races. We can, and perhaps will, argue till doom's day which is right; but we cannot unite without one or the other giving up what it holds as vital and necessary to its work. The effort to get together was honorable to both parties; but it was as hopeless as the effort to abolish the distinction between black and white. We will emerge from the discussion with the great moral advantage of having the issue between us clearly defined in this way: The great American problem, How to treat the Negro? The Methodist Episcopal Church, North, says: Treat him as a white man, abolish distinctions, erase the color line, mix the races. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, says: Give the Negro all the rights of the white man, but keep the races separate; separate churches, separate schools, separate cars, and separate social life in every respect.

Now let us keep that before the people. We Southern Methodists are a gullible set. We imagine that the Northern people have changed their opinion of us. Fifty years have passed, the old order has changed, the whole nation is now in a life-and-death grapple with a mighty foe to all the principles on which our civilization is built; yet the North, and especially the Methodist Episcopal Church, stands to-day just where it stood fifty years ago in all matters that concern the South. The last two issues of Zion's Herald are all the evidence any one needs to confirm what I say. The issue of August 29 contained an article by a man of high repute which reproduces the whole slanderous charges against the South that fired the North in 1860; while the issue of September 5 breathes the same bitter sectional antagonism toward President Wilson, and blames race riots, emigration of Negroes from the South, and so on, on his "Southern administration." The editor of Zion's Herald has been one of the most earnest advocates of unification and has given expression to the most fraternal sentiments. Yet he admits into his columns the most libelous and vituperative accusations against the South and its people. Let me illustrate this. In Zion's Herald for August 29, Prof. L. T. Townsend, D. D., Ph. D., after charging Jefferson Davis with deliberate treason through all the years of his public service as Senator and Secretary of War for the United States, and accusing the whole South of complicity in his infamy, says that Mr. Davis said "he would be able to hold in the palm of his hand all the blood that would be shed," in case of a conflict with the North. Of course, Jefferson Davis never said such an absurd thing. It was said by many a cross-roads demagogue in the South, and probably by many a wind-jammer in the North. But Jefferson Davis was no demagogue. He was a statesman of the highest order, and a man of Dr. Townsend's standing belittles himself when he repeats such a bald falsehood about such a man. Mr. Davis believed, as all Southerners did, that the State had the constitutional right to secede from the Union, but he was under no delusion as to the serious results of such a step. In her delightful book, "A Diary From Dixie," Mrs. Chestnut records a conversation with President Davis that completely refutes the statement of his slanderers. She says: "In Mrs. Davis' drawing room last night the President took a seat on the sofa by me where I sat. He talked for nearly an hour. He laughed at our faith in our own powers. We are like the British. We think every Southerner equal to three Yankees at least. We will have to be equivalent to a dozen now. After his experience of the fighting qualities of Southerners in Mexico, he believes that we will do all that can be done by pluck and muscle, endurance and dogged courage, dash and red-hot patriotism. And yet his tone was not sanguine. There was a sad refrain running through it all. For one thing, either way, he thinks it will be a long war. That floored me at once. It has been too long for me already. Then he said before the end came we would have many a bitter experience. He said only fools doubted the courage of the Yankees, or their willingness to fight when they saw fit And now that we have stung their pride, we have roused them till they will fight like devils."

That conversation, when the war had scarcely begun, shows Mr. Davis entertained very different views from the silly sentiment attributed to him by Dr. Townsend. I can understand how the fiery young New Englander believed such absurdities fifty years ago, and grabbed his gun to show "Jeff" his mistake, but I declare I don't understand how a "Ph. D.," and that, too, living in Boston, still holds to such self-evident nonsense. What does "Ph. D." mean anyhow, Mr. Editor? I am afraid Dr. Townsend is like the colored preacher who failed to please his congregation. A committee went to see him. "Look here," said the irate parson, "whuts de truble wid mah preachin'? Dont I argufy?" "You sho does, eldah," agreed the spokesman. "Dont I sputify concernin' de Scriptures?" "You suttinly does," the brother admitted. "Well, den what's wrong?" "Well, eldah," said the spokesman, "hit's dis way: You argufies and you 'spntifies, but you dont show wherein!"

Until Brother Townsend and Brother Parkhurst can "show wherein," they sling their ink in vain. And in dealing with this Negro question they should remember the parody:

"Mary had a little lamp
Chockful of kerosene;
She went to light the fire with it.
And has not since benzine!"

Meantime "unification," with its millennial fountains spurting Saratoga emotional fraternity, and its ever-blooming roses fragrant with the perfume of paradise restored, and the Northern lion lying peacefully, with one eye shut and the other half-closed, by the side of the Southern lamb, contentedly chewing its cud and switching its little tail in heavenly harmony, all this is passing like a mirage of the desert, and leaves us, let us hope, a little wiser and none the worse for the beatific vision.—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

Church News

The Philippine Senate has declared against public financial support for any Church or Church institution.

Bishop Collins Denny preached the dedicatory sermon for the Front Street M. E. Church, South, at Burlington, N. C., on Sunday, October 14.

Atlanta has secured money and pledges amounting to about $100,000 to finance the Billy Sunday meeting, which is to begin there in November.

There are four Protestant hospitals in Porto Rico. These are located at San Juan, Ponce, Mayaguez, Humacao—strategic points in different parts of the island.

Students from thirteen States have enrolled at Emory University, and China, Japan, Korea, Turkey, Porto Rico, and Armenia are the foreign countries represented in the student body.

One of the last acts of the late session of Congress was the passage of Representative Siegel's bill authorizing the appointment of 20 additional chaplains to make places for faiths not now represented in that service, including the Hebrews.

The Judiciary Sub-Committee of the Joint Commission on Methodist Unification will meet in Knoxville, Tenn., the first week in January. It had been reported that this Sub-Committee had reached practically a complete agreement, but it now seems that further consultation is necessary.

Mr. Charles A. Hanson, who has recently been elected Lord Mayor of London, was for several years a minister in the Wesleyan Conference of Canada. A writer in the Christian Guardian says: "In 1890 he withdrew from the Conference principally, I think, on account of a throat trouble, and removed to England."

Most of the theological seminaries in the United States are reporting a marked decrease in attendance. This decrease is said to be chiefly among students who would have gone direct from college to their first service in the ministry—having had no preaching experience. The Baptist Seminary at Louisville, Ky., has become so aroused by its small enrollment that a circular has been issued to the Southern Baptist Church on the snbject.

Writing in the Texas Christian Advocate, Dr. S. A. Steel says: "A presiding elder ought to set every preacher in his district an example in his habit of study." The Discipline makes it a presiding elder's duty to keep in touch with the undergraduate preachers in his district with a view to aiding them to bring up their courses of study. If this duty were more faithfnlly performed, there might be fewer failures before the Annnal Conference Committees of Examination.

We reproduce without comment the following from a contemporary: "The place that 'Religion' has in the average public library was recently revealed in a Western City. In its Carnegie Library it has nearly twice as many books as it has population. Of these less than twenty are catalogued under the head of 'Religion,' two of which are on Mormonism, one for and one against; several are books of Emanuel Swedenborg, and there is a complete set of Mrs. Eddy's works."

The following press dispatch was sent out from Washington on October 13: "President Wilson has accepted an invitation to attend the Annnal Pan-American Mass at St. Patrick's Church here on Thanksgiving Day." As is well known, an effort had been made by the Roman Catholics to have it appear that this is the official National Thanksgiving service, and Cabinet officers and foreign diplomats have been attending it, many of them in their official regalia. We regret that the President has consented to be present.

The New Orleans Charity Hospital, by far the largest hospital in the South, had a deficit of $3989 during September. Its receipts during the month were $25,586.96, and its disbursements were $29,575.03. The number of patients treated in the Hospital dnring September was 2639; and of these 1500 were discharged, and 148 died. Of course, the high cost of food is figuring in the unsatisfactory showing of this great institution.

THE CHURCH AND SECULAR LEGISLATION.

her to undertake to effect as an organized agency, acting directly as such.

We are aware that in giving expression to this view we are likely to be charged by superficial enthusiasts with being an old fogy in our notions; but in taking this position we are in accord with some of the most profound thinkers who have recently adorned the Christian Church. Among these was the late Dr. James Denney, the eminent Scotch writer and theologian, who in his little volume, "The Church and the Kingdom," has a chapter on "The Church and Legislation," in which he enunciates opinions quite similar to those which we have set forth in this editorial. Among other things Dr. Denney says:

"Is the specific end which the Church has in view likely to be furthered when the Church devotes a great part of its energy to a program which can only be carried through in Parliament? It is easy to understand why many think it will be. Impulsive and generous natures, moved to the depths by the vested interests of iniquity which trample on human souls, and convinced that nothing but force can sweep them away, are ready to appeal to force. There is nothing they would not do to see this or that evil, which devastates the life of man, violently suppressed. They call loudly on the Church to join them in appeals to the legislature; sometimes they even impeach the Church of insensibility, and of contemptuous disregard for the spirit of the Master, if it is slow to respond to their call. Perhaps it does not occur to them that legislation is force. To legislate is to take the sword; and, while there is no doubt a power which has this right, it may well cross the mind of the Church whether the function is hers. A Church which is acting on society mainly through its action on the State may well have misgivings." * * *

"It is one of the drawbacks to the faith in legislation which seems to prevail in certain quarters that it tends to throw into the background the things which should be central. Men look for a new heaven and a new earth through Acts of Parliament, and all the time sin and death are the outstanding quantities, negligible remainders apparently, to be thought about after the bills have been carried which are to make everything else new. A disposition is fostered which expects from law what law can never yield, and every advance in legislation is followed by a disappointment, and not rarely by a reaction. * * * The Church's direct interest is not in framing Acts of Parliament, no matter how Christian their motive: it is in regenerating men, who will give expression, indeed, to their new life in their laws, as in all their activities. * * *

"It is another drawback to the Church's disposition to rely on what the State can do that it tends to introduce the temper and the antagonisms of the State into its own body, and to perplex rather than to guide its members in their action as citizens. A self-governing country is one in which the various interests of the citizens secure their rights by a continuous process of conflict and adjustment. It is a country governed by parties and compromises between them. It is not accidental but inevitable that one of these parties should be more stationary and the other more progressive; that one should represent the experiences (and the prejudices) of a people, the other its inspirations (and its fads). There is no reason why there should not be Christians in both. It was a youthful indiscretion of Professor Drummond when he said that Liberalism is Christianity in politics. But when the Church identifies itself with this or that policy in legislation, what is the result? It is that it either becomes identified with one political party to the exclusion of the other—as if a man could not be a Christian and a Conservative, or a Christian and a Liberal, at the same time; or that it aspires to act in politics as a non-partisan, or purely Christian party. Both have been seen. The writer has been present at the session of a Church court 'on public questions,' which passed mem. con. a series of resolutions which would have been entirely appropriate at a radical meeting; the defense was that this was the attitude forced on it by another branch of the Church which consistently acted in the opposite sense. Whatever the cause, the result was surely deplorable, for the Church must lose fatally its power to affect public life if it does not number among its sincere and devoted members those who can carry its spirit into the organizations by which public life is inevitably controlled. As for a specific Christian party, much as it has been talked of, it is hardly worth discussing. The existing parties have been naturally produced, and will be naturally maintained, by political causes, and like everything else in the world they are to be Christianized. If they cannot be Christianized, then politics is doomed to be an unchristian business; and if they can, the specific Christian party is superfluous. We may accept the latter alternative as the true one; for a party which failed to see that the natural organization of political life in a free country had something inevitable in it, could only degenerate into ineffective Pharisaism and pedantry."

THE REPRESENTATIVE CHURCH CORNER-STONE LAID.

By H. H. Ahrens.

A large number of ministers and men prominent in the official life of Washington attended the corner-stone laying of the Representative Church of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the afternoon of October 8. Southern Methodists from Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia also graced the occasion with their presence.

The preliminary services on Sunday, at which time Bishop Warren A. Candler preached in the morning and Rev. T. N. Ivey, D. D., Editor of the Nashville Advocate, preached at night, in the Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will go down in the annals of Washington Methodism as one of the red letter days of Southern Methodism in the National Capital. Both preachers were at their best. A Washington physician was so overcome with the power of Bishop Candler's sermon that in the midst of the Bishop's address he cried out: "My God, where did that preacher come from?" It is the consensus of opinion that Bishop Candler never preached better and one United States Senator publicly stated that should the Bishop ever visit the Senate while it was in session, he would move that the gentleman from Georgia be extended the courtesy of the floor so that they could hear the man whom he believed the greatest preacher in the South.

Among the most prominent who occupied seats on the platform were the Honorable Josephus Daniels, the efficient Secretary of the Navy, a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; the Honorable Joseph Taylor Robinson, United States Senator from Arkansas; General Julian Carr; Rev. George S. Sexton, D.D., Executive Secretary of the General Conference Committee; Rev. H. M. Canter, D.D., presiding elder of the Washington District; Rev. E. K. Hardin, pastor of Mt. Vernon Place Church; Rev. J. W. Duffey, D.D., a former pastor of Mt. Vernon Place Church; Rev. T. N. Ivey, D. D., Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate; Rev. Carlton D. Harris, D. D., Editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist; Bishop J. W. Hamilton, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Washington.

Bishop Candler, Chairman of the General Conference Committee on the Representative Church, presided, and in felicitous terms introduced the two speakers of the occasion, Rev. T. N. Ivey, D.D., and Honorable Joseph Taylor Robinson, United States Senator from Arkansas. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. J. W. Duffey, D.D., after which Dr. Ivey in choicest diction and thought delivered a strong address on the glories of Southern Methodism. The Doctor took occasion to congratulate Dr. Sexton and the various committees upon the work already accomplished.

Bishop Candler introduced the next speaker, Honorable J. T. Robinson, as a Christian statesman and a loyal Southern Methodist. In speaking of Methodism in the South, Senator Robinson said: "In religion and in morals the Southern people have kept pace with their advancement in industry and education. Methodism has been one of the greatest, probably the most powerful, factors in the moral uplift of the South. The peculiar government of our Church, which provides a universal ministry, has assisted in raising the standard of conduct in private and public life, as well as in exalting the ideals of our people. The Methodist circuit rider has been the pioneer in moral reclamation. Without his services and sacrifices, the present glory of the South, attested by the highest standards known to civilization, could not have been achieved." The following tribute was paid to President Woodrow Wilson by the Senator: "In the present crisis we rejoice in the leadership of the scholarly Wilson, whose love of liberty, of justice and humanity make him a worthy match for Lincoln. Mr. Wilson's birth and training entitle the South to claim him as her son. His courage, learning and capacity for leadership fit him for recognition in the select company of the Nation's greatest sons, Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln." In speaking of the two Arkansans whose names are closely connected with the conception and construction of the building, Senator Robinson said: "It was an Arkansas minister, one of the best and greatest men our State has known, the Reverend Andrew Hunter, who moved the adoption of the report providing for its establishment at the General Conference in 1858. He lived to serve God and his fellow men for half a century after the plan was conceived.

"After the enterprise had been revived, and while its success was still in doubt, another son of Arkansas, my boyhood friend and companion, the Reverend George Sexton, was called by the Church to take the lead in promoting the erection of this beautiful monument to Methodism. His broad experience, his fidelity to the South and to the great Church and cause in which he labored, have assured the completion of this work begun so long ago."

After the Senator's address the large concourse of people, headed by the combined choirs of the Southern Methodist Churches in Washington, marched in joyful procession from the church to the site of the new building. The hymn, "The Church's One Foundation," was sung; then the Scripture lessons were read by Doctors Geo. S. Sexton and E. K. Hardin, and prayer was offered by Dr. H. M. Canter, after which Bishop Candler pronounced the words: "We lay this corner-stone of a house to be built and set apart, from all worldly uses, for divine worship, in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Amen." The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Carlton D. Harris, Editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist.

The proposition to erect a church representing Southern Methodism at the National Capital (where the forerunner of Mt. Vernon Place Church had been established, as a station of the Virginia Conference, in 1850) was endorsed by the General Conference, held at Nashville, Tenn., in 1858, but the great war which so soon followed defeated the undertaking.

The project next saw the light in a resolution adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Mt. Vernon Place Church, September 21, 1905, providing for the presentation by a committee of seven to the Baltimore Annual Conference of a memorial seeking to have it endorse the idea of appealing to the Church at large for aid in erecting "a church building of imposing architectural design, such as will appropriately represent our great denomination at the National Capital," and present it to the General Conference.

The Baltimore Conference, held at Cumberland, Maryland, March 28-April 2, 1906, and the General Conference held at Birmingham, Alabama, in May, 1906, endorsed the enterprise. In 1910, Rev. George S. Sexton, D.D., was made Executive Secretary of the General Conference Committee. He has conducted the campaign by which the funds that have made possible the building now under construction have been provided and has formulated for the Committee the plans hy which the success of the enterprise has heen realized.

REPORT ON WORK DAY.

Dear Brother Meek: So far this week, we have received about $2000 on the "Work Day" collections. Some charges have done remarkahly well. We are encouraged to believe that this will be the hest "Work Day" of the three held during my connection with the Home. I hope every church and Sunday school will observe it. It is not yet too late. The health of the Home is good. I hope to see you at Conference.

Your friend and brother,
J. B. RANDOLPH,
Superintendent.

HOMES WANTED!

Because of the crowded condition of our Orphanage, and the many demands on us to take homeless, destitute children, we have a numher of children we would like to place in good, Christian homes. These children range in age from four to ten years. We have two little twins, boys, about four years old, whom we would like to place in the same home. There are several girls. Please write us if you are interested, stating the kind of child you want, age, etc. Also send us the name and address of your pastor; or, better, a letter of recommendation from him. We would like to state, in this connection, that we place no children unless we can give assurance of absolute protection from future annoyance or trouhle hy living relatives, and can give you all legal rights in the care and protection of the children we place with you. Address all communications to

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Supt. La. Metbodist Orphanage.

DOING THINGS IN THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

Dear Dr. Meek: The first charge in the Greenville District to report Conference Collections in full was Benoit, on Sept. 13, where Rev. J. D. Wroten is the progressive pastor. The first one to report all finances in full was Shelby, on Oct. 13. Rev. W. M. Campbell is the efficient pastor of this important charge. He bas the habit of having full reports each quarter. Coahoma and Lyon reported everything in full on Oct. 14. Rev. J. E. Stephens is the popular pastor of that growing charge. We expect every charge in the District to report "all assessments paid in full" by the time of the meeting of the Annual Conference. V. C. CURTIS, P. E.

APPALLING FIGURES.

An Amsterdam dispatch, dated Octoher 20, says: "The Cologne correspondent of The Tijd reports that Germany's casualty lists, comprising killed, wounded, prisoners, and missing, from August, 1914, to Septemher, 1917, fill thirty volumes of 22,000 pages. He calculated the total numher of names at 8,200,000."

How horrifying are these colossal figures! Yet they represent the losses in the present world war of only one of the participating nations. All past conflicts in arms pale almost into insignificance compared with this appalling struggle. Somehody in the last great day will he accounted tremendously guilty by the all-wise Judge for this wholesale hutchery of buman heings, made in the Image of God. Let us daily pray that peace may come upon proper and safe terms in the near future. Terrible as the present strife is, we do not wish to see it end with wrong enthroned and suffering Innocence left writhing beneath its iron heel.

The Old Capitol of Mississippi, which has been reconstructed at a considerable cost, will he formally re-dedicated on Friday, October 26. It is much to he regretted that the Mississippi Department of Archives and History has not heen domiciled in this historic structure, with all the room that is needed. It was generally understood when the movement to restore the building was under way that this would he done; hut the Legislature recently in session failed to take the necessary action to accomplish this end, the Governor and a majority of the Capitol Cimmission being opposed to this plan. THE HINDENBURG LINE.

The line where autocratic pride,
The despotism of the East,
Has met the democratic stride
Of Western thought; this deemed the least,
Has now at last re-set the pace
In government for all the race.

'Tis clash of most terrific might;
From all the earth the forces come;
All arts of peace now aid the fight,
All thoughts are centered in the sum
Of this great agony of earth,
The throes of higher human birth.

The first great government was made
In Babylon, when man was young.
'Twas prime autocracy in grade;
On scale of thought, the lowest rung;
This same old thought in Prussian mind,
Now seeks the struggling world to hind.

The world divides itself in fight—
One-half for God, one-half for hell!
'Tis despot's force, and freeman's might
In clutch of final strugle fell.
It is the flood of highest crime;
The Amageddon of our time.

'Tis like the crash by human ears
Unheard, when fires in central hearth
Broke prison bars and binding gears,
And rent the frozen crust of earth;
Electric shocks and steam untamed
Made vents whence fires internal flamed!

Then masses huge with masses wrought,
And glaciers dashed in wild rebound,
By forces crossed together brought,
Piled mountain-high, they wildly ground,
And nature groaned in fateful strain,
As earth evolved to higher plain.

So on this line supremest pow'rs
Of man in conflict madly meet,
Where victory hangs on fatal hours,
As forces move and then re'reat;
'Tis awful fight that rages for years,
And fills the world with hitter tears.

No human tongue can ever tell
The sum this line has cost the race;
No mind can grasp the frightful spell
That here has left its awful trace.
'Tis line of human sacrifice,
And lives of millions pay the price.

The man of pride, ambition, lust
Of power, boldly bent to rule,
Betraying ev'ry human trust,
With brazen front, like arrant fool,
Emhroiled the forces of the world,
Now sees his plans to ruin hurled.

We stand in mute astonishment,
Or wild-eyed, yell delirious cries,
That such should be the mortals sent
Beneath the blue of peaceful skies.
May Heaven grant, in added sense,
The world may gain some recompense!

CIGARETTE EYE.

"All of our oculists are of one opinion—that the greatest enemy to the eyes of young men is the cigarette. There exists a disease among smokers most dangerous, and which our best authorities were for a long time at a loss to underatand. After careful investigation this peculiar malady has been traced to the paper-covered cigarette. It is now known as the 'cigarette eye,' and requires for its cure a very long and careful treatment. Its symptoms are dimness and a film-like gathering over the eye, which appears and disappears at intervals. Not all cigarette smokers will necessarily have this trouble, hut douhtless the eyes of all of them will be more or less affected."

The Great Battle

NOTES.

The saloons are thinning out somewhat in New Orleans, though there are yet nearly 2000 too many.

The vote on constitutional prohibition in Minnesota was close, and the result is said to be in doubt. Statutory prohibition is already in force in that commonwealth.

Governor Whitman, of New York, has declared for absolute war-time prohibition. Coming from a man who is considered Presidential timber, such an utterance is highly encouraging.

The fruits of "bone-dry" prohibition in Mississippi are seen all over the State. There is less lawlessness in practically all the counties, and some of the criminal courts are finding very little to do.

Ten saloons were raided in New Orleans on Sunday, October 14, and the keeper of one dram-shop was recently arrested for selling liquor to soldiers. Law-abiding bartenders are about "as scarce as hen's teeth."

It is to be hoped that the Louisiana Sunday schools will observe the World's Temperance Sunday on November 11 or 18, and take an offering for the work of the Anti-Saloon League in this State. It would be a fine thing also if every congregation would take up a collection and merge it with that of the Sunday school, remitting the amount jointly raised to Rev. A. W. Turner, Shreveport, La. We are not doing our duty by this great reform agency. Let us rally to its assistance and make the next twelve months memorable in the temperance history of Louisiana. We can do it if we will.

EVEN "LIFE" IS NOW DRY.

Probably that unique and not quite faultless humorous New York paper, Life, has numbers of readers among the patrons of this journal who have laughed at its jokes, admired greatly its cleverness, and occasionally grieved over its bad taste and vulgarity. But we fancy to most readers of the Christian Guardian, Life has always had one almost unforgivable fault. Not only did it advertise liquor, but advertised it after the most attractive fasion, whole pages being given up week after week to colored illustrated material that attempted to prove that liquor drinking was the way to assured health and happiness. And because Life advertised liquor it seemed to think that it was under obligation to stand by it, and many of its pictures from time to time were not specially good temperance campaign material. And recently the paper made an ineffectual effort to get around local prohibition laws by issuing a "Dry States Edition."

But a measure of reform at least, whether induced by an awakening of conscience or by a sudden influx of business good sense we cannot say, has come into the policy of Life, and it does not any more publish liquor advertising. Life has gone dry. We congratulate it heartily on this sign of progress. And we congratulate temperance workers on the way in which their theory that whiskey advertising is poor business is laying hold upon the good sense of business men.—Christian Guardian.

THE BEST SAFETY DEVICE.

By A. E. Bean,
Secretary Bessemer & Lake Erie Water Wagon Club.

Both employees and employers of the Bessemer & Lake Erie Railroad Company are agreed that their experience has proven the truth of the motto of their Water Wagon Club: "Sobriety First, Safety Follows." Since this "best safety device of the Bessemer" was invented 18 months ago, its membership has grown to 2015 men out of the 3500 employed along the line in various capacities.

Chief Surgeon R. W. Brown says that the Club is surely making a great change in the road. A good worker of the club visited one of the railroad's Italian camps, getting so many of these men to climb aboard the water wagon that a merchant in a nearby store had to return 92 cases of beer without a single bottle being opened. Hotels with bars in Albion, Pennsylvania, cleared $35,000 a year before the club started. One of the proprietors recently remarked that now on some days he does not sell over a half-dozen drinks. In some cases where men have joined our movement they have sent for the wholesale wagon to take away from their house the last case or part of a case of beer.

Investigation revealed that but 43 were injured out of the 1002 men who became members of the Water Wagon Club during the first seven months of its existence, while 171 accidents happened among the other 2418 average number of employees.

Our educational work, through the slips distributed from the pay-train for six months and the posters put up along the road and in the shops and terminals, has been a work which struck some clean, hard, knock-out punches to those who have been kidding themselves into believing that booze and efficiency will work together.

The Railroad Company is heartily in sympathy with the Club and have given us most substantial help, not from a selfish motive, but because they realize what temperance among the men can do; they realize the futility of thousands of dollars spent for mechanical safety devices without efficient men to operate them.—The American Issue.

DID NOT KNOW WHAT WAS INVOLVED.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have just read the article from Bishop E. E. Hoss in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of the date October 4, 1917, in which he says he has been unduly assailed through an address issued and published by 186 laymen who favor some changes in our Church government. I suppose he finds the grounds for his statement in the endorsement of the Dr. Cook pamphlet mentioned in said address. Some of the changes mentioned in said address I favored, and others I could not so heartily endorse, because of lack of information concerning them—all of which I believed that I had a moral and legal right to do, as I fully believe we should have greater democracy in our Church polity. But I desire to say that I have never seen or read the Cook pamphlet; and, if I had known that a document reflecting on any of our Bishops would be embraced in the laymen's program, I would not have authorized the signing of my name thereto. Especially would I disclaim any intention or effort to reflect on the life, work, or probity of our chief pastor, Bishop Hoss, whose utterances either vocal or written I have always been glad to endorse. His position in the Vanderbilt controversy I heartily commended, in a communication to your paper at that time. I write this because I want it clearly understood that I disclaim any intention either past or present to reflect on the life, work, or character of a man whom I so much admire and honor as I do Bishop Hoss.

Yours fraternally,
PARHAM WILLIAMS.

CALLED HOME.

Dear Dr. Meek: Mrs. C. B. Vance died suddenly on October 13, after a period of illness covering about two years. She was 59 years of age, and had been for a number of years a useful and worthy member of our Church. Prior to her ill-health, she was a safe and active leader in the Woman's Missionary work in the Sardis District. She was thoroughly loyal to her Church—devout and true. Our entire town is in gloom. Not only our church, but the whole community has sustained a great loss.

HIS LAST SERMON.

"Burdened with years and labor, the old preacher lay upon his couch, waiting the call to cross the river. Around him were gathered his dear ones and his brethren, ministering as far as possible to every want. He lay silent for a time and one of his watchers said: "He is going soon." Tears were flowing freely from many eyes. He roused a little, murmuring something no one understood.

"Raise my head," he said. "Is it time for the sermon? The lights are burning and the song seems to have died away. Well, my text is from Jesus, 'In my Father's house are many mansions.' You poor, lowly ones, who dwell in cabins, remember it is a mansion that awaits you, and you poor waiting ones, remember there are many of them. I am too weary to preach long to-night, my brethren. What is that I hear? The music should not begin before the sermon is over. Strange voices, too; no, not strange; 'tis the wife of my early youth leading the choir, yes, and mother, too. I can't preach. Let me lie down, and rest."

The old pastor opened his eyes. In them was a far-away look. Raising his head with great solemnity: "Let us pronounce the benediction."

"May grace, mercy, and peace abide," an unintelligible murmur, and the hush of silence came to be broken by the sighing of the watchers. The old preacher had preached his last sermon.—Herald and Presbyter.

BEAUTIFUL SENTIMENT

Some years ago I engaged the late Bishop T. C. Carter, of Chattanooga, Tenn., to assist in a revival meeting at Washington, Ind. In one of his sermons he related a touching incident which he afterwards wrote out at my request:

"At the close of the Civil War, and during the reconstruction period in Virginia, Judge John Paul, of the United States Court, who recently died at Harrisonburg, Va., was stumping the state in favor of public schools. He was opposed by some of the ablest debaters of that commonwealth. His opposers were applauded at every point, and received showers of bouquets from the people who were opposed to the measure for enlarging the public school system. At Pittsburg, when Judge Paul arose to reply to the eloquent speakers who had just been covered with flowers, he said: 'It is apparent that my cause is not popular to-day. While my opponents have been deluged with flowers, I have not received so much as a rose-bud. But I shall be satisfied if, when I am dead, some little bare-footed public school girl shall gather daisies by the roadside and place them upon my grave, and say, "Here lies John Paul, the friend to the public school." ' "—J. T. Hobson, Indiana, in Religious Telescope.

SINCE MA SIGNED UP WITH HOOVER.

By Edward S. Jones.

The butcher's wagon isn't seen so often at our door,
The grocer's boy does not come round twice daily any more;
Our garden patch is flourishing, its truck is in demand—
And what we can't consume of it is either dried or canned,
Since ma signed up with Hoover.

Upon our dinner table now there isn't so much meat;
There's always bread a-plenty, though it isn't always wheat;
We spread the butter thinner, too, and touch the sugar light—
For since we have begun the thing we mean to do it right;
For ma's signed up with Hoover.

The kids are well and happy—they think the change is great,
And each one tries to beat the rest in cleaning up his plate.
All think the grub is splendid, and pa says he can see
He's not so fat and puffy as once he used to be,
'Fore ma signed up with Hoover.

"For if we all are going to help our allies win the fight,
We've got to feed 'em regular and got to feed 'em right,"
Says ma, "So we won't waste a thing they will likely need,
And we'll make out on what is left and have a splendid feed"—
So she's lined up with Hoover.

A PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT.

To the School Children of the United States:

The President of the United States is also President of the American Red Cross. It is from these offices joined in one that I write you a word of greeting at this time when so many of you are beginning the school year.

The American Red Cross has just prepared a junior membership with school activities in which every pupil in the United States can find a chance to serve our country. The school is the natural center of your life. Through it you can best work in the great cause of freedom to which we have all pledged ourselves.

Our Junior Red Cross will bring to you opportunities of service in your community and to other communities all over the world and guide your service with high and religious ideals. It will teach you how to save in order that suffering children elsewhere may have the chance to live.

It will teach you how to prepare some of the supplies which wounded soldiers and homeless families lack. It will send to you through the Red Cross bulletins the thrilling stories of relief and rescue. And best of all, more perfectly than through any of your other school lessons, you will learn by doing those kind things under your teacher's discretion to be the future good citizens of this country which we all love.

And I commend to all school teachers in the country the simple plan which the American Red Cross has worked out to provide for your cooperation, knowing as I do that school children will give their best service under the direct guidance and instruction of their teachers. Is not this perhaps the chance for which you have been looking to give your time and efforts in some measure to meet our national needs?

WOODROW WILSON, President.

HIS REPUTATION.

By Kate S. Gates.

Bob Reynolds was fixing a broken hinge on the screen door. Uncle Rob, from the back porch, was quietly watching him.

"You are not half doing that, Bob," he said.

"Oh,' shucks, it will do well enough! There's no use in being too everlasting particular about things. Life isn't long enough."

Uncle Rob looked grave. "I have been watching you for some time, my boy, and I am sorry to see that you are getting such a habit of slighting everything you do. I do not like it, Bob, it is a very serious habit to form."

"What is the use of fussing over every little thing, Uncle Rob? Life isn't long enough, as I said before. Nobody knows the difference. Take things easy is my motto—you will come out just as well in the end, and save yourself lots of trouble," and Bob hurried off to prevent further remarks.

That very evening Dr. Greyson dropped in for a bit of a call. Bob was just starting for down town, but lingered for a few minutes' talk. Dr. Greyson was quite sure to have some interesting story to tell.

"I have been over to Duxbury to-day," he said, "and I must tell you something that I heard there. There was an auction going on—a large handsome house in the heart of the town was up for sale. Some one made a bid to start it off. I thought that it was a pretty fair bid, though the house looked very desirable.

"'I want to tell you, gentlemen,' said the auctioneer, 'that this house was built by Simon Cutler. He has been dead ten years, and some of you may have forgotten that he built it, but you have not forgotten him, I know.'

"'No sir,' said one man in the crowd, the man who had made the first bid. 'I will offer $1000 more on the spot, for if Simon Cutler built it, it is all right from cellar to ridge pole. He was absolutely faithful in all his work to the smallest detail.'

"Now, was not that the finest memorial a man could have given him? I tell you, my boy," and the doctor laid his hand affectionately on Bob's shoulder, "making a living, or getting lots of fun is not what makes life worth while. It is being faithful, even in that which is least, it is being thoroughly dependable in every way. That makes life grand."

Bob made no comment, and Uncle Rob wisely kept silence, but he smiled happily to himself when he observed the next day that the screen door had been put in first-class shape.—Christian Intelligencer.

A CHILD'S HYMN.

Some time ago a terrible accident occurred in one of the coal mines in Pennsylvania, and as the result several men were buried alive in the mine, and for three days all efforts to rescue them proved fruitless.

A great crowd of men and women gathered at the mouth of the mine on the evening of the third day, most of them Germans. They were angry at the mine owners and in a wild, sullen mood, ready to commit any act of violence.

Standing in the crowd was a little German girl about eleven years old. Her pale face and frightened glances from side to side showed that she fully understood the great danger of the moment. Suddenly, with a great effort she began to sing in a whisper which could hardly be heard. Then she gained courage, and her sweet, childish voice rang out with the words of Luther's grand old hymn familiar to every German, "A mighty fortress is our God."

For a few moments there was silence. Then presently another and another until the whole with one voice joined with the little girl in singing the song, and the multitude were singing the comforting and inspiring words of Luther's great hymn.

As they sang, a great quiet seemed to fall upon their hearts. They resumed the rescue work with great zeal, and before morning the joyful cry came up from the rescuing party that the buried miners had been found, all alive.

The song which the little girl sang was a means of great blessing in a time of need. It is a good thing to learn as many hymns by heart as we can, for we can never tell how useful they may be in some time of need.—Apples of Gold.

A MODERN VIEW.

(Rev. S. A. Brown, of Kosciusko, Miss., reports to the Advocate the following amusing incident.—The Editor.)

Last Sunday in a Sunday school in Holmes County, Mississippi, a teacher of the "Beginners" was catechising her little pupils. She explained all about Jesus being born in a stable, the angels singing, etc. In reviewing them, she asked little Dalton, Jr.: "Now where was Jesus born?" and little Dalton promptly answered, "In the garage."

THE TALLEST ANIMAL

The giraffe, with its unequal legs, sloping back, long neck, and two horny knobs on the head, appears to be the most awkward animal in the menagerie. It is one of the most interesting, because it is so queer. Giraffes are brought from Africa, and are used only for exhibition in the circus or in zoological gardens. A few naturalists say that there are eleven species, while others think there is only one. Some giraffes have two horns, others three, or even five. Those with two horns are the kind usually exhibited here. The entire number of giraffes in captivity is said not to exceed thirty, but to buy a single one takes from two thousand to six thousand dollars, according to its age. When about three years old one costs nearly three thousand dollars.

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

Editorial

THE QUESTION OF CHURCH LOYALTY.

There seems to be an opinion abroad that for a Church to set up any standards of doctrine and polity and to insist upon its members being loyal to them, is an infringement upon freedom of thought and personal liberty. As a matter of fact, this conception is entirely erroneous. The Church has its teachings and regulations, and when a man joins it, it is supposed that he knows what they are and is willing to respect and observe them. So, in a wholly voluntary manner, he assumes its vows and enters into its membership. There is no constraint to compel him to remain within its fold, and if his convictions change it is his unchallenged right to withdraw and seek another ecclesiastical home, or to remain out of any Church if he prefers to do so. He is as free and unfettered as a man could possibly be, except that he cannot properly claim the privilege of remaining in an organization with which he has ceased to be in harmony and of antagonizing it in violation of the vows which he, of his own accord, assumed.

But it may be asked, if a member of a Church may not seek to effect changes in its government. Yes, at proper times, and in a proper manner. The Church has a prescribed assembly for the consideration of all such questions, and, through the right of petition or memorial, any member may offer suggestions and present his views to that body. It is also, we think, permissible for him, within reasonable limits, to propose measures through the public prints and set forth what he conceives to be the advantages of them. But when the changes that he has advocated have been weighed and rejected, for him to try to keep up a perpetual agitation in their behalf, and, in doing so, to inveigh against the existing regulations of the Church in a manner that may impair its influence, is, in our opinion, a very censurable and indefensible course.

There certainly must be a limit beyond which a Church cannot afford to allow itself to be attacked from within, just as there is for the State. And if Church papers are not established to defend the Church that maintains them and to promote its interests, what are they for? The notion that they are to be a sort of free-for-all forum into which any scheme or vagary that may be conceived by any man or little company of men, however wild and revolutionary it may be, may be brought and placed upon an equal footing (with equal claims) with the most sacred things in the superstructure of Southern Methodism—things that are sanctioned by law, or, it may be, embodied in her very constitution—is one to which we cannot at all subscribe. Such a conception is anarchistic in its nature, and if allowed to prevail it must exercise a most harmful, if not ruinous, influence upon the Church. A government, whether secular or ecclesiastical, must be in some measure reverenced and respected if it is to continue to exist and fulfill the ends for which it was instituted.

No Church is stronger than the loyalty of the agencies upon which it must lean for support. The virility of Roman Catholicism is largely due to the ardent and unswerving devotion of the people embraced in its communion: the Church is exalted, and whoever attacks it, will quickly find that it is not without vigorous defenders. If the organized forces of Southern Methodism are not to stand for the preservation of its life and integrity, the day of its doom is not far distant.

To be sure, we hear much in this time about breadth and tolerance, and these are noble qualities if they are not allowed to run riot and undermine other virtues not less noble. But sometimes a lack of resistance to things that are harmful is due to weakness and the want of courage or conviction. We saw it stated somewhere not long since that one of the characteristics of heathen religions is their readiness to coalesce with other faiths. In marked contradistinction to this, Christianity is nobly intolerant—not appealing to the sword, but uncompromisingly adhering to the truth. The unyieldingness of Jesus was one of his most outstanding characteristics. And while, being only human, we may not speak with the authority that he did, it is no reflection upon a man if he holds that for him some things are settled, and if he is disinclined to see the Church home that sheltered his fathers, and which now shelters him, knocked to pieces by men who are anchored to nothing and who have a mad passion for change.

Few words are more overworked than that of democracy, and in its name many schemes are championed which if put into effect would result in wild disorder and the destruction of the most beneficent freedom. For instance, it looked a few years ago as if a reckless democratic preachment would undermine our matchless Constitution, and set up in the place of this great representative republic an unbridled democracy like those that have risen and, after brief and stormy existences, gone down in the Old World. But fortunately this menacing tendency now seems to have been checked and there appears to have come to our people a saner and safer spirit. No governmental order can be builded and maintained without repositories of power and the surrender of some rights upon the part of each individual; and the giving to every man of absolute freedom would inevitably inaugurate a reign of anarchy. This is as true respecting Churches as it is respecting States. May we not meditate profitably, both as citizens and Church members, upon the following felicitous and wise words: "The time has come when we should boast less of our liberties and think more of our laws, when we should talk less of our rights and ponder more our duties?"

MISREPRESENTING JEFFERSON DAVIS.

We are carrying in this issue of the Advocate an article from Dr. S. A. Steel, in which exception is very properly taken to a flagrant misrepresentation of Jefferson Davis that was recently published in Zion's Herald. Dr. Steel is entirely correct in what he says concerning the course and views of Mr. Davis, who was neither a firebrand in the Secession movement, nor a wild enthusiast holding that the Southern States could easily and quickly achieve their independence.

In refutation of the charge that he was the leader in inciting the Southern people to secede, we quote the following from Bishop Galloway's masterful address, "The Life and Times of Jefferson Davis," delivered at the University of Mississippi in 1908, and which, happily, is preserved in the volume of his addresses, "Great Men and Great Movements," that has been published, under the direction of Bishop Candler, since his lamented death:

"Long after Yancey and Rhett and Toombs and others had thrown hesitancy to the winds, Mr. Davis still wrought with all his great ability and influence to preserve the Union. He favored and earnestly advocated the 'Crittenden Resolutions' on the condition that the Republican members accept them. Had they not stubbornly refused—and they did it on the advice of Mr. Lincoln—war would have been averted and the dissolution of the Union prevented or postponed. All the undoubted facts go to prove that Jefferson Davis, at the peril of sacrificing the confidence of his people, exhausted all resources consistent with the sacred rights and honor of the States to stay the fatal dismemberment of the Union."

And none foresaw more clearly than Mr. Davis that the impending struggle would be a fierce and protracted one. On his way home, after his resignation of his seat in the United States Senate at the order of the State he represented, he made, according to Mrs. Davis, a number of speeches to the people, in which "he told them to prepare for a long and bloody war." And after he had been drafted into the Presidency of the Confederacy, it is well known that he adhered to the same opinion. Bishop Galloway thus refers to his inaugural message: "His address was conservative and dispassionate, but strong and resolute, not inferior to the lofty and luminous utterances of Thomas Jefferson. If others failed to measure the awful import of that epochal hour, not so with the serious and far-seeing man who was about to assume high office, who was an educated and trained soldier and a great statesman of long experience and extraordinary genius."

It is to the credit of no man, either in the North or in the South, to undertake to reflect upon the illustrious "Chieftain of the Lost Cause." His most capable contemporaries have borne witness to his conspicuous ability and exalted character. The Hon. John T. Reagan, of Texas, a member of his Cabinet, said of him, "He was a man of great labor, of great integrity, and of great purity;" and Senator Benjamin H. Hill, of Georgia, who served with such distinction in the National Senate after the Civil War, paid him this beautiful tribute: "I declare to you that he was the most honest, the truest, gentlest, bravest, tenderest, manliest man I ever knew."

EFFICACIOUS ONLY WHEN LIVED.

The mere publication of the Gospel will not save the nations of the earth, though there are some among us who seem to think so. The words of the Master are conclusive on this point: "And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand; and the rains descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew and beat upon that house, and it fell, and great was the fall of it." The tremendous truth here set forth applies in heathen lands, as well as in countries that are regarded as Christian. The only evangelism that really counts is that which enthrones Christ in the hearts of men and makes him regnant in their lives. It is a waste of the Lord's money to seek to spread over the world a surface Christianity that does not exercise a truly regenerating power in the perishing souls of mankind. To civilize a people is not necessarily to Christianize them.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mrs. U. G. Foote, the accomplished wife of Dr. U. G. Foote, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church, of New Orleans, is visiting relatives in Missouri.

We have in hand an interesting report from the Clarke Circuit, Mississippi Conference, of which Rev. H. E. Raley is the popular pastor. It will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. J. F. Waltman, of Eros, La., has brought us under obligations to him for 7 subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother Waltman is giving a good account of himself in his present field of labor.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, pastor of the Corinth (Miss.) Circuit, writes: "We are very busy now trying to get ready for Conference. We are closing our second year on this charge, and it has been the best of the two."

Rev. F. B. Ormond, our pastor at South McComb, Miss., says: "We are hopeful of a good rounding out of the year's work." Brother Ormond is finishing his quadrennium in his present field, in which he has wrought most efficiently.

The Protestant Churches of New Orleans will unite in a service commemorative of the 400th anniversary of the Protestant Reformation at the First Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 4. The occasion promises to be one of much interest.

We have heard from several sources that Rev. H. S. Spragins is giving great satisfaction as pastor of our First Church at Memphis, Tenn., which is one of the foremost congregations of Southern Methodism. There is no choicer spirit in the Connection than Brother Spragins.

November 18 will be Prison Reform Sunday in New Orleans. Nearly all the leading pulpits of the city are expected to be filled on that day by distinguished visitors brought here by the National Prison Reform Congress, which will begin its sessions on Monday, Nov. 19.

Rev. A. H. Williams, pastor of Main Street Church at Water Valley, Miss., continues to take care of the interests of the Advocate among his parishioners. Brother Williams is a strong preacher, and occasionally finds time amid his pastoral duties to contribute to the Church press.

The Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference will hold its anniversary at Oxford, Miss., where the Annual Conference will meet, on Friday evening, Nov. 23. Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Secretary of the General Board of Education, will deliver the address on that occasion.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of New Orleans, and Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, are in their fourth years in their present charges. Both of these ministers have wrought well, and they will be given up by their flocks with not a little reluctance.

Rev. C. H. Strait, of Johns, Miss., reports that he is bestirring himself to try to get things in such shape that he will be able to report everything in full when the Mississippi Conference assembles in Vicksburg. He is not forgetting the claims of the Advocate amid the many pressing calls that are coming to him.

In a communication bringing us some subscriptions, Rev. J. C. Price, of Belcher, La., thus refers to his charge: "I think that I shall go to Conference with a clean balance sheet and a good report in all other respects." Brother Price is a true and worthy itinerant and a workman that "needeth not to be ashamed."

Dr. F. N. Parker, Professor of Systematic Theology in the Candler School of Theology of Emory University, is rendering the Church a great service in the training of her ministry. Dr. Parker is a profound student and excels both as a teacher and as a preacher. He is one of the best loved members of the Louisiana Conference.

The enrollment of the Sunday school of our First Church at Baton Rouge, La., in 1913 was 465; this year, including the Cradle Roll, the enrollment has gone to over 700. The collections for the current year have reached the sum of $683.22. The efficient superintendent of this school is Mr. W. S. Holmes, and its pastor is Rev. C. A. Battle.

Dr. T. P. Bell, who is a well known physician in New Orleans and a member of our Algiers Church, has been elected Field Secretary of the Louisiana Anti-Tuberculosis League for the coming year. Doctor Bell is an alumnus of the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., and is considered well equipped for the work committed to his hands.

Rev. Shade Walker, of Huntington, West Va., and Prof. P. M. Boyd, of Atlanta, Ga., his chorister, began a meeting at Holly Springs, Miss., on October 15. Rev. E. R. Smoot, our pastor there, is expecting a gracious season of spiritual refreshing from the labors of these brethren, and is leaving nothing in his power undone to re-enforce their efforts.

We are indebted to the following friends, of whose kindness no mention has been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions, sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. A. Wells, Oak Ridge, Miss., 2; Rev. E. H. Cooley, Walnut Grove, Miss., 4; Mrs. M. A. McKenzie, Homer, La., 10; Rev. S. E. Flurry, Philadelphia, Miss., 4; Miss Mabel McMinn, Courtland, Miss., 2.

Dr. Waights G. Henry, who, after four years of service as pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church of Jackson, Miss., will be assigned to another field at the meeting of the Mississippi Conference, will leave behind him a notable record. The magnificent new church in which this fine congregation now worships was completed under Dr. Henry's direction. That was a monumental achievement.

Mrs. Mary A. McCants, of Wilson, La., in a business letter to the Publisher, says: "I shall appreciate Bishop Marvin's book, which you will please send to me. I heard him preach fifty-five years ago and was led to embrace religion. He was one of the grandest men that I ever knew. His memory is very sacred to me. I am now three score and eleven years of age. I enjoy the dear old Advocate."

From a personal letter from Dr. George S. Sexton, of Shreveport, La., we take the following: "It was a glorious day for our Methodism and our country when the corner-stone of our Representative Church was laid at the National Capital." Dr. Sexton and those who have wrought with him are to be congratulated upon the success they have achieved in carrying forward this noble enterprise.

At the meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, recently held in the Holmes Hall, this city, Miss Mary Werlein was elected President. The other officers chosen were as follows: Mrs. A. R. Spillers, First Vice President; Mrs. E. L. Atkinson, Treasurer and Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. M. L. Allen, Recording Secretary, and Mrs. George Kerth, Superintendent of Evangelistic work.

A patriotic public meeting, participated in by representatives of all the Churches of the city, was held at the Athenaeum on Thursday evening, Nov. 18, with a large attendance. A number of stirring and eloquent speeches were made by well known clergymen, and considerable enthusiasm was manifested. The meeting was gracefully presided over by Rev. A. J. Gearheard, who had been active and energetic in working it up.

A correspondent writes us as follows from Longville, La., under date of Oct. 18: "We buried Mrs. J. T. Kent yesterday in the family cemetery at Dry Creek. Rev. A. D. Harper, of Sibley, and Rev. A. J. Bonnette, of Oberlin, conducted the funeral services. Sister Kent was the mother of Mr. J. B. Kent, who was once a member of the Louisiana Conference, and also of two preachers' wives—Mrs. F. N. Sweeney of Franklinton, and Mrs. J. S. Rutledge, of Longville, La." We regret to be informed of the death of this faithful servant of the Master, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved.

We have on our table a pamphlet, entitled "Repentance—Its Occurrence, Uses, Meaning, Reasons, Motives, and Fruits," by Rev. Isaac Lockhart Peebles, of the Mississippi Conference. This booklet numbers 20 pages, and is well printed and neatly bound. It is a clear, Scriptural discussion of a fundamental theme, which we fear is too much neglected in this day. Dr. Peebles knows the Bible and is an able expositor of its great doctrines. One cannot read this latest product of his busy pen without being profited. Write him for a copy at Meridian, Miss. The price is ten cents.

From a letter from Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, we extract the following: "Please state in your 'Personal Column' that the returns for the Orphanage from 'Work Day' have been most gratifying, something over $2000 having been received up to this date—Oct. 20. Also please urge those who have not sent in the offerings taken to do so at once, as our fiscal year will end on Nov. 1, and we are anxious for every pastoral charge to have full credit for all it has raised in the summary of this year." We hope that the brethren will promptly comply with Brother Vaughan's request.

We desire to call special attention to the statement from Brother T. W. Holloman, of Alexandria, Treasurer of the Sunday School Board of the Louisiana Conference, which appears on page 10 of this number of the Advocate. It is to be hoped that every Sunday school in the State will use the program that has been specially prepared for Sunday, Nov. 4, and take up an offering, as has been requested. This is a matter of much importance, since funds are urgently needed for the maintenance and extension of our Sunday school work in Louisiana. Let all the money received on this occasion be promptly forwarded to Brother Holloman.

FROM LABOR TO REWARD.

Dear Dr. Meek: Mrs. Jessie Porter Wilson passed away on Oct. 18 at her home in Natchez, Miss. Mrs. Wilson was District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Port Gibson District for several years. By her sweet, winning way and strong Christian character, she greatly endeared herself to the women of her district, who, with many others, extend sympathy to the bereaved loved ones.

Mrs. R. F. HARRELL.

Gloster, Miss.

(The Church in the Port Gibson District has sustained a great loss in the death of this devoted worker. May the Heavenly Father comfort the sorrowing ones!—Editor of the Advocate.)

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Girls! Use Lemons! Make a Bleaching, Beautifying Cream

The juce of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of the skin. It is simply marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

LULA LENORA LANE FELDER, daughter of M. M. and Effie Friday Lane, was born on January 20, 1880, was happily married to F. J. Felder on July 25, 1895, and after a brief illness departed this life on July 14, 1917. As a daughter she was affectionate and dutiful, as a friend she was constant and helpful, and as a wife she was devoted and faithful. She was genuinely converted to Christ and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when ten years of age. Having made this important decision so early in life, she developed a character of unusual strength and beauty. She was attentive to the sick, always lending sympathy and a helping hand. To the needy and the bereaved, she was an angel of mercy. Her devotion to the Church was shown by her remarkable fidelity to its claims and interests. When death came, she was ready. Having learned the secret of an unfailing faith, and having lived her life in service for others, she died in great peace and triumph. She will be sorely missed by the community in which she resided. May the Lord bless and sustain the bereaved relatives and friends! A FRIEND.

Mrs. ELIZABETH SCARBOROUGH (nee Flowers) was born in Butler County, Ala., on April 15, 1830, and died at Hattiesburg, Miss., on August 18, 1917. We laid her body to rest in White Plain Cemetery, near Woolmarket, on Sunday, August 19, 1917, by the side of her husband, the Rev. Alex Scarborough, a local preacher of the Mississippi Conference. The funeral service was conducted by the writer. Mrs. Scarborough was married in Harrison County, Miss., on May 1, 1849, and was the mother of ten children—seven boys and three girls—all of whom survive her except one daughter, who preceded her to the grave several years ago. She was the wife of Rev. J. L. Jordan, of Biloxi, Miss. Sister Scarborough was converted and joined the Methodist Church in 1849 and ever remained faithful and loyal to her Master. She left behind her a record of devotion and faithfulness. She was consistently loved and trusted by her neighbors and friends. Being practically helpless for some time before her death, she was never known to murmur or complain. But she is now reunited with those who have preceded her to the mansions above.

REV. L. FAYARD.

Biloxi, Miss.

Mrs. ADDIE HOPPER HAILEY (nee Greenbee) was born near Gainesville, Ala., on August 30, 1874, and departed this life on September 1, 1917, at her home in the northwest part of Kemper County, Miss. She was married to A. W. Hailey on February 18, 1902. Of this union were born seven sons, the oldest being under 14, and the youngest above 3 years old. Oh, such a fine family of little boys! Sister Hailey joined the Presbyterian Church in early life. A few years ago she united with the M. E. Church, South. Truly, it can be said: She lived a life "hid with Christ in God." She was a strong character, and was observed daily on her knees in devotion to God. And she taught her children by precept and example the importance of prayer. Such examples are worthy of mention. For nearly 15 years of her married life she observed this noble rule of daily prayer. True affection was shown to everybody. She possessed the noble traits of patience and fidelity. She was much concerned about the welfare of the Church and the community and the needs of the needy. Oh, how she will be missed by all! Few are able to fill the places she leaves vacant. Her husband is one of the most efficient officials of the Mount Zion Church, on the Moscow Circuit. Besides a husband and 7 boys, she leaves 2 sisters and 3 brothers, with a host of friends, to mourn her going from us. May the good Lord ever have the bereaved ones in His gracious keeping! Assisted by Rev. J. F. McClelland, of DeKalb, Miss., we laid her body to rest in the family cemetery, near her home, in the presence of a host of sorrowing relatives and friends, to await the resurrection morn.

Her pastor, GEO. P. FIKES.

AN IMPORTANT STATEMENT.

Dear Doctor Meek: A conflict has arisen in regard to dates between our Sunday School Board and the Anti-Saloon League, both organizations, without being aware that it was adopting a conflicting date, having fixed upon November 4 for a special program.

The Sunday School Board has sent to every Sunday school in the State a program for that day with the request that it be made the occasion for raising the 2 per cent assessment necessary in order to carry on the very important and very fine intensive Sunday school work being done by our Board through our field secretary, Mr. Breithapt, and his very able and competent assistant, Miss Richardson.

These programs had gone out, I think, before the Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, Rev. A. W. Turner, of Shreveport, began to request the Sunday schools to observe temperance Sunday on that day. I have a letter from Brother Turner stating that since the Sunday school program went out first, and since there are enough Sundays for everybody, the temperance program may be observed on the following Sunday, or as soon after November 4 as is convenient, and the offerings then received sent to the Anti-Saloon League.

I, therefore, write this letter with the request that you give it publicity, and urge all Sunday schools to observe our Conference Sunday School Day on November 4, using the programs sent out by Mr. Breithaupt and using the occasion to take up the two per cent offering, and to observe November 11, or 18, as Temperance Sunday. Yours very truly,

T. W. HOLLOMAN,
Treasurer Louisiana Conference
Sunday School Board.

"WHAT BEAUTIFUL HAIR!"

Have you ever heard that remark made as some one passed by who had carefully kept hair? Did it not make you envious and did it not make you ashamed of every coarse, stiff or gray hair in your head? Did it not make you wish that you, too, had kept your hair carefully and could hear similar compliments passed on ou? Don't envy a beautiful head of hair. It is your privilege to have one. The beauty of the hair depends entirely on its care; and its luster depends on the food on which it subsists. Hair must be fed. Every single hair is a distinctly individual living thing and it demands food. Unless you feed it, it is going to be stiff and coarse and void of beauty. Follow the example of the Creoles of Louisiana, who pride themselves on their hair. Get their recipe. It was kept as a race secret for many years but you can get it now by asking our dealer for "La Creole," the natural hair dressing, or by sending one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horribie and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

AUTUMN IN THE "ISLANDS OF LIQUID SUNSHINE."

The hright-shining sun is no guarantee that the day will not be a wet one, and often the quick showers wet you thoroughly while in a few steps of the house. Then when you are sheltered, the shower passes by and all is over. The breeze is never idle, and it sends the rain in almost level lines, that interfere but little with the sunshine. It is aptly named "liquid sunshine," and there is rarely a hint of suitriness in the atmosphere. This has been a most delightful summer; not one day has been hot except on the docks, and in the more crowded sections of the business streets. Out on the mountain sides it is cool at all times.

In these changing war-time days we never know what to expect from day to day. Often an officer gets his place, and begins to unpack his household affairs, when a cable calls him hack to the States on the first availahle transportation. My friend, the chief surgeon of the Department, found that he must make some changes on account of the new men who had arrived, and others sent away, so he sent me over to this post on the east side of the city. it is by far the prettiest post out here and is situated on a narrow point of land which terminates in the crater of a long-extinct volcano. The breezes blow with great vigor from the mighty Pacific Ocean; the views around the post are wonderful. The crater rises about three hundred feet above the post, and is like a big bowl with walls two hundred feet thick, and a diameter of about three-fourths of a mile. From the crest of this rim, you have a sight rarely seen—but I must not teii you ahout it, as there are things we cannot talk about. Every care is taken to prevent intruders from learning about the means of offense and defense that we possess out here, but suffice it to say that it is ample for ali purposes. We have less than 1000 men in the post, so the work is not trying. The post is healthy, and the men well cared for.

There are many Southerners out here, and we have pleasant meetings sometimes. They seem to drift together naturaiiy, and find each other congenial. The man most urged for Governor of the Territory is from Tennessee, and his Republican friends readily excuse his political leaning, because he is from the South. He is a member of the Methodist Church, teacher of the Men's Bible Class, and a splendid specimen of the typical Southern gentleman.

I wish every member of the three Conferences would read the 34th chapter of Ezekiel, and think it over. Then read again, and act as directed. There is much food for thought in that grand old prophet's Inspired writings. But, Brother Meek, how can a duly ordained and called preacher consent to act as "secretary," "commissioner" or schoolmaster, when the Master calls so loudly for harvesters? The fields were never so promising, the harvest so bountiful, fruit so plentiful as now. Curiousiy, the lahorers are very, very few. A distinguished gentieman—a lawyer from Aiahama—said to me a few days ago that one thing troubled him at the present time, and that he couid not account for it: "It seems to me that so many preachers are trying to quit their God-called occupation. They are running after aii sorts of things, and trying ali sorts of expedients, to evade the pastorate. They do work laymen can do, and leave undone the work that laymen cannot do. It is impairing the influence of the ciergy, and creating dissatisfaction where only concord ought to be." This is the observation of a man who has traveled widely, who occupies a great seat of honor in his profession, and, being a judge, has the knack of seeing the core of a matter. It is only too true—what will be the harvest? I cannot see how a preacher could be tempted to leave his great field of usefulness, and try a layman's work. What a wonderful honor to feel called of God to hreak the bread of life to hungry mankind! How could any honor be half so great?

The more that I see of the working out of His will in these semi-mission fieids, the firmer I am convinced that He is giving the Church one of those marvelous opportunities that come only once or twice in a century. People are thirsting for the waters of life, as never before in the history of the Methodist Church at least. They are looking for "a city which hath foundations," a hope "that faiieth not," a light that cannot be dimmed, and which shineth "unto the perfect day."

Our pastor is at Conference. I refer to the pastor of the Methodist Church which I attend—my membership is still in Biloxi. The committee on worship asked me to help out at one service, and though I feit a reluctance, as we are compeiled to wear our uniforms all the time out here, I consented, and the white tropical uniform was seen for the first time in that pulpit. There was a large crowd present, though there was no advertising, and how eagerly they listened to the oid, old story! I wished that I had the eloquence of Dr. Steel or Dr. Werlein, so I could repay such attention. I did my best to hold up the "One altogether iovely."

But this letter is too long now. I wish the brethren knew how good it is to get a letter from the old home iand.

Fraternally,
J. C. BALLARD.

HEADACHES AND OTHER ACHES AND PAINS.

Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are wiiiing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains, and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad after-effects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nerves pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeahle after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one hox of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

LITERARY NOTICE.

(With the Children on Sundays.—By Syivanus Stall, D.D. 135 iine drawings, 8 full page color illustrations, by Miss C. M. Burd, 4 half-tone pictures. Large quarto voiume, size 9½x7. Fuii cloth, 330 pages. Price, $1.50. The Vir Publisbing Company, 200-214 North Fifteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.)

The author of the book was a lover of children, and he evidently knew how to win them. His avowed object is to render Sunday a delightful time without in any way detracting from the sacredness of the day. Realizing that the normal chiid mind is the same on every day of the week, he introduces the idea of "Playing Church." The iittie ones drive to Church, with chairs for horses. They act as ushers to their parents, their dollies and imaginary auditors. A reguiar service is conducted. The chiidren themselves do some of the preaching, and at the close of the service a chapter from "With the children on Sundays" is read. Questions are asked concerning the iessons taught, and at the conciusion the chiidren and their parents take the imaginary ride back to their home.

In addition to this there are many Old Testament scenes which are enacted: The boy behind the sofa is Joseph in the Pit; the boy iooking through the siats of the chairs which are placed around him, is Daniel in the Lion's Den, and so on. The entire book is new in the direction which it takes, and there never has been any book iike it. Each of the 52 object sermons has a number of iiiustrations, and the full-color page pictures and the half-tone iiiustrations make the book exceedingly attractive. There is nothing controversial on its pages, and aii parents will find it useful, especiaiiy the questions and littie items of out of-the-way information. The chapters are aii so interesting in this volume that one could scarceiy speak of them as studies, but rather as illuminating conversations with the young. Those who have much teaching to do, and often find that their iessons fail fiat and are staie and unprofitable, will find it full of suggestions, bright and stimuiating from the first page to the last.

HOW SHIVAR MINERAL WATER RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimiiated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate iings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescrihe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure biood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Sage and Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

Brush this through faded, streaked locks and they become dark, glossy, youthful.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Suiphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troubiesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Suiphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly teli that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturaiiy and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifuiiy dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Suiphur Compound is a deiightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Sunday School

A STATEMENT OF THE PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITY OF THE DENOMINATION FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF ITS OWN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

The following paper was adopted by the Conference of Chairmen of Sunday School Boards and Field Workers at Lake Junaluska, N. C., at its session in July:

"The development of the Sunday school situation, with its present organization and plans for promoting Sunday school work, makes necessary this statement of facts in order that our people may understand the real situation.

"First of all, we wish to register our appreciation of and gratitude for the truly great and providential work which the International Sunday School Association has accomplished since its organization. It came into being at a time when there was little appreciation on the part of the denominations, of the possibilities of the Sunday school movement, and of the fundamental responsibility of the Churches in the field of religious instruction. A group of Sunday school leaders from the various Protestant denominations of North America united upon their own initiative to do jointly a work which at that time could not be otherwise accomplished. The history of this co-operation is an open book, and need not here be recounted.

"The work that these forward looking men enterprised has developed, as all living movements do, far beyond the forecasts of the founders, into the great Sunday school movement of to-day.

"To-day the Churches of North America have become aroused to a new appreciation of the place of religious education, and of its fundamental nature in relation to the whole work of the Church. As a result it necessarily follows that the denominations feel a responsibility for this task such as they have never felt before. It is an obligation resting upon the denominations, and too great either to be neglected or to be turned over to any other agency. Furthermore, it has become increasingly evident that thorough-going and efficient Sunday school work throughout the entire reach of the denomination can be accomplished only through and by means of the organization of the denomination itself, and by its undivided co-operation and backing.

"This new appreciation on the part of the denominations and their assumption of their responsibility in this field has made it necessary that interdenominational co-operative Sunday school work should be conducted on a denominationaliy representative basis. The Sunday Schooi Council of Evangelical Denominations, representing thirty Protestant denominations in North America, was organized in 1910 to meet this need for a basis of practical co-operation. Through this Council, as a co-operative organization, the denominations have exercised their rights to formulate standards, and through their official representatives have constituted and control the Lesson Committee which issues the International Sunday School Lessons, there being now on the International Lesson Committee thirty-one representatives of the denominations, eight of the International Sunday School Association, and eight of the Sunday School Council.

"Thus through this truly representative interdenominational organization, a broader, more effective, and more thorough-going co-operation is made possible. And because the Council is truly representative it is able to guard the rights of the denominations, while providing this more responsible and satisfactory basis of co-operation.

"As a result of the foregoing, it naturally follows that there has been a change in the nature of the work of the International Sunday School Association and the State Associations. Since the initiative has been assumed by the denominations, and the understanding has been effected with the International Association that their work and that of the State Associations is to be confined to Sunday school work in accordance with the denominational plans and standards. their work is properly that of the promotion of these denominational plans. There are some of our people, as well as some of the directors and workers of the State Associations who do not seem to understand the changed relation with the result that some misinterpret and question the new emphasis upon denominational activity. As a matter of fact, as is suggested above, the new arrangement provides for the widest and most harmonious interdenominational co-operation, while at the same time enabling the denominations to manage their own affairs without confusing interference from without, and to reach their own people more effectively than can possibiy be reached through any other agency.

"In view of the new situation as set forth above, and of the enlarged Sunday school program of our Church, we call upon all people to lend their hearty and loyal support to the Sunday school plans and policies of their church. We desire them to understand fully that this appeal is in the interest of larger efficiency, and the fuller meeting of our denominational responsibility. And further, we wish to state the fact that while emphasizing the denominational responsibiiity, we fully recognize and rejoice in the increasing spirit of inter-denominational co-operation of to-day. But the new conceptions of efficiency and of denominational responsibility in Sunday school work call for co-operation which is thoroughly representative. and for agencies of work that function fully through the church and in keeping with the enlarged plans."

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author Says

EVERY WOMAN EVERY MOTHER EVERY DAUGHTER NEEDS IRON AT TIMES

To put strength into her nerves and color into her cheeks.

There can be no beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women without iron. The trouble in the past has been that when women needed iron they generally took ordinary metallic iron, which often corroded the stomach and did far more harm than good. Today doctors prescribe organic iron— Nuxated Iron. This particular form of iron is easily assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard looking women 100 per cent in two weeks' time in many instances. I have used it in my own practice with most surprising results.—Ferdinand King, M. D.

NOTE: NUXATED IRON recommended by Dr. Ferdinand King can be obtained from any good druggist with a positive guarantee of success or money refunded. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

Less Meat if Back And Kidneys Hurt

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you— Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kiduey region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleepiessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids so they no ionger irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which miiiions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys ciean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

THE TESTIMONY OF MISSIONS.

The missions of Christianity have, from the first, been a striking evidence of its spirit. Other religions may have begun with the same zeal, but the first glow of activity has, in their case, given way to the feebie torpor of age; but the missionary spirit which conquered Rome and Europe is still as vigorous as in the first freshness of the faith, and every spot is familiar to the footsteps of the wandering servant of the Cross.—Geikie.

THE OLD RELIABLE BLOOD BUILDER

Still retains its supremacy. People still take Hood's Sarsaparilla because it is an old family friend, has proved its merit to three generations—in purified blood, expelled humors, restored appetite, relieved rheumatism, banished tired feelings.

It long ago became recognized as the standard blood purifier and general tonic. It originated in a Boston physician's successful prescription, and comprises medicinal roots, herbs, barks and berries such as are often prescribed for ailments of the blood, stomach, liver and kidneys. Buy it in the same style package your mother bought it in,—same fine appearance, same pleasant taste, same certainty of good results.

True Delicious—Trees 15c Each. Everyone knows this wonderful apple. Large fruit, beautiful dark red, in flavor sweet, slightly touched with acid. A splendid keeper.
Golden Winesap—A newer apple than the Delicious but it deserves wide popularity. Hardy everywhere. Bears early and very profusely. Crisp, juicy and of fine flavor.
All varieties, fully described in my catalog, some as low as 90c for 10 or $3.50 per 100. Small fruits, shrubs, forest seedlings, etc.
Red Turkey Winter Wheat and Mammoth White Winter Rye. Send for prices.
Fruit Trees That Grow

Recommended by Doctor Cothram

Dr. T. E. Cothram is a well known pharmacist of Alexis, Ala. And when he gets bilious or needs a purgative medicine, what do you suppose he does? Out of his whole big stock of liver medicine he selects and uses Granger Liver Regulator. He says "There is none better." That's a pretty strong endorsement, don't you think, from a man who knows all about the merits of the different medicines on the market? Granger Liver Regulator is purely vegetable, does not gripe nor irritate the delicate lining of the stomach and bowels and always gives quick and pleasant results. It is the best system purifier known. Your druggist can supply you—25c for large box. Accept no substitute.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

A JAPANESE VIEW OF JAPAN'S NEED.

A Japanese Christian leader says: "There are between sixty and seventy millions in Japan, only a small percentage of whom have as yet accepted Christ. There are a dozen reasons why it is imperative that Japan should become Christian, really Christian, quickly. For one thing, she is rapidly taking the place of leader of the so-called colored races of the Eastern world. That leadership ought to be a Christian leadership, and it must be if it is to be a blessing and not a curse. Japan needs nothing so much as she needs Christ. She has already adopted much of the material civilization of the West, and must do so increasingly—she cannot avoid it. But unless with it she also becomes predominantly Christian, that civilization may become more a curse than a blessing, both for herself, the Far East, and the world at large. The central fact at the moment is that Japan is advancing along the lines of the material civilization of the West infinitely more rapidly than she is adopting its best spiritual standards. In the one her progress has been more remarkable than any hitherto recorded in history. In the other, while much has been done that gives ground for grateful thanks to God, the rate of progress is proportionately very slow."

Resolutions adopted by the Executive Committee of the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America:

The Senate of the United States has passed by more than two-thirds majority the Federal Amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the United States. The bill will come before the House of Representatives early in December. If this bill passes the House and is ratified by the Legislatures of two-thirds of the States, the Federal Amendment becomes a law.

In view of the following facts:

(a) That the liquor traffic involves us in enormous taxation exceeding ten times the amount received from license revenue, and,

(b) It is responsible for the use of large amounts of grain which might be utilized for food, and

(c) Our Government is morally responsible for enormous quantities of rum exported to Africa and other foreign countries.

We urge the women of our missionary societies to take immediate steps in local circles and union societies and federations to secure strong action on the part of the Churches, missionary organizations, local bodies of men, and prominent individuals, in favor of this Federal Amendment and of State legislation where it has not already been taken.

We recommend that such action be telegraphed or written on or before December 1 to Congressmen representing the several States or Districts from which the communications are sent.

The form of the telegram to be as follows:

Representing (name of body).

We earnestly request your vote in the affirmative for Federal Amendment to the Constitution to prohibit manufacture and sale of liquor in the United States. Signed..

With the hope that a great united movement may rid our land from the curse of drink and protect certain countries where we are carrying the Gospel of Christ from the frightful devastation of liquor sent from our country, we plead for immediate united action by all Women's Missionary Societies.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

Nov. 5-11, 1917.

Literature has been sent out to the auxiliaries for the observance of this annual season of prayer and special self-denial. It is hoped that the time will be more generally observed this year than ever before, for it seems that the world's needs are greater. Our people are being called upon to make great sacrifices for the country they hold so dear—are they willing to do less for the God who made it possible for them to dwell in this land of freedom and Christianity?

The objects for which we are working this year are the enlargement of our medical work in China and of the Gulf Coast work in the home land. Dr. Ethel Polk writes of the psysical suffering of the women and children in China in such a strong, sympathetic manner that all who bear her plea are sure to respond, for its message cannot fail to give to our women the "clearer vision" for which she so earnestly prays. Miss Mabel Head has also written of the urgent needs of the work. The Gulf Coast work is ably set forth in two leaflets—one by Mrs. MacDonell and the other by Frances Dudley. When these pressing needs have been presented no woman will feel that the $25,000 goal is too high. Let us all rally to attain this goal, not because the Council has set it for us, but because of the great love which we have for Him who died for us and because it is our great desire to forward His kingdom on earth and help alleviate the suffering of women and little children.

Have you read the article in the last Voice relative to the return of Mr. and Mrs. John Stockwell to Africa? Sisters, don't ever speak of any sacrifice you make, for all must sink into insignificance in the presence of so great a one as theirs. Could you leave your dear little baby in America and go thousands of miles away to Africa—yes, Africa, with her millions of teeming souls, to work among those degraded, ignorant and superstitious people? It takes a love akin to the Father's to make such a sacrifice as that, and until we are able to do that for our Lord, our consecration to Him is not complete. Let us by our gifts hasten the time when every knee shall bow at the name of Jesus, and every tongue confess that he is the Lord.

Just a few words about the program. You will notice there are programs and literature for only three afternoons. It is expected that one afternoon be given to the young people and one to the juniors. Where there are neither, the women are to get up two original programs, not a difficult matter with all the literature we have at hand.

The young people and juniors do not have enough prominence given to their work, and it is earnestly desired that they be recognized at this time and every effort put forth to have them observe this season with us. Make them feel they are in truth a part of the great missionary work and that the responsibility of carrying it forward rests upon them as well as upon us. May this united effort result in a gracious harvest of prayers, gifts, and souls!

"The chief librarian of the British Museum says that of the 4,000,000 books in the museum, not more than 60,000 are in common use. Only occasionally is one of the other 3,940,000 books asked for. There are acres and acres of books still uncut. They have never been taken from the shelves since they were first placed there. And yet any one of these forgotten books may in the future prove to be of priceless value to some special student."

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns, then they cut and trim at these painful pests which merely makes the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freezone applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freezone, which costs very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach, or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

IN BED MOST OF TIME

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Indianapolis, Indiana. — "My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 133 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy."—Mrs. WM. GREEN, 332 S. Addison Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

There is hardly a neighborhood in this country, wherein some woman has not found health by using this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy.

If there is anything about which you would like special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

BIG THINGS FOR BIG LAYMEN TO REMEMBER.

That 17 hundred million people live in the world; 10 hundred million are heathens still; 6 hundred million have probably never beard the name, Jesus; 40 million have been allotted to Southern Methodists to evangelize. That 50 million dollars a year is the tithe of Southern Methodists; 35 million the unpaid tithe of Southern Methodists. That the crop values of the South in 1916 were forty per cent of the crop values of the whole country; that the crop values of the South in 1916 were nearly a hundred million dollars more than the crop values of the whole country in 1901.—Missionary Bulletin.

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES.

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength) and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

No. 666

This is a prescription prepared especially for MALARIA or CHILLS & FEVER. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the Fever will not return. It acts on the liver better than Calomel and does not gripe or sicken. 25c

Sore Eyes Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Dust and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. At Druggists or by mail 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Tubes 25c. For Book of the Eye FREE ask Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

NEW ALBANY REVIVAL.

Dear Doctor Meek: We closed our revival here on Sunday night, October 14. Brother G. A. Klein, of Nashville, and his singer, Mr. C. B. Clark, of Indiana, were with us for two weeks. The revival went deep, and I am certain that not one person will say that a single sugar-coated pill was given. I am more and more convinced that our Lord has called Brother Klein and given him a real message to the Church. He delivers it fearlessly and without favor. We have been greatly blessed; our church is in splendid shape for the new pastor who will come in November. We received 30 into the Church Sunday morning, and, as is usual, there will be others to come. I do not know just how many will go to other Churches. May I add this word for the brethren who have never had Brother Klein in a revival? He is sane, safe, and sensible. He uses no catch methods in his manipulations. When will our Church forget his a thousand times repeated call, "Get right with God?"

S. L. POPE, Pastor.

FINE MEETING AT MERIDIAN.

Dear Brother Meek: I write to say that we have just closed a most helpful meeting at Central, Meridian, in which the preaching was done by the Rev. J. A. Bowen of Tupelo. We felt the need of a meeting that would touch and deepen and strengthen the life of the Church, and our people were greatly uplifted and blessed. We have had greater and more extensive campaigns, but we never have had one that meant more to the working strength of our congregation.

Brother Bowen's preaching is spiritual, helpful, encouraging, and the happy good cheer of his life message is an inspiration. I am glad to say that he was in good physical condition and preached with great vigor and power. Our morning services were attended by all our Methodist preachers and several other pastors of the city, and were a great benediction.

We had a number of accessions, bringing our total number of additions up to 100 for the year. On Sunday afternoon, October 14, the writer, assisted by Brother Bowen and Brother Broadfoot, in the parsonage here, performed the marriage ceremony for Rev. J. H. Jolly, our pastor at Seminary, Miss., and Miss Maud Denton of this county. We felt that this was a fitting culmination to a good meeting. May Brother Bowen's years be increased, and may this pastor be permitted to have him as often as possible!

Cordially,

H. B. WATKINS.

Meridian, Miss., Oct. 16, 1917.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

THE NEW CALOMEL IS HARMLESS AND DELIGHTFUL.

All Sickening and Dangerous Qualities Removed—Medicinal Virtues Vastly Improved. New Variety Called "Calotabs."

Science has given us smokeless powder, colorless iodine and tasteless quinine—now comes nauseless calomel, a new variety known as Calotabs, that is wholly delightful in effect, yet more effective than the old-style calomel as a system-purifier and liver cleanser.

Your doctor prefers calomel above all other medicines, as it is the best and only sure remedy for biliousness, indigestion and constipation. Now that calomel is delightful to take, everybody is asking for the new variety, Calotabs. One tablet at bedtime, a swallow of water—that's all. No nausea, no griping, no danger. Next morning you wake up feeling fine, your liver cleansed, your system purified. Eat what you please—no restriction of habit or diet.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your druggist recommends and guarantees Calotabs.—Adv.

HARRISVILLE, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: As my meetings are now a thing of the past, I thought that I would write a few lines concerning my work. I began my meeting at Poplar Springs on the third Snuday in July with Dr. I. L. Peebles to do the preaching. Dr. Peebles is a strong preacher of the gospel. The visible results of this meeting were a revival of the membership of the church and 2 accessions by vows. My next meeting was at Rexford on the third Sunday in August. We ran the meeting until Thursday, and then closed it. The results of the meeting were three accessions. Miss Lily May Kirkpatrick conducted a service and organized a Senior Epworth League with 12 or 14 members. In this meeting the pastor did his own preaching. On the second Sunday in July we began our meeting at Harrisville, with the pastor doing his own preaching. In this meeting we had 7 accessions, all by profession of faith; and the fifth Sunday in July found us in a revival at Mt. Pisgah, the pastor again doing the preaching. We ran this meeting until Thursday, the members being spiritually uplifted, and four persons uniting with the Church by baptism. The ladies of the three churches named—Harrisville, Rexford, and Mt. Pisgah—gave a hen party, sold the hens, and took the proceeds and bought the pastor a suit of clothes, for which he is very thankful. Our next meeting was held at Braxton on the fourth Sunday in August with Rev. W. J. Dodson to help us. The preaching was well done, but, as we had no material right in town, and the people in the country did not attend regularly, there were no accessions to the Church at that time. However, I continued the meeting, doing my own preaching out at Holly Grove, about two miles from Braxton, until the next Thursday. The results of this meeting were 6 accessions by vows. I am doing what I can to get our people to take the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Yours fraternally,

C. H. HERRING, P. C.

THE BROOKHAVEN REVIVAL.

My Dear Dr. Meek: Dr. S. W. Walker, of Huntington, W. Va., one of our General Evangelists, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Boyd, of Atlanta, Ga., closed a fifteen days' meeting in the First Methodist Church at Brookhaven, Miss., on September 31. This meeting was a great success in every particular.

Dr. Walker's preaching is of a high order, free from sensation, abusiveness, or any suggestion of coarseness. He lays strong emphasis upon the fundamentals of the Gospel and gets gratifying results. He has a clear grasp of the teachings of Christ and presents His truths strongly and attractively. He is free from angles or hobbies, but deeply spiritual and strikingly practical. He presents the claims of Jesus so as to make it easy to love Him and reasonable and desirable to follow Him. He knows human nature, especially man's nature. He got the ear of the people from the start and held their interest to the last. The large congregations which heard him from day to day returned again and again with the same eager interest in his messages. His coming was a benediction. The church was revived and brought to a new and better consecration of itself to Christ. The community was moved under the impact of the old-time gospel and brought to appreciate the power of its truths. Sinners were converted and the whole church blessed. Many united with the church and others were converted.

Dr. Walker, the preacher, and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, musicians, singers and personal workers, are the most satisfactory, normal and efficient helpers I have ever worked with. We shall be glad to have them again, often and anywhere, for this character of work. Without reservation, I underwrite for them and heartily commend them to any pastor or congregation as in every respect equal to the best. Their services will please, inspire, and do lasting good. They are not out for money—in fact, never mentioning personal finances—but are after saving lost men and women and building up the Kingdom of God.

Fraternally yours,
CHAS. W. CRISLER.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The following letter will explain itself:

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 15, 1917.

Rev. E. L. Alford, R. R. Secretary, Mississippi Conference, Centreville, Miss.

Dear Sir: Your request for reduced rate arrangements for the above meeting of the Mississippi Annual Conference has had the careful consideration of the interested carriers and they have each, through a proper traffic officer, notified me that in view of the fact that the probable attendance will not be sufficient to justify publishing special fares, they do not find themselves in a position to take favorable action on the application. Regretting the necessity for this unfavorable reply, I am,

Very respectfully,
W. H. HOWARD,
Chairman.

TREASURER'S NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brethren: As your treasurer, I would appreciate it very much if you would send me the money for the following assessments on your charge: Bishops, Conference Claimants, Delegates, and Superannuate Endowment Fund, by or before Nov. 15, in order that I may do the most of my work at home before going to Conference. Your prompt response will be greatly appreciated.

IS SOUTHERN METHODISM ABOUT TO BE DISMEMBERED AND ABSORBED?

Dr. John M. Moore, an influential member of the Unification Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, stated in a public address at Lake Junaluska, N. C., a few weeks ago, that the Commissions representing the two Episcopal Methodisms had come to a satisfactory understanding concerning three-fourths of the matters involved in the union negotiations; that he had no doubt that a full agreement concerning all other things will be reached at the meeting to be held in Savannah, Ga., the last of next January; that our General Conference, which is to meet in Atlanta, Ga., next May will endorse the plan for merging the two Churches, and that the scheme formulated will be ratified by the Annual Conferences the year succeeding; that a special session of the Northern General Conference will be called, at which the action of the Joint Commission will be approved, and that the Annual Conferences of the Church, North, will likewise sustain it; so that in 1920 the two Churches will meet as one in their first General Conference. Since he made this statement at Lake Junaluska, Dr. Moore has in substance repeated it at Niagra Falls, N. Y., before a great audience of Northern Methodists, where Dr. E. H. Rawlings, one of the Secretaries of our Board of Missions, also spoke, declaring that if the Northern Church would not take union on his terms, he was ready to take it on their terms. Nor is Dr. Moore alone among our Commissioners in affirming that a speedy union of the two Churches is positively assured and that we may as well begin to get ready for the glorious celebration. There are others who are known to have expressed similar views and who are quite happy over the prospective merger.

Since, according to these gentlemen, the days of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as an autonomous organization are numbered, and the end of her splendid career is near at hand, it is but natural that those who constitute her membership should be keenly anxious to know something definite about the terms of this union into which she is so soon to be rushed. We are reliably informed that at the session of the Joint Commission at Traverse City, Michigan, last June, a motion was made to give all the facts, including the reports of the Sub-Committees, to the two Churches through the Church papers, and that this motion precipitated a lengthy and spirited discussion, the outcome of which was in the nature of a compromise—a committee being appointed to prepare a statement that was to go to the Churches, and the publication of the "condensed minutes" of the sessions at Traverse City being ordered as a further means of conveying information. The statement just referred to (dealing only in indefinite generalities) was duly made; but up to this good hour the "condensed minutes" that the Joint Commission, by emphatic action, ordered to be printed have not yet appeared. By whose authority they have been withheld from the Methodist public, we do not know. NO EXPLANATION OF HOW OR WHY THIS REQUIREMENT OF THE JOINT COMMISSION HAS NOT BEEN EXECUTED HAS BEEN MADE TO ITS SOUTHERN MEMBERS WHO ARE CONSIDERED CONSERVATIVE, AND WHO WERE CHIEFLY INSTRUMENTAL IN HAVING THIS ACTION TAKEN. Let it be remembered, in this connection, that fully four months have elapsed since the Traverse City meeting adjourned, and that seemingly it would require only a very brief time for the Secretaries to condense the minutes and get them in form for the press.

Northern Papers Have Been Talking.

But while this explicit order of the Joint Commission has not been executed, information as to the proceedings at Traverse City has not been entirely restricted to the unilluminating general statement that was officially issued. The Northern Methodist papers, though not printing specifically any of the reports that were submitted, have had a good deal to say about what was done and what is in prospect. The Central Christian Advocate (Kansas City), soon after the adjournment of the Commission, touched upon the status of the Bishops, the Regional Conference arrangement, and other matters in a manner to give pretty good hints concerning them; and nearly all the official organs of the Church, North, have had something to say about what was done in the way of providing for the Negro Methodists of their denomination and what was foreshadowed concerning their relation to the proposed unified Church in the final outcome. So, in view of the fact that the claim is confidently made that we are to be hurried into an organic union with the Northern Methodists, and that the journals of the Methodist Episcopal Church have taken the liberty of disclosing in some measure what was done at Traverse City, we are moved to make some statements concerning the trend of the union deliberations to the members of our Church. There was an agreement among the Commissioners at the close of their last meeting that, though the full proceedings of the Commission would not be published, they need not consider themselves so gagged that they might not give others some idea of the general developments that had taken place

Our People Have a Right to Know.

Hence, without any improper prying into things upon our part we have come into possession of certain important facts to which we think the great body of our people are legitimately entitled, in time for them to weigh them carefully and to circumvent the movements that are in progress if they should adjudge it to be wise to do so. Why should they be kept in the dark, while others outside of the Commission know what is going on? Have they not been the real builders of Southern Methodism, and is it not THEIR Church? Is not its humblest communicant the part owner of every institution and building in our wide-reaching Connection, and is he not entitled to exert his influence as he may think proper in the settlement of this momentous question? It is no satisfactory answer to this inquiry to say that any plan of union that may be passed upon by the approaching General Conference, will have to be approved finally by the Annual Conferences. In the first place, the Annual Conferences are in no adequate sense representative of our more than two million members—there being in them only about 8000 preachers and a few hundred laymen (and these are not chosen by the body of the people.) And, in the second place, THERE IS A POSSIBILITY THAT THE APPROACHING GENERAL CONFERENCE MIGHT SO INVOLVE AND ENTANGLE THE CHURCH THAT, WHATEVER THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES MIGHT SUBSEQUENTLY DO, SERIOUS DISASTER, IF NOT RUIN, WOULD INEVITABLY FOLLOW. In view of the situation that exists, for the General Conference to declare itself one way concerning this tremendous issue, and the Annual Conferences another, as any man who can think at all must see, would be to strike Southern Methodism a staggering blow, from which it would take her a long time to recover, if indeed she should ever do so.

With the question of the very existence of their Church, with any sort of separate identity and autonomy, involved; with the title and control of all their church property, reaching up into the hundreds of millions of dollars, at stake, and with the issue as to whether the peculiar and unparalleled social conditions in the South proper are to be wisely safeguarded, to be determined, we hold that the masses of our people have a right to know at this crucial time how the union proceedings are shaping themselves and what is in contemplation. Therefore, with an impelling sense of the obligation that we owe them as one of the editors of the Church in this epochal hour, we shall proceed to set forth the present status of the union negotiations concerning some of the most important things involved, as we understand them. Of course, we believe our information to be correct—otherwise we would not give it out—but if it should be authentically shown that we are in error at any point, we will gladly make correction. It may be said that all that has been done by the Commission up to the present time is "tentative" and yet subject to change; but, while this may be so, it is none the less true that Dr. Moore and a number of other Commissioners set great store by it; and it must be admitted that "tentative" conclusions and preliminary reports are sufficient to show the drift of things and to indicate the probable culmination, if any agreement at all is reached.

I.

The General Conference.

The Report of the Sub-Committee on Conferences was considered by the full Joint Commission at Traverse City, except as to the number and boundaries of the Regional Conferences; so what the General Conference of the proposed unified Church is to be, came pretty clearly into view.

(a) It is to consist of one House, instead of two, as was recommended by the former Joint Commission and by our General Conference. (Thus this safeguard against hasty and hurtful legislation which all the States of the Union and our National

RECOMPENSE.

(We shall not know for several years to what extent literature has been enriched by the great war through whose gloom and bloodshed we are now passing. Every few days we see something fine that has come from the heart and brain of some soldier in the trenches. The latest is the following, which, entitled "Recompense," was written on one of the battlefields of the Somme by a Canadian soldier.)

Although I do not know God's wondrous ways,
Yet I believe from out life's puzzling maze
I shall be brought.
He knows.

I do not ask to see the journey's end,
For He walks at my side just like a friend.
So all is well.
He sees.

I will not care, though roads are long and rough,
Sure will His grace sustain, and that's enough
To hear me up.
He cares.

I would not he my own guide if I might,
But rather trust to His unerring sight
To lead me on.
He guides.

I could not guard myself, for that were vain;
Yet this I know: He faithful will remain
And keep me safe.
He guards.

I would not live when done my task is here,
For I can heed His summons without fear.
He died for me.
He lives.

So when from scenes of earth He beckons hence
To fairer realms, 'twill he sweet recompense,
Forevermore,
With Him.
—Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE TRUTH.

Over the triple doorway of the Cathedral of Milan there are three inscriptions spanning the splendid arches. Over one is carved a beautiful wreath of roses, and underneath is the legend, "All that pleases is hut for a moment." Over the other is sculptured a cross, and these are the words beneath, "All that troubles us is but for a moment." But underneath the great central entrance, in the main aisle, is the inscription, "That only is important which is eternal."—From the Christian World Pulpit.

WHAT HINDERS?

The one reason why the Christian worker of today so often fails is because of the sore spot in his life—the thing he does not want to talk about, or have anyone else talk about. It may be love of ease, or it may be seeking worldly applause; it may be a desire for worldly gain, or it may be sensitiveness or an unforgiving disposition—some one thing that is constantly causing irritation whenever the Master speaks. Until that thing is removed, there will be neither joy nor fruitfulness in Christian service. The Master Himself must put away the thing which is causing the trouble.—W. H. Hopkins.

"THINGS IMPOSSIBLE WITH MEN."

We have not to travel far before we meet the impossible. We soon reach the end of the short road of "the possible," and then the impossible looms before us! It is possible to restrain a man from crime; it is impossible to restrain him from sin. We can compel a man to pay his income tax; it is impossible to compel him to be generous. We can readjust a man's circumstances; we cannot renew a man's heart. We can educate; we cannot regenerate. We can refurnish a man's mind; we cannot give him the mind of Christ. We can give him courtesy; we cannot endow him with grace. We may give him good manners; we cannot make him a good man. We may save him from worldly excesses; we cannot make him immune from the contagion of the world. We may "patch up a bad job," but we have no power of new creation.—J. H. Jowett, D. D.

WHY I BELIEVE IN THE VIRGIN BIRTH.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Since the days of Celsus, the pagan foe of Christianity, in the second century, there have been men who denied and derided belief in the virgin birth of Jesus Christ; but in recent years a considerable number, professing and calling themselves Christians, have united in rejecting that part of the creed which affirms that he was "conceived by the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary."

1. I believe in the virgin birth of Jesus Christ because two of the four Gospels explicitly declare it, and nothing in the other two, or in any part of the New Testament, leads me to doubt what they say. The Gospels of Matthew and Luke, including their accounts of the nativity, are found in every unblemishing manuscript of the New Testament of which we have any knowledge, and in all the great versions. The most ancient and revered of the fathers testify to them as we have them. Every modern discovery has tended to confirm the genuineness and integrity of the sacred records.

If Jesus did not enter the world as Matthew and Luke say he did, it must follow that he was the natural son of Joseph and Mary, or that he had an illegitimate origin, as Celsus, followed by Voltaire and Haeckel, had the baseness to affirm. With neither of these records would the records of Mark and John harmonize, if the records of Matthew and Luke had never been written. Much has been made of the failure of Mark and John to say anything concerning the virgin birth; but their omitting the facts of the nativity can be satisfactorily explained. The men who have made so much of what the second and fourth Gospels omit on this subject seem to overlook the fact that what they contain harmonizes with the record of the nativity given by Matthew and Luke, as it does not with any other theory of how Jesus came among men.

Why does Mark use this form of speech in recording the talk of the astonished multitudes concerning Jesus: "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, and brother of James, and Joses, and of Judas and Simon?" (Mark vi. 3.) How would any naturalistic theory of the origin of Jesus chime with these great words of St. John: "And the Word became flesh, and tabernacled among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth?" Would the beloved disciple have written thus of a bastard or of a natural son of Joseph?

In like manner the writings of St. Paul imply the virgin birth, and cannot be reasonably harmonized with any other theory. Can we conceive of Paul writing to the Philippians concerning Christ after the manner of the famous passage in the second chapter of that Epistle, if he had believed that Jesus came into the world as other men? Mark his words concerning the Incarnate One: "Who, being in the form of God, did not reckon his equality with God a thing to be clung to; but emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him the name which is above every name; that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things on earth and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Phil. ii. 6-11.) Put this passage alongside the words in St. Matthew's account of the nativity, and say what they suggest: "As she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." (Matt. i. 21.)

And there are many other passages in the writings of St. Paul which look in the same direction, as, for example, I Timothy iii. 16, which we cannot examine within the limits set for this article.

2. I believe in the virgin birth of Jesus Christ because, without his supernatural entrance into the world at his birth and his miraculous exit from it hy resurrection and ascension, what is left of the evangelistic records is an insolvable remainder more incredible than all miracles whatsoever. All attempts to eliminate the records of the nativity and the resurrection from the Gospels have resulted in leaving behind dismembered materials, inexplicable and incredible.

3. I believe in the virgin birth of Jesus Christ because the Church of Christ from apostolic times, in all its branches and divisions (the Ebonites excepted), has always accepted and proclaimed the virgin birth as an unquestionable fact and as an article of its faith. If we deny and discredit so essential a feature of faith, which "the Holy Church throughout the world doth acknowledge" in all the centuries, what may we regard in Christianity as settled truth?

It is to be feared that some modern writers underrate the intelligence and honesty of the leaders of the primitive Church and the post-apostolic times, and overrate their own ability and sincerity. It is difficult to conceive of how the Gospels of Matthew and Luke have been able to win and hold their places in the sacred writings, which are accepted hy all the divisions of the Church of Christ, unless we attribute to the body of the faithful in all ages an incredihle degree of folly or falsehood, or both.

We are told rather frequently that modern scholarship is all on the side of the denial of the virgin birth. The statement is unsupported by facts, but supposing it true, what shall we say when modern scholars are confronted by unvarying testimony of all the ancient Churches? Have modern scholars not been confronted by the unvarying testimony of all the ancient Churches? Have modern scholars any advantage over the ancient Churches in settling a matter of fact in the life of Christ? Are they more devout? Have they access to more reliable "sources?"

It is scarcely "scientific" to undertake to determine a question of fact by a majority vote, even in a plebiscite of "modern scholars." But if we must have a vote, shall we challenge the ballots of such men as Luthardt, Delitsch, Godet, Dorner, Lightfoot, Sanday, Wescott, Gore, Ramsey, and Fairbairn? Have not the caps and gowns of a phantom scholarship been used long enough as masques with which to frighten a certain type of timid minds from their adhesion to orthodox Christianity? Is heresy to be held as the hallmark of scholarship?

4. I believe in the virgin birth of Jesus Christ because it is essential to the doctrine of the incarnation, and without belief in the incarnation our faith and our preaching are emptied of their Christian significance. The attempt to make it appear that belief in the virgin birth is not essential to Christian faith is illogical, unscriptural, and utterly delusive. Because this or that man is able to maintain some sort of hold on parts of the Gospel after he has renounced this or that fact of the evangelic record and continue an orderly life after he has maimed his faith, it does not follow that such a course would be safe for most men. That a man in a shipwreck escapes by clinging to a broken spar is not a good reason for going to sea on nothing but a fragment of a mast. The disposition to put faith on a minimum ration in order to demonstrate how little it can live on is a hazardous thing. There is no scripture for compelling the soul to fast.

5. I believe in the virgin birth of Jesus Christ because I cannot believe that the triumphs of Christianity, won in many lands down the ages, have been achieved by a Church so foolish or so fraudulent as must have been the case if this cardinal article in the creed is untrue. If the faith of the universal Church contains a superstition so false, then by a succession of deluded fanatics or dishonest ecclesiasts has been wrought the greatest work on behalf of mankind. If this be true, the motive for pursuing the truth is utterly taken away; for it is evident, if such is the case, that folly is more forcible than fact, and fraud more useful than truth.

There is a duty and a glory in little faithfulnesses. There is a peril and a shame in little sins.—Frederic W. Farrar.

DENOMINATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK IN RELATION TO THE INTERDENOMINATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

The above subject, which might be otherwise stated as "The Primary Responsibility of the Denomination for the Development of Its Own Sunday School Work," has been discussed in the columns of the Advocate for the past four or five years, and, since some have thought that I have been radical in my convictions and utterances on this question, I am herein giving to the public some excerpts from the action of the Conference of Chairmen of Sunday School Boards and Field Workers which convened at Lake Junaluska, N. C., in July of this year.

Here, then, are some of the things which they have to say (capitals mine): "First of all, we wish to register our appreciation for the great and providential work which the International Sunday School Association has accomplished since its organization. It came into being at a time when there was little appreciation on the part of the denominations of the possibilities of the Sunday school movement, and of the fundamental responsibility of the Churches in the field of religious instruction." Now, in all that I have written, I have expressed my gratitude to the Interdenominational Association for its work in the past, but at the same time I have contended, from the start, that its day of usefulness is gone, never to return. This is, as may be seen from the above quotation, precisely the attitude of the Chairmen of Sunday School Boards.

Following the above statement, these denominational Sunday school experts have this to say: "To-day the churches of North America have become aroused to a new appreciation of the place of religious education, and of its fundamental nature in relation to the whole work of the Church. As a RESULT it necessarily follows that the denominations feel a responsibility for this task such as they have never felt before. It is an obligation resting upon the DENOMINATIONS, and too great either to be neglected or turned over to ANY OTHER AGENCY. Furthermore, it has become increasingly evident that thorough-going and efficient Sunday school work throughout the entire reach of the DENOMINATION can be accomplished ONLY through and by means of the ORGANIZATION of the DENOMINATION ITSELF, and by its UNDIVIDED co-operation and backing." Could language be stronger than this? While, in all that I have had to say concerning the International Association, I have, in no uncertain terms, contended for undivided denominational loyalty to our own Sunday school work, I do not think I have ever been able to express myself in more emphatic words than those here given as coming from these Chairmen of Sunday School Boards.

After stating how the various denominations have united in co-operative Sunday school work, these same men say: "As a result of the foregoing, it naturally follows that there has been a CHANGE in the NATURE of the work of the International Sunday School Association and the State Associations. Since the initiative has been assumed by the denominations, and the UNDERSTANDING has been effected with the Interdenominational Association that their work and that of the State Associations is to be CONFINED to Sunday school work in ACCORDANCE WITH the DENOMINATIONAL PLANS AND STANDARDS, their work is PROPERLY that of the PROMOTION of these DENOMINATIONAL PLANS. There are some of our people, as well as some of the DIRECTORS AND WORKERS of the State Associations who do not seem to UNDERSTAND the CHANGED RELATION." This arrangement enables "the denominations to manage their own affairs without confusing INTERFERENCE from WITHOUT, and to reach their own people more effectively than can possibly be reached through ANY OTHER AGENCY." It will be seen from these words that if the State Associations of the International Association have any work left for them, it is merely to promote denominational plans and standards, and since, as a Church, we are capable of promoting our own work, there is really no room in the Sunday school field for the State Associations.

With the wide view of the Sunday school field which their positions afford them, the Chairmen of our Sunday School Boards and Field Workers close their appeal for denominational loyalty in our Sunday school work in these words: "In view of the NEW situation as set forth above, and of the enlarged Sunday school program of our Church, we call upon ALL our people to lend their hearty and loyal support to the Sunday school plans and policies of THEIR Church."

These men who hold the leadership in the Sunday school work of our Church have bravely spoken their convictions on this vital question; and now that at our approaching Annual Conference it is expected that, because of the resignation of our present Field Secretary, a new man will be put in the field, it is to be hoped that our own Conference Sunday School Board will give to the public an unqualified expression of its own attitude on our denominational Sunday school work in its relation to the work of the State Association. I wish to say that NOTHING LESS will satisfy those pastors who agree with me and who will be called upon for their support of the man whom the Board will place in the field when our Conference meets at Vicksburg.

In closing, permit me to say that when I began the agitation of this question about five years ago there was, so far as I have been able to learn, but little sentiment one way or the other, but now it is practically solid for the loyal support of our own Sunday school work instead of giving support to the State Association—excepting, of course, a few sporadic cases of spineless loyalty. Furthermore, in all my discussion of the relation of our own Sunday school work to the work of the Interdenominational Association and its subdivision, the State Association, I have only anticipated the strong expression of the Chairmen of Sunday School Boards and Field Workers. Those of us who stand on the platform of denominational loyalty rejoice that we now have the leadership of these expert Sunday school men, and, as long as they are headed in the direction in which they have started, we shall be glad to follow all the way.

In addition to the quoted statements of these Sunday school experts, our General Sunday School Board, in a pamphlet, entitled "Some Facts and an Appeal," says: "Thousands of our strong Sunday schools make liberal contributions to the International Sunday School Association. But no outside agency can reach the rank and file of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." To which, let all loyal Methodists say, "Amen!"

THE GREAT REUNION.

The great National Memorial Reunion with all of its speechifying, love making, official balls, and street dances has come and gone. The agony is over, and, if it has resulted in our knowing each other better, then it will result, if Mr. Lamar was correct, in our loving each other more, and therefore it was worth all it cost. The blue and the gray mingled together freely, and swapped stories of hairbreadth escapes and recounted deeds of heroism. There were estimated to be about 7000 present in all—mostly from the West and of the Blue. Every public utterance was full of patriotism, and the spirit of the present hour.

Where does history record such a gathering of former foes, of men who faced each other in the grip of war meeting in a great jollification? Certainly not by those who fought with Washington and Cornwallis, nor by those who followed Wellington and Napoleon. Colonel Newhell, who had the encampment in charge, had worked out every minute detail; so much so, that, based upon former encampments, he had ordered fifty coffins to be in readiness for those who might die; but, while there were many who were feeble of step, it is a unique record that every one of those fifty coffins remain empty. This many claim as a feather for the cause of prohibition, for Uncle Sam had issued his orders to our near-by Island saloon, and our city officials saw the necessity of the greater vigilance at that point. A veteran who attended the Gettysburg Reunion, where the open saloon existed and where there were deaths by the score, in drawing the contrast ascribed the great difference to the absence of the saloon. One of our own city said to me, "You know I've never been a prohibitionist, but this experience has convinced me of the value of prohibition." Thus has it ever been that truth is mighty and will prevail. But, Doctor, our whole community is tired, and needs no special definition of the word "strenuous." We've been in the midst of some kind of "drive," answering all sorts of appeals since the early spring. And now we are driving towards our approaching Conference with accelerated momentum. We look for the Editor of the Adovcate without fail.

By the way, here comes the postman with your last number, and I call off for a time. A good issue! Sam Steel's contribution is interesting and suggestive reading, recalling some experiences, notably one upon a steamer upon an eastern river, where were people of all colors and from all sections. An elderly couple from Ohio were aboard and after several efforts in vain to reach the lunch counter, which was crowded with Negroes calling for everything in sight, in disgust, the woman complained of the ill behavior of the colored gentry, to which Mrs. H. replied, "If we were in the South you would see nothing of that." "Yes, said our fellow-travelers from the Buckeye State; "You people in Mississippi know how to manage the Negro; we of Ohio make fools of them;" and during the recent Reunion, what was my surprise to hear more than one from north of Mason's and Dixon's line say that the next great question for our own country to settle would be the race question! I am confident that when that issue shall arise it will require all the preaching and teaching of peace and patience that the Church can command, but why there should be a coalescing of the Churches to accomplish that end, I cannot see.

While externally all was good fellowship during the great Reunion, it would slip out occasionally that the South was still due to make some kind of apology for the unpleasantness of '61 to '65. And while I may not claim much historical lore, it has been impressed upon me that in every move from '44 to this good day the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been viewed as being under a similar obligation. Now, I yield to no one in readiness to acknowledge a wrong and apologize for the same; but when others are as guilty, or more so, neither charity nor expediency can overlook the fact. But Steel says that unification is passing like a mirage; then why waste my paper, your patience, and the time of your readers further? So mote it be.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

TO MY MOTHER.

By Jas. F. Dorrah.

Out of the crucible of loss,
The fierce, white-heat of griefs and pains
My heart stands purged of all its dross,
And only love's pure gold remains.

Until the moment came to prove,
Mother of mine, I never knew
How much to me was mother-love,
How all my heart belonged to you.

You shall not bear your cross alone;
This loving heart shall hold you fast,
And in the future will atone
For all the errors of the past.

Trust Him who chastens but to bless,
Whose love is sorrow's sweet surcease,
Whose ways are ways of pleasantness,
And all whose paths are paths of peace.

His messengers of love will come,
With balm of healing on their wings,
And o'er the valley of the tomb
Hope's radiant angel soars and sings,

As Ruth of old, what ere betide,
Your portion shall my portion be,
My place henceforth is by thy side,
And naught but death part thee and me.

Madison, Miss.

AN EXPLANATION.

Dear Dr. Meek: It seems that explanations are the order of the day. My name is mentioned as one of the signers of the "Laymen's Address." I wish to say that I received the circular letter sent out to a number of laymen. I glanced at it hurriedly. The object seemed to be a desire for some changes that were thought would be for progress. I am always for progress if it is along right lines, and without investigating further I authorized my name to be used, not knowing fully what would be said. I was away most of the summer and missed my Advocates and have never yet read the Address. I don't even yet know what was in it. It must be something "dreadful," judging from the anathemas brought down upon it in the papers. I was uncompromisingly against holding on to Vanderbilt any longer. I think its benefit to our Church for ten years previous had been doubtful, owing to some teachings that emanated therefrom. I did not suspect this movement was from that source and hope yet it will not prove to be the origin.

I was on the committee in the last General Conference to get up the legislation for the laymen's movement and we were unanimous in our recommendations except at one point: that was to make the quadrennial boards ex-officio members of the Annual Conferences. I was the only man that raised a voice in the committee against that paragraph. I finally succeeded in getting one other layman to agree with me. I served notice I would bring in a minority report. My argument was that the presiding elders generally nominated these boards and that it would put too much power in the hands of presiding elders, since they would nominate most of the laymen to be elected to membership in the Annual Conference, and, already having much power over the pastors, they would practically have the Annual Conference in their own hands. After all the legislation was agreed upon but this point, a good friend of mine, a prominent layman from Macon, Ga., came and asked me as a personal favor not to bring in a minority report as it might get up a discussion and endanger the passage of the balance of the legislation on lay activities. In deference to him, I agreed not to bring in a minority report, but predicted it would not pass. Sure enough, this was the only paragraph in this recommendation of the laymen's committee that was questioned and it was promptly and by an overwhelming majority voted down. All other paragraphs passed without question. I was thus vindicated in my stand, although I did not have to say one word on the Conference floor.

The law was passed to make the district lay leaders members o fthe Annual Conference, and I still think this was a good law, because it added only one delegate from each district and he was elected by the same body that elected the other lay delegates to the Annual Conference, so that when a layman voted for a district lay leader they would know they were voting for a delegate to the Annual Conference at the same time. This would not be ex-officio membership in the fullest sense of the word. I am opposed to ex-officio membership as a rule.

Of course, this part of our legislation was voted down by the Annual Conference, composed largely of preachers, and they generaly explained that it was not because tbey opposed more laymen being in the Annual Conference, but because of the ex-officio feature. I believe if the proper presentation by the right parties had been made at the Annual Conferences this law might have passed. The General Conference passed it by practically a unanimous vote. Not a voice was raised against it, if I remember correctly. If suitable persons had championed its cause in a right way I believe it would have been ratified by the Conferences, I believe a larger representation of laymen in the Annual Conferences would be a blessing to the laymen and they in turn could be a blessing to the Church. It is argued that those who are elected do not always attend; yet that is no argument against more lay representation. If it were made more attractive for them by putting more work upon them and having more meetings for the deepening of the spiritual life more would

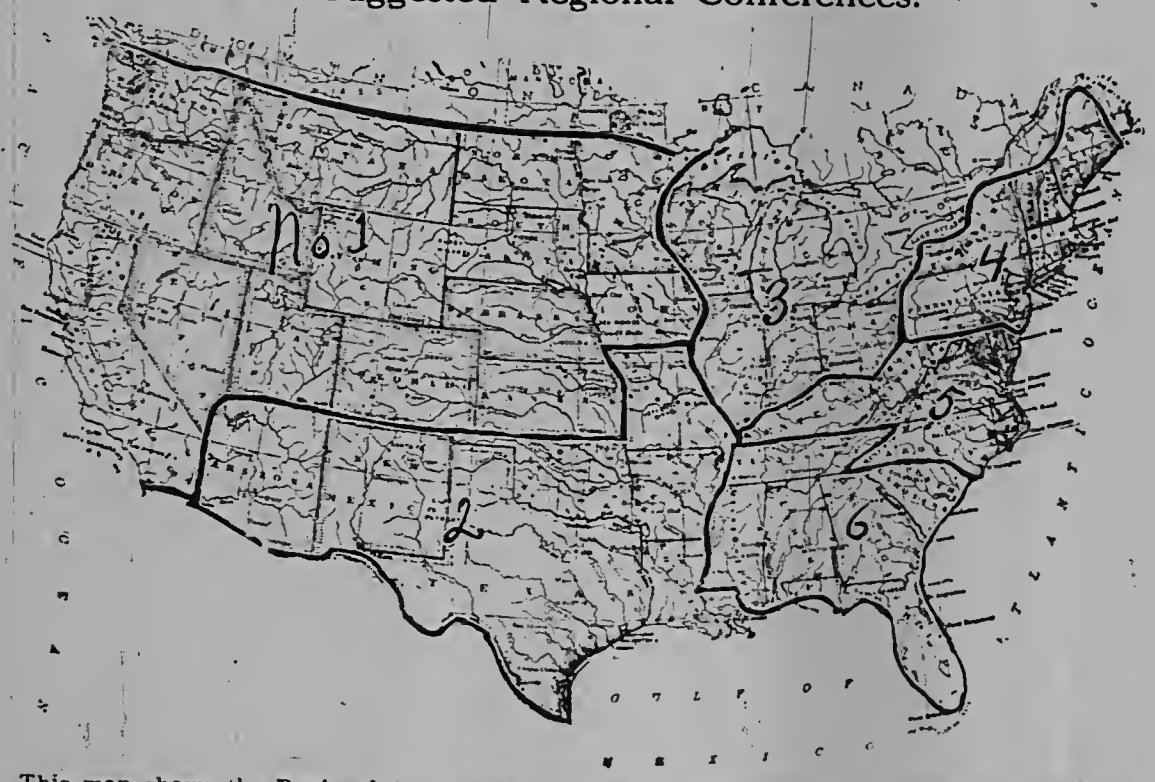
The Suggested Regional Conferences.



This map shows the Regional Conference arrangement recommended to the Joint Commission on Unification by the Sub-Committee having the matter in hand. As will be seen, it literally chops the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to pieces in the very heart of its territory. Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, and Missouri go into one jurisdiction; Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, and North Carolina into another; and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, and Alabama into still another. And between these segments there would be no special connecting bond whatever.

IS SOUTHERN METHODISM ABOUT TO BE DISMEMBERED AND ABSORBED?

Government adjudges to be wise, and which was felt to be particularly needful as a protection in uniting the two Churches, is to be swept away). Each Regional Conference is to be assigned a number of delegates in proportion to its numerical strength, but the said delegates are to be elected by the Annual Conferences, as they are at present in the Churches, North and South.

(b) The powers of the General Conference in the unified Church (actual and potential) would be quite as large over all its territory (with the possible exception of the Missionary Regional Conferences) as the Church, South, now has over her territory. That is to say, the new General Conference would have quite as much power(actual and potential) over all the affairs of Southern Methodism as our present General Conference has. The following are some of the things it would exercise power over: 1. It may fix the conditions of Church membership, the qualifications of all ministers of various grades, the powers of Church, Quarterly, Annual Conferences, Missions, and Mission Conferences. 2. It may fix the duties and powers of the Bishops, making them uniform, indicate to each (regular) Regional Conference how many it may name, and confirm (or by a two-thirds vote reject) them, retire them, and, under certain restrictions, transfer them from one Regional Conference to another. 3. It has power to do as it may please with the hymnal and ritual of the Church, and to regulate all matters pertaining to the mode of worship. 4. To control all the larger connectional enterprises of the Church. 5. It may, under certain limitations of a minor character which may easily be overcome, divide or consolidate the (regular) Regional Conferences, or make new ones. 6. IT WILL HAVE THE OWNERSHIP AND CONTROL OF ALL PROPERTY THROUGHOUT THE CHURCH, INCLUDING ALL ITS BRANCHES.

(c) The general Restrictive Rules protect the Articles of Religion, the General Superintendency, and a few other things just about as they do at present in the Disciplines of the two Churches. Whether a Bishop may be set aside at will by the General Conference—the point that was at issue when the Church was divided in 1844—we do not know; but it is our impression that he could. If asked for by a majority of two Regional Conferences, the vote on a pending question (except a constitutional amendment) shall be taken by Regional delegations, the members thereof voting as one body, and it would require a concurrence of a majority of the Regional Conferences to pass it.

II.

The Regional Conferences.

(a) Instead of the three white Regional Conferences recommended by the former Joint Commission, the Sub-Committee having the matter in hand recommended the creation of six, as follows:

1. Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota, California, Hawaii, and Alaska. In this Regional Conference, according to the United States Government statistics, gathered in 1906, and published in 1910 (we use these because they are so arranged that the Negroes included in the M. E. Church figures can easily be eliminated), there are 526,705 white Northern Methodists, and 19,322 Southern Methodists.

2. New Mexico, Arizona, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, and Louisiana. White Northern Methodists, 114,884; Southern Methodists, 494,864.

3. Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana. White Northern Methodists, 927,239; Southern Methodists, 8016.

4. Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and New York. Northern White Methodists, 864,621; Southern Methodists, 868 (these are in Pennsylvania).

5. Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, District of Columbia, Kentucky, and North Carolina. White Northern Methodists, 190,148; Southern Methodists, 477,113.

6. South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama. White Northern Methodists, 47,250; Southern Methodists, 655,758.

Let it be noted that the Regional Conferences in which the Northern Church would be in the ascendency are much the stronger numerically, and that that Church would have a considerable contingent in numbers 2 and 5, in which the Southern Methodists would be in the lead—114,884 in the former, and 190,148, considerably more than a fourth of the membership, in the latter. On the other hand, in the New England Section (number 4), the Church, South, would have only 868 members, only a little over 8000 in number 3, and less than 20,000 in number 1. The accompanying map will give a view of the Regional Conferences according to the suggestions of the Sub-Committee.

(b) As to the membership and powers of these Regional Conferences, we will not at this time speak. It is said that they may have legislative power over all local matters; but the enumerated powers of the General Conference show that they could amount to very little more than restricted powers of administration over a prescribed territory. And, as has been stated, the General Conference may, under certain minor limitations, rearrange or multiply these bodies. They have no indestructible stability, the General Conference being potentially supreme over them.

III.

Status of the Negro.

The Committee on the Status of the Negro in the suggested new Church made a divided report at Traverse City, which was not taken up for consideration by the Joint Commission. Seven members reported in favor of placing the colored members of the Northern Church in an Associate General Conference. The relations of this body to the white General Conference and its General Boards were very indefinitely defined. It is clear, however, that it recommended that no Negroes be allowed to sit in the white General Conference; but it was proposed to establish a General Judicial Conference (not Council or Court), made up of representatives from the General Conference of the white Church and all Associate General Conferences (there would be several of these, including, besides that set up for the Negroes, those established in the mission fields). The General Judicial Conference would review all legislation passed by the white General Conference and the Associate General Conferences, and could by a two-thirds vote suspend any act of which it disapproved until the next meeting of the body that passed it, when it would become a nullity unless again adopted by that body by a two-thirds vote, in which event it would become a law for the body taking that action. In case, however, the Judicial Conference should disapprove of a measure on constitutional grounds, it would have to take the course prescribed for questions of that character. This arrangement, it should be noted, would have the colored members in the Judicial Conference to aid in passing upon all legislation of the United Church (including the white branch), as well as exercising judicial functions upon constitutional questions. This, too, when there is not a colored man upon the Supreme Bench of any Southern State, or that of the United States (or for that matter, so far as we know, of even any Northern State). This adjustment, of course, would make the Negroes an integral part of the new Church, thus trampling underfoot the specific recommendation of our General Conference.

From this report of the majority of this Sub-Committee (signed, as stated, by 7 members), a Bishop of our Church (the only one on it) and an able Southern lawyer strongly dissented, declaring that it was glaringly inconsistent to exclude representatives of the Colored Methodists from sitting in the General Conference, and yet give them the right to aid in reviewing all its legislation. It was further asserted in this minority report that the scheme advocated in the report of the majority would be displeasing to the white Methodists of the South; that it would probably be unacceptable to any branch of Negro Methodists in the United States, particularly so to those in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and that the proposed program would tend to stir up discord and division, rather than to promote unity, among the Methodists of America. It was also strongly insisted that the wise thing to do was to place the Negroes in a separate Church, in accordance with the action of our General Conference at Oklahoma City.

But this is not yet the whole story. Dr. R. E. Jones and Dr. 1. Garland Penn, the two colored members of the Northern Commission, were on this Sub-Committee, and they also strongly dissented from the majority report, demanding their full rights, without the slightest abridgement, in the proposed reorganized Church (even seats in the white General Conference.) The paper which they drew up was filed with the Northern Commission, not with the full Joint Commission, as were the other two.

Such is the muddle that the Negro aspect of the unification movement is in. Dr. Joy, the able Editor of the New York Christian Advocate, who is a member of the Commission, has expressed the conviction that the effort to deny the Negroes representation in the white General Conference of the unified Church was given "a knock-out blow" at Traverse City, and there are a number of other Commissioners (some in the North and some in the South) who hold the view that the Church, North, will never yield this point. Indeed, we do not see how they can strip the Negroes of this right unless they should consent to it, and they are showing little disposition to do that. But whatever may be the outcome as to this particular feature, Southern Methodists may as well recognize the fact that all hope of getting the Negroes into a separate church—the thing for which our General Conference declared—is utterly gone. The most that they can hope for is to have them kept in the unified Church, with proportionate representation in the suggested Judicial Conference, exercising such powers as we have described, and perhaps also being placed upon other great administrative Boards. And the probabilities are that this would apply only to the Northern Methodist Negroes—those in the C. M. E. Church (our colored people), in all likelihood, preferring to maintain their independence. Are our people willing to stand for this? In our opinion, if an attempt should be made to put such an arrangement into effect, along with the contemplated plan for the General and Regional Conferences, either it would be overwhelmingly defeated, or there would follow a stormy division of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Some Plain Deductions.

1. If unification were consummated along the lines it is now proceeding upon, there would never be a General Conference of the united Church that would not be dominated by the Northern Methodists. Even if the delegates were apportioned equally among the Regional Conferences and they were to elect them, this would be true, because in two of the Regional jurisdictions in which the Southern Church would be in the lead—Numbers 2 and 5—the Church, North, would have a considerable contingent, which, without the adoption by the stronger Southern element of political methods, such as could not be used by a religious denomination, would be certain to secure some representation. But, as we have already stated, according to our understanding, this is not the plan that is in contemplation. On the contrary, it is proposed to have the delegates assigned to the Regional areas in proportion to their Methodist population and to let the Annual Conferences do the choosing. This would make the control of the Northern Church even more certain, for the areas in which they would predominate are the more populous and doubtless they would be in a majority in a number of the Annual Conferences in the Regional Jurisdictions in which our members would be the more numerous, taking them as a whole.

2. The recommended arrangement of the Regional Conferences would literally chop the Church, South, to pieces, leaving no connecting bond whatever between the dissevered fragments. The South proper would not be kept together at all, as was the design in the original plan of unification. When two bodies, one of which is very much larger than the other, are united, the more the smaller one is carved up, the more nearly the process approaches that of a simple and complete amalgamation. We do not for one moment believe that our last General Conference would have authorized the continuation of the unification negotiations if it had been thought that such a wholesale dismemberment of her territority was a possibility. Not one of the gentlemen now standing for this program who sat in that body so much as even hinted at such a thing. They did not dare to do it.

3. The suggested provision for having the General Conferences to vote by Regional areas, if a majority of the delegates from each of two such Jurisdictions should so request, which seems to be the only attempt to safeguard the interests of the South, is, as we see it, a weak and wholly inadequate arrangement. The thing that chiefly makes this protection an imperative necessity is the presence in the Central South of several millions of Negroes—they are in the majority in some of the States. Now, suppose that the General Conference were to undertake to pass a measure relating to the colored people that the white Methodists in the heart of the South, chiefly grouped in the Regional Conferences numbered 5 and 6, should consider vicious and their representatives should insist upon a vote by Regional areas, what could they hope for from the other area containing a Southern Methodist majority—Number 2? What would the people of New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, and Missouri, with their large white majorities, know or care about the Negro problem? Only last week the St. Louis Christian Advocate oracularly affirmed that no such problem exists. But even if the three Regional Conferences in which the former members of the Church, South, would be the stronger should stand together, all that it would be necessary for the General Conference to do to have its way would be to rearrange the territory of the Regional jurisdictions, or to increase the number of them, since it would have the power to do this. So unstable a safeguard would be a mere rope of sand. As a matter of fact, in the proposals of the Unification Commission, so far as they have become known to us, there is just enough semblance of protection to confuse our people and serve as a kind of lure to lead them into in an alliance (we do not say that this was designed) from which they could never emerge, and in which they would be speedily overwhelmed and utterly obliterated.

Dismemberment and Absorption Now the Issue.

The truth is, it is utterly vain and idle at this stage of the proceedings for any one to talk about being in favor of union according to the Oklahoma City plan. Nearly all the fundamental elements of that plan have been abandoned by the ultra-unionists of our Commission, who are largely in the majority, and the Northern representatives are solidly against it; so it is entirely a thing of the past. The question now before us is, SHALL THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, BE DISMEMBERED AND COMPLETELY ABSORBED? This is the fateful issue that our General Conference will be called upon to face and largely determine next spring.

A PERTINENT FACT.

"I am unwilling as one man," said Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, in a recent address to the Senate, "to debauch the American people in order to raise revenue for the Government. * * * In taxing liquor we merely tax the people who drink liquor and make the liquor dealer our tax collector."

"Is it not as much waste of foodstuff to put it into beer as to put it into whisky?"

WHAT BIG BUSINESS MEN SAY ABOUT PROHIBITION IN TORONTO.

Dry Experiences of Toronto, City of 500,000 People, Told by Members of Toronto Board of Trade.

For the past year the harrooms of the province of Ontario, Canada, adjoining the State of New York on the north, have heen outlawed. Importation of liquors for personal use has not heen stopped, hut there are rigorous regulations covering the way such liquors may be handled by those who get them. Toronto, the chief city of the province, is a second Buffalo for size and hustle. Wishing to know how the chief business men of the city felt about the city's first year without harrooms, letters were sent to the great commercial concerns comprising the Toronto Board of Trade. More than 300 replies had heen received two weeks ago, and there was a practical unanimity in their verdicts.

Here are a few samples of the way they speak:

W. Newman, N. A., of the Polson Iron Works, steel shipbuilders, engineers and boilermakers, Toronto, September 28, 1917:

"In reply, are pleased to make the following statements regarding our own employees: Lost time has heen cut down 80 per cent. Lahor disputes are almost entirely ahsent. The general demeanor of the men is much pleasanter. We would never consent to go back to the old order of affairs."

John F. Ellis, managing director of the Barber-Ellis Co., Ltd., envelope manufacturers and paper dealers, Toronto, Canada, September 29, 1917:

"My experience as to the working of Prohihition in Toronto, is that it has been, thus far, most heneficial, not only in regard to husiness, but also in the life of a great many of the young men of this city, which is far more important. * * * * Throughout the West Prohihition is doing a wonderful work and is more popular with a great number of people than it has been in the past, and the longer it is in force the more determined are the people that the law, as it is, shall remain on the statute books. * * * I hope to see the act remain in force in Ontario for a long time to come."

William H. Shaw, member of Toronto City Board of Control, September 28, 1917:

"I cannot emphasize too strongly my sincere helief that the results of Prohihition in our city are heneficial to our citizens in general, not only from a social hut from a husiness standpoint. * * * I cannot understand how any citizen having the welfare of the community in view could think for a moment of returning to conditions which prevailed under the license system."

John Pearson, insurance hroker, Toronto, September 28, 1917:

"No act has ever done so much for the pubiic welfare. * * * The other day I was calling on a man who is a bailiff in the city, and when asking how he found business, he told me that since Septemher, 1916, it had fallen off more than 60 per cent. Rarely now does he have to put his men in for the collection of rent in the workingmen's homes. They are now owning and not renting. The workingmen's wages find their way into the proper channels, and their chiidren show for it."—The American Issue.

BUYS LIBERTY BONDS.

The Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South, purchased Liberty Bonds to the amount of $10,000 a few days ago, as the following letter shows:

"Louisville, Ky., Oct. 18, 1917.—The Rev. E. L. Powell, D. D., Pastor of First Christian Church, Fourth and Breckinridge, City.—My Dear Dr. Powell: At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held in the office of the board at 1115 Fourth Street, this city, on yesterday, by unanimous vote of the committee I was instructed to subscrihe in the name of the Board for $10,000 worth of Liberty Bonds, and am handing you herewith the subscription.

"Under no Government on the face of the earth has evangelical Christianity had such an opportunity as under the Government of the United State, and the church or churchman who does not appreciate the privileges enjoyed is not worthy the name.

"Our Government is fighting for fundamental principles which the Church stands for, and while this Board is engaged solely in the work of church and parsonage building, having assisted nearly 10,000 needy congregations to secure houses of worship during the thirty-five years of its history, nevertheless it is the unanimous judgment of the gentlemen charged with the responsibility of handiing its large interests that it cannot do less at this time than to have a part in strengthening the hands of the Government in this struggle for the supremacy of the principles dear to the heart of all who are interested in the well-being of the human race.

"Wishing you and your co-iaborers success in your patriotic work, I am, yours sincerely,

"W. F. McMURRY,
"Corresponding Secretary."

J. LOYD DECELL, Treasurer.

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in teiephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must he conserved, and we appeal to the American Puhlic to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

The Home Circle

OUR AVIATOR.

Mrs. Lee Lipscomb.

Away up in heaven's blue
Where the air is pure and sweet,
Our soldier boy is an eagle now
With pinions strong and fleet.

With a brave heart and steady nerve,
He soars far above the trees,
Kissed by snow-white, fleecy clouds
And fanned by the autumn breeze.

He dips and darts and circles 'round,
On the trackless airy way,
Then onward goes with wings outspread
Far over the gleaming bay.

What a marvelous, wonderful age
When men like birds can fly!
It is enough to make the angels gaze
With wonder from on high.

May God protect our flying boys
Wherever they may roam;
And when this awful war is o'er
Bring them safe back home.

Winona, Miss.

BOY VS. MR. YELLOW CAT.

Mr. Big Yellow Cat was extremely fond of birds. He liked birds for breakfast, birds for dinner, and birds for supper. As he was a splendid climber, and swift and noiseless in his movements, he usually had his fill of birds. Why, in the nesting season sometimes he had as many as six extra meals a day.

Yellow-haired Gus was fond of birds, too. He was as happy as a bird when his family moved into the country. He rushed up and down the thriving orchard while Mr. Big Yellow Cat blinked sleepily at him from the wall. He had just eaten four little robins, and felt very happy aud self-satisfied.

Gus threw up his cap into the air. "There's room here for at least a hundred bird families," he gloated.

Mr. Big Yellow Cat gave him a funny little sidelong glance. Perhaps he wondered if Gus was planning to devour the little feather folks also. He may have thought that if this was true he had better take those young catbirds now instead of saving them for breakfast, as he had originally planned.

Gus saw him as he was sneaking out from the tangle of blackberry vines with a little bird in his mouth. Gus charged after him, but Mr. Yellow Cat had a good start, and besides, he was a fine long-distance runner. So he crawled under the barn and ate the little fledgling greedily. Then he thought it safer to go home by another way.

Gus shook his fist at him angrily. "You won't get another one of my baby birds," he half sobbed.

Then he rushed into the house to find father, who was helping mother decide on the best spot for Great-grandfather Adam's portrait. But father was never too busy to help a fellow in trouble.

"How to keep the cats from catching our birds?" he said slowly while he studied the light on the west wall; "no, I don't know. But this afternoon, after I have the rugs down and the pictures and curtains up, we'll call Prof. Sharpe by long-distance telephone and find out."

"I'll stay on guard until then," agreed Gus.

So he rushed back into the orchard just in time to chase away a lean, black cat who was also looking for a plumpy, tender bird.

Mr. Big Yellow Cat watched Gus from a safe distance.

"I'll have to hunt nights after this," he thought. "Boys aren't so smart after all." And he walked away, waving his long, plumy tail gracefully.

Gus's father kept his promise. Their own telephone wasn't in yet, so they had to walk two miles to the store.

"Oh, yes, you can beat the cats," Professor Sharpe told them over the telephone. "Merely nail a strip of zinc or tin around every tree. Or plait a bundle of thorns around the tree trunks and Miss Pussy can't climb them."

Gus smiled from ear to ear. "We'll beat the cruel cats after all," he repeated.

When they got home it was just an hour before supper, but Gus and his father got to work at once. There were some pieces of old tin in the barn, and they nailed pieces of these around the apple trees. Gus ran his fingers over each belted tree.

"Mr. Big Yellow Cat can never crawl over these," he chuckled.

It was light a long time after supper, so Gus worked until it was too dark to see. The last thing he did was to weave a garland of briars around the Bartlett pear tree where Mr. and Mrs. Goldfinch kept house. Then he went into the house and almost fell asleep as he went upstairs to bed, for he was a very tired boy indeed.

Mr. Big Yellow Cat strolled over to the orchard when the lights were out. He sniffed happily as he came to the Bartlett pear tree. He had had his eyes on the young Goldfinches for a day or two. Swiftly and noiselessly he started to climb the tree. Then he stopped short. He snarled a little to himself, for he was an angry cat. Then he attempted the early apple tree. But his velvety paws slipped and he could get no hold on the belt of smooth tin.

Mr. Big Yellow Cat waved his plumy tail angrily to and fro. "I won't hunt here any more," he muttered; "I'll go somewhere else."

And he did. And the grateful robins, finches and bluebirds raised their families in peace. And as for Gus, why, he tamed a whole family of chickadees, and by the time the feathered people were ready to go South they had all agreed that Gus's orchard was the safest nesting-place in the whole country.—Mary Davis, in "Junior Herald."

MY HOUSE O' DREAMS.

By Willie Conger Page.

There is a tall manor house, surrounded by an old-fashioned garden, where the fireflies flit through the shadowy moonlight, and the dulcet notes of the nightingale trill and tremble through the soft night wind, and the perfume from the myriads of open flowers fill the air with fragrance and the heart with rapture. Where it is, I do not know.

Since my earliest remembrance, I have gone to this place in my dreams until now every detail of the arrangement of the garden and the construction and furnishing of the house are as familiar as my own home.

Sometimes weeks, and often months, elapse before my spirit on gossamer clouds, on the wings of the wind, flies away to my Palace o' Dreams. After lingering awhile to enjoy the enchantment of the garden, I always go up four white stone steps to the portal of the house and wait. Slowly the doors swing open and I enter, afraid, for words could never portray the glory, splendor, and sublimity of this dream-house—its tall columns, its white-domed ceilings, its hangings of silver and its golden tapestries.

I wander about in the rooms below and wait, until a figure in white beckons me to come. I ascend the white marble staircase and enter an upper chamber, where, first, I always kneel to pray.

To-night, after trailing my misty garments about the garden, stopping beside the fountain to listen to the music of the trickling waters, I discerned an object lying on the steps. Looking more closely, I found it was a little child. "Some one has forgotten it," I thought. I took it in my arms and went directly to the upper chamber, and, with the child still in my arms, I knelt to give thanks to the Giver of all beautiful things.

Then I sat beside the window and began to sing an old, sweet lullaby. Soon the little one was asleep. I turned back the satin and cobwebby lace coverings of the bed and laid it gently down.

Suddenly the child opened its eyes and smiled. My heart bounded and almost ceased to beat, for it was my own little son, who had been gone so many years.

"Mother," he said so clearly and distinctly that I waked, trembling in an ecstasy of delight.

Often when my body, weary from the worries and cares of the day, lies quietly asleep, my spirit flits away to some century-old cathedral, where I kneel at the chancel to pray, then wander down the dim aisles and recesses, reading inscriptions, the words of which are so clear to memory that I can repeat them when awake.

Oh, the joy, the happiness, the fantasy of dreams!

A GIRL WITHOUT OPPORTUNITIES.

By Priscilla Leonard.

She had "no chance in life," so anyone would have said who met her. She lived in the mountains of West Virginia, sixteen miles from the railroad. She had never traveled on the railroad in her life. She had no money and no education. It would be hard for a city girl to imagine just how plain and rough and hopeless was the lot of this girl in her teens.

But the girl herself had hope. She meant to go to school. The term commenced in September. She had no money for the entrance fee, and no dress fit to travel in, but she had a flock of turkeys. She wrote to the school that she must wait till "her turkeys had growed big enough to sell." That was not until December, and of course the turkeys were sold at far below city prices.

Nevertheless, when the railroad train stopped at the lonely station one December day, it took on a very happy-faced girl as a passenger. She had on a fifty-cent sweater for her winter coat, and her cotton voile dress was more like cheesecloth than anything else. Her tiny box had the scantiest of wardrobes—but she was going to school! She had taken the first step toward a larger life, and to-day she is one of those of whom the school is most proud.

"A girl without opportunities"—she refused to believe it of herself—and she proved against odds that it was not true. Is it really true of anyone who tries?—Christian Intelligencer.

LIFE A BATTLE.

Life is not victory, but battle. Fight on, fight on! The perfect character shall come at last. What will it be to fight no more? Shall we then forget the battles? Shall we then forget our sins? Why should we? Hated, renounced, subdued, let them hang on the walls of memory like the shields of vanquished enemies. Be patient a little longer. By and by in our hushed and waiting chambers, each in his turn, we shall hear the sunset gun.—Roswell Dwight Hitchcock.

TO CONTRIBUTORS.

All copy submitted for publication should be legibly written on one side of the paper with pen and ink, or typewritten. Matter written with a lead pencil and rolled manuscripts are unacceptable. No copy will be returned unless postage is enclosed for that purpose. In no case will responsibility be assumed for the loss or non-return of articles—the writers should keep copies of them. We do not purchase matter of any kind.

THE TIME IS PASSING.

Within a little over a month all three of our patronizing Annual Conferences will have been held, and the valuable prizes the Publisher of the Advocate is offering to those securing subscribers will no longer be within reach. A number of persons have seized this golden opportunity, and without much difficulty (so they report) have secured one or more of the valuable premiums offered on Page 9. You may do likewise, dear reader, if you will try. We should like to have a canvasser for subscriptions in every community.

MEETING OF PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee met in the Publisher's office on Thursday, October 25. Rev. J. M. Henry, D.D., was elected president, and Rev. W. W. Drake, Secretary. Rev. T. H. Lipscomb led in prayer. Reports were submitted by the editor, R. A. Meek, D.D., and the publisher, Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers. These reports were referred to a committee of two, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb and Rev. J. T. Leggett. These brethren "digested" the reports and their recommendations were unanimously adopted. With genuine enthusiasm, it was agreed to put on a campaign for the Advocate, January 21-28, looking to securing at least 4000 new subscribers. (North Mississippi Conference, 1500: Mississippi Conference, 1500, and the Louisiana Conference, 1000.) The proposition will be submitted to the three patronizing Conferences at their approaching sessions, and each Conference will be asked to work out the details of the campaign in the best way to secure the desired result. Suffice it to say that the reports showed the paper to be in a good condition, all departments working in harmony, the only real difficulty appearing being the increased cost of material and labor, and the "high cost of living." While it was not mentioned, it is none the less evident that it would be more expensive to die. The paper is needed now more than at any time in its history.

There was a real recognition of the vital importance of the Advocate, and a determination to use it to the fullest. There was such unmistakable evidence of wise business management that only words of commendation were heard. I doubt if there is a paper in the connection, resources considered, making a better record. On practically a CASH basis, with a LIVE subscription list, a LIVE editor, a LIVE business manager, a wide-awake publishing committee bent upon going forward, we will get the 4000 NEW subscribers. It was good to be there. It is good to look forward to a larger circulation. WE ARE NOT DYING—WE ARE JUST GETTING READY TO LIVE.

Holly Springs, Miss. JAMES H. FELTS.

A MATTER OF IMPORTANCE.

Dear Dr. Meek: At the request of General Julian S. Carr, who represents our Church in the United States Food Administration, I sent out, on October 4, a circular letter to the preachers of the Louisiana Conference, requesting them to appoint Committees on Conservation for all their churches, to send me the name of the Chairman of each Committee, and to inform me as to the number of families in their charges. I besought them to reply promptly, as the business required haste. Up to this date—October 23—I have received only 22 replies. I feel sure that the brethren have simply overlooked the matter. Will you please give space for this note in the Advocate? Yours truly,

W. S. HOLMES.

Baton Rouge, La.

(This is a matter of great importance, and we sincerely hope that the brethren who have not done so, will comply with Brother Holmes' request at once. It is the patriotic duty of every good citizen to co-operate with the constituted authorities in this campaign for food conservation, upon which so much depends at this crucial time.—Editor of Advocate.)

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Our church at Itta Bena, Miss., has had a good year under the pastoral care of Rev. W. S. Shipman. It is nothing new for Brother Shipman to make a good record in the Master's service.

Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Crowley, La., was in New Orleans last week, to attend the Legal Conference, of which he is a member. He was looking well, and spoke hopefully of the outlook in his charge and section.

Rev. A. E. Clements, of Nashville, Tenn., has been appointed Assistant Financial Secretary of the General Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South. His work will be to assist in campaigns for funds for schools of our Church.

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, recently spent a day in the Crescent City. He reported the work along the Gulf Coast to be in a healthful condition. Brother Jones believes in his preachers.

Rev. M. L. White, our faithful pastor at Homewood, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for four new subscriptions to the Advocate, with a check to correspond. We appreciate this good service in behalf of the Conference organ.

"The Day of Prayer for our Soldiers and Sailors" was fittingly observed at the First Methodist Church of this city last Sunday morning, with a large congregation in attendance. Dr. S. H. Werlein, the pastor, preached an able and impressive sermon.

Rev. G. D. Purcell, of Dubach, La., writes as follows: "Everything is moving along well with us. We have had a splendid year and I am expecting to carry a full report to the Conference at Minden. Your paper is highly prized by its readers in these parts."

Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., was a visitor in New Orleans last week. Brother Battle has many friends here, having formerly served Felicity Street Church of this city as pastor. He was looking well and spoke encouragingly of the work in his present field.

A note from Rev. A. C. McCorkle, of Byhalia, Miss., informs us that his charge will report "in full" at Conference. Brother Felts, Brother McCorkle's presiding elder, who was in New Orleans last week, spoke in terms of high appreciation of the service which he is rendering in his present pastorate.

We have learned with much regret that Rev. T. W. Adams, pastor of our Court Street Church at Hattiesburg, Miss., has within recent months had a good deal of sickness in his home, Sister Adams' health, in particular, having been far from good since last May. We pray that the stricken loved ones of our brother may soon be much better.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, our pastor at Cleveland, Miss., has our thanks for a number of subscriptions from his charge, most of which were secured by Mrs. W. F. Wienke. Brother Bradley thus refers to the work of the year: "Things continue to move on well with us. I have received on profession of faith and by certificate 65 members since the last Annual Conference."

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., the efficient Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, sends us the following note: "Brother M. A. Burns, pastor of the Mt. Pleasant charge, has the honor to be the first man to make a remittance for his educational assessment from the Holly Springs District." Brother Burns is usually found in the forefront.

Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District, writes: "I hand you the names of two charges which should be placed on the Honor Roll. Fannin reports, through its faithful pastor, Rev. George G. Yeager, that all claims have been paid in full; and Brandon comes next with the report that funds to cover all the assessments are in the hands of Rev. R. P. Fikes, the pastor. Let other charges do likewise."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Winona (Miss.) District, is giving a good account of himself in his present important field of work. He is a strong preacher and has the confidence and esteem of both the pastors and people in the territory under his supervision. The Winona District is expected to make a fine showing at the North Mississippi Annual Conference, which will convene at Oxford on Nov. 21, with Bishop Murrah presiding.

From a Columbus (Miss.) dispatch, dated October 29, we take the following: "Nearly two thousand people were present at the First Methodist Church of this city last Sunday night and heard the farewell sermon of Rev. W. B. Hogg, Chaplain of the United States Army, who had been conducting a revival meeting here for some time. Mr. Hogg left to-day for his former home in Laurel, where he will spend several days before leaving for camp."

We carried in the Advocate last week an editorial on "The Church and Secular Legislation." In some way the word "Legislation" in the heading got changed to "Education." The error was not discovered until a number of papers had been run off; so it appeared incorrectly in some copies which were mailed out. We make this statement because we do not wish to be placed before the public as having set the bad example of taking a text and not sticking to it.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions, sent in within the past few days: Rev. T. W. Adams, Hattiesburg, Miss., 4; Rev. A. S. Brisco, Nettleton, Miss., 2; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Bolton, Miss., 8; Mrs. W. A. McKenzie, Homer, La., 10; Rev. K. W. Dodson, Minden, La., 4; Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., Madison, Miss., 3; Rev. J. C. Price, Belcher, La., 2; Rev. M. R. Jones, Raleigh, Miss., 10.

Dr. David Spence Hill, who is now a professor in the University of Illinois, writes us as follows from Urbana, the seat of that institution: "My mother, Mrs. F. R. Hill, Sr., has been spending the fall months with me. She asks that the Advocate be sent to her here. I am glad to report that she is quite well, though not strong. She grieves constantly over the loss of father—Rev. Felix R. Hill." The many friends of Mrs. Hill in this section will be interested in this message concerning her. May the Heavenly Father comfort and sustain her!

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, our versatile pastor at Leland, Miss., sends us some subscriptions to the Advocate, and in his business letter appends the following note: "We are winding up the year's work well and expect to report everything in full, lacking but a little of having all the assessments provided for now. The work throughout the district is in a splendid condition, and Brother Curtis, our presiding elder, has won the love and appreciation of all the people. He has eaten no idle bread, but has given himself completely to the work assigned him."

The service at Parker Memorial Church, this city, last Sunday was specially arranged for old people and "shut-ins." The church was decorated by the Epworth Leaguers in gold and white, the colors of that organization, and each special guest for the day was given a small cluster of violets, tied with white and gold ribbon. Not only aged members of the congregation were present, but there were representatives from a number of New Orleans benevolent institutions in attendance: the Fink Asylum, the Touro-Shakespeare Almshouse, St. Anna's Asylum, the German Protestant Home, and the Home for Incurables. The pastor, Rev. R. H. Harper, delivered a beautiful message, appropriate to the occasion.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Eden, Miss., reports the destruction by fire of the Pleasant Hill Church—one of the houses of worship in his charge, which occurred on Sunday morning, Oct. 21, while Sunday school was being conducted. The fire originated from the stove flue. The organ and seats were saved; there was no insurance. Notwithstanding the excitement, Brother Oliver managed to hold the preaching service near the smouldering flames of the destroyed building, which he says was a warm one. After preaching, he secured pledges amounting to $400 to be applied to the erection of another church. Brother Oliver has also recently raised $500 for the new church at Eden. He states that he expects the work of the present year to wind up in good shape.

Brother J. G. Parham, superintendent of our Sunday school at Rolling Fork, Miss., writes: "I am doing my best to get every Sunday school in the Port Gibson District to take an offering one Sunday in each month for the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson. If we could get this done throughout the State of Mississippi, the home could be run with ease, and would never have to go in debt. I induced our Sunday school here to begin doing this when it was behind with its finances, and last year we sent $120 to the Orphanage, and we are now out of debt—we have a Missionary Sunday, too. If a small Sunday school can do this, certainly any Sunday school that will try can do something that would be creditable." These suggestions of Brother Parham are well worth thinking about.

There were a number of Methodist gatherings of interest in New Orleans last week. The presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference held a meeting Wednesday evening, at which there was a full attendance; an Efficiency Conference was held Thursday morning at the First Methodist Church, and in the afternoon of the same day the Legal Conference of the Louisiana Annual Conference held its yearly session. On Thursday, beginning at 11 o'clock a. m., the regular annual meeting of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate took place in the Publisher's office, with the following committeemen present: Dr. J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake, and Rev. J. F. Foster, of the Louisiana Conference; Dr. I. W. Cooper, Rev. J. T. Leggett, and Rev. C. W. Crisler, of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. J. H. Felts and Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference. A report of the last-named meeting from the pen of Brother Felts appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

MEETING OF THE LEGAL CONFERENCE.

The Legal Conference of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held their annual meeting in the St. Charles Hotel, Room B, on October 25, 1917. The following were present: Dr. J. M. Henry, President; W. W. Carre, Secretary; S. H. Meyer, Treasurer; and Rev. R. W. Tucker, Dr. R. H. Wynn, W. B. Thomson, J. C. Foster, and Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer. Much important business was transacted. On motion, the Treasurer was authorized to pay $750 to the Annual Conference. It was decided that a Committee of the whole meeting should be held at the next Annual Conference to pass upon important matters.

THE NATCHEZ REVIVAL.

My Dear Dr. Meek: On October 14 there ended one of the most satisfactory revival meetings ever held in this city. The preaching was done by Dr. S. W. Walker, one of our General Evangelists, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Boyd, of Atlanta, Ga. We had expected that the man who had built up the largest men's Bible Class in the world, and who in his quadrennium which had just closed at St. John's Church, Huntington, West Virginia, had more than doubled the membership of his church, possessed in a large measure the gifts and graces of a successful preacher of the Gospel. The results proved that we were not mistaken.

Dr. Walker's preaching is plain, earnest and forceful. While he pictures sin in no unmistakable terms and warns men to flee the wrath to come, he never descends to the coarse and sensational. He preaches the old-time Gospel with a sincerity of faith that God will honor the message in the salvation of the people. He seems to have no other object in view. All else is subordinated to this one end. The remuneration of himself and his helpers was never alluded to by him.

Considering the size and peculiar conditions of our community, the period of two weeks allotted to the meeting was not long enough; it should have lasted three or four weeks. When the meeting closed men were in the church who had not been inside of a church for years. At the open air meetings held Sunday afternoons on the bluff overlooking the great river many heard the Gospel, perhaps for the first time in their lives. The pastors and congregations of the other Protestant churches heartily co-operated with us and were greatly blessed.

It is impossible to estimate the net results of the meeting. There were many conversions and reclamations and several accessions to the membership of the Church. The entire Church was greatly revived.

Dr. Walker and his co-workers won the hearts of the people of Natchez who heard him, and a most hearty welcome awaits them should they return again.

Personally, I have never been associated with more genial and efficient helpers in a meeting, and without reservation I do most heartily commend them wherever their services may be needed.

At the close of the meeting, our Church sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. Jessie Porter Wilson, who was in every sense a devout Christian and who for several years was District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Port Gibson District. Her obituary will appear soon. Cordially and sincerely,

Natchez, Miss. C. F. EMERY.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

The New Orleans Sunday School Union of Methodist Sunday schools is making large preparations for the fall Institute and Rally, which will convene in the Parker Memorial Church, Friday evening, November 9, at 6:45 o'clock. On Thursday evening a Sunday school social will be enjoyed at the same place, at which the Sunday school officers, teachers and adult pupils of the twelve Sunday schools of the city will be the guests of the Parker Memorial, Rayne Memorial, Carrollton Avenue and Louisiana Avenue Sunday schools. A program of action and sparkling toasts has been arranged, which will be presided over by Mr. C. F. Niebergall, teacher of the Adult Class of the First Methodist Sunday school.

The institute program consists of classes for the workers of all departments of Sunday school work, and on both Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 o'clock an inspirational service will be held, at which times Dr. C. D. Bulla, Superintendent of the Adult Department of our Sunday school, with headquarters in Nashville, Tenn., Rev. C. V. Breithaupt and Mr. W. H. Black will be the speakers. The rally on Sunday afternoon is intended to bring together a great gathering of Sunday school scholars. This service will close the week's program. A. J. GEARHEARD.

THE DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE.

By Rev. W. F. McMurry, D.D.

The subject of church architecture has been called to the attention of the Board of Church Extension in the report of the Corresponding Secretary from time to time. At the Annual meeting of 1916 a committee on architecture was appointed to act with a like committee from the General Sunday School Board, these two committees forming a commission to "study and recommend plans to the Board of Church Extension for the construction of churches adapted to modern Sunday school work.

REV. J. A. BAYLOR, of the Holston Conference, Architectural Superintendent of the Board of Church Extension.

At the Annual Meeting in 1917, after reporting the work of this commission, I submitted the following:

I have studied the architectural problem carefully for several years, and had hoped to work it out on a basis that would enable the office to handle it without the services of a man selected for this particular duty, but have concluded that this is not possible. The Corresponding Secretary is already overloaded with work, and the architectural need of the Church is such as to command the time of a competent man.

I do not believe that the best interests of the Church would be served by the selec-

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

GIRLS! MAKE A BEAUTY LOTION WITH LEMONS

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to whiten, soften, freshen and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is truly marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

Mrs. EULA HAMMETTE was born on July 16, 1873, and died on June 20, 1917, at her home in Gibsland, La. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. F. Sheppard, at her residence. She is survived by 8 children. Her husband, Mr. A. E. Hammette, and one child, preceded her in death several years. While her health had been declining for several months, her death was not expected by her many friends. Mrs. Hammette was a devout member of the Methodist Church and a beloved member and leader of the Woman's Missionary Society. She was a woman of high motives and ideals, a devoted mother, and a strong Christian character. Her Christian life was filled with good deeds and kind thoughts for others. Her cheerful disposition and implicit faith in God were an inspiration to all with whom she came in contact. May her sisters, brothers, and children who survive her bow humbly to the will of their Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, and, as they hold her memory sacred, may they accept her Savior as their Savior and her God as their God.

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Sunday School at Byhalia, Miss.)

Whereas God, in his infinite love and wisdom, has seen best to call our highly esteemed and dearly beloved Sunday school teacher, Mr. Dane McCleary, to his heavenly home; and that by his death the Byhalia Methodist Church and Sunday school have lost one of their best and most faithful workers; therefore be it resolved

1. That, while we humbly bow to His sovereign will, acknowledging his wisdom and goodness in the affairs of men, and thanking Him for our brother's life of service to the Church and community, we do most sincerely lament his death.

2. That we do cherish the memory of his devotion to business, his interest in the public welfare, and his loyalty to Christian ideals.

3. That our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to his family in this sad bereavement.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family, to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the county papers for publication, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Sunday school.

Signed: J. R. BRINSON.

A GIFT TO TRINITY COLLEGE.

The library of the late John M. Webb, of Bell Buckle, Tenn., containing several thousand volumes and long rated by those who know as one of the most valuable private collections in the Southern States, has been given to Trinity College, at Durham, North Carolina. The books come as a gift from Mrs. Webb in memory of her husband, who was born in North Carolina and taught here till, in 1877, he joined his brother, W. R. Webb, as one of the principals of the Webb School in Tennessee. This was the first training school west of the Allegheny Mountains. First in time and first in ideals, Webb School has led the way in the education of boys, and for forty years it has been sending its graduates to the foremost colleges of the South and the North. The library represents the collection of the years that Mr. Webb has been teaching. It contains books on English literature, Latin, Greek, Dante, works on history, science, and philosophy, and many of the text books that have appeared in the last quarter of a century. The books are valuable in themselves, but they have a higher sentimental value as coming from one of the great teachers of his generation.

LIVING UP TO ONE'S PRAYERS.

It is undoubtedly hard always to act in accordance with one's prayers. Just here men fail again and again to offer a complete prayer. Unless there be sincerity of life within the praying, the prayer falls apart and fades into vapor. The man who prays to be honest and does not strangle the first temptation to cheat is only playing at prayer. The man who prays to be generous and does not straightway untie his purse strings for some adequate cause is a hypocrite. The saints, some one has said, hurl their lives after their prayers. This does not mean that they reduce their prayers to their ability to do; their prayers are always greater than their best accomplishment. As they tend to catch up with their prayers, the prayers instantly spring to a higher level, and the eternal pursuit continues. Nevertheless, prayers must be done as well as thought and uttered, and it is amazingly difficult to do approximately as much as we ask.—Charles L. Slattery.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Salts if Backachy and Kidneys Hurt

Drink lots of water and stop eating meat for a while if your Bladder troubles you.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

AN EXPLANATION.

attend, and they would go away with a closer touch with God and with the Church. The laymen are clamoring for the night services at Annual Conferences to be used for the deepening of spiritual life. If left to the laymen, Dr. Plato Durham would have continued those deeply spiritual addresses or sermons at our last Conference. The preachers voted it down. Make it more worth while for a layman to attend an Annual Conference and more will attend. They are busy men and want something in return for the time they spend away from their business. I do not speak for myself. I expect to attend, anyway. I have not missed a Conference but twice in twenty-one years, and then I was out of the State both times. I attend whether I am a delegate or not. But all laymen will not attend without more inducement than is generally given to a layman at the Annual Conference. I think there should be a greater representation of our leading laymen at the Annual Conference and then see to it that at least one main service a day be given to the deepening of the spiritual life of laymen and ministers, and there will be a marked uplift and an increased interest in our Church.

There can be but one tenable argument against increased lay representation in the Annual Conference, and that is the question of entertainment. Yet this question must ere long be solved in some other way even for those we have. It can be solved as the entertainment of the General Conference is solved. Or it may be a combination of free entertainment supplemented by offerings with which to take care of the overplus if there are not enough homes for them. At any rate, the benefit derived from more laymen being in touch with the great gatherings of our Church will more than offset any increase in cost.

I do not endorse all the changes suggested by the Laymen's Address, as I gather them from the replies I read; yet some of them seem to be in the right direction, and are at least worthy of calm consideration. I see no need of the hard feelings and hot words that I read on the subject. I, for one, shall not be a party to any underhanded methods or improper ways of going about discussions of proposed improvements in our Church polity. The right kind of discussion helps us to arrive at ways of betterment of our Church. We love her past and we want to build upon it for a greater future. It seems to me the greatest need is the deepening of the spiritual life of the Church. That will be a safe anchor to keep us from being tossed about by the adverse winds of destructive criticism and popular trend toward worldliness. An old-time revival prayed down—not worked up—would do more for us than any kind of legislation or agitation. Let us all join in earnest prayer for a mighty deepening of the spiritual life of our people. It will solve our problems quicker and better than anything else can.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. BEESON.

"May we expect light on our difficulties when we refuse it on our duties?"

A WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

The Spirit humbles us, and humility enables us to understand the Scriptures. The Spirit purifies the heart, and purity enables us to understand the Scriptures. The Spirit fills our heart with love, and love enables us to understand the Scriptures.—H. J. Gamble.

COMMENDABLE NARROWNESS.

If you widen a given body of water you lessen its depth. We have never heard of a woman being objectionable because of her narrow views of virtue. There are just two ways—the broad and the narrow—and we must choose between the two. The Bible tells us where each of these ways end. Personally, we prefer the "narrow way," though, to be sure, we live in a free country.—Western Recorder.

That Well Known Saying

"Beauty is only Skin deep," is certainly true as regards physical beauty. There are many beautiful faces and beautiful hands that have been made extremely ugly by some skin trouble. The fragrant Tetterine will rid you of any skin disease. Absolutely harmless. 50c a box from druggists or by mail from

SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

CHRIST'S WAY.

To judge men kindly, whatever their faults may be, to mete out to others the measure we would that they should mete to us, to let mercy revise and modify the verdicts that justice compels us to pronounce, this is the only proper attitude toward their neighbors which those who follow Christ and breathe His spirit can assume. The only men to whom He showed Himself severe were those who were severe to others.—Dr. Samuel Cox.

Watch the Baby!

If he is fretful, restless and out of sorts, you can trace the cause to his stomach and liver. If the bowels do not act regularly there is a possible danger of serious illness. Constipation, if allowed to continue, may produce self-poisoning or auto-intoxication, and this condition should be promptly rectified. The best general tonic for the baby or for the older folks is Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, a purely vegetable compound. It contains no Calomel or other injurious drugs. Highly recommended for babies and growing children. It excites and invigorates sluggish livers and puts you on your feet again. Buy a bottle and keep it handy. Price 50c. For sale by the best druggists. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

It is a great encouragement to Christians that every sin and vice is shown in its true character in the Bible, and that sinners are made to understand that their actions are not only disapproved by men, but judged as utterly unworthy by a God of unerring justice. Mere censure of wrong cannot reform the wrongdoer. Only the Gospel of Christ can effect that inward change in men that causes them to hate vice and to follow after virtue. But what would this world come to if sins were no longer reproved?—Dan.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

You Get Better Cough Syrup by Making it at Home

What's more, you save about $2 by it. Easily made and costs little.

You'll never really know what a fine cough syrup you can make until you prepare this famous home-made remedy. You not only save $2 as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a more effective and dependable remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth) from any good drug store, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Here you have a full pint—a family supply—of the most effective cough syrup that money can buy—at a cost of only 65 cents or less. It never spoils.

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant tasting cough syrup have caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis, croup and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Millennium

What, When and Where?

BY PROF. JAMES M. GRAY, D.D.

America's Great Prophetic Expositor
Dean of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

Additional series of articles to appear in the

CHRISTIAN HERALD

"THE Mountain Peaks of Prophecy," Prof. Gray's first series of articles, which has just ended in the Christian Herald, has brought forth such a number of inquiries from students and Bible readers all over the country, that an additional series has become a necessity.

They will be contributions of the most valuable character to the prophetic literature of the times in which we are now living—a period which, in the opinion of all of the best Bible expositors, is one of prophetic fulfilment.

The new series by Dr. Gray will be closely linked in relation with "The Mountain Peaks" series just concluded, and will bear the following titles:

What Does the Bible Teach About Russia?
What Does the Bible Teach About the Restoration of Babylon?
The Millennium: What, When and Where?
The Present War and Coming Events

It will be seen at once by all who have the slightest acquaintance with prophecy, that these four topics are of the most vital interest to the generation now living. They should be read in conjunction with and as a continuation of the series just closed, but more especially of the last three articles in that series, namely:

The Place of the Church in the Plan of Redemption
The Antichrist, Who He is and When He Will Arise
"The Day of the Lord," When it Comes and What it Means

The three articles named above, together with the four additional new articles, will constitute a list of seven contributions in which the Bible searchlight is turned on the great prophetic mysteries and the spiritual interpretation applied by one of the greatest living expositors.

WHY 300,000 FAMILIES LOVE CHRISTIAN HERALD

THE Christian Herald is doing something more than merely placing interesting reading matter in the homes of its readers. It is giving them a part in great enterprises. It is giving them spiritual and material helpfulness. It is the one magazine that represents in the most vital way all of the interests of Protestant Christianity and of the on-marching church of Christ. Week by week, the Christian Herald is giving its readers issues of absorbing interest.

You should be a regular reader of the Christian Herald and enjoy these special features which are now appearing:

THE DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE.

tion of a professional architect to conduct this department, for three reasons: (1) I do not believe it would be wise for us, as a Board, to enter into competition with qualified and responsible church architects throughout our bounds; (2) the Church would be unwilling to pay the salary necessary to command such a man, and (3) it is not necessary for us to undertake to do in detail the architectural work of the Church.

We should, however, place ourselves in position to render the necessary assistance to every building committee, and this consists of practical suggestions as to arrangement of buildings, information as to competent architects, advice as to contracts, and the preparation of plans and specifications to be used by the smaller communities, which are building houses of such cost as not to interest the professional architect.

A Methodist preacher with some architectural taste and interested in the proper housing of our people is the best possible man. In addition to the work suggested above, he could render valuable service by responding to the numerous calls upon the office for lectures and addresses at institutes, summer gatherings, etc., upon the subject of church architecture, and by speaking upon the subject at the Annual Conferences, where he could also represent the general work of the Board, thus making it possible for your office to keep in closer touch with the Annual Conferences and the Conference Boards of Church Extension.

You would be astonished to know the number of calls upon the office for architectural exhibits and addresses upon the subject of the proper housing of congregations, and one need not travel through the Church a very great distance to realize the waste of money and mistakes in the arrangement of our church buildings, to say nothing of the utter lack, in some places, of architectural dignity and consistency. We owe it to our people to render this service.

I doubt not there are several brethren in the Church who could serve us efficiently in this capacity. I have knowledge of one or more whom I believe to be eminently qualified, and whose names I am ready to suggest if it is your wisdom to establish the department of architecture."

This was referred to the Committee on Organization, which reported on Monday afternoon, as follows:

"We endorse the plans for the construction of churches recommended by the Commission on Architecture to the Department of Architecture of this Board, and we recommend that in the development of this Department the Executive Committee be authorized to employ a competent man to assist the Corresponding Secretary, and fix his salary."

The report of the Committee was unanimously adopted by the Board.

After mature deliberation the position provided for was tendered by the Executive Committee, to Rev. J. A. Baylor, pastor of Broad Street Church, Knoxville, Tennessee, a member of the Board of Church Extension, who has had the matter under consideration for several months.

At the recent session of the Holston Conference, being duly recommended by his Conference, Brother Baylor was appointed by Bishop Waterhouse, Architectural Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, and will enter upon his work on November 1, having his headquarters in the office of the Board at Louisville, Kentucky.

It is the judgment of the Executive Committee that Brother Baylor is the proper man to develop this department in such a way, and to such a degree, as to make it very helpful to all church and parsonage building committees. I am sure the ministers and laymen of our Church will give to him patient and faithful co-operation in his difficult and important task.

Mail for this Department should be addressed to the Board of Church Extension, 1115 Fourth Street, Louisville, Kentucky.

You Needn't keep on feeling distressed after eating, nor belching, nor experiencing nausea between meals. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures dyspepsia—it strengthens the stomach and other digestive organs for the proper performance of their functions. Take Hood's.—Adv.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

As the time approaches for this gathering, I am being plied with questions both through mail and by person as to the extent of entertainment; and, believing in strict candor as the best policy, I write this communication. When we invited the Conference to meet in our city, at its last session, we hoped to have no limitations, but the social conditions arising out of the war situation are such as to compel restrictions. Since the first of May our city has been involved in some kind of "drive" continually. The Red Cross work, appeals for Liberty Bonds (second series now on), for French classes, for support of war children, for the relief for war sufferers, and the preparation for the great Memorial Reunion, have taxed our people almost to the point of exhaustion. Under the circumstances, our committees are doing well in securing homes for the more than two hundred brethren whose comfort we must consider, but it is almost a universal request for men only. This does not apply, of course, where brethren have special invitations for other members of their families with friends. We're after the Kaiser here.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach remedy in the whole world and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

CALOMEL PURIFIED OF ALL OBJECTIONS.

Chemists Rid Doctors' Favorite Medicine of Nauseating and Dangerous Qualities. New Variety Called "Calotabs."

A triumph of modern pharmacy that is destined to bless the whole world—that is the opinion of physicians and druggists who are familiar with the new calomel that is wholly free from the objectionable effects of the old-style calomel.

An occasional purifying of the system and thorough cleansing of the liver are absolutely essential to health, and, as all doctors know, calomel is the only drug that accomplishes this result. Now that the unpleasant and dangerous effects are entirely removed, the popularity of the new calomel, Calotabs, will be vastly increased. Its effect is delightful. One tablet at bedtime, a swallow of water—that's all. You wake up next morning feeling fine, your liver cleansed, your system purified and with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger. No restrictions of habit or diet.

Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your druggist recommends and guarantees them.—Adv.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

CLEANS THE BLOOD TONES THE NERVES

The gratifying results attending the faithful use of the new medicinal combination, Hood's Sarsaparilla before eating and Peptiron after eating, are seen in purer blood, stronger nerves, improved condition of the whole system.

They are results that make this course of treatment the most economical for sufferers from impure, impoverished blood, weak, unsteady nerves—no other accomplishes so much for each cent expended.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron aid each other, and to take both is to derive a four-fold benefit.

If a laxative is needed in connection with them, the gentle and thorough Hood's Pills should be used.

Sunday School

A FINE RECORD.

The records of our Sunday school at West Point, Miss., Rev. L. P. Wasson, pastor, and Mr. S. P. White, superintendent, show that the following members have not been absent a single Sunday during the past five years: Captain Howorth, Sergeant Hines, and Lucile Miller.

The following have not missed a Sunday in four years: John Snider, Edward Joiner, Ruby Nash, Elizabeth Belk, Annie V. McCrary, Gladys Gilmore, Jewel Gilmore, and Lou A. Cantrell.

These have a perfect record for three years: Major White, Virginia Miller, Lucile Belk, Randolph Howorth, Aurora Leslie, and Liddell Meek.

And the following have not missed a Sunday for two years: Elizabeth Critz, Virginia Foster, and Captain White.

While these last have a clear record for the past year: Mabel Blanche Howorth, Edward Meek, Robert Nash, Laura Askew, Kathleen Boyd, Neva Marie Carothers, Augustus Frazier, Marion Smith, Walter Miller, Geraldine Howorth, Louise Robinson, Sarah Evelyn Joiner, Ruth Belk, Louise Barr, Erline Barr, Elizabeth Hardison, Julia McCrary, Bessie Smith, Lalouise Howard, Mabel George, Mrs. Mary M. LISTEN TO THIS! SAYS CORNS LIFT RIGHT OUT NOW

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out with the fingers.

It is a sticky ether compound which dries the moment it is applied and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are further warned that cutting at a corn is a suicidal habit.—Adv.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES BEGIN ATTENDANCE CONTEST.

A marked development of interest is noticed in the adult department of the Noel Memorial Sunday School. A friendly contest is being waged for the development of three classes with an attendance of 100 each by Jan. 1, and already great enthusiasm has been aroused by the active workers in these classes. The busy men's class, composed of men, taught by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Drake; the woman's class in charge of Prof. H. T. Carley of Centenary College, and a young people's class in charge of Mrs. John Satterly as president, and Judge W. C. Barnette as teacher, began a contest last Sunday morning with the following attendance records: Satterly, 34; Busy Men, 20; Woman's Adult Class, 19.

The Noel Memorial Church and Sunday school are closing one of the most successful year in their history.

ANNIVERSARY OF BOGALUSA METHODISM.

All the former pastors and presiding elders of First Church, Bogalusa, are cordially invited to attend the "Tenth Anniversary of Bogalusa Methodism," and "400th Anniversary of the Reformation," on Sunday, November 4. The sermon on "Martin Luther's Reformation" will be delivered by Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District. The sermon on the "Tenth Anniversary of Bogalusa Methodism" will be by Rev. E. N. Evans, the father and founder of Methodism in Bogalusa.

We are planning and praying that this will be a great day in the history of our growing church. Brethren, "come thou with us and we will do thee good." Signed:

A. INMAN TOWNSLEY, Pastor.

THY SERVANT HEARETH.

The man who names himself a Christian and who, in these times, hears no compelling voice calling him to self-forgetfulness and heroism and service for the world's good, has made an utterly perverted use of a great and meaningful word. That man in whose breast there throbs any of the spirit and thought of the Man of Galilee will be utterly unable, even if he should try, to shut out of his soul the call to give, and do, and sacrifice for the sore and bitter need of that world for which He gave his all. In the midst of normal and easy-going days even good men might for a time forget, but the man who doesn't hear today is the man whose soul is dead. And one of the very best prayers any man of us can make is to ask God, with each new day that dawns, that our soul might be very keen to hear and our will very prompt to heed the call of the world's great sorrow and need. If we shut our soul against that, in this our day, surely heaven itself would shut its door of hope against us.—Christian Guardian.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

Mr. Editor: Will you let me, through your columns, thank all persons in the Rolling Fork community who recently made contributions to the orphans in the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., in the name of the Committee of the Methodist Sunday school—J. E. Meek, Cary Day, and M. P. Moore—and also for myself as superintendent of the Sunday school? And I also desire to say that, as those little bodies are clad in warm clothes and shod in good shoes, I know that they, too, will be thankful for such thoughtfulness upon the part of our people, since the only way that they are fed and clothed is by such free-will offerings; and I know also that God in heaven looks down and smiles when he sees orphan children thus cared for. The amount of the contribution was $71.41.

Again thanking you for your kindness in this instance, and for past kindnesses, I remain ever your friend.

Tobacco Habit Easily Conquered

A New Yorker of wide experience has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily and completely banished in three days with delightful benefit. The author, Edward J. Woods, 1629-A, Station E, New York City, will mail his book free on request.

The health improves wonderfully after the nicotine poison is out of the system. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits reported. Get rid of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette, snuff or chewing tobacco to pacify morbid desire.

Mothers of the South Prepare for Trouble!

When a girl becomes a woman, when a woman becomes a mother, and when a woman passes through the changes of middle life, are the three periods of life when health and strength are most needed to withstand the pain and distress often caused by severe organic disturbances. Many thousands in this section would testify just as do the following:

LENOIR CITY, TENN. — "Some years ago I broke down from overwork and exposure. My brother thought I would die. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it brought me out all right. I have also taken several bottles since and it always helps me. I can say it is a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to all broken-down women. It is the best medicine for nervousness and for prospective mothers that I ever saw."—MRS. MARY L. WALKER.

SYLACAUGA, ALA. — "My wife used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription during expectancy. She had been having a great deal of trouble and used the 'Prescription' with wonderful results. She had practically no suffering, where before she had suffered intensely. No one can tell in words the good the 'Prescription' did my wife; it is simply a wonderful medicine. Every woman in the land ought to use it."—A. HUDGINS.

WESLEY HOUSE SPECIAL.

You will remember that before the close of the third quarter an appeai was made by our president, Mrs. R. E. Johnson, to the women of the Conference to be faithful to the piedges made to our two Wesley Houses. In a personal letter to each auxiiiary, she placed the matter very clearly and urged a definite offering that the deficit might be wiped out ere the quarter closed. She writes that the women responded splendidiy to her appeal; stiii we did not reach our goal. Mrs. Hemingway states that $133.95 was the totai amount sent in, of which $76.18 was sent to Biioxi and $57.77 to Meridian. With the amounts sent in during the first two quarters we have about paid half. Let us make a strenuous effort during the remaining weeks of the year to bring up the amount in full. When our Conference officers write us the needs are pressing they know whereof they speak. Mrs. B. F. Lewis has recently been in Meridian, and, after taiking over the Wesiey House affairs with the women who are backing the work, finds the need to be imperative and what is done needs to be done RIGHT NOW. Will not the auxiliaries who failed to respond iast quarter, perhaps for some good reason, do so at this time?

"How shaii I follow Him I serve?
How shall I copy Him I love?"

By responding generousiy now, for the appeal is His and He wants to see what you wiii do. "I gave my life for thee. What hast thou given for Me?"

OBSERVE WEEK OF PRAYER AND HARVEST DAY.

This message is for every one of the 144 aduit, 56 young people's and 51 junior societies in the Mississippi Conference. Let me urge upon you first to observe the Week of Prayer, Nov. 5-11, for this is the season set aside by our Council for a definite purpose. If you cannot carry out the entire program, make an effort to observe it in some way; ideas suited to your surroundings wiii present themselves to you, and no matter how small or weak the auxiliary each can do its "bit."

Last year there were 92 auxiliaries which observed the Week of Prayer and upon each was God's blessing richiy poured out. Our offering was nearly one hundred doiiars more than the previous year. If all will put forth a faithful effort and be much in prayer during the time preceding this season we can double the amount given iast year. Remember, our goal is $25,000, and Mississippi has aiways been ioyal to the great cause of missions, and we feei sure wiii do her best this year, knowing how great and insistent are the demands for the enlargement of our medical work in China, also our Gulf Coast work in the homeland. The latter is right here at our door and we have only to look to see "the fieids white unto the harvest" and the need of doing still greater things for these foreigners, among whom our noble, consecrated workers are laboring.

Now, a word about "Harvest Day." Many of our Conferences are observing this day near the close of the iast quarter of the year, and those who have tried it in the past find it a time of ingathering of tithes and offerings and great spiritual refreshing. We ask that our Conference observe the Monday before Thanksgiving as their Harvest Day. Pray, pian, and work to make the day a success. Where this date cannot be observed use one as near to it as possible, and let us make the observance a generai one. A speciai program to be used at the time wiii appear in the November "Voice."

You can readily see the benefits growing out of the wide observance of the day, for if the dues, pledges and other offerings are aii brought to the "storehouse," it gives the treasurer time to find out if she is coming out with a clean sheet and, incidentally, gives her some extra time before the Christmas hoiidays to put forth effort to secure any deficit, so that by the first of the year our Conference officers will know that their foiiowers have been loyal to them and they can go before the Counciі saying, "We have met our pledges in full, and are ready for the next advance order."

Remember, my sisters, "Prayer is the only element which can quicken information into inspiration, transmit interest into passion, crystaiiize emotion into consecration, and coin enthusiasm into doiiars and lives."

Lovingiy yours,
Mrs. R. E. JOHNSON.
Gulfport, Miss.

CALLED HOME.

Many hearts were fiiled with sadness when they read of the passing away of Mrs. Otis Wilson (nee Jessie Porter) at her home in Natchez on October 18. Our hearts go out in tenderest love and sympathy to our dear district secretary, Miss Mabel Porter. So beautiful and close was the tie between these sisters that our thoughts turn instinctively to the tender iittie poem, written by Phoebe Cary upon the death of her idolized older sister, Alice.

"Such sweet communion had been ours,
I prayed that it might never end;
My prayer is more than answered —now
I have an angel for a friend.

"Life was so fair a thing to her,
I wept and pleaded for its stay;
My wish was granted me, for lo!
She hath eternai life to-day."

May the thought that "she hath eternal life to-day" be a comfort to all of the sorrowing ones.

Mrs. Wilson was a young woman of rare Christian character and "none knew her not to love her." She seemed aiways in a gentie, unobtrusive way, to be shedding joy and happiness around her, and so ciose did she live to her Master that the iight from above radiated from her face, making it one pecuiiarly lovely to look upon. For several years Mrs. Wilson was district secretary of the Port Gibson district, and though new to the work, put her whoie soul into it and brought the district up to a higher plane of service. She married whiie holding this office and after a time felt that she must relinquish the work, and her sister was unanimously selected as the one best fitted to succeed her.

The influence of Mrs. Wiison's beautiful iife wiii ever abide with us and we shall always feei that it was a sweet privilege to have known her and worked under her. The Master had need of her and so calied her home. The hearts of the ioved ones are sad and desolate, but not without hope, for they know she has gone where there is no parting and where one day they shaii meet her. They realize that Christ is their refuge and "a very present heip in trouble."

Sage Tea Beautifies And Darkens Hair

Don't stay gray! Sage Tea and Sulphur darkens hair so naturally that nobody can teii.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Miiiions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can teii it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantiy dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Suiphur Compound to-night and you'ii be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toiiet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

You Can Tell The People Who Have Iron in Their Blood —Strong, Healthy, Vigorous Folks

Doctor Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Nervous Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"One glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood," said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions, in a recent discourse. They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the weakling class. Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore, nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The moment iron is supplied the multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the time, double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of every sign of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without any benefit.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. There is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and sound, healthy flesh on your bones. But you must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refuod your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

REMINISCENT.

Soft words and kind actions are producing indelible impressions continually. This writer has heen in the Louisiana Conference thirty years, and now I am often happily reminded of loving words spoken to me and the most kindly courtesies shown me. These can never die.

"A little word in kindness said,
A motion or a tear,
Has healed many a heart that's hled,
And made a friend sincere."

In 1892-3, I served Lafayette and Rayne as pastor, and was fortunate to have the good John A. Miller for presiding elder, who lived near me in Lafayette. Near the end of the second year, Brother Miller approached me and asked: "Brother Armstrong, the Franklin preacher will be moved this year. Would you prefer that appointment to heing returned here? Owing to your physical condition, I think I should consult you." His tender consideration will not be forgotten.

Seven years ago, at this place, I suffered a few days and was confined to my hed, and when the fact became known, J. A. Alford, the Selma preacher, came up and remained until the down train—an hour or two; and, on leaving, took my hand and pressed it gently and left $2.50 in it. I asked, "What is this for, Brother Alford?" He replied: "You are old and sick, and I love you."

In 1914, I was sent to the Charity Hospital in Shreveport, and after a day or two I sent out a few cards informing some of my Methodist friends that I was there. Dr. Wynn was out of town soliciting for the College, hut Sisters Wynn, Bliss, and others called time and again. Brother Wynn called upon his return and asked ahout my financial condition. I replied that I was not needy. After a loving talk, he knelt at my bedside and offered an earnest and pathetic prayer. The ladies came the next day, led hy Sister Wynn, who proposed to send me to the Catholic hospital to stay until I got well free of cost. I accepted the offer with thanks and soon recovered.

Olla, La. H. ARMSTRONG.

CLARKE CIRCUIT (MISS. CONF.).

Dear Brother Meek: Please allow me space in the Advocate to give a brief sketch of my work on the Clarke Circuit. The year up to date has heen a good one with us. We have had good revivals in the charge, with some visihle results. We hegan our first meeting at Theadville, Miss., with Rev. B. L. Sutherland, of Poplar Springs, Meridian, to do the preaching for us. We had 5 accessions to the church on profession of faith during this meeting, and 3 infants were baptized. Our next meeting was at Oak Grove, and we had Rev. "Jack" Davis, of Daleville, Miss., to assist us in this war waged against sin. We had one to join the Church hy profession of faith. My next meeting was at State Line, where I had the assistance of Rev. Geo. P. Fikes, of Moscow, Miss. We had 2 accessions in this meeting and one infant was haptized. And our last meeting was held at Mannassa, where we were assisted hy our beloved presiding elder, Rev. Geo. H. Thompson. I would like to say that all of these dear hrethren came to us filled with the Spirit, and their Gospel messages from day to day were clear and forceful, and all who heard them were highly pleased with their splendid messages. This is my third year on this charge, and of the three this one has heen the hest. We have had quite a number of professions of conversion this year, and we have had 18 to line up with our Church. I will say that all of the churches in this charge raised the assessment for ministerial support in the early part of the year, and that each church is going to pay up the pastor's salary with an over-plus. We have some very fine people, and they know how to treat their pastor. Some of them have been frequent visitors to the parsonage all along during the year, bringing us all kinds of good things to eat, and this pastor and his family have enjoyed and appreciated all of the kindly gifts from the hands of these dear, good people. I am going to have a very good report to give in at the Annual Conference. I am doing what I can for the Advocate, and I hope that I will he able to secure more suhscriptions for our paper before the Annual Conference convenes.—H. E. Raley, P. C.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your hile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the hones and should never he put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large hottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetahle and pleasant to take and is a perfect suhstitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children hecause it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

Cleanliness.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." We are too prone to think that "cleanliness" refers only to the exterior of our hodies. But unless your bowels are kept open and your liver active, you cannot expect to keep your body clean. The perspiration through skin pores is forced to carry off more than its share of the hody's impurities. Do not allow constipation to poison you. Cleanse your entire system with Van Lax, which contains no calomel and no hahit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to the taste and produces pleasant results. For sale hy the hest dealers everywhere. In hottles—price 50c. Manufactured by the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

HOW FAITH WORKS.

It is well for us to realize that God's ways are past finding out. Faith does not seek to know His reasons. For faith worketh hy love, and love is utterly without suspicion. Faith refuses to relax its steadfast hold upon God's goodness hecause His ways appear to be contradictory of immediate personal advantage. Falth recognizes that at present it knows hut in part, and is willing to wait for the full revelation until God discloses Himself in eternal light. Faith comes into its own hy realizing that the little it knows of God is a prophecy of all that shall one day satisfy its every desire. —J. S. Holden.

UNDERSTOOD THROUGH EXPERIENCE.

All life, all the great passions of life, are understood only hy experience. It demands the poet's eye to see poetic beauty; the artist's eye to see art beauty. We do not see light through the demonstrations of the astronomer; we know love only hy loving; and life only by living. In the essential nature of things God cannot manifest Himself to an impure, unspiritual soul, any more than the sun can shine into a hlind man's eye. We know God only hy the indwelling of God.—H. Allon.

THE STORY OF A GREAT DISCOVERY.

The hardships of a traveling salesman's life had wrecked my health. My family physician diagnosed my case as chronic gastritis, brought on by a congested liver and complicated by kidney trouble. I consulted specialists in New York and other cities where my travels called me. They confirmed his diagnosis and approved his treatment. Months passed, I grew worse and was finally compelled to give up my work.

By chance I heard of some wonderful recoveries which had resulted from drinking the water of a little spring in the Mineral Belt of South Carolina, a picture of which spring appears on this page. In desperation I tried it. On the second day I imagined that I could notice some improvement; at the end of the first week my appetite and digestion had returned, and I was much stronger; at the end of the third week I felt that I was completely restored. That was nine years ago and I still enjoy perfect health.

Knowing that it had restored my health and believing that it had saved my life, I bought the Spring.

I then determined to see whether the water would restore others as it had me. During the first year I shipped ten gallons free of charge to each of one thousand sufferers from chronic diseases. Only four reported no benefit from the use of the ten gallons. The others reported decided benefit or complete restoration. Many claimed that the water had saved their lives.

I realized that I had discovered one of the world's greatest mineral springs, and I decided to devote my life to it. But how could I make the world listen; how could I make them believe my story? The precious water was running to waste while thousands were suffering. I said, I will make them believe me by showing my faith in them and in the restorative power of the Spring. I will tell them that the water shall cost them nothing if it fails to benefit them.

The world listened.

Some wrote for proof and I sent them the letters which I had received from their fellow sufferers. Others accepted my offer without question. Thousands have written me reporting relief and permanent restoration from a great variety of chronic diseases.

But some of the water still ran to waste for lack of belief. I determined that every drop should be used to relieve the sufferings of humanity. To this end I requested a physician friend of mine to come to see me. At my desk I spened my mail and showed him the letters from men and women from all parts of the country who had suffered and who had found relief. I gave him my letter files and induced him to spend several hours reading my past correspondence with those who were using the water. I showed him the chemical analysis and letters from physicians and chemists explaining the medicinal properties of the water.

He believed, and as a result he has written this announcement for me.

WILL YOU BELIEVE?

I do not ask your implicit faith; only enough to try the water for three weeks as I did. I estimate that I drank about ten gallons and I, therefore, offer gladly to give you the equivalent of a three weeks visit to the Spring by by shipping you two five-gallon demijohns on my agreement that if you find that it does not benefit you I will promptly refund the price, which is only $2.00. You must promise to drink the water in accordance with the instructions which I will send you and return the empty demijohns. I make you the sole judge as to whether the water has benefitted you or not and hope you will feel perfectly frec to accept my offer.

This offer is extended to all who suffer with any curable disease, but I especially recommend the water for the treatment of stomach, liver, kidney and bladder diseases and conditions resulting therefrom, such as rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, gout, uric acid poisoning, nervous headache and general debility resulting from impure or impoverished blood. These are the diseases most frequently mentioned in the letters which I have received, but my offer is open to any one who suffers from any curable ailment.

Yours sincerely,

N. F. Shivar

EVERY MAIL BRINGS ME LETTERS LIKE THESE:

Savannah, Georgia.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—As you are well aware I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered 10 gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months from date I began drinking it gained 29 lbs., was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportions that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely nature's remedy.

A. L. R. AVANT, M. D.

Blaney, S. C.

Shivar Spring, Shelton, S. C.: Gentlemen—I suffered for many years from gastric trouhles, stomach puffed and food sour. I have tried many remedies and a good many waters, Some have helped, hut none have given me such relief as your Spring Water. I use it and recommend it to my patients.

W. D. GRIGGSBY, M. D.

Chancellor, Ala.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—I have been for many years affected with uric acid and kiduey trouble, and the mineral water has helped me more than anything I have ever done for them, and therefore heartily recommend same to all who need a speedy relief. Very truly, W. F. MATHENY, M. D.

DuPont, Georgia.

Shivar Spring, Shelton, S. C.: Gentlemen—I have suffered for years with nervous indigestion and kiduey troubles. Derived more benefit from the Shivar Spring Water than from months at Hot Springs, Ark., and numerous other springs. I cousider it the very best water extant. AGUSTUS DUPONT.

Scranton, S. C.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—My wife has hecn a sufferer of rheumatism and, after drinkiug twenty gallons of your mineral water was entirely relieved of the horrihle disease. Yours Respectfully,

J. D. McCLAM.

Lexington, Va.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—I sufferecl with intestiual indigestion aud the Shivar Spring Water has restored me. I would gladly recommend it to all suffering with indigestion, kidney and liver trouble. My father had kidney trouble last fall and he thought Shivar Spring Water saved his life.

Respectfully, MRS. HARVEY DIXON.

Roper, N. C.

I am anxious to get more of the Water. It has done me more good than anything I have ever tried for rheumatism.

MRS. H. C. EDWARDS.

Warrenton, Va.

It is doing my rheumatism so much good. My limbs are beginning to feel like new ones.

MRS. JAMES R. CARTER.

Atlanta, Georgia.

In the interest of the afflicted, I cheerfully state, seeing your advertisement in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate I decided to try Shivar Sprlug Water in the case of my daughter, who had been a sufferer from a malicious type of sciatica; and could get no permanent relief from medicine. After using the Water a few weeks she has almost entirely gotten relief from pain. In this case it has heen a great blessing.

M. L. UNDERWOOD,
Pastor Oakland City M. E. Church So.

Columbia, S. C.

I suffered for 8 years with kidney tronhle and inflammation of the bladder. After using this water only a few days, I am entirely relieved and suffer no more effect of the trouble whatever. J. P. D.

Newberry, S. C.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—I suffered with indigestion, but after using Shivar Spring Water I can enjoy eating the food I waut without any uupleasant feeling afterwards. I take great pleasure in recommending this splendid water to all sufferers of indigestion. Very truly, L. B. WHITE, Pastor West End Baptist Church.

Guyton, Georgia.

Mr. N. F. Snivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—Water came and I went right to drinking it, was in bed with indigestion, heart cutting up all kinds of pranks, was under the doctor's treatment. The first case of your water relieved me. I thought I had drunk the water of all the springs in South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee, hut this heats them all. Am eating anything I want, even sweet potatoes, something I have not eaten hefore in twenty years.

Yours very truly, H. W. ORVIN,

MORNING PAPERS THROUGH THE AIR.

We take the following from a recent issue of The Outlook:

"The other day the morning papers from Turin, Italy, reached London shortly past noon. They had been transported in seven hours and twenty-two minutes. They came by air. Had they come by train and steamer, they would have taken three times as long. This feat makes one feel that before long passengers and papers may be traveling regularly between the capitals of the world, especially as one also recalls Lieutenant Marchal's recent flight of eight hundred miles across Germany and Captain Laureati's trip of nine hundred and twenty miles from Turin to Naples and back without stop."

Truly, we are living in a wonderful age. What developments may he ahead within the next few decades, it is beyond the power of the most imperial imagination to conceive. For aught we know, there may be about us in nature unknown forces which, when discovered and utilized, will make the achievements of steam, electricity, and ether look tame.

THE LIBERTY LOAN OVERSUBSCRIBED.

The second Liberty Loan to the United States Government, notwithstanding the uneasiness that was felt at times, was in the wind-up a great success, the maximum mark of $5,000,000,000 being considerably overtopped. The citizens of New Orleans subscribed more than $17,500,000, going nearly $3,000,000 above the maximum figures fixed for it, and the total New Orleans area took approximately $30,000,000 worth of bonds, about $10,000,000 more than was expected. The South generally responded splendidly to this call of the Nation

It is easy to pronounce the words, "Five Billion Dollars," but it is difficult to realize what an enormous sum of money that it is. The whole Civil War, which lasted for four years and which shook the Nation to its deepest center, is estimated to have cost about $8,000,000,000; but already the actual and prospective financial outlay of our country in the present struggle is several times that sum. The United States is by far the richest and most resourceful nation in the world, and her entrance into the great war means that it will be properly financed and that the Allies will ultimately win, though it may take longer to overcome Germany than many imagine. Touching upon the question of the probable duration of the conflict, the Manufacturers Record (Baltimore) of Oct. 25 says: "No one can foretell the end of the war. It may be one year (but we think it will be longer), two years, three years, four years, or it may drag along at still greater length."

Let us as Christians pray that a righteous peace may come as soon as possible, and at the same time do all in our power to help to strengthen the arm of our Government as it seeks to end the fearful reign of militarism and bloodshed upon such terms as will do justice to all and safeguard the peoples of the world against another such outbreak of barbarism.

TRYING TO KEEP DR. JOWETT.

One of the most popular preachers and pastors in the English-speaking world is Dr. J. H. Jowett, who for some years has been serving the famous Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, but who tendered his resignation to that congregation some months ago, with a view to returning to England. The New York Presbyterians, however, are very reluctant to give him up, and are endeavoring to induce him to remain in the great American metropolis, as the following statement sent out by the Church News Association (New York) shows:

"Presbyterians are bringing all possible pressure to bear upon Dr. John Henry Jowett to compel him to withdraw his resignation of the pastorate of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, and remain in this country. He had previously resigned and accepted the pastorate of Westminster Chapel, London, in succession to the Rev. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, the well-known English divine, who has many times visited this country. The Rev. Dr. Jowett's reason was that, English born, his heart is back home, and he felt sure England needs him now and will need him more when the enlisted men come home from France. He had announced his desire to be relieved from his New York pastorate at the earliest moment, but had promised to remain until a successor can be found.

"The reasons now brought to bear upon the famous preacher as to why he ought to remain are that the Rev. Dr. Morgan has not been able to leave England as he had planned; that America in the war makes it possible now for him to say things from his pulpit that he might not have been able to do in a neutral country; that New York and not London is now the center of the English-speaking world of influence, and hence New York and not London is the platform from which to address the world; and that his influence and numbers spoken to in New York are far greater than he can hope for in London. This fall not only has the Fifth Avenue Church been filled in all of its more than two thousand pews, but hundreds and even thousands were unable to gain admittance. The Presbyterians of almost the whole country are backing up the New York plea that the famous preacher should remain."

GET IT STRAIGHT.

The Alahama Advocate of November 1 says: "The papers of the M. E. Church for the most part have rightly refrained from taking sides one way or the other in reference to the discussion in Southern Methodism concerning the 'Address.' A few, however, have not been so impartial. They have sought to help the Eleazer-Fritts combination in the assault upon our Church." A similar statement was made by Dr. Bradfield, in the Texas Christian Advocate, before this utterance appeared in the Alabama Advocate.

The truth is, the following Northern Methodist papers have commented sympathetically upon the Eleazer-Fritts fulmination: The Western, the Northwestern, the Pittsburgh, and the New York Christian Advocates, Zion's Herald, and the Eastern Methodist. As will be seen, this list includes nearly all of the leading official organs of the Church, North. Some of these journals have scattered all over their territory the statement that "TWO HUNDRED PROMINENT LAYMEN MET IN CHATTANOOGA AND ISSUED THE ADDRESS," whereas the "Address" was issued without any meeting at all being held; and the attendance upon the meeting that was afterwards held there has been variously reported at from 5 to 24 persons. In some of these Northern weeklies were also used sensational titles, such as "Another Storm Brewing in the South," "The Southern Methodist Episcopacy Under Fire," etc., while those starting the agitation were applauded for their spirit and courage. And not a single one of these publications has corrected any of the misrepresentations made, though some of our papers have called attention to them.

HELP YOUR PASTOR.

These are busy days with our pastors in Louisiana and Mississippi. The Annual Conferences are almost at hand, and, besides doing their regular work, they are struggling to raise the Conference collections, that the important causes sustained by these funds may not suffer. Every member of the Church ought to pay as liberally as he can to these assessments, without which the general work of the Church could not be maintained and its necessary enterprises carried forward. If there was ever a time when our people needed to be generous with their gifts, it is now. The high cost of the necessaries of life affects the activities of the Church as well as other things. Our missionaries must have more money for their support than has hitherto been required, and this is also true of workers in the homeland, who receive only meager salaries and who have no high-priced commodities to sell. Not since the Civil War has there been a time when a dollar would buy as little as it will now. AND DO NOT WAIT FOR YOUR PASTOR TO CALL UPON YOU FOR A SUBSCRIPTION TO THESE INDISPENSABLE FUNDS. Make it a point to see him and hand him what you wish to pay. This will be a great help to him amid his many perplexing duties. Do this without any further delay.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

Drew Theological Seminary (Madison, New Jersey), one of the foremost institutions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has recently celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. It is stated that since its establishment in 1867, 2500 ministers have studied in its halls. The teaching at Drew is considered conservative.

OUR LAGGARD FEET.

G. W. Tuttle.

From a pastor's prayer: "The laggardness of the feet that have been set toward Thy Kingdom!"

Yes, Lord, thou knowest all! Our feet have laggard been—so slow
For followers of thine, who swift upon thy way should go;
While sinful thoughts and careless deeds have been as miry clay
To keep our feet from pressing on in straight and narrow way.

And selfisbness, in beauteous garb, has bid us turn aside,
Take eyes of ours from off the goal, and at our ease abide;
While pleasure's lure has beckoned us across the narrow way,
And her silken fetters woven to bind us for a day.

Or burdens came upon us with their heavy weight of care;
Or ills of flesh perchance have dragged beyond our strength to bear.
Our eyes we lift to thee, O Lord. Grant us abundant grace
That we no longer laggard be who run the heavenly race. —N. W. Christian Advocate.

THE BIGGEST LIE.

The biggest lie ever uttered in hell is that the devil is an easy master and God a hard one. I would like to drive that lie back into perdition; and I testify now that my God is not a hard master and the devil not an easy one. I take up the old book, and read, "The way of the transgressor is hard;" and looking around me, I see that it is hard. Go down to yon prison, and ask the prisoner if it is not hard. Go with me to the gambler, the drunkard, the forger, who has lost everything, and ask if the way of the transgressor is not hard. —D. L. Moody.

"UP-TO-DATE, BUT WHAT DATE."

"Pure Christianity gives her remission of sins only by ending them; false Christianity gets her remission of sins by compounding for them. And there are many ways of compounding for them. We English have beautiful little quiet ways of buying absolution, whether in low Church or high, far more cunning than any of Tetzel's trading." Thus wrote Ruskin in a way to provoke thought, some time ago. Long before that Paul wrote "Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? God forbid." What audacity then for cults as new as cider just from the pulp to pick up these doctrines and market them under the seal of "modernism." When you shout, "look at the new moon" some verily imagine it is Luna's first appearance. Thinkers know different, and old lovers who won a bride in the gloaming years ago can be cited as witnesses to prove it.—Unidentified.

BE A CLIMBER.

Characters are not built in a day. It takes only a summer to grow an onion, but it requires nearly a century to grow an oak. It is not the first reading of the book which makes you the possessor of its contents, but the re-reading and thoughtful meditation on its contents. It is the continued accumulations of the littles that make men wealthy. Some people never become too old to learn. Any one can start well, but it requires strength to hold out. Lay up strength mentally, physically and morally. When you fail or are defeated try again. Never give up. If we overcome we shall sit down with our Lord on His throne. We climb into the larger places of life.

"We have no wings, we cannot soar,
But we have feet to scale and climb,
By slow degrees, by more and more,
The cloudy summit of our time."

Climb into the higher places of life, continue in the habit of prayer and personal service. Count on God to help you unto the end.—Christian Intelligencer.

THE GOSPEL'S POWER.

The Gospel power is simply indescribable and incomparable. It moves in a realm all its own. It is a unique force and is always beneficent in its purposes. Having operated among the children of men from time immemorial, nevertheless its power is undiminished and its mission unbroken by the flight of centuries. Though appealing to men—men of high pretenses as to scholarship and research, as well as to men of low degree, whether accepted or rejected, it moves onward in its mission of mercy and salvation, the mightiest force in God's universe, a strong witness against those who reject it as their only hope of salvation, and a mighty comfort and a glorious assurance of victory over sin, the world, the flesh and the devil, including death and the grave, to those who accept it. Its redeeming power is marvelous, saving from sin and all its woes, from its power and its impurity, by the power of an endless life. In all the above statements it becomes evident that it is a Divine power, for Paul declares it to be "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." It is tendered to all who will accept it without money and without price.

It is not of human origin, its very purpose and objective being evidence of that fact. Man could not have contrived it nor launched it. It required the Son of God. His incarnation, His humiliation, His crucifixion and His resurrection. Christ is the very substance of it, the glory of it, as also its consummation. It transforms hearts and glorifies life. It sweetens every bitter draught, it guides into pastures green and among running and sparkling streams of grace. It is the children's friend, the hope and assurance of the aged, their rod and their staff. It is light in the darkness, life in death, and the song of victory in the life to come. It makes the wilderness blossom as a rose, fruitful as a garden, and makes all things new. In the testing lies its imparted strength and is realized its unquestionable virtues. It is the harbinger of peace and the hope of the world. Its power in hearts and lives is unlimited except as man by his disobedience curtails its efficacy. Would that needy humanity would give it the right of way in its mission of helpfulness and redemption.—The Evangelical Messenger.

THE QUESTION OF UNIFICATION.

By Rev. S. H. Werlein, D.D.

When great vital issues come before deliberative bodies like the Congress of the United States, it is generally the case that all partisanship is laid aside and a solid vote is cast. So it has occurred recently in Washington.

In the great issue now before American Methodism four distinct parties are involved—God, the two Methodisms, and the Negro.

1. God. The supreme question is: Where does God stand on the question of Methodist union? What does he ordain?

We have presumable leaders among us who tell us that it is an unwarranted assumption to say that God desires the Methodists to unite. They declare that unity is not uniformity. Some of them ask: "Do you propose to make all trees alike, all animals alike? Then how can all men be made alike?" This has nothing whatever to do with uniting all Methodists into one Church. Besides, the Word of God teaches that men are not trees and animals, but that they are made of one blood and that God is their Father and that they are all brethren. These opponents to union tell us that Christ's prayer for union is in consonance with the multiplicity of sects and Churches. They put much emphasis on "solidarity," "traditions," "history," and declaim against any movement which would submerge the present organization into a recognized body. Many of them are "stand-patters" and intensely sectional. I want to assure them that the majority of Southern Methodists have outgrown these sentimental vagaries. The voice of the Southern Church has been unmistakably heard in the spontaneous and almost unanimous action of every Conference. Some of the presiding officers did not hesitate to discourage consideration of the question, but the preachers took it in their own hands and passed resolutions indorsing union. At the Woman's Missionary Council, representing two hundred thousand women, a resolution favorable to union was passed, with only two votes dissenting. This is the attitude of the Southern Methodist Church. The vast majority want union. They are convinced that this movement is inspired by the Holy Spirit. They believe that the prayer of our Lord, among other things, involves the unification of American Methodism. They believe that inaction in this matter would be a concession to prejudice and a step backward and that it would be displeasing to God and a consequent loss of spiritual power. If this is true of a large majority in the Church, opponents, whoever they are, will do well to take heed. The sheep know the Master's voice. Let those who would lead in this crisis be sure that the Master speaks through them.

The kind of unity which has heretofore obtained between the two great Methodist bodies is evidently not the unity which Christ encourages, because it has been characterized by unbrotherliness, distrust, misunderstanding, rivalry, controversy, waste, which have, to a large extent, retarded the progress of the kingdom of God on earth. They tell us that Christian unity means "keeping the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace." They must admit that the two Methodisms have not been practicing this kind of unity.

2. The next party to this movement is the Southern Methodist Church. If God urges the unification of Methodism, what shall be the attitude of the Church? Manifestly the duty of the Church is to do his will. The Church must stand pre-eminently for Christianity. It is here in the world to represent Christ and take his position on every question. No consideration of [illegible] atom of prejudice, no influence of caste, no assumption of race superiority can be allowed to stand in the way. The gospel must be dominant. If caste is right according to Scripture, then let it prevail; let it defeat the proposed union. If secularism is justified by the gospel, then let us be Southern, wholly Southern, and refuse all coalition with the "Yankees." To some of our aspiring brethren, the Northerner is always the "Yankee." It is written: "The times of this ignorance God winked at." I suppose on this ground the majority must wink at prejudice that cannot be justified or excused by the teaching of the gospel. One of the most intense anti-unionists admitted to me that his position was unscriptural, but that it was necessitated by social conditions and racial prejudices peculiar to the South. To be capable of counseling two million people in a matter of such vast importance, no man has divine authority to declare what the "irreducible minimum" shall be unless that minimum be Christ's final statement. We are facing a fact most weighty, and that is that a very respectable and influential minority in the Southern Church have declared they will resist union unless the Negro withdraws or is removed from the Methodist Episcopal Church. This is their ultimatum. They are taking the position that the Southern Methodist Church is exclusively a white man's Church. If the Savior came to them with the face of an Ethiopian, they would close the door to him. In Africa we have a mission to the Negroes. In due time Annual Conferences will be organized. The Negroes in the Congo Mission are members of the Southern Methodist Church. They are so far away that no objection is now made. The attitude of the Northerners toward the Negro is much criticized by some Southerners. The consideration shown to the Negro by the Methodist Episcopal Church tends to social equality, they say. This is not true. The Northern white man has as distinct an appreciation of Caucasian blood as any Southern man and would be as quick to condemn amalgamation with the negro as the whites of the South. The negro knows his place in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has abandoned the hope of ever having a negro Bishop. True, some negroes among them speak unadvisedly and exhibit a temper, to say the least, unwise and provoking, but the majority of the negroes are amenable to white leadership. As for the brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church, we have no right to doubt their good faith and brotherly love. They are as clean-souled as we are; they are as submissive to Christian ethics as we are; they are as honorable and worthy of confidence as we are. Objections are urged that union with the Methodist Episcopal Church would jeopardize the autonomy of the Southern Church. Suppose it would. Would that hinder or jeopardize the kingdom of God? Are we working for the autonomy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, or for the kingdom of God? Others see in it a menace of the veto power of the Southern Bishops. Even that would not delay the coming of the millennium. Surely the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church have as much power as is safe to be intrusted to human beings. To centralize power in a few individuals is, to say the least, undemocratic and will ultimately be discontinued. The question is: Will the South consent for the negro to be an integral part of the new organization? A majority in the South would doubtless consent, but a most influential minority would dissent. If the will of the majority prevails, it would produce disaffection in the Southern Church, and not a few would abandon the Methodist Church and unite with other Churches. Thus it is that the action of the majority is hampered by the attitude of the minority. A union forced by a majority would be no union. It would be disastrous. Unless the minority shall see the importance of this movement and be willing to make the concession, the probability is that union will be defeated. The small representation of negroes in the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church is neglible. How much more so with the additional representation of the Southern contingent? If union is to be consummated, somebody will have to make a concession. I have no fear that if the negro is allowed to be a part of the new organization he will he any more offensive to the Southern section than he is to the Methodist Episcopal Church now. It will be simply impossible to proceed in this matter if each party to the movement is unwilling to make any concessions. Those who stubbornly refuse to budge an inch from the position they have taken must realize their accountability to God. It is a very serious thing to stand in the way of an innovation like this, which means so much toward the whole question of Christian unity. Some of the minority are determined to accept no conciliatory measures whatever. Dr. Du Bose has outlined a plan worthy of consideration. Mr. J. H. Light, in the Nashville Advocate of May 11, has written an excellent communication; but both papers will meet with the disapproval of the minority. The position of the minority must prevail, or there will be a mighty protest heard.

3. The next party to this movement is the Methodist Episcopal Church. There are two classes in that Church—those who are represented by Dr. Blake and those who stand for the Saratoga platform. The latter take the position that the negro is not sufficiently advanced to set up for himself. Such an assumption is not confirmed by the African Methodist Episcopal Church, the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, the colored Baptist Church, the colored Congregational Church, and the Zion Methodist Episcopal Church.

The two Churches that owe the world the example of unity are the two great American Methodist Churches. They did more to bring about the Civil War than any other agencies, and they have to a large extent fanned the fires of sectionalism and prejudice among the American people. This is not to their credit. The negro separated them in 1844 and keeps them apart now. Can they afford to continue this controversy until the judgment? The contention over negro slavery is settled. The negro is free. For this the Northern Church fought. They won. Now the question is: Cannot they make some disposition of the negro as will make it possible to come to terms of agreement with the aforesaid minority in the South? The negro is not a babe and incapable of self-government. If the Northern Church will be willing to encourage him to set up for himself, convey to him the ownership of all schools, churches, and property now in use by him, assure him of constant sympathy, co-operation, and good will, would not many of the negroes be willing to such an arrangement? A similar plan has worked well in the case of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. The plea I make is that somebody must take the lead in making the magnanimous, Christ-like sacrifice. Wherever it is a matter of mere sentiment, action is possible. Where principle is involved no concession can be made. Will the Northern Church do this in the interest of the union? Many of them may say that union at such a price is not worth the having, but a vast number among them are of the contrary opinion. This is feasible. Such a step would not be any loss to the negro. On the contrary, it would inspire him to greater effort. They could then have their own Bishops and develop the ability of self-government.

4. The fourth party to this question is the negro. He has at last reached the place where he can heal the wounds and close the breach between American Methodists of which he was the innocent and involuntary cause. This is a wonderful situation. Many of them prefer to remain with the Mother Church, and many in the mother Church want them to do so; but the question for them to consider is, what is best for the kingdom of God? Will the negro be willing to remove the obstacle that now stands in the way of uniting the white Methodists? He may claim that he is asked to make too great a sacrifice. Dr. Jones, Editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate, declares: "We will do no such thing, not until the crack of doom." He construes such a step as tantamount to relinquishing their divine rights in the kingdom of God. How he arrives at such a conclusion may be clear to his mind, but is not to the writer's. The point that I am making is, as before stated, somebody has to make the sacrifice. If the minority of the Southern Methodist Church refuse, will the Methodist Episcopal Church make the concession? If they refuse to take the initiative, will the negro prove equal to the glorious task? Will they give their white brethren an example in heroic self-effacement? But there is another consideration that I wish to call to their attention. The Methodist Episcopal Church is not unanimous in retaining the negro contingent among them. I have discussed this question during the past two decades with some of the leaders of that Church, and they have expressed the belief that the time was near when it would be advisable to set up their colored membership into a strictly colored Church. If the colored people would lose any real advantage by a separate organization, I would sympathize with their refusal. They would, on the contrary, increase respect and recognition. It would be a manly thing for them to do. It would be a proclamation to the world of their trust in God and their confidence in themselves.

I have been repeatedly told by some of the most prominent thinkers of Southern Methodism that they are willing to have union on the basis of the Saratoga proposition. They have declared to me that in their opinion the presence of a small number of negroes in the General Conference would not be hurtful to the interests of the Southern people. On the contrary, some of the friends of union take the position of Dr. Cannon, of the Richmond Christian Advocate, that in order to effect a real union the negro must be eliminated from the new organization. We all know that Dr. Cannon is a most earnest advocate of union.

If the Northern Church can appreciate the difficulties in the way of the South, and deem that union is a matter of such paramount importance that it should be consummated even at the cost of encouraging their negro members to organize a separate Church, a great step forward will have been made.

If the negroes will act for themselves and remove the obstacle—if they can do it in the spirit of the Master, and bide the hour when they shall achieve such racial excellence as shall disarm their white brother of distrust, surely the outcome will contribute to the ultimate triumph of Jesus Christ.

THE LOUISIANA Y. M. C. A. WAR WORK COUNCIL.

"We are here on business for our King" and "the King's business demandeth haste," seemed to be the dominant ideas of the Y. M. C. A. War Work Council, held in Alexandria, La., on Oct. 24. The purpose of the Conference was to plan Louisiana's part in the nation-wide campaign to raise $35,000,000 for Y. M. C. A. work among the American, French, Russian and Italian soldiers and to help care for prisoners-of-war of the Allies.

Enthusiasm! Yes, plenty of it. But the zeal manifested was strictly according to knowledge, for those composing the Conference were not dawdling dreamers, but practical business men, lawyers of keen and far-reaching insight, educators and college men who practice the most rigid economy, ministers who know how to "multiply a nickel to minister to a multitude," and, last but not least, trained men of the National Young Men's Christian Association, who seem to be wise as serpents, and almost as swift as eagles in seizing an opportunity! They carefully plan their work, and then tirelessly work their plans!

Although Louisiana's allotment of the $35,000,000 was $125,000, the Conference was unwilling to such a low estimated and enthusiastically voted to raise $200,000, which doubtless will he raised, with a snug surplus! The week for the actual campaign is set for November 11-19, hut the publicity campaign is already on!

The quota for New Orleans was fixed at $75,000, which the workers are confident will be raised. The State is divided into twelve districts with each one headed by a trained Y. M. C. A. worker.

Mr. B. B. Taylor presided over the Conference and Mr. W. P. Goodale acted as Secretary. Judge H. H. White was easily the leading figure in the Conference, acting as Chairman of the Resolutions Committee.

Among those who addressed the Conference were: W. H. Bilheimer of New York City, Maj.-Gen. J. E. Hodges, Col. F. P. Stubbs, and Geo. M. Day, recently from Russia. Mr. Day's narrative of the Russian Revolution, of which he was an eye-witness, was thrilling and gripping in interest. He is optimistic concerning Russia in the world-war.

By far the most eloquent and stirring address of the Conference was delivered by Rev. Geo. W. Truett, D. D., of Dallas, Texas. No pompous platitudes, brilliant bombast, nor glittering generalities were indulged in, hut facts, forceful and fiery; arguments, cogent and convincing, and timely and telling truths were hurled at us, straight from the shoulder. In language simple but sublime, Dr. Truett showed that this is no day to trifle or temporize, but to do, as a nation, the best that is in us. This is no time to cringe nor criticise, hut a time to conquer and to coerce. If the South to-day has a man more powerful on the platform or in the pulpit than Dr. Geo. W. Truett, we have not heard him.

The work of the Y. M. C. A. has grown beyond the expectation of the wildest dreamer. In training camp, in aviation field or in the trenches in Europe, the "hut" or the "dugout" are havens of rest and centers of clean and wholesome recreation and worship. More than 500 temporary Y. M. C. A. buildings are in operation in the 32 camps in America, and already during the brief sojourn of our soldier boys in France, more than 50 huts and buildings have been erected.

These are manned hy trained and efficient secretaries who do everything that mortal man can do to minister to the "Sammies" in body, mind and soul. In this time of great national and world-wide peril and calamity, when our soldier boys have such few chaplains and these chaplains are furnished with no equipment, who knows but that the Young Men's Christian Association has come to the Kingdom for such an hour as this? Therefore let every one who reads these lines open his purse and give liberally to Y. M. C. A. War Work in Louisiana.

THAT OVERLAPPING.

Dear Dr. Meek: Two principal reasons are presented in support of Methodist Church "Unification" hy some who favor the closer union sentiment.

1. That the Methodist Church as a result of this unification may become to be a "World Power" and accomplish greater things for extending the Kingdom of Christ—supposing, of course, that a very large church must naturally secure success in proportion to numerical strength and increased resources otherwise. But many times God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the things that are mighty, and "things that are not to bring to naught the things that are" that "he that glorieth might glory in the Lord" and not in the prominence of the individual or in the largeness of the Church.

We are thankful for the great Churches, and Churches, like individuals, must be going forward and gaining in order to be highly useful, and to perpetuate with honor in the business to which it is assigned; but Churches even are not of necessity used of God in proportion simply to the numbers in membership. Were this true "The Twelve" at the beginning would have been confronted, apparently, by the impossible when they were commanded by Him who possesses all power to "go teach all nations." God's favor and support is not secured simply by numbers.

2. "Overlapping and wasted resources" are a crime they tell us, and to unite the Churches must result in much saving of workers and of money.

Such might be true if the Church people interested should take kindly to the needed adjustment and to the assigned ministry of the once-overlapping enterprises, and should these newly appointed men of the pulpit find it possible to develop the combination—qualities which would enable them to-day to be good M. E. Church preachers, and to-morrow to fully understand all the "ins and outs" of the Southern Methodist movement and to possess intelligent heart-sympathy with the people of each of these Churches, and also to harmoniously adjust to "the brothers in black;" hut the presence of this overlapping clergy at so many places of the American Southern section, even where the M. E. Church, South, is securely planted, would indicate a defective sympathy with the Methodist Church of the Southern territory—so much so, that a minister as pastor from either wing of the unified Church would produce an embarrassment to the people and also to himself.

Also it may be remarked that the M. E. Church, South, in no sense is responsible for this overlapping business and great expenditure of men and of missionary money, except at some points in the West, which territory is supposed to be open to all the Churches alike.

Why should the triumphant and successful

Southern Church disband and depart from its sublime and divinely given mission, simply to prevent the M. E. Church from wasting money and consuming workers by sending them into a territory already well occupied by the M. E. Church, South? If they squander money and literally wreck themselves in the overlapping investments, it is strictly a matter which belongs to them only.

They set out, so we have heard, to "absorb" the big M. E. Church, South, and the fact that God has not thought well to give them their wishes in this regard is by no means a reason why this much-coveted Church should go bodily over to them.

Such a procedure would in reality indicate that the people of the M. E. Church, South, had lost their bearings and that the much mentioned overlapping and absorbing investments had indeed become to be a glowing success to the M. E. Church people.

It is far cheaper, of course, to take over the entire M. E. Church, South, and become to be at once self-sustaining in the overlapping territory than to continue the process of consuming men and money with small results and with little hope of final and satisfying success.

Now, if the people of this absorbing enterprise should generously and on their own motion come in with the M. E. Church, South—so splendidly planted in all of this coveted area of the Southern section—it would look to be a great saving of resources, since this so much at home and well established Church could easily take them over with the least increased expense of men and of money, and this would look to be in perfect keeping with the legally established plan of fraternity which now exists between the Churches; but for the whole Southern Church to disband and to destroy its identity, and to assume a change of name and to literally vanish into nonentity, simply to save a few dollars and a few people for the M. E. Church, is preposterous in the extreme—not to say contemptuous to the thought of a mind that is enlightened and without bias. Such a procedure would be to reproach the ancestry and record of the great Southern Church and to indicate small regard for God's plan to reach the immense multitudes and masses and to build up His Kingdom in the wondrously important territory of the American country.

If the M. E. Church people love the Southern Church, let them join it in the contested territory. Better that than to blot out the distinctive features of a powerful movement which is a benediction to vast sections of the United States and which is becoming to be yet more a recognized factor for good in many lands abroad.

Any Church may enter an "open door" at any point on the earth. "Go teach all nations" was the original command, and Christian rivalry is allowable in the Divine art of doing good and in planting the Church of Christ.

But it is one thing to enter an open door, and quite another proposition to modestly suggest to a people that they demolish all restrictions and go out of business entirely, that greater "elbow room" may be secured for a competitor and that the small capital invested shall be greatly augmented and the enterprise handled with nothing in expense and much in gains.

Water Valley, Miss. A. H. WILLIAMS.

A NOTE FROM JUDGE WHITE.

Dear Sir: A great campaign is on in the nation to raise $35.000,000 for financing the work of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. among the soldiers and sailors of the United States and her allies in the training camps and on the battle front. The apportionment for Louisiana was $125,000, but a conference of more than two hundred men from all parts of the State, at Alexandria on October 24, after learning of the urgent need, decided to raise the goal to $200,000. We are going to need the co-operation and support of all prominent citizens of the State in this campaign.

I quote voluntary expressions of interest from two great men.. President Wilson in a letter to John R. Mott said in part, "May I not express the very high value I have attached to the work which has been accomplished by the Young Men's Christian Association in behalf of our own Army and Navy as well as in behalf of the prisoners-of-war and the men in the training camps of Europe, and may I not express also my sincere personal interest in the large plans of the War Work Council for the work which is still ahead?" A telegram from General Pershing reads, "The Y. M. C. A. has won its place by unselfish personal devotion to the soldiers' welfare and deserves staunch support by our American people."

The work was heartily endorsed at the Conference at Alexandria on October 24 in able addresses by both Major Gen. H. C. Hodges, commandant of Camp Beauregard, and Col. F. B. Stubbs of the First Louisiana Infantry.

From time to time during the preliminary work of the campaign and the work of the actual campaign, which will be November 11 to 19, our publicity man here at State headquarters will be able to send you some valuable stories about the work of the Y. M. C. A. and the campaign. As this campaign will be carried into every parish in the State your readers will be interested in reading about it and I hope you will see fit to use as much of this material as possible. The success or failure of the campaign depends largely upon the publicity given it. May we not depend upon you to do what you can? Sincerely yours,

Alexandria, La. H. H. WHITE.

Y. M. C. A. WAR WORK.

A Statement to the People of Mississippi.

Former Senator LeRoy Percy, chairman of the Y. M. C. A. war fund campaign in Mississippi, has sent to prominent workers in the State the following appeal for help:

"The organization in charge of the Y. M. C. A. war work has decided to put on at once a campaign for the purpose of raising $35,000,000, with which sum it is proposed to put Y. M. C. A. huts in every cantonment in the United States and along every battle line in Europe held by us or our allies. The high commanders of the American, English, French and Italian forces are urgently calling for this work as being essential to the efficiency of the soldiers. These huts are virtually clean clubs for the soldiers—they are the only clubs for the privates. They furnish reading, writing, recreation rooms, moving pictures and every form of clean, sane amusement. We want clean fighting men, not only because it takes that kind to win, but we want to bring these men back home clean, for they are the men who are going to shape the future of this nation.

"In the first Y. M. C. A. drive Mississippi was assessed $20,000 of the $5,000,000 raised. She raised $1500 (subsequently increased after the campaign closed to $2800). In the Red Cross campaign she was not assessed along with Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas or any other Southern State, but was asked for $150,000 along with Arizona, Wyoming, Utah—the sparsely settled, sagebrush States of the West—and contributed only $121,000. In the present work it is proposed to raise $35,000,000 and Mississippi is assessed only $100,000. The record she has made is not one to be proud of. Won't you help me to take the State out of the slacker class?

"This money must be raised during November by the efforts of the business men of the State, unless we are willing to be pensioners upon the bounty of others for the care of our Mississippi boys."

A PRESIDING ELDER SPEAKS.

My Dear Dr. Meek: I have read your editorial on the work of the Unification Commission in the Advocate of Nov. 4, and I must say that I was astounded at some of the things that were done. I am pleased to find you disposed to give the Church information. We should know.

Sincerely yours,

HARRY W. MAY.

HON. JOHN M. ALLEN DEAD.

Dear Doctor Meek: At five o'clock on Tuesday morning, October 30, the Hon. John M. Allen passed from the scenes of this world. Just as the new day was dawning, he asked for the light to be turned on and while reading the daily paper, without any alarm, his spirit entered the "Sunrise Kingdom." His going was truly "falling asleep." The brilliant, genial-hearted, beloved and famous "Private John Allen" is with us no more! I never witnessed more beautiful floral tributes. As we stood at his grave one remarked, "Only a flower could symbolize his bright and sunny life," and I, in reply, said "And he won every flower on his grave."

He was laid to rest at 2 o'clock p. m. the next day. The pastor was assisted in the services by Rev. M. H. Armour, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. W. L. Duren, and Bishop James Atkins. Our hearts are full of love and sympathy for his devoted family and large number of loved ones.

Tupelo, Miss. O. W. BRADLEY.

TO THE METHODISTS OF LOUISIANA.

Dear Friends: We are very anxious to have a goodly number of delegates to go from Louisiana to Washington, D. C., to attend the Annual Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, which will be held Dec. 10-13. This will be a great convention. We must press the battle for submission to the States of National Prohibition by Constitutional amendment. Congress will be in session and will probably have this matter up for final passage. Some of our brethren can and ought to go. Some of them have the money, but can not spare the time. In such a case, please see that some one goes from your church. If your church is not interested, send a liberal contribution to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La., to be used in defraying expenses of some who may be named by the Louisiana Conference when it is in session at Minden, Nov. 28 to Dec. 2. Please do not lay this paper aside and forget this important matter. We can do this job and get it off of our hands. And we will never be rid of the saloon until we put it out of commission by amending the Federal Constitution. This can not be done without the active support of every State Anti-Saloon League. Do you really mean business, or are you waiting to see what some one else will do?

Yours fraternally,

A. W. TURNER.

A GOOD MEETING AT STARKVILLE.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our meeting, conducted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh and his helpers, has been a good one. Brother McIntosh 'preached the Word.' He emphasized the fundamentals of the Christian faith. Mrs. McIntosh did a notable work for the women and young people. Mr. E. W. Cunningham, of Fort Worth, Tex., led the singing most acceptably. Rev. "Billy" Wilson was here a few days, and every day made his presence felt in public and personal work. The work done will abide. Many were blessed. A number have applied for membership in the Church.

DR. J. W. BEESON'S "EXPLANATION."

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just read, with some interest, in the last issue of your paper, the "explanation" by Dr. Beeson of why he is one of the signers of the "Laymen's Address;" and if you will permit me the use of a little of your valuable space I will call attention to a few of the features of Dr. Beeson's utterance which have struck me as being of peculiar logic.

Dr. Beeson is one of the signatories of the "Address," his name has been circulated as such, he is fully aware of this fact, and he has made no attempt to deny it. One of the objects of his "explanation" seems to have been to express his disapproval of "hard feelings and hot words" on the part of those opposing this movement for greater "democracy," but he fails to name those who he thinks should be benefited by this advice. One of the most astonishing features, however, of his remarks is that he solemnly announces that, though standing for it, he has never yet read the "Laymen's Address!" And in his "explanation" he seems to show no inclination to read it; though his attitude is one of actually defending it because he expresses disapprobation of any one speaking firmly against it. I must confess this to be one of the most unusual circumstances that ever came to my knowledge; for here is the President of a school, a business man and a Church worker, who confesses that he has signed a paper, which stands for a program of "investigation" into the administration of great and good ministers of his Church, a paper which advocates the complete revolution of the Church government, and which introduces a pamphlet attacking the very constitution of the Church and the actions of its Bishops to the point of trying to bring them into disrepute, and he has not read this document to which he subscribes, and shows no disposition to do so. The letter which Dr. Beeson received, along with the "Address" to which he was asked to append his name, stated that the "Address" was to be "taken in connection with a booklet we are sending you under another cover," and this booklet was the pamphlet of Dr. Ed. F.. Cook, accusing some of the Bishops of maladministration. Perhaps Dr. Beeson has not even read this castigation of some of Southern Methodism's trusted leaders, yet he has allowed his name to give it circulation and weight, for the last paragraph of the "Laymen's Address" most specifically endorses and recommends it. It seems that Dr. Beeson has gotten himself identified with a certain company of gentlemen, and whatever they do, he must think, is right.

Yet he says, "I, for one, shall not be a party to any underhanded methods or improper ways of going about discussions of proposed improvements in our Church polity. * * * It seems to me the greatest need is the deepening of the spiritual life of the Church." After it has been generally shown in the Church press that the methods pursued in getting sponsors for this "Address" were utterly unworthy, for Dr. Beeson to attempt no examination into the matter for himself, and still stand for it, leaves him guilty, at least, of a good-sized sin of omission. The writer fully agrees with him that the Church needs a deepening of the spiritual life throughout its whole extent, but it should be said that if Southern Methodism is to be continually disturbed by a revolutionary propaganda supported by men who will not first examine into it before lending their aid to it, there will be little opportunity for a real deepening of the spiritual side. And Dr. Beeson says, "I did not suspect this movement was from that source (Vanderbilt) and hope yet it will not prove to be the origin." Of course, if he wishes not to be convinced in spite of any evidence, mere words are futile. But I would like to call his attention to the facts that the Southern Methodist Church has been violently opposed in property rights in the past by Vanderbilt University, that the Methodists of Nashville have largely been poisoned against the Church by Vanderbilt, that many Southern Methodists in that city condemn some of the Bishops for not maintaining a nominal relationship with the University after it was taken from the Church, and that at least several of those who worked up, from its beginning last March, this fomentation among some of our good laymen, were of this hostile attitude toward the Church. The name of Vanderbilt University was men loned twice by Mr. Eleazer in his propaganda; and when the signers of the "Address" were called to meet in Chattanooga not long ago, Dr. W. F. Tillett and Dr. O. E. Brown, both of Vanderbilt fame, were in Chattanooga the day before, for some reason or other. It has been asserted, and not denied by any one, so far as I know, that many copies of Dr. Cook's pamphlet were sent out over Southern Methodism by some Vanderbilt professor whose name I do not know. It will hardly be possible to disprove connection between Vanderbilt sympathizers and those who have bolstered up this attempted revolution, in spite of the fact that Dr. Beeson hopes "yet" that this may be done.

Dr. Beeson seems to set much store upon narrating how he opposed a movement at the last General Conference, and was backed by this lawmaking body, to make all lay members of the Annual Conference boards members of the Conference itself. But he seems to be pained because the Annual Conferences did not allow the constitutional change to make all the Annual Conference and district lay leaders members of the Annual Conference by virtue of their office. This, it seems to the writer, would have been about as perverse action as the former. In Dr. Beeson's own Conference there appears to be seven districts; and in the Annual Conference, therefore, there is a representation of twenty-eight laymen. Now he desires eight more laymen to be ex-officio members. This would make more than one-fifth of the lay representation ex-officio members, and it would place them in direct contact with the Board of Missions and of easy access to Mr. Eleazer and his associates who are endeavoring so strenuously to revolutionize the Church. Then, it may be said that the law should not be so fixed that when the laymen elect their lay leaders, they elect in the same man a representative to the Annual Conference, because one man might make a good lay leader, while his brethren might like an entirely different individual to represent them in the deliberating Annual Conference body. I believe it would be wise to increase the lay representation in the Annual Conference body, but let it be done legally, allowing a larger delegation to be elected in the regular manner from the districts.

Dr. Beeson says: "I believe if the proper presentation (the matter of making lay leaders members of the Annual Conference) by the right parties had been made at the Annual Conferences this law might have been passed." He utters the same sentiment over again for emphasis. Does Dr. Beeson mean to say that the Bishops, in bringing this matter before the Conferences, as the General Conference requires them to do in such instances, conducted themselves in a wrong manner in so doing? or does he mean to say that the preachers of Southern Methodism had not the intelligence to vote upon the question as they should? or is he insinuating against both Bishops and preachers? This is a heavy indictment against somebody that he has made. Surely it was in the heat of argument that Dr. Beeson would inveigh against the sense of justice in our Bishops and against the common sense of our preachers, and he certainly must not mean this assertion as it sounded. The Bishops doubtless presented the question fairly, and the preachers and laymen of the Conferences voted as they knew best. I have no hesitancy in saying that if this had been a movement to increase the lay representation by election in the regular manner, I believe it would have received the endorsement of the Church.

Let me assure Dr. Beeson that the preachers love the laymen, they depend upon them and trust in them, and no amount of revolutionary propaganda will ever divide the Southern Methodist Church from its ministers. But allow me to beg Dr. Beeson the next time he is given an opportunity to unite with a real live revolution to at least scan over the constitution of the Church-razing organization before joining it.

Yours respectfully,

Baton Rouge, La. C. A. BATTLE.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The time of our Conference is near. Please do your best to get the Conference Claimants' assessment in full. With the high cost of living, if we do not pay in full our claimants will be in need. Are there not some wealthy Methodists in our Conference who upon reading this notice will send us some good checks with which to supplement the small amounts we have promised to pay our old veterans? Please read this, and God will help you if you will remember his old servants.

HIS NAME WITHDRAWN.

Albany, Ga., October 9, 1917.

Editor Wesleyan Christian Advocate:

In a recent issue of your paper, you published the names of the signers of the "Laymen's Address" in this State. I would appreciate your stating also that my name has been withdrawn from this document.

I signed the paper, thinking that it was some part of the propaganda of the Laymen's Movement, but was later awakened to the fact that it was not so at all. I do not care to be placed in the position of even seeming to be disloyal to the Church that I love so well.

Fraternally yours,

H. T. QUILLIAN.

DO NOT MISUNSTAND THEM.

God's delays are not denials. They are not neglectful nor unkind. He is waiting with watchful eye and intent heart for the precise moment to strike, when He can give a blessing which will be without alloy and will flood all the after life with blessings so royal, so plenteous, so divine that eternity will be too short to utter all our praise.—The Rev. F. B. Meyer.

Brain Blood-Supply Must Be Good.

The importance of having pure blood is perhaps never more deeply impressed on us than when we are told by physiologists that if the brain is supplied with impure blood, nervous and bilious headache, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, impaired intellect, dimness of vision, and dullness of hearing, are experienced, and in time the brain becomes disorganized and the brittle thread of life is broken.

The more we learn of the usefulness of the great blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla, the more grateful we are for this old and successful family medicine, which has accomplished so much in removing scrofula, rheumatism and catarrh and other blood diseases and correcting run-down conditions of the system. If you need a blood purifier, get Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Adv

The Great Battle

TO THE PASTORS IN MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brethren: Will you kindly do the three following things for the cause of national prohibition?

1. Announce to your congregation (or congregations) that the National Anti-Saloon League Convention will meet in Washington, D. C., on December 10, 1917.

2. Insist that some of your people attend, and ask those who will attend to notify me, that I may give them all necessary information.

3. Announce that it is possible that the House will vote on the submission of an amendment to the National Constitution while our convention is in session. This seems to be the psychological moment. Let us put on the heaviest pressure possible. Numbers will count. Let us not allow any sort of slackness to cause us to lose a victory so near at hand.

Please treat this as you would a letter written in my own hand, which the brevity of time and the scarcity of funds prevent. Fraternally,

WHISKEY SHUT OUT OF HOSPITAL.

There is a State hospital in Cleveland, presided over by Dr. A. G. Hyde, and the hospital has now more than 1700 patients. Some time ago Dr. Hyde concluded that whiskey was of little use as a medicine, and he ordered all the assistant physicians at the State hospital to eliminate it entirely from their prescriptions. This was several months ago, and the result has proven so satisfactory that Dr. Hyde declares that as long as he is superintendent of the hospital there will be no more whiskey used for medicine in it. The State Board of Administration has been watching Dr. Hyde's experiment, and now, convnced of its success, has ordered whiskey to be barred from all public institutions in Ohio which are under the control of the Board. Even in case of snake-bite the cure must be "dry." Things are moving rapidly these days, and they are not moving John Barleycorn's way. Alcohol is being used for high explosives, and it looks as though poor John were going to be blown clean over the tree-tops some of these fine days.—American Issue.

CONDEMNS THE LIQUOR TRADE.

Some time ago the New Zealand Government appointed the National Efficiency Board to investigate and report upon the liquor traffic, and on July 9 that board handed in its report. As business men they did not consider the question from the point of view of public morals, but simply from the point of view of national efficiency, and after hearing all kinds of evidence they reported as follows: "From a national efficiency point of view the board is convinced that it would be beneficial to the nation and conducive to the well-being of the people that the importation, manufacture and sale of wines, beer and spirituous liquors (including medicinal preparations containing alcohol) should be prohibited. This view is supported by results obtained in our own country under conditional prohibition, and this experience is confirmed wherever prohibition has operated." The board had no axe to grind, and its recommendation ought to help the Government of New Zealand in outlawing this costly and mischievous traffic. And while New Zealand is trying to get rid of the liquor incubus, a million-dollar advertising campaign is being inaugurated in the United States to help twenty-two "wet" States to see the light and help on the progress of national prohibition. One good result of the present war has been the revelation of the utterly unpatriotic nature of "the trade." Beer is a greater menace to Britain than Germany ever was.—Christian Guardian.

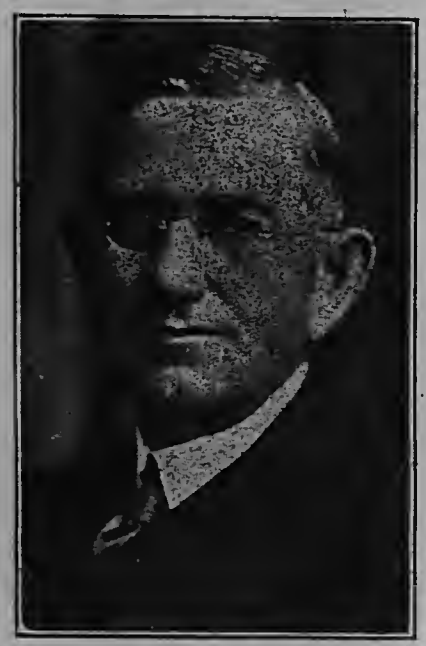
CONCERNING THE METHODIST HOSPITAL.

To the Methodists of Mississippi:

In assuming the duties of Financial Agent of the Methodist Hospital, I am deeply conscious of the need of both Divine and human help. The task is too great for one person to think of undertaking alone. I therefore earnestly ask for the most confidential relations to exist and for cordial brotherly co-operation.

Great work has thus far been done in the way of disseminating information and in securing and practically paying for admirable and adequste grounds, besides obtaining additional subscriptions for the building of the hospital proper. Many serious and unavoidable difficulties have confronted those in charge, which fact most of the contributors and friends understand and appreciate. It has taken men of iron nerve and determined will to face the obstacles without faltering. The character of the Commissioners elected by the four Annual Conferences that have entered into a covenant to build a Methodist Hospital in Memphis as well as the personnel of the Executive Committee in active control will ever be a guarantee of sound business policy and wise administration touching the direction of the building and the management of the hospital. The leadership of such men can be trusted without question, because they are not only capable, but are prompted solely by the love of the cause which the hospital represents.



MR. T. B. KING,
of Memphis, Tenn.

The necessity for another great hospital is a unanimously accepted fact, and it is also generally conceded that the evangelical Churches are seriously suffering for the want of such institutions. Never will connectional Methodism and Protestant Christianity fully measure up to the Gospel standard until ample provision is made for healing the body as well as offering full cleansing for the soul. The healing of the cripple at the gate of the temple riveted the attention of the multitude so that Peter could effectively preach the gospel of repentance and faith in Christ. Teaching by object lessons has not lost its potency and power even in this enlightened age. The effect of the beautiful and spacious church buildings are unanswerable arguments for the additional step of unitedly providing places where the sick and suffering in body can be healed. That the Methodist Hospital will be built in Memphis is a fact too well settled to ever be questioned. It will also be of such proportions as will not simply represent the spirit and genius of connectional Methodism, but will embrace the entire needs of humanity. Brotherly love and science will be beautifully blended in the treatment of persons of all creeds and classes. It can therefore readily be seen that to finance such an undertaking will be a tremendous task. The original plan of expending $500,000 is conservative—yea, it should be the minimum. Already enough money has been collected and is in sight to meet the final payment upon the 8¼ acres of ground and buildings thereon, located in the heart of the city, and in addition there has been procured approximately $100,000 in subscriptions for the hospital buildings. That is about two-fifths of the total amount that will be required to build and equip for the present and nearby demands of the growing population in and around Memphis.

Other articles will appear from time to time, giving plans and progress in raising money and the construction of buildings.

THOS. B. KING,
Memphis, Tenn. Financial Agent.

THE REGIONAL CONFERENCES.

The plans for the Regional Conferences recommended by the Sub-Committee of the Unification Commission, set forth in the Advocate of last week, cause amazement and much apprehension. Though "tentative" they may be, yet they are enveloped in a petrifactive atmosphere, which presages the obliteration of Southern Methodism.

These plans forever preclude the autonomy of Southern Methodism; while Regions 1, 3 and 4 provide for the "strong hand of power" to forever rest with the Northern Methodists. Such proposals if carried out would be the segmentary annihilation of a great Church of more than two millions of souls. And this consummation would be calamitous!

These revealed plans startle many, yet the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate deserves high credit for giving this justly due information to the people. J. LLOYD DECELL.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We are making an earnest effort to provide for the entertainment of all who may attend the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference at Oxford. Everybody knows that conditions are unusual at this time. Therefore it is more difficult than usual to secure entertainment for a great number of people. Those who are in no way connected with the Conference, but yet expect to attend and are looking to us for free entertainment, must notify me at once. All we can promise is our best effort in your behalf. It would greatly aid the committee if those members of the Conference who find it impossible to attend would notify the undersigned to that effect. Their places could be given to others. Oxford and the University community are looking forward to the Conference with great interest.

Oxford, Miss. E. S. LEWIS, Pastor.

The Texas Christian Advocate, some weeks ago, said: "Dr. A. L. Andrews, pastor of our First Church of Fort Worth, had 19 conversions among the soldiers in attendance upon his service last Sunday evening." This shows what may be done when an evangelistic pastor earnestly "throws out the life-line." Dr. Andrews, who has the stamp of old Alabama upon him, is one of the really effective men of Texas Methodism.

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

THE PLANNING OF ESTHER.

By Daisy Hughes Phipps.

Unexpected company had arrived at the Carters'. Already there was plenty to do, for to-morrow was the day of the old settlers' reunion, the great annual event of the county.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union had planned several things for the occasion. There were to be a decorated float, a tent fitted up as a rest room, and quantities of literature for distribution. A committee was appointed to look after each item.

At three in the afternoon, Esther Carter was summoned to the telephone.

"Mrs. Bailey has called at the last minute to say she can't serve on the decorations. We have the float but lack the horses and driver. Can't you get them? And the streamers haven't even been painted. Can you see after them, too? Let me know as soon as possible. I'm waiting to hear before I start to town after the rest-room furnishings."

Esther pledged her best efforts to the president's requests and turned to the task with a will. Her first step was to whisper a little prayer for help to the Friend who never fails in any emergency. The second thought was to confer with her mother. But Mrs. Carter was entertaining her guests. It seemed hardly proper to disturb her enjoyment of the first visit Cousin Kate, the companion of her girlhood, had made for years. Esther glanced out of the window. Mr. King, a stump speaker for prohibition, was passing.

"Wait a minute, please," called Esther, advancing nearer, her hand extended.

"How do you do, Mr. King? Our union's in a dilemma and I thought perhaps you might help us. We have our float for to-morrow, but no horses and no driver."

"I'm certainly sorry; my horses are at work." The speaker's voice was sympathetic. "But couldn't you get a team from the stable?"

"Probably so," answered Esther, "but Mr. Ervay is so bitter against prohibition, his prices for us have always been exhorbitant."

Slowly she walked away, disappointed, it is true, but with a determination in her heart that was greater than any possible discouragement. Presently Bobbie, aged seven, was dispatched to the livery stable with a note.

Suddenly from out the deep blue sky there came a clap of thunder. Darkening clouds began to gather. Flashes of lightning followed. The rain fell in torrents.

A cold and dripping Bobbie returned a half hour later with a reply that spelled disaster to Esther's plans. Meantime she was concentrating arduously upon the problem. Suddenly the solution dawned as clearly as the rainbow that appeared after the storm.

"Get Cousin Robert's car," was a first-aid suggestion.

"Oh, Cousin Kate," cried Esther excitedly, "excuse me a minute, but I've just thought of something. Could we use your car for the parade to-morrow? We want to decorate it for the W. C. T. U."

"I'm sure you could use it, Esther, if we stay, but Robert spoke of going to Crystal Springs to-morrow. He wants to try the water there."

"I have a bottle he can have. We must beg him to stay. It's very important for us to be represented. The election will be held in four weeks and every effort mst be made to win prohibition. I heard yesterday that the saloonkeepers are making great preparations, but we must make even greater." Esther's enthusiasm was contagious.

"I'll insist on Robert's remaining," promised Cousin Kate. "We must do all we can for prohibition," she added emphatically.

"Yes, indeed," agreed Mrs. Carter. "I feel that large issues depend on our activities to-morrow, so many of the voters will be there."

"I'm certainly glad to get a car," Esther was speaking with evident relief. "But what about the streamers? They haven't even been painted!"

"I'd get a sign painter, dear." The idea was advanced by Mrs. Carter.

"Perhaps I can. I'll go to see about it myself."

A moment more and the swift-footed messenger, regardless of the muddy streets, was on her mission, the motto of the union, "Never give up," ringing in her ears. "I won't," declared Esther stoutly, "until I see this thing through."

"Just rushed to death," was the wail of the first sign painter she visited. "Crowded now with orders," came from a second. She was about to consult a third when Archie, the bootblack, appeared. "Shine?" he was calling lustily.

There was something strangly pathetic in his wan face, particularly to those who knew his history. His father a few years back had been a successful merchant—nearly every man in the country knew Henry Cross. But drink had played havoc with his prosperity and poor Henry passed out of life by the crimeward route.

The affair created quite a sensation and yet the unfortunate man's sympathizers went right on licensing the drink trade that left Henry's wife and children with no other heritage than a tarnished name and a dowry of poverty-in-plenty.

Archie perhaps was more robust than the other children, yet his small, under-fed body, clad in ill-fitting, patched garments, stirred Esther's heart to pity. She watched him an instant; then a happy thought occurred to her.

"Archie, I want to buy a bottle of shoe polish, and wouldn't you like to make a dollar?"

"Yes'm, I would," he answered promptly, his eyes dancing at the prospect.

"Well, if you'll march in the parade to-morrow, I'll give you a dollar." The boy agreed heartily.

"Needn't mind about dressing up," Esther ventured tactfully. "Just wear what you have on."

The meeting place and other arrangements having been completed, Archie went on with his "shines" rejoicing.

After purchasing a supply of bunting and coarse domestic, the girl went in search of flags. These were kindly donated by a friend of the cause. Posters were next in order. They were found at the church where they had been used on World's Temperance Sunday. It required time and effort to remove the tacks, and when Esther reached home, completely tired out, the town clock was striking six.

"Did you get the streamers painted?" inquired Mrs. Carter.

"No, mother, the sign painters were too busy. But I'll have them painted yet."

"You haven't much time."

"No, but I'll try my hand on them." Esther smiled in anticipation of the task. After supper Cousin Kate followed her into the yard. Soon the two were working away with a zeal characteristic of loyal white ribboners.

The domestic was stretched firmly on an old table. Tacks held it in place. Then Esther opened the bottle of shoe polish, applied it with the brush, and presto—the streamers were painted!

First there were large box-car letters. "W. C. T. U." Then, Clay County Dry, September 19." Lastly there was Archie's sign, "Vote for Mother and Me."

Fair weather, wide-spread advertising, and the promise of free entertainment, brought large crowds to the reunion. Everybody and his brother seemed to be there. The parade was a mile and a half long. Near the head was the white ribbon automobile, gracefully adorned with streamers, flags, bunting, bows and posters.

Directly in front marched Archie clad in patched garments, holding high his banner, "Vote for Mother and Me." Though eyeing him curiously, the master of ceremonies allowed him to proceed unmolested. As they passed a downtown corner, a loud voice rang out, "Hurrah for the W. C. T. U.!" "Hurrah for Prohibition!" "Hurrah for Clay County Dry!"

The rest-room at the grounds was appropriately labeled as the property of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Cots, chairs, ice-water and toilet accessories composed the furnishings.

A veteran white ribboner, grown gray in service, was chairman of the committee on the distribution of literature. Approaching a man, she would say pleadingly, 'Wouldn't you like to help with the Lord's work? Then read this and vote for Clay County dry."

More than one "hardy son of toil," looking into her sweet face replied, "I believe I will, since I saw the little chap to-day." "I came here against prohibition," was the reply of one man, "but when I saw that car and the ragged boy—"

The next afternoon there was a meeting of the union.

"Well, what about yesterday? Did we make any gain?" The question asked by the president was open to all for answer.

"I think we made decided gains," answered one member. "Everybody was touched by Archie's banner. His sad history made it wonderfully effective."

Another member volunteered: "A voter told me he left home, a strong opponent of prohibition, but he said he couldn't go against the women and children, so he changed his mind."

"Our car was voted the most beautiful," ventured a new enthusiast. "Three cheers for our efficient sign painter, Miss Esther Carter!"

In a body the union rose, giving Esther the Chautauqua salute.

"I don't need any thanks," she murmured. "If only our county shall vote dry, I will be happy."

"I've saved the best news for the last," declared the president triumphantly. "The mayor told me this morning that Dry Federation clubs are to be organized in every precinct of the county!"

For three months, Alford, the county seat of Clay, had had prohibition. The town was enjoying unparalleled prosperity. At a meeting of the board of trade the president referred to the marked increase of business, then animated by a spirit of generosity, suggested, "I feel that we ought to do something worth while for the town."

The "something" was quickly discovered by the W. C. T. U.: "Pension the Cross family; see that the children are educated." Two weeks later a happy little procession of the Cross children, four in number, was marching to the public school. Esther Carter was leading them. Archie, spick and span in his first whole suit, was keeping step to the joybeats of his heart. With a confused mingling of past and present he whispered confidingly, "Miss Esther, I sure am glad they voted for 'Mother and Me.'"—The Union Signal.

FUNDS FOR THE Y. M. C. A. WAR WORK.

We are publishing in this issue of the Advocate statements concerning the efforts that are being made to raise money for the Y. M. C. A. war work in Louisiana and Mississippi. It is of great importance that these funds be secured with the least possible delay, and we hope that our pastors and people will give active assistance to those who are charged with the responsibility of carrying forward these campaigns. We must leave undone nothing that is possible to promote the moral and physical welfare of our soldier boys.

MISSISSIPPI LOSES A DISTINGUISHED CITIZEN.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, we are carrying from the pen of Rev. O. W. Bradley, our pastor at Tupelo, Miss., a notice of the death of the Hon. John M. Allen, who was one of the foremost citizens of Mississippi and of the South. We first learned to know Mr. Allen in 1897, when we were sent to Tupelo as pastor, and from that time on it was our privilege to have his confidence in some measure, though within recent years our meetings with him had not been frequent. He was a most remarkable man, rugged, picturesque, original, and forceful. He enjoyed the inestimable blessing of being well born, having come of sturdy and worthy stock. We have never known a member of his family who did not possess a robust intellect and a strong personality. One of his brothers acquired a large fortune in the city of St. Louis, and became one of the outstanding citizens of that metropolis, and his sister, Mrs. E. D. Robins, of Tupelo, is a rare woman, practical, energetic, consecrated to the Master's work, and noted for her public spirit and large usefulness.

Mr. Allen was an able lawyer and a skillful practitioner at the bar. He made a great District Attorney, and, as he once told us, it was while serving in that capacity that he earned the money that became the foundation of the competent fortune which he subsequently amassed. He figured in many noted criminal trials and few had his power to sway juries and win verdicts at their hands. He was a member of Congress for sixteen years, and retired voluntarily from that body. His career at Washington was a conspicuous one, and gave him a national reputation. He was a brilliant debater, and when he spoke the Congressional chamber and galleries were usually filled. His scintillating wit and humor delighted all who heard him and furnished him a ready passport into the highest circles of all political parties. It is said that when the Hon. Thomas Brackett Reed, of Maine, one of the most gifted men that the Republican party has produced since the Civil War, was Speaker of the House, the two Democrats for whom he entertained the most admiration and fondness were Senator J. W. Bailey of Texas and Mr. Allen.

But while the deceased undoubtedly was endowed with a faculty for humor that amounted to genius, it should not be inferred that this was by any means his only claim to distinction. He was a man of extraordinary common sense and of unusual ability in every respect. Like Sunset Cox, his wit so charmed and dazzled the public that the solid and useful work that he did was largely overlooked. He was a giant on the hustings, and whenever he participated in a political campaign eager throngs hung upon his words. Opponents dreaded to encounter him. In conversation, he was a prince of entertainers. He had a wide acquaintance with public men, kept up with current events, and possessed insight and judgment of a high order. We have known few persons to whose opinions we attached as much weight as we did to his. We have heard him relate many reminiscences of famous actors in the stormy days of the South and Nation that we shall never forget. He was a close personal and political friend of Senator L. Q. C. Lamar and entertained for him an enthusiastic admiration. He once told us that he regarded Mr. Lamar as the greatest man that he had ever come in contact with; that the ablest speeches that he had ever heard in Congress were made by him; that he had seen him address the Senate when he was so impassioned that "he looked as if he were a wild man, and that he set everything else wild."

Of Mr. Allen's many superior qualities, the space is not at our disposal to speak as we should like. He was patriotic, jealous for the honor of his State and Nation, interested in all that concerned the public welfare, and unswerving in his adherence to principle. He had a warm, kindly heart, and was sympathetic and charitable. He was a member of the Christian Church; but, as that denomination was not strong in Tupelo (being without weekly services), and his family were all Methodists, he usually, when well, attended our Church and Sunday school. He was hospitable, and his home was truly a Christian one, his devoted wife and its other inmates being distinguished for their piety and faithfulness in the Master's service.

Mr. Allen's fame is secure. So marked was his individuality and so unique were his public utterances, that he will never be forgotten. In the splendid galaxy of Mississippi's most illustrious sons he will have an unchallenged place, and men will talk of him through the coming decades, repeating his quaint sayings and telling of his brilliant feats in the court-room, on the hustings, and in the halls of Congress.

May the Heavenly Father consciously sustain the sorrowing ones in the now desolate home and all others whose hearts have been made to bleed by this coming of the remorseless Messenger, who spares no household, and help them by faith to find comfort in the great truth that for those who trust in Jesus—

"The enveloping grave is but a covered bridge, Leading from light to light, through a brief darkness!"

BILLY SUNDAY IN ATLANTA.

The Billy Sunday meeting is now on in Atlanta, Ga., and will continue for several weeks. Many of our readers may be anxious to know where they can get the best reports of the great evangelist's sermons. The Atlanta Georgian will publish Mr. Sunday's discourses in full, with complete general news of the revival campaign and descriptive articles by well known writers.

Mrs. Sunday, wife of the evangelist, will have an exclusive daily article in the Georgian, of special interest and value to women readers. The Georgian has also arranged for the exclusive publication of the Bible Class lessons prepared by Dr. George Dowey, in charge of the Bible Class work of the Billy Sunday organization.

Besides all this, the Georgian has many other interesting features—an Uncle Remus story, by Joel Chandler Harris, appearing daily.

The Georgian makes a special subscription price of $1 for the daily issues of the paper for the entire Billy Sunday campaign of about seven weeks, and we make this announcement so that readers of the New Orleans Advocate who may wish to do so, may avail themselves of this offer. Send your dollar direct to the Subscription Department of the Atlanta Georgian, 20 East Alabama Street, Atlanta, Ga., not forgetting to mention that you saw this notice in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

NO DISPOSITION TO TEST IT.

Zion's Herald continues to iterate that a majority of both the Church, North, and the Church, South, favor the organic union of the two denominations; but it is quite noticeable that the Herald has never advocated letting the congregations of the two Methodisms vote on the question. All the indications are that the ultra-unionists desire to settle this issue apart from the rank and file of the people. The Annual Conferences of the Church, South, that took action concerning it, with a very few exceptions, endorsed the Oklahoma plan of unification. That they favored union after just any sort of fashion, there is not the slightest evidence. And in all the Annual Conferences of Southern Methodism in any one year not more than 10,000 or 12,000 people assemble, and they are mostly preachers. From every direction the information is pouring in upon us that the great body of our laity are strongly opposed to union on the terms that are now being put forward. One presiding elder told us a few days ago that a careful inquiry in 16 charges of his district disclosed only 3 lay unionists, and another wrote us last week that in his district he had been able to find only 1. And, according to reports that are coming to us, neither do the rank and file of Northern Methodists want unification except on their conditions. A brother who attended the recent National Memorial Reunion at Vicksburg, at which there were many Methodists from across the Ohio, wrote us to this effect a few days since. If the extreme advocates of union are so confident of where the people stand, why do they not join with us in insisting that all the people be allowed to express their approval or disapproval of any plan of union that may be formulated?

NO REDUCED RATES.

Two weeks ago, Rev. E. L. Alford, R. R. Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, announced through the Advocate that no reduced rates would be given the brethren going to Conference this year. Rev. J. R. Countiss makes a similar statement concerning the North Mississippi Conference this week, and we presume that the same rule will apply in Louisiana. It is possible, however, that some reduction may be had if a number of persons will purchase their tickets together. In this time of high prices, it would be a fine thing if the people would raise the additional money necessary to pay the way of their pastors to Conference—especially from the weaker charges, where the preachers are so meagerly supported. Here is an opportunity for the faithful women of the Church to do a good work.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Midland Methodist reports that the Episcopal Address to the next General Conference will be written by Bishop E. E. Hoss.

Rev. John C. Park, of Starkville, Miss., reports that he and his flock will be ready for Conference. This was to be expected of that pastor and people.

Brother and Sister J. R. Abels, of Ponchatoula, La., spent last Monday in New Orleans. They were both looking well. Brother Abels is one of the choice laymen of the Louisiana Conference.

According to the Texas Christian Advocate of last week, the condition of Mrs. Mouzon, the wife of Bishop E. D. Mouzon, was considered very critical. Bishop Mouzon will have the sympathy of many throughout the Church in the sore trial through which he is passing.

Our First Church of Shreveport, of which Dr. S. A. Steel is pastor, is in the midst of a revival meeting. Dr. Steel has Evangelist Browning with him.

President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, reports that the facilities of that institution are now so taxed that the construction of additional new buildings is a necessity.

In winding up things, do not forget the interests of the Advocate. It would make the paper boom if every pastor would carry one or more new subscriptions to Conference with him.

The Southern Methodists of New Orleans will have a union Thanksgiving service at the Louisiana Avenue Church on Thursday, Nov. 29. Dr. W. H. LaPrade, of Gulfport, Miss., will preach the sermon.

Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh orders his paper changed from Springfield, Mass., to Huntsville, Ala. He further says: "I hope to see you in December." We shall be glad to grip the hand of this worthy veteran of the itinerancy again.

Rev. D. R. McDougal, of Kossuth, Miss., sends us several subscriptions from his charge, for which he has our thanks. Brother McDougal is winding up his quadrennium in his present field, in which he has rendered excellent service.

We have before us a post-card picture of our new church at Brookhaven, Miss., for which we are indebted to Dr. I. W. Cooper. It is evidently a beautiful and commodious structure—one which reflects great credit upon Brookhaven Methodism.

Brother W. L. Tucker, of Tucker, La., has our thanks for some encouraging words concerning the Advocate. Brother Tucker believes that Methodism yet has a mission in the world and is anxious to see it maintained and extended in its purity.

We would respectfully suggest that some one in a position to do so ought to furnish the Advocate information concerning the railroad connections at places where the brethren going to Conference will need to change cars. Such information would likely prove helpful to some.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Pleasant Hill, La., says: "Brother J. J. Fike, the father of Rev. C. E. Fike, of Rayne, La., died on the night of October 29, and we laid his remains to rest on October 31. He was a splendid Christian man." The Advocate extends sympathy to the bereaved.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, one of the evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, says: "I am closing one of the best years of my life." Brother Bowen has long been making a fine record. He comes about as near being an ideal evangelist as any one that we have ever known.

Bishop Candler attended a part of the session of the North Alabama Conference in the interest of Emory University. It is difficulty to understand how Bishop Candler can do the vast amount of work that he turns off. Yet there are those among us who prate about Bishops having nothing to do.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions, sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. J. Baird, Ripley, Miss., 2; Rev. W. J. Porter, Sicily Island, La., 2; Rev. C. A. Parks, Kosciusco Ct., N. Miss. Conf., 2; Rev. C. E. Downer, Petal, Miss., 4.

Rev. P. S. Carpenter, of Denham Springs, La., writes: "We have made some progress in this charge this year. We have built one church, valued at $1000, have painted one, and we are at this time engaged in constructing another, which we hope to complete before Conference. I think that you are right in your views concerning unification."

Rev. R. T. Ware, of Noble, La., writes as follows: "Everything is progressing finely in this charge. We have just closed a revival here, with much success. I have received 13 persons into the Church; and some of our old members were stirred to a new zeal and led into richer experiences. We have our Conference collections in full and the pastor's salary will be entirely paid."

Rev. J. W. Dorman, of Water Valley, Miss., will have the sympathy of a host of friends in the bereavement which has come to him in the recent death of his brother, Rev. W. W. Dorman, of the North Alabama Conference, who began his career in the North Mississippi Conference. We hope to reproduce next week the splendid tribute paid this worthy itinerant in the Alabama Advocate by Dr. J. D. Simpson.

We acknowledge with thanks an invitation to the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Dr. and Mrs. N. L. Linebaugh, which will take place in their parsonage-home at Vinita, Oklahoma, on Thursday, Nov. 22, from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m. Dr. Linebaugh is one of the most popular and influential Methodist ministers in the State of Oklahoma. We trust that this anniversary occasion will in every respect be a happy one.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., was put in the forefront in the movement to have Noxubee County, Mississippi, to subscribe for its quota of Liberty Bonds. He presided over a public meeting held in the court-house, and later made an address at a large gathering that the local paper pronounced "eloquent and forceful." Through his efforts, the ladies and Boy Scouts were enlisted, and it was stated that no one was permitted to be a "slacker." We scarcely need to add that Noxubee County made a fine showing when the results were summed up.

A correspondent sends us the following wedding notice: "On October 11, at 3 o'clock p. m., at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. T. C. Baggett, of Goodwater, Miss., Rev. Otto Porter and Miss Pearl Sanders were united in marriage, the ceremony being performed by Rev. M. W. Porter, pastor of the Eucutta charge, a brother of the groom. After the ceremony, the happy couple, together with their brother and his family, motored to Rose Hill, Miss., the home of the bridegroom, where a most delightful supper was enjoyed." May God's richest blessings be showered upon those whose fortunes have thus been united for life!

We are indebted to Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Drew, Miss., for the following note of interest: "I had the honor of preaching the second sermon in our new church at Clarksdale, the pastor, Rev. R. O. Brown, having invited me to fill the pulpit on the evening of the Sabbath on which the new structure was opened for public worship. We had quite a crowd and a good time. This plant is not excelled by any that I have seen in the State or anywhere else. Clarksdale will ask for the next session of the Annual Conference, and it ought by all means to go there. We would be given royal entertainment and have the best church that North Mississippi affords to hold the session in." Pastor Brown and his flock are to be congratulated upon the construction of this magnificent house of worship. The Editor is ready to vote enthusiastically to go to Clarksdale.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, of Selma, La., writes as follows: "Brother and Sister Kirkpatrick celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Saturday, Oct. 27, 1917. They were married by Brother Franklin, one of our itinerant preachers, on Oct. 27, 1867, near Leesville. They have lived at the place where they now reside, near Hineston, La., for 30 years, and they have both been members of the M. E. Church, South, since before they were married. Their home has been blessed with 11 children—6 boys and 5 girls. Two of the boys and four of the girls have united with the Methodist Church. All of their children are living, except Louis V., who passed to his reward nearly three years ago. He was a faithful steward in the Church. Brother Kirkpatrick is 72 years of age, and Sister Kirkpatrick is 66. May they live many years longer to be a blessing on earth!"

Rev. W. L. Duren is rounding out a successful quadrennium as pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, at Columbus, Miss. Brother Duren is one of the strongest preachers in his Conference, and he has the habit of wearing well where he labors. Rev. W. W. Woollard is also in his fourth year on the Columbus District, which has enjoyed a goodly degree of prosperity under his leadership.

Mr. W. P. Kretschmar, President of the Commercial Savings Bank of Greenville, Miss., was chairman of the Committee that took care of the Liberty Loan apportionment for the northern half of the Magnolia State. Mr. Kretschmar is one of the leading financiers of his State and a young man of the most superior character. He is an official member of our church at Greenville and a trustee of Millsaps College.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., the efficient Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, sends us the following note: "I have just received remittances to cover the educational assessments of the Pickens and Merigold charges. Brother W. R. Lott is the pastor at Merigold, and Brother W. M. Langley is the pastor at Pickens. The latter stated that checks for all his assessments were in the hands of the respective Treasurers." These choice young ministers have set a fine example. Let others follow it.

Miss Dott D. Marett, of Potts Camp, Miss., informs us of the death of her father, Captain F. J. Marett. She says: "He died on October 9, 1917. He suffered from rheumatism about three weeks, but his death was unexpected. He was born, March 7, 1834." Capt. Marett was a gallant Confederate soldier and was for a time imprisoned on Johnson's Island, in Lake Erie, during the war. He was an accomplished man, a noble citizen, and an exemplary Christian. He served with distinction in the State Legislature and was a delegate to the Mississippi Constitutional Convention of 1890. He was a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was a regular attendant at Sunday school, never missing unless he was ill. He taught a Bible Class for many years, a work which he greatly enjoyed. His daughter, in her letter, pays him the following beautiful tribute: "We are proud to say that we are his children. He was as nearly perfect as a man could be, and he set us the example of trying to be useful in the right way." Captain Marett was 83 years of age. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that they may be Divinely comforted and sustained.

Prof. W. L. Gill, Head of the Department of Latin at Trinity College, Durham, N. C., died on October 18, after a brief illness. He was 41 years of age and had been a member of the Trinity Faculty since 1898. The Raleigh Christian Advocate speaks in high terms of his scholastic attainments.

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

SUFFERING CATS! GIVE THIS MAN THE GOLD MEDAL

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug is a sticky ether compound, but dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue.

It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callns from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

GET YOUR SEED NOW

You should change seed every few years. I supply strictly northern grown seeds, no others.

Extra Early Ohio—most popular early potatoin country. Potato growers in the south will have their crops ready to market 10 days to 2 weeks earlier, if my Red River Ohios are planted.

Red River White is identical with Red Early Ohio, but white. Good yielder, very early, and does not scab as easily as old Early Ohio.

Red River Bliss Triumph—earliest of all potatoes, leads in all southern states. A week earlier than Early Rose and Early Ohio. Very handsome, productive, and superior for table. Red River grown Triumphs cannot be excelled. Apple Trees, $2.50 per 100. Small fruits and plants of all kinds. Red Turkey Winter Wheat and Mammoth White Winter Rye. Send for prices.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

WILLIAM F. MILLSAPS, son of Elijah and Susan Millsaps, departed this life, at the age of 67 years at his home in Copiah County, Miss., surrounded by his wife, daughters, sisters, and brothers. For several years Brother Millsaps had been in declining health, but during his affliction he was cheerful and resigned. He constantly looked on the bright side of life—optimism was a leading trait of his character. When financial reverses came he was calm and trustful, believing all would end right. In early manhood he joined the Methodist Church. He loved his Church and his pastors. For many years he was a steward, never failing to show an interest in the Church. The members of the Pleasant Valley Church will greatly miss him. As a husband, friend, father, brother and neighbor, he was true and faithful. He had faith in the atonement of Christ and he went into the valley of death trusting in Jesus. On the bright June morning funeral services were held in the presence of a large congregation. His mortal body was laid to rest in the Hazlehurst Cemetery. "He giveth his beloved sleep." To his bereaved wife, daughters, sisters, brothers and friends, we offer our tender sympathy and prayers. I. W. COOPER.

Brookhaven, Miss.

Dr. BERNARD PALLISY EVANS was born in Leake County, Miss., near Conway, on September 13, 1877. His father's name was William Cross Evans; his mother's name Lenora E. Evans; his grandfather's, Holden Garther Evans, and his grandmother's, Charlotte Cross Evans. Dr. Evans was distantly related to Mr. Newton Vick. Dr. Evans joined the M. E. Church, South, at Conway, Miss., in 1900, under the pastorate of the writer. Afterwards, he attended Tulane University, graduated in medicine, and located at Quitman, Miss., and there enjoyed a very fine practice. He was married to Mrs. Marie Lawr, grandniece of the late Senator Walthall. Dr. Evans died on August 19, 1917, leaving a wife, one son, B. P., Jr., three sisters, Mrs. J. E. Flowers, and Mrs. Callie Turner, of Conway, Miss., Mrs. Maggie Wiley, of Slidell, La., and one brother, Mr. R. H. Evans, of Conway, Miss. To know Dr. Evans was to love him. He was a very determined and resolute physician, a fine surgeon, and a very broad and liberal-minded man. His coming as a poor boy from Leake county, making his way through Tulane University, and becoming a prominent physician is evidence of his great character. He was carried to his old home—Conway, Miss.—and was there honored by his Masonic brethren with their beautiful burial service. M. L. WHITE.

Brother R. W. FREEMAN was born in Monroe County, Ga., on a farm, on August 29, 1841, and he departed this life in a sanitarium in New Orleans, La., Sept. 5, aged nearly 76 years. Although under age, Brother Freeman responded to the first call of his country in the great Civil War, enlisting with the Fifth Georgia Regiment. He made a gallant soldier and participated in a number of important battles. His name is mentioned several times in the "History of the Doles-Cook Brigade, Army of Northern Virginia," by Henry W. Thomas. After the war, Brother Freeman returned to his devastated home, and shortly afterwards moved to Louisiana. Soon after coming to this State he married Miss C. A. Jordan, who proved a most devoted wife and life-long companion. Brother Freeman was a consecrated Christian and one of the most devoted Methodists that I have ever known. He joined the Church at the early age of 10 years, and in the course of his life served efficiently as a trustee, a steward, and a Sunday school superintendent. He was always "the preachers' friend." He is survived by his devoted wife, Mrs. R. W. Freeman, and three children—two daughters, Mrs. Robert Neff, of Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. S. C. Tevis, of Portland, Oregon, and one son, Mr. J. J. Freeman, of Luling, La. To these loved ones we can but commend the Savior whose great love sustained our brother through all the years of his eventful life. We thank God for such a life. He gave us inspiration, courage, and hope. We shall meet again. His body was laid to rest in the family lot at Robeline, La.

ROBERT W. VAUGHAN.

Mrs. LIDA B. VANCE, wife of Capt. C. B. Vance and mother of E. Q. and Lieuts. Brooks and David Vance, died at her home in Batesville, Miss., on Oct. 13, 1917. She was born at Shreveport, La., on Oct. 9, 1858. Mrs. Vance was widely known and highly esteemed by a large circle of friends throughout North Mississippi, who were deeply grieved by the sudden death of this good woman. She had been in failing health for over two years, suffering from a nervous breakdown, which was caused by a fall she had in boarding a train. The injury was internal, and at the time was considered very slight, but she was never well again and suffered greatly at times from nervous melancholia. No one had more to live for than this pure, noble woman. Her home was indeed a happy one. She had everything her heart could wish for but health. Nothing was left undone by her devoted husband and sons that could in any way contribute to her comfort and happiness. Mrs. Vance was a woman of public spirit, being interested in the advancement of public welfare and every worthy cause. She was an ardent Methodist. She loved her Church, and did much to extend the Kingdom of God. We, her co-workers in the Woman's Missionary Society, mourn her loss and will greatly miss her splendid work and large liberality for the support of the missionary work, so dear to her heart. She filled most acceptably some of the most important offices in the organization. Her days are numbered, but her work is not ended. It will "follow." We may bury the frail body of our sainted dead and beloved friend, but the music of her useful, beautiful life can never be silenced. To have known and loved her as a friend is indeed a privilege. Our aching hearts go out in tender sympathy to the bereaved husband and sons. May the God she loved and worshiped comfort and sustain them in their sad hour of trial!

Her devoted friend,

Como, Miss. L. C. SHORT.

Coarse Hair

doesn't become you and it is as unruly as it is unbecoming. The hair should be soft and light and should hold its original luster when it is healthy. The quickest and surest way to deprive the hair of its original luster is to leave it alone to look out for itself. Each separate hair is an individual delicate structure in itself and every hair on your head, in order to contribute its share of beauty should be perfectly fed with the natural hair oil, which comprises its food. Starve your hair and, like anything else, it will die. Feed your hair with nature's hair food, "La Creole." This excellent hair food, first discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana fifty years ago and preserved by them, proved a treatment from which sprang their reputation for beautiful hair. It has since been offered the public and has served to beautify the hair of thousands of the tasteful and fastidious.

YOU WILL WRITE A LETTER LIKE THIS.

I wish I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I can't quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read these carefully and then give me a chance to renew your health and make you write me one very much like them:

Barnard St., Savannah, Ga.
Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.

Dear Sir: I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft-boiled eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantity as possible for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

A. L. R. AVANT, M.D.

Leeds, S. C.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M.D.

These are not selected cases, nor are the results unusual. I receive thousands like them from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may be, dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, or any curable ailment that has not responded to drugs. I invite you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If the water fails to benefit you simply say so, return the empty demijohns, and I will promptly and willingly refund your money—every cent. Sign below:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-C, Shelton, S. C.,
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

NO REDUCED RATES TO CONFERENCE.

The railroads of the Southeastern Passenger Association have declined to give any reduction to delegates and visitors to the North Mississippi Conference, stating that the usual attendance of three hundred does not justify any favor. However, I understand that where ten or more persons belonging to one organization buy a "party ticket" the rate is two cents per mile.

Let me suggest to the laymen that it is not only praiseworthy but altogether proper that they pay the Conference expenses of the preachers who go to attend to the business of the Church. These men could remain at home and "get an appointment," but they must attend the Conferences if their charges are properly represented. The ten or fifteen dollars cost to some circuit riders going up from the far corners of the Conference can poorly be spared from the demands of wardrobe and pantry in this year of high prices.

Fraternally,
J. R. COUNTISS,
Grenada, Miss. Secretary.

REV. J. J. GARNER HIGHLY COMMENDED.

Whereas the close of this Conference year completes a quadrennium of faithful, efficient, and appreciated ministerial labors by Brother J. J. Garner in the Kilmichael charge; and

Whereas, owing to the polity of our Church, he cannot serve us longer, but will be sent to another field to continue his labors in the Master's Kingdom, therefore be it

Resolved, That the going of himself and family from us brings us sorrow and regret, hut that we will remember with pleasure and gratitude the blessings that have visted us, by the grace of God, through the instrumentality of our brother's devotion to duty and through the instrumentality of his family, who by good judgment and tact, consecration, and grace have wonderfully built up the Master's work in this field.

Resolved, further, That we commend these faithful workers to any charge in our Conference to which they may be sent, and we hope that the same success that has attended their labors here may crown their efforts in the next charge, and they may be more liberally rewarded in a material way.

We assure them that our prayers and best wishes will attend them as they go to their new charge.

T. L. WILBURN, M. D.,
President Board of Stewards.
B. S. KENT, Secretary.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. it's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

FREE THANKSGIVING CARS.

To the Methodists of Mississippi.

Dear Friends: Brother Carter and myself, representing the Baptist and the Methodist Orphanages at Jackson, Miss., are arranging with the following railroads for free cars to run on the roads and dates mentioned below.

I. C. R. R.—Car from Horn Lake to Grenada, November 20, Rev. R. P. Neblett, Como, in charge; car from Lamar to Grenada, via Water Valley, November 20, Dr. C. K. Bailey, Coffeeville, in charge; the same car from Grenada to Jackson, November 21, Rev. R. A. Tucker, Grenada, in charge. Aberdeen Branch, car from Aberdeen to Durant, Nov. 28, Miss Lill Dodd, Kosclusko, in charge; car from Osyka to McComb, Nov. 27, Mr. E. W. Reid, Magnolia, in charge; the same car from McComb to Jackson, Nov. 28, Mr. W. D. Davis, Brookhaven, in charge.

Y. & M. V. R. R.—Car from Clarksdale, via Dublin, Tutwiler, Greenwood and Tchula to Yazoo City, Nov. 30. Mr. Rowan Thayer and Dr. W. T. Johnson, Greenwood, in charge; car from Tutwiler, via Drew, Ruleville, Sunflower, Moorhead and Yazoo City to Jackson, Nov. 30, Rev. E. M. Shaw, Isola, in charge; car from Clarksdale, via Shelby and Leland to Rolling Fork, Nov. 30, Rev. T. M. Bradley, Cleveland, in charge; car from Rolling Fork to Harriston, Nov. 30, Rev. O. S Lewis, Vicksburg, in charge; car from Natchez to Harriston, Nov. 30, Rev. J. O. Ware, Fayette, in charge; car from Harriston to Jackson, Nov. 30, Rev. B. W. Lewis, Utica, in charge.

M. & O. R. R.—Car from Corinth to Artesia, Nov. 19, Mr. Fred McDonnell, Jr., Okolona, in charge; car from Columbus to Meridian, via Artesia, Nov. 19, Rev. D. W. Babb, Crawford, in charge; car from Vinegar Bend to Waynesboro, Nov. 22, and from Waynesboro to Meridian, Nov. 23, Mr. Geo. S. Weems, Shubuta, in charge.

G. M. & N. R. R.—Car from Walnut to Ackerman, Nov. 19, Mr. W. T. Rogers, New Albany, in charge; car from Ackerman to Newton, Nov 19, Rev. C. M. Crossley, Philadelphia, in charge.

G. S. I. R. R.—Car from Gulfport to Hattiesburg, Nov. 26, Rev. J. L. Sells, Wiggins, in charge; same car to lie over in Hattiesburg, Nov. 27, Mr K T. Moore, Hattiesburg, in charge; the same car to run from Hattiesburg to Jackson on Nov. 28, Rev. W. M. Williams, Collins, in charge.

N. O. G. N. R. R.—Car from Twin to Jackson, Nov. 30, Rev. W. M. Sullivan Columbia, in charge.

N. O. & N. E. R. R.—Car from Picayune to Hattiesburg, Nov. 22, and from Hattiesburg to Meridian, Nov. 23, Rev I. F. Alford, Enterprise, in charge.

F. & G. R. R.—Car from Kokomo to Fernwood, Nov. 26, Rev. W. H. Saunders, Fernwood, in charge.

Please see that these cars are well filled. There are about two hundred children to be cared for, fed clothed and warmed, and we need corn, flour, sugar, grits, cured meats, lard, all kinds of canned goods, molasses, sorghum, dishes of all kinds, boxes of clothing, shoes, hats, caps, hose, elastic, soap, pins, needles, thread, buttons, blankets, sheets, pillow cases and towels. We also need peas, velvet and soy beans—in fact, anything in the way of something to eat and wear that can be used in any well regulated family. Let pastors appoint live, wide-awake committees at each church to solicit donations, have the goods brought to the railroad station and marked plainly for the Methodist Orphanage.

Thanking you for your generous support and hearty co-operation, I am,

Yours respectfully,
J. B. RANDOLPH,
Supt. Methodist Orphanage.

END STOMACH TROUBLE, GASES OR DYSPEPSIA

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach-headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest stomach doctor in the world. It's wonderful.

WONDERFUL EGG PRODUCER

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs" and you will be delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, Poultry Expert, 6406 Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million-dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request and the "More Eggs" costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day or ask Mr. Reefer for his free poultry book that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

AT WAR WITH YOURSELF!

HELP NATURE TO DEFEAT THE DISEASE IN YOUR BODY.

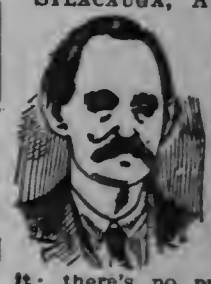
Keep up the fight; do not give up. Nature is trying to serve you in conquering the wrongs that may exist.

Red blood, vim, courage, vitality, all seem lacking. No wonder you are nervous and discouraged.

Why not call to your aid a strong, dependable ally? Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has for nearly fifty years proven its merits as a most powerful tonic and blood builder to the many thousands who have been returned to good health by its use.

Clear the coated tongue, get rid of unsightly skin trouble. Let this remarkable remedy rid your body of the impurities of the blood, let it tone and strengthen you. It often cures the lingering chronic cough.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is absolutely herbal, free from alcohol or dangerous habit-forming drugs. All druggists. Liquid or tablets.



SYLACAUGA, ALA.—"This is a true statement as to the value of Dr. Pierce's medicines. I used one of his great remedies in my own family with good results, namely, 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and found it to be all it is claimed to be. There is no medicine that will come as near doing what it is claimed for it; there's no praise too high for the 'Di very.'"—W. H. JOLLY, Box 215.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA.—"I suffered for two years with an enlarged gland on the right side of my neck. I tried several doctors and they told me I would have to have the gland taken out, but a friend of mine advised me to try Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and after taking ten bottles my neck is entirely well and I not only recommend it to my friends but to every one I see in the condition that I was. I feel as though I can never be thankful enough for what this medicine has done for me."—MRS. DELLA BOYER, 107 Trinity Avenue.

MAYNARD OWEN WILLIAMS

CORRESPONDENTS, like poets, are born, not made. Maynard Owen Williams, whose articles appear exclusively in the Christian Herald, has the born correspondent's ability to observe and the capacity to understand something of the genius of the people among whom he is. More than that, he has the sympathetic attitude of a sincere Christian, and a vital Christian love for truth. Having observed and understood, he can so tell it that the rest of us also see and understand.

VITAL HUMAN STORIES FROM RUSSIA

Is the title of a series of articles by Mr. Williams now appearing in the

CHRISTIAN HERALD

Do you want to know how the Russian Church, deprived of the protection of autocracy, is meeting the challenge of democracy? Williams will tell you in the Christian Herald.

Do you want to see the Great Russian Council, yet to be called, build a people's government on the shattered foundations of a Czar's authority? Williams will show you in the Christian Herald.

Do you want to understand the mind and heart of the Slav, feared as a menace by so many generations of western Europeans, now leading them all in his devotion to Liberty and the rights of men? Williams will make it plain in the Christian Herald.

At the time of the Russian Revolution, Mr. Williams was in China completing his articles about the Orient for the Christian Herald. He went to Petrograd at once. From Harbin, the far Eastern port, Mr. Williams sent several articles which have helped the readers of the Christian Herald to understand the new Russia.

Mr. Williams' articles alone, during the coming year, will be worth many times the cost of the Christian Herald.

WHY 300,000 FAMILIES LOVE CHRISTIAN HERALD

THE Christian Herald is doing something more than merely placing interesting reading matter in the homes of its readers. It is giving them a part in great enterprises. It is giving them spiritual and material helpfulness. It is the one magazine that represents in the most vital way all of the interests of Protestant Christianity and of the on-marching church of Christ. Week by week, the Christian Herald is giving its readers issues of absorbing interest.

You should be a regular reader of the Christian Herald and enjoy these special features which are now appearing:

THE MILLENNIUM—What, When and Where. An Additional Series of Articles on Prophecy by America's Greatest Expositor, Prof. James M. Gray, D.D., Dean of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

For the Committee.

Class of the Fourth Year.

The Class of the Fourth Year of the North Mississippi Conference are requested to meet the Committee in Oxford on Monday, Nov. 19, at 8 p.m.

J. A. HALL,
For the Committee.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

As the time approaches for this gathering, I am being plied with questions both through mail and by person as to the extent of entertainment; and, believing in strict candor as the best policy, I write this communication. When we invited the Conference to meet in our city, at its last session, we hoped to have no limitations, but the social conditions arising out of the war situation are such as to compel restrictions. Since the first of May our city has been involved in some kind of "drive" continually. The Red Cross work, appeals for Liberty Bonds (second series now on), for French classes, for support of war children, for the relief for war sufferers, and the preparation for the great Memorial Reunion, have taxed our people almost to the point of exhaustion. Under the circumstances, our committees are doing well in securing homes for the more than two hundred brethren whose comfort we must consider, but it is almost a universal request for men only. This does not apply, of course, where brethren have special invitations for other members of their families with friends. We're after the Kaiser here.

WINTERSMITH'S CHILL TONIC

Sold for 47 years. For Malaria, Chills and Fever. Also a Fine General Strengthening Tonic. 60c and $1.00 at all Drug Stores

CONCERNING STATISTICAL REPORTS.

To The Members of the Mississippi Conference.

Statistical blanks will be mailed each pastor in due time. On account of the cost of envelopes and printing, you will have to secure your own envelopes in making your reports. The usual course of reports and auditing will be followed.

W. T. GRIFFIN,
For Auditing Committee.
Gulfport, Miss., Nov. 3, 1917.

A REQUEST OF THE PREACHERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Almost every mail brings special requests from brethren as to their roommates during the Conference and which we are anxious to grant if possible. All who have such requests are asked to send either of us a card immediately on reading this notice. We will be helped also in making assignments if those who can not come will drop us a card. We would like to get from the presiding elders the names and addresses of all applicants for admission and all lay representatives (and they can help by giving names of superannuates or others who may not come) at their earliest convenience. While the Pledge Card drive is on, we are pledging ourselves to make the brethren comfortable, and have prospects of good success.

Why I Believe in Nuxated Iron

A Strength-Builder For The Nation

BY E. SAUER, M. D.

Probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron. It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress; Physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monseigneur Nannini, a prominent Catholic Clergyman, recommends it to all members of the Catholic Church. Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician. Sarah Bernhardt —"the Divine Sarah," the world's most noted actress, has ordered a large quantity sent to the French soldiers to help give them strength, power and endurance.

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. N. H. Hornstine, for ten years Physician in the Department of Public Health and Charities of Philadelphia, says that tests made with Nuxated Iron on a number of stubborn cases where other tonics had failed absolutely convinced him of its remarkable and unusual power.

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Note:—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by former Members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and other prominent people with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron, that they offer to forfeit $100 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

There is a duty and a glory in little faithfulnesses. There is a peril and a shame in little sins.—F. W. Farrar.

Grandma Used Sage Tea to Darken Hair

She made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to bring back color, gloss and youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HE HAS IRON IN HIS BLOOD

That is why he is such a great winner, accomplishes so much, why he overcomes obstacles and knows no such thing as failure

Iron in the successful formula for Peptiron, which also includes pepsin, nux, celery and other tonics, sedatives and digestives, helps to give strength, color and body to the blood; reddens pale cheeks, steadies the nerves, nourishes and gives stamina to the whole body.

Peptiron is in pill form, chocolate coated, pleasant to take, easily assimilated—the most successful combination of iron that its makers, C. I Hood Co., Lowell, Mass., know of

It is the medicine for you.

It will put iron into your blood

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism, a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

THE NEW CALOMEL A PERFECT SUCCESS.

Calotabs, the newly perfected calomel, is absolutely purified from all of the unpleasant, sickening and dangerous qualities of the old-style calomel. The new Calotabs are rapidly taking the place of the old-style calomel tablets, as they are much more effective as a liver cleanser and system purifier, yet are entirely free from all objectionable qualities.

The new Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages; price, thirty-five cents. Your druggist recommends and guarantees them.—Adv.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste products be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver failing to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the action of the liver and the bowels, and with careful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular action.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, constipation and indigestion: Because they do not cause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Because their use does not derange the stomach, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

A LETTER FROM CALAVERAS, TEXAS.

Dear Sisters: I have just read on our missionary page about the organization of a Woman's Missionary Society in Soochow, China, by Miss Mary Culler White, and it made me want to write a little about the re-organization of a Woman's Home Mission Society and a Foreign Missionary Society—there were two then (am so glad they are one now). My husband having superannuated, we were living in Monroe, La., and I missed the societies. I asked Brother J. L. Pierce, who was pastor there, if he thought we could reorganize. He said, "Tell the sisters, I cannot preach successfully unless they organize both societies." We wrote for our District Secretary, Sister M. E. Carr, of precious memory, and she promptly followed our invitation. We had previously canvassed as best we could. Brother Pierce had preached missions and prayed missions, and we reorganized with 8 members, one bedridden but anxious to help with her dues and prayers; two, one 80 years of age and the other not able to come often—but we reorganized both societies. In three years they asked for the annual missionary meeting, and entertained it royally. It was there with Miss Belle Bennett presiding that the two societies were united. Sister Kennedy was our State President. Oh, how they have grown! I would love for some one to write a little from the Monroe Auxiliary and let us know how they enjoy it, and if the Woman's Missionary Society is not a great organization and a strong arm for our pastors.

I keep my membership in Opelousas, where our Helen Johnson was called into the work under my husband's ministry. I would be so glad if I could help some sister to pray for our dear missionaries. Our plan was to cut out the pictures of two missionaries, pin them on our dresser where we could see them often and pray for them each time as we passed. Our two for years were Miss Mary Culler White and Helen Johnson. Try it sisters; you will find the pictures in The Voice. I hope you all subscribe for it. In love, Sister J. T. RANDLE.

It gives us pleasure to publish the above letter, for Sister Randle was an earnest and indefatigable worker for many years for our great missionary cause. Now that the years are crowding upon her head and she is forced to live in Texas on account of her husband's health, her heart is still in the work and her love goes out in great tenderness to her beloved Louisiana women. Sisters, perhaps some day you will be old in His service and far away from loved ones and heart-hungering for your native State—will you not write to this faithful servant, cheer her along life's pathway, and keep her posted about this work, which is so close to her heart? Let the Monroe Auxiliary tell us what they are doing and the publishing of the same in this department will give so much joy to Sister Randle, and prove a help and inspiration to others. It is a little thing which we are asking, but who can tell what it will mean to this child of God?

Brother and Sister Randle recently celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary, and she writes that their grandson, Tom Randle, sails for France, thus leaving no one with them in the home, but so beautiful is her faith and trust in God, she knows He will take care of them. Pray often for her.

A CRISIS IN OUR WORK IN CHINA.

The following is an extract from a recent letter from Miss Virginia M. Atkinson, of Soochow, China, and is a strong argument for the necessity of all pledges and offerings being paid in full. Not only that, but extra gifts must be secured in order to meet the increased appropriation that will be necessary if we are to continue our work in China as it is being carried on at present:

"We are distressed about the rate of exchange. To-day it is $1.20 and is going down one or two cents every day. We know you cannot help us out to the extent that would be required to bring it up to two for one, because it was promised only on salaries and rents. We fear that you cannot keep that promise; and if you could, what would become of the work with the dollars bringing less than half of what they brought a year ago? The work is appropriated for on the basis of two for one, and we cannot get along as it is. A Bible woman gets $60 on salary, which means $120 Mexican. However, now sixty gold brings only $78 Mexican, so that on every Bible Woman's salary we lose $42 Mexican. By the end of the month, which is the beginning of the new quarter, it will be worse, even if it should not be one for one. Of course, every department is suffering in the same way. I only used the Bible women's salaries as a sample of how everything is going. We know that we must close up some of the work, and we cannot do it all of a sudden, because we must pay salaries and rents in advance for several months unless we are able to give them several months' notice, and that notice must be given toward the end of the term. Miss Tarrant and I talked of closing one of our schools this September; but it was just at the beginning of the fall term, and we would have had to pay the teachers so much because of that, since they would probably have been out of a job for the rest of the year; so we decided we would have to continue it to the end of the fall term at least, which will mean the end of January."

HARVEST DAY IN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—DECEMBER 1.

The Harvest Day Committee, of which Mrs. W. T. Cunningham is chairman, announces that Saturday, December 1, will be observed as Harvest Day in the Louisiana Conference. They urge the advertisement of the date and the program as soon as the latter reaches the auxiliaries. Helpful suggestions are given for securing the payment of dues and pledges and decoration of the church appropriately for the occasion. All members of the societies are further urged to bring a Harvest offering of vegetables, fruits, nuts, syrup or canned fruit to be sent to the following places:

New Orleans and Shreveport District, to St. Mark's Hall (N. O.); Baton Rouge and Lafayette Districts, to Mary Werlein Mission (N. O.); Ruston, Monroe and Alexandria Districts, to Scarritt Training School (Kansas City, Mo.), and French Mission (Houma, La.)

A REMINDER.

Monday, November 26, is to be observed as Harvest Day in the Mississippi Conference. Let all the auxiliaries take note of the date and let none fail to observe it. Begin now to plan for it and make it a day long to be remembered in this Conference.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

It is the demands, not the promises, that men make of us; the responsibilities, not the enjoyments, that raise us to the stature of men and women.—P. T. Forsyth.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. Mayme Asbach, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCasland, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Sardis, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Brother Hogg came to us a few weeks ago and stirred our people with his wonderful messages and his sweet spirit. We took into the Church 17 persons by profession and 5 by letter. Brother Robert Selby was with us on a recent Sabbath and preached a great sermon. He told the people about Emory University, the greatest movement in Methodism. I will write about my visit to Emory just as soon as I can find time. We have had 40 additions during the year. The stewards elected Brother A. M. Ballentine to collect the old Church debt of something over $1500, which was done. Most of the Conference collections are in hand, and all will be. We are expecting to pay everything in full. I never have worked with a finer body of stewards or a more earnest, consecrated people. The outlook is very flattering. The revival fire continues to burn. May it never cease! I wish that you could be with us at the banquet. Brother John R. Pepper will be here and address the laymen and the citizens of our town Friday night. I hope to see you at Conference.—W. D. Wendel.

Sardis, Miss.

(The banquet referred to by Brother Wendel was one given by him and Sister Wendel at the parsonage on the evening of Nov. 3, complimentary to the Board of Stewards and Board of Trustees at Sardis.—Editor of Advocate.)

Athens, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have closed our revival season on the Athens charge, and the results have been very gratifying. At Athens we had the very efficient help of Rev. W. L. Doss, who preached a series of effectual evangelistic sermons. The music was under the charge of Brothers A. C. Watson and O. W. Stewart and proved quite a feature in the revival. Immediately after the close of the Athens meeting attention was centered upon Wesley and Arizona churches, the pastor doing the preaching at both places. With the hearty co-operation of the membership and with the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, we succeeded in having good revivals. Up to date we have received into full membership 48 persons. After my work was finished on my own charge I spent two weeks very pleasantly and, I trust, profitably, on the Cotton Valley work, preaching at Pleasant Valley and Blocker's Chapel. I found choice people there, and with a little extra attention the work there can be wonderfully developed. I found Brother Holladay in high favor with his people. Fifteen very substantial members were added to the Church. I am going to put some time in trying to get sbuscribers for the Advocate, as I realize more and more that our people need to read our Church paper if we expect them to be loyal to our Church. May God's richest blessings rest upon you!

W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT, P. C.

Eat Less and Take Salts for Kidneys

Take a glass of Salts before breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Scientific Treatment For Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a salt combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists; price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

COMFORT KIT FOR SOLDIERS.

The Red Cross is taking up the work of securing Comfort Kits for the American soldiers at the front. The kit selected is known as Comfort Kit No. 2. It is anticipated that an exceedingly large number of people who have boys at the front, and even those who are maidens and bachelors, will feel that they can afford to send one of these kits to a soldier at the front. It is estimated that they will cost about $3 each. They will make splendid Christmas gifts for the boys and if they are gotten together and shipped prior to November 1, they will reach France for Christmas Day. Those sent to the training camps in America ought to be sent before that time. These Comfort Kits should be made of stout material so that they may be used for practical purposes. They may be given to the nearest Red Cross chapter which will forward them to their proper destination. For further information apply to the local president of the Red Cross. The following assortment of articles is suggested: Needles, assorted, large sizes; thimble, large size; celluloid, a piece of sewing wax; tooth-powder in tin container and tooth-brush; folding knife and spoon; soap in metal or celluloid box; wash-cloth, shaving brush, shaving-soap, comb in case, mouth-organ, safety razor and blades, writing materials, pencil, handkerchiefs and pair of heavy socks, either hand or machine knitted. These articles are arranged in various pockets, the plan of which can be obtained from members of the local Red Cross chapter.

FROM SICILY ISLAND, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: Since my last report we have held two protracted meetings—one at Sicily Island and the other at Ferriday. Brother H. T. Young preached sixteen days at Sicily Island, with Brother Rody leading the singing. The meeting at Ferriday was continued ten days without ministerial help. We have completed the repairs on the Sicily Church, and have painted it on the inside and varnished the pews and furnishings. We have moved the Clayton Church, which was blown from its foundations by a storm, back to its former place, and repaired it.

Brother A. S. Lutz held our third quarterly conference at Tensas Chapel (the home church of Dr. C. W. Carter and Rev. B. F. Alexander of cherished memory). This church was built in 1854 and we put a new roof on it last year and repaired the windows this year. We have repaired four churches and painted two of them this year, and have received 26 members. We hope to make a good financial report at Conference.

W. J. PORTER, Pastor.

MARRIED.

At the Baptist Church, in Tylertown, Miss., on Oct. 18, 1917, by Rev. W. T. Griffin, Mr. R. Roscoe Bonslagel, of Hattiesburg, Miss., and Miss Amie Bethea. The bride is a daughter of the late Dr. J. W. Bethea.

CHRIST THE SYMPATHIZER.

It is both uplifting and strengthening to know the sympathy of Christ in one's trials. Such an experience came to a young woman after a trusted friend deserted her in an emergency, leaving her comfortless. "If only I had a friend on whom I could depend!" she cried. "But whom can I trust now?" In her sorrow, she fell on her knees and sobbed out her trouble in prayer. To her surprise, though it was not surprising, after all, she soon felt the presence of the Savior by her side, and heard His comforting voice. Then she sobbed, not in sorrow, but in gladness that she had found a Friend. Experiences similar to hers occur almost daily to many Christians. It is an absolute fact that Christ takes their burdens, feels with them in their distress, comforts them in sorrow, and strengthens them in weakness. He is a friend who always is trustworthy, who never is disloyal, and whose response to every earnestly praying heart is instant and certain.—Forward.

A FACT TO BE KEPT IN MIND.

Good men always feel strongly the evils of their own day; it is their business to recognize and combat them. But in doing so they are sometimes led to think that no previous age has been so weighted with energetic mischief as their own. Here there is a risk of losing a true sense of proportion; of not merely exaggerating the evils of present as compared with those of past times, but of forgetting the divine resources upon which the Church of Christ may always fall back, and which are more than equal to her needs. Let us be sure that to believe that Christ has risen is to know that, come what may, His Church will not die, but live, and declare the works of the Lord.—Canon Liddon.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The North Mississippi Conference was organized in 1870, being made up of territory taken from the Mississippi, the Memphis, and the Alabama Conferences. It embraces the northern half of the State of Mississippi, its most southern tier of counties being Washington, Holmes, Attala, Winston, and Noxubee. It has eight presiding elders' districts, 167 pastoral charges, and there are within its bounds nearly 60,000 Methodists. It has in it no large cities or conspicuous pastoral charges, but its appointments, taking them as a whole, are up to a good average. The lands of North Mississippi are fertile, and as a farming section it ranks high, and is perhaps at this time being developed more rapidly than at any former period. So, it would seem that Methodism has a bright future in North Mississippi, being already the leading religious denomination in that section. The only school that the Conference owns entirely is Grenada College, at Grenada, Miss., though Millsaps College belongs jointly to it and the Mississippi Conference. These two Conferences also together maintain the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss. The personnel of the North Mississippi Conference is, on the whole, a strong one, there being in its ranks many ministers who possess more than ordinary ability. Few Conferences have so many well equipped and promising young preachers. The session of this Conference which will begin at Oxford Wednesday of next week will be its forty-eighth annual meeting. It will be presided over by Bishop W. B. Murrah, who was a member of the body prior to his election to the episcopacy, and who is highly esteemed by his home Conference brethren. Bishop Murrah also presided over this Conference last year, giving great satisfaction. Let prayer be made that the meeting at Oxford may, under the leadings of the Holy Spirit, be a harmonious and profitable one, such as will honor the Master and truly promote the work of the Church in the interest of which it will assemble.

OUR STATEMENT PRONOUNCED CORRECT.

In the Southwestern Christian Advocate of November 8, Dr. R. E. Jones, the alert editor of that publication, uses our statement concerning the work of the Unification Commission, made in our issue of November 1, as the basis of an extended utterance in which he points out certain misrepresentations concerning the union negotiations that have been made by Zion's Herald, and in so doing he bears witness to the correctness of our statement as to what has been done by the Commission and some of its Sub-Committees. It should be remembered by our readers that Dr. Jones is one of the two colored members that the Northern Church has on the Commission and that he speaks from a first-hand knowledge of the situation, having been present at its various sittings. Here is Dr. Jones's incidental testimony as to the reliableness of the information that we gave out:

"'There is no use of closing the barn door when the horse is out.' Last week's New Orleans Christian Advocate gives a pretty full and detailed account of what the Joint Commission on the Organic Union of Methodism did at Traverse City, Michigan, last June. How our neighbor came into possession of its information is not our concern. IT IS CORRECT EXCEPT IN A FEW MINOR DETAILS. This exposure serves our purpose in clearing up the contention made by Zion's Herald with reference to what was or was not agreed upon as to the proposed status of the Negro in the proposed reorganized Church." (Italics ours.)

The only "minor detail" in which we were in error that Dr. Jones points out, is that the second minority report from the Sub-Committee on the Status of the Negro, which he and Dr. I. Garland Penn (the other colored member of the Northern

BISHOP W. B. MURRAH.

Commission) made, was filed with the full Joint Commission, and not with the Northern wing of it, as we stated it was. This is an error of no real consequence, its only significance being that the divergent views of the Commissioners concerning this question have gone a little further forward than we represented them to have done. There is not the slightest doubt that, so far as the work has progressed, the proposed Regional Conference boundaries are exactly as they were shown to be on the map which recently appeared in the Advocate. That arrangement leaves New England and the Middle States grouped together; it leaves intact the great Middle West except one or two States, and it keeps the Far West together except New Mexico and Arizona; but the South is literally chopped to pieces. Let the reader take the Advocate of November 1 and look carefully over the map which it contains, and he will see that this is true. Undoubtedly Southern Methodists are face to face with the issue as to whether they are willing to see their Church "dismembered and absorbed," and the Northern Methodists given dominance in the South.

It is puerile to say that we need give ourselves no concern about the matter—that we can fully trust our Commissioners. It was just such talk as this, and the fact that the Church listened to it, that lost us Vanderbilt University, the trustees doing the very things which we were assured that, as loyal Southern Methodists, they would never do. Are not these Sub-Committee reports being in part made by OUR COMMISSIONERS? If they will go thus far, who knows but that they will go the whole way toward carrying out the plans now upon the checker-board? It is misleading to say that we may count on the conservatives on the Commission to take care of the interests of Southern Methodism. It is true that they are largely the brains of the body, but they are known to be in the minority. The truth is, THE ABLEST OF THESE CONSERVATIVES ARE FULLY AS APPREHENSIVE CONCERNING THE PRESENT SITUATION AS IS THE EDITOR OF THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

AN IMPORTANT PIECE OF LITERARY WORK.

The following statement concerning a piece of literary work that promises to attract considerable attention, for which we are indebted to the New Orleans Times-Picayune, will doubtless interest some of our readers:

"The first complete translation of Homer's Iliad into English, adhering line for line to the original hexameter of the Greek, has just been completed by Dr. William Benjamin Smith, professor emeritus of Tulane University. Dr. Smith has given three years to the colossal task of translating the twenty-four books, consisting of about 16,000 lines, and will now devote another year to reviving the work line for line, and adding the finishing touches before the book is ready for publication.

"The charm of Homer's hexameter is the 'charm of words in tuneful order,'" said Dr. Smith. "The translation I have made keeps close to the original, taking no liberties either in thought or in expression. The current of critical opinion seems to be setting toward the conviction that an adequate rendering of Homer is possible, if at all, only in hexameter. The Germans have at least two excellent hexametric versions, Voss' and Jordan's, regarded as among the brightest ornaments of literature, and the absence of any in English has been a reproach to our literature and language."

BROTHER ROBERTS' STATEMENT.

We hope that none of our readers will overlook the statement of Rev. H. G. Roberts, of Coldwater, Miss., which appears on another page. We were not aware until we read his communication that there was a Mormon Church in Mississippi. By every token, Methodism needs to go to the rescue in that community, and to do this effectively it should have a good equipment. We believe that money given to this cause would be well applied.

OXFORD METHODISM.

Methodism was planted in this section at an early day. The Church was organized by the Rev. Mr. Atkins, who was pastor here in the early forties. There had been preaching here before that time, but the writer's best information is that Oxford became a regular preaching place about 1840. From the beginning Oxford has had many stanch Methodist families. Our University constituency has been strong from its opening, Nov. 6, 1848, to the present time. The University opened with four professors and about fifty students. Among the professors was Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe, the giant intellect of the South. In 1849 Rev. A. B. Longstreet, the author of "Georgia Scenes," was called to the Presidency of the University and he identified himself at once with the local church here. He was a local preacher of splendid literary attainments. For a number of years he had been President of Emory College, at Oxford, Ga. He was President of Centenary College, Jackson, La., for one year, from which position he was called to the Presidency of the University of Mississippi. It was during his term at Emory College that the great General Conference of 1844 was held in New York City. He was a prominent member of that august body, and was the author of the famous "Declaration of the Southern Delegates," which led to the adoption of the "Plan of Separation" three days later. His two daughters married men who were active in the Church—Dr. Branham, and L. Q. C. Lamar, the latter of whom rose to high political fame and fortune. The Oxford cemetery holds the ashes of both Longstreet and Lamar—Georgians by birth, but Mississippians by adoption.

Albert Taylor Bledsoe, author of "Theodicy" and "Is Davis a Traitor?" was the first Professor of Mathematics at the University of Mississippi. He at one time took orders in the Episcopal Church, but later left that Church and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which he became a local preacher. He was never very popular as a preacher, his style being too argumentative and lacking in the graces and flavor of enthusiastic speech. His weapon was the battle-ax of logic and reason, and he routed all antagonists. L. Q. C. Lamar was called to be Adjunct Professor of Mathematics, with Dr. Bledsoe as chief. It was one of the boasts of Dr. Bledsoe that he taught "Lucius to think."

REV. E. S. LEWIS,
Host of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brother Lewis was born in Chickasaw County, being a son of Mr. Asbury Lewis, one of the best known citizens of Northeast Mississippi. He was educated at the Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala., and is one of the best informed and best equipped men in his Conference. He has filled a number of important appointments, and is a very popular pastor. He is now winding up a successful quadrennium at Oxford, the seat of the Mississippi State University. He is a brother of Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor of the St. John's Church of Memphis, Tenn.

Other University men affiliated with the Methodist Church in the early days were Landon C. Garland, who was called from Oxford to Vanderbilt; Edward Mayes, a great lawyer and an eminent scholar; J. J. Wheat, called by his friends Mississippi's greatest preacher; R. W. Jones, learned scientist and humble Christian; J. W. Johnson, who lies beneath an unmarked grave in the Oxford cemetery; G. D. Shands, orator and statesman. The list is a long and honorable one.

Of the membership in town much might be said. Mr. Gordon, T. L. Harris, W. B. Mitchell, father of four Methodist preachers, two of whom, J. H. and W. W. Mitchell, are still in the active work, were largely useful here in the past. P. T. Slate and J. D. Delbridge, two splendid men, were from Virginia; they settled here at an early day and did much for the Church. Some of their children are still in our membership.

Among the pastors who have served the Oxford church are to be found men of every grade of talent. As a great preacher, none stand higher than the Rev. Mr. Campbell who served the Church in 1861. But the man whose name is most frequently mentioned is that of Dr. J. J. Wheat, an Israelite indeed in whom there was no guile—a great preacher, a great scholar, and a great Christian. He preached Jesus and his love. Mr. Lamar once said of Dr. Wheat while the latter was conducting a revival meeting in Oxford, that if he would pour a few buckets of hellfire into his sermons he would move more people. Dr. Wheat was pastor of the Oxford Church ten years. He first served a full term of four years, was out two years, and then served six years in succession. His record here possibly has not a parallel in the Southern Church.

Bishop W. B. Murrah, who will preside over the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference, was pastor here for a full quadrennium, beginning in 1878. One delightful episode of his pastorate was his marriage to his organist, an event pleasantly remembered by several who still belong to the congregation. Let our young men take notice.

Amos Kendall, prince among preachers, S. A. Brewer, J. W. Lowrence, W. T. J. Sullivan, E. B. Ramsey, T. A. S. Adams, S. D. Long, and many others of precious memory, some on this side the flood and some on that, have served this church.

For the third time Oxford will have the honor of entertaining an Annual Conference. In 1883 Bishop McTyeire held the first Conference here, and in 1897 there was another presided over by Bishop A. W. Wilson. The congregation has just spent nearly $2000 repairing the church building, adding a number of rooms to the Sunday school department, so that we can do our work with far greater satisfaction. We will greet the forthcoming session to be held with us with glad hearts and willing hands to serve.

Oxford, Miss. E. S. LEWIS, Pastor.

A COSTLY FAD.

In his address as President of the American Bar Association, ex-Senator Sutherland of Utah thus animadverted upon a fad which has hitherto been peculiarly American: "If I were asked to name the characteristic of our present-day political institutions, I am not sure that I should not answer, 'The passion for making laws.' There are forty-eight small, or moderate-sized, legislative bodies in the United States engaged a good deal of the time and one very large national legislature working overtime at this amiable occupation, their combined output being not far from 15,000 statutes each year. The prevailing obsession seems to be that statutes, like crops, enrich the country in proportion to their volume. Unfortunately for this idea, however, the average legislator does not always know what he is sowing and the harvest is frequently made up of strange and unexpected plants whose appearance is as astonishing to the legislator as it is to his constituents."

This fad is especially expensive to the American people, because time and money must be devoted to the slow and uncertain process of testing the constitutionality of almost every law, whereas the province of European courts is restricted to the interpretation of statutes. Nor can the European litigant hope to nullify a statute, if it faithfully reflects the legislative intent; for the legislature will pass a declaratory statute, if the highest court goes wrong in its interpretation, and that ends the matter. Fancy how the American dockets would shrink if no questions of constitutionality could arise. The remedy may be worse than the disease, yet it is a remedy, nevertheless.

But, pretermitting problems of this sort, there can be no doubt that America would be a better country if the prevailing mania for lawmaking gave place to a mania for law enforcement. And, indeed, one may safely assume that far fewer laws would be made if all laws were enforced. Alas, the average American tolerates the pernicious activity of legislators, State and national, because experience tells him that the courts will slay half the new-born laws and that the other half will be more honored in the breach than in the observance. These safeguards against the legislator's superzeal might suffice if they did not complicate the situation by destroying reverence for law in itself—a reverence without which no government, whatever its basic principle, can survive the wear and tear of every-day life. And respect for law in itself is vital to a government like ours, since Americans are restrained by no such concept as the divine right of kings, and are, therefore, apt to throw all barriers down when they see laws made only to be broken.

We think too much about making the world safe for democracy and too little about making democracy safe for the world. Democracy is no magic formula; like monarchy, it must justify its faith by its works. And how can the greatest of democracies hope to win the world by its example, if lawmaking and lawbreaking continue to be its twin fads? The question carries the reply. We must seek our salvation and the world's in law-enforcement—stern, unsleeping and impartial. There is no other path to the freedom that lasts.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

KEEP IT UP.

Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Hurrah for you, Meek! You are the Pelham of the fight. At the battle of Fredricksburg, Major Pelham, a mere boy in years (this cannot be said, it is true, of you) with a single gun arrested the advance of the whole Federal army. He kept firing with such rapidity and precision, that the enemy thought there must be a dozen guns at work. Nor would Pelham quit until a special order came from Stonewall Jackson to withdraw. General Lee paid him the highest compliment ever received by a soldier: "It is glorious to see such courage!" When Pelham came away, the Federal line hit Jackson's front, and, as always, went back. In this fight for the salvation of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, you have stood firm, with never a note of compromise. Many have censured you as narrow and provincial and reactionary, and so forth. But behind you are the serried ranks of Southern Methodists. They will be heard from before this fight is over.

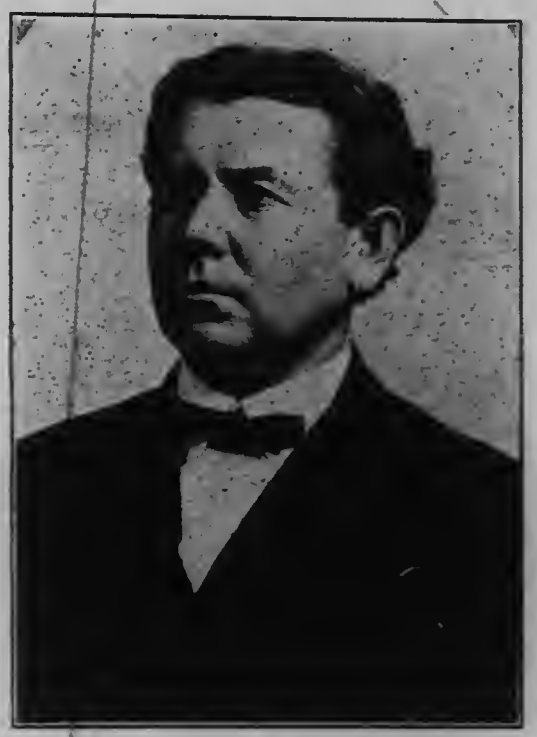
I see that Rawlings is reported as having said at some meeting up about Niagara that if the Northern Methodists won't accept union on our terms, he is ready to accept it on theirs. What is the matter with Eddie? They must have given him some of that Saratoga dope. Do not he and Dr. Moore know that they do not represent the great body of Southern Methodists, perhaps only a fringe along the border, by such sentiments as they express up there? Why mislead those Northern people by making them believe union is probable? It is not only not probable, it is impossible. The issue is now clearly defined: we must accept their theory of Negro equality. If Dr. Rawlings is correctly reported, he is ready to accept union on their terms, Negro equality. I am not. I won't be at Atlanta, as he probably will; but we will see who will be in the majority when it comes to a show-down on that subject.

That is the sore place with them, Meek. The Methodist Episcopal Church in the South is in a false relation to this race question. We are a set of pious geese that we don't speak out wherever they open up in our territory and let our people know what they stand for. They have no mission to white people in the South. If they can justify to their own consciences the expenditure of $50,000 in Atlanta to build a Methodist Episcopal Church almost within a stone's throw of one of our white churches, it is no business of mine to kick. This is a free country—no doubt of it, or these "Pacifists," who are nothing but German sympathizers, would go to prison or the grave. But every white person in Atlanta, and every Negro ought to be made to understand that the Ponce De Leon Methodist Episcopal Church believes in the equality of Negroes and white people. The pews would soon be filled with Negroes.

I always admired the conduct of the Negro servant that came on the ship with the family of Ex-President Davis from Fortress Monroe to Savannah. Mrs. Davis told of it in a letter to Dr. John J. Craven, the physician in charge of Mr. Davis while he was imprisoned in Fortress Monroe, and Dr. Craven published it in his "Prison Life of Jefferson Davis," a book, by the way, every one ought to read to learn the noble character of our Southern leader. Mrs. Davis says: "On the ship I understood a man was very abusive in their hearing (Mr. Davis's children) of Mr. Davis, when my faithful servant, Robert, inquired with great interest, "Then you tell me I am your equal? You put me along side of you in everything?" The man said, "Certainly." Then said Robert, "Take this from your equal," and knocked him down. The captain was appealed to, and, upon a hearing of the case, justified Robert, and required an apology of the leveled leveler." And that is the way all self-respecting Negroes think about it today.

Steady, Meek, steady! We'll win the fight. But I will be glad when the General Conference is over and we can turn our attention to more important matters. None of us are going to grow in grace discussing these questions. I have reached that stage of life when the improvement of our spiritual nature is the great thing, and how can I grow in grace when Eddie talks so imprudently?

Shreveport, La.



REV. J. H. FELTS,
Presiding Elder of the Holly Springs District, within the bounds of which the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference will be held.

Brother Felts is a native Tennessean, and was formerly a member of the Memphis Conference. Since transferring to the North Mississippi Conference he has served pastorates in Corinth, Tupelo, and Aberdeen, and has been presiding elder of two districts—the Aberdeen and Holly Springs. He is one of the ablest members of the North Mississippi Conference, being both a forceful and eloquent speaker and a trenchant and gifted writer. He is a man of great energy and does not spare himself in the prosecution of any task to which he sets his hand. Brother Felts' education was in part obtained at Vanderbilt University.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL'S PROGRAM.

By Rev. W. Fred Long.

When Mr. Hoover called Mr. Lawrance from Chicago to Washington for a conference, he was in touch with the International Sunday School Association, whose organization reaches over twenty-two million Sunday school people. From this conference came the War Council Committee of Nine, the result of a Joint Conference of Sunday school leaders and editors who elected Dr. Edgar Blake Chairman and Mr. John L. Alexander Secretary. This Committee has been enlarged to 100, whose meetings resulted in the election of Dr. E. B. Chappell to represent them at Washington in connection with the Food Conservation program; Mr. Sidney A. Weston, D.D., to represent them in New York with the Armenian and Syrian Relief Committee; and Mr. R. A. Waite to represent them with the Y. W. C. A. in New York. There is also a definite program for the Red Cross. Some of the immediate ways of helping are:

1. Assist in securing Red Cross memberships.
2. Co-operate through local Red Cross chapters in making and providing supplies.
3. Accept full responsibility in the raising of any funds needed for hospital relief to care for every sailor or soldier-boy.

Ways of helping food conservation:

1. Introduce services proposed by the Government.
2. Display on walls educational charts.
3. Superintendents plan 5-minute talks.
4. Give large publicity to the motto, "Eat plenty, but wisely, and avoid waste."
5. Help to introduce home card coupon blank.
6. Support Food Administration in every part of program announced.

Armenian and Syrian Relief.

Devote Christmas or one Sunday offering to this much-needed work. Men, women, and children are dying.

Assist Y. M. C. A.

1. By steadily maintaining and increasing at home the appreciation of the gigantic task assigned the Y. M. C. A., and prayerfully sympathizing with those who are undertaking it.
2. By helping young men to see the value of preparation for this religious leadership.
3. By furnishing Bible Class leaders who will teach classes in the corps.
4. By distributing testaments and by keeping the fires burning at the home base. The home fires of religion must be kept burning for the sake of the cause of liberty and democracy, and for our brave boys who have gone and who are to follow.

AS A PRESIDING ELDER SEES IT.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just read with great pleasure and profit your timely and illuminating editorial bearing the caption, "Is Southern Methodism About To Be Dismembered and Absorbed?" The rank and file of the ministry, as well as the membership of the Church, need and are justly entitled to the valuable information contained in that article. My only regret is that it could not have been given them some time ago. The ominous silence that has reigned since the Commission adjourned at Traverse City, Mich., has been not only puzzling, but painful, and now that the light has been turned on, we see that the apprehensions occasioned by this silence have not been groundless.

I have never met a Southern Methodist minister or member who was willing to say he would form a union of the two wings of Methodism upon the basis of the "Saratoga recommendations," yet we find certain members of the Commission are proposing to thrust upon us an illogical and chimerical scheme that would just as effectually bind the hands and feet of Southern Methodism and leave her at the absolute mercy of a Northern majority.

All unbiased minds viewing this question in a fair, unprejudiced and impartial light, must know that the union of the two Churches upon any such terms as are proposed by these ultra spirits on the Commission would positively disrupt and destroy the beautiful structure of Southern Methodism, sundering it in twain from center to circumference. May the good Lord deliver us from the disintegrating influences, the destructive fanaticism, now threatening our Zion!

Durant, Miss. W. W. MITCHELL.

IF IT COULD BE DONE OVER.

It was Lyman Beecher who said to a company of theological students that if he could get a dispensation from above he would gladly return to earth and preach the gospel for another lifetime. What would be your feelings, dear layman, if you could make a return journey and discover what had been actually done with the money you so frugally guarded during your probationary period? If you could certainly know whither your hard-earned ducats were going and the lavish expenditures your heirs would indulge in after the obsequies, would you not alter your will a trifle and mention the Church of Christ, a hospital, or a school at least for a modest sum? Better still, would you not execute your will by liberally remembering now causes that commend themselves to your judgment? A wealthy merchant in his age took a trip to California and with his estimable wife enjoyed a trip to that floral paradise. When asked "What did it cost," he replied, "It did not cost me a cent. I made my heirs pay the bill." Yes, he will have perhaps a few dollars less on which the attorneys will calculate the income tax, but it will not modify by a cent the proper expenditure during his natural lifetime. Why do not other thoughtful folk regulate their expense accounts accordingly?

A few years ago a well-to-do man died, and as his heirs figured up the total and rapidly divided it by the proper figures, a nephew sighed as he thought of his $250 legacy and exclaimed, "I'll blow that in some night." Why did not the rich uncle just put such a check in the collection plate for missions or send it to the Tract Society or help an orphan to an education rather than encourage a fast dude to a frolic on the Great White Way, a road the departed never trod? Oh, if the old Knickerbocker Fathers could crawl out of the grave and revisit the offices and look over the check books of their descendants, money would be plentiful in church treasuries, debts canceled on parsonages, and even our paper stand on the best corner of Easy Street.—Christian Intelligencer.

JOHN P. LESTER AMONG THE MISSING.

On Friday night, November 2, an American reconnoitering force at the battle front in France was surprised by an attack of German troops, with the result that several of the Americans were killed or wounded, and a number were reported missing, the supposition being that they were captured. Among the latter was Mr. John P. Lester, a son of Rev. W. C. Lester, of the North Mississippi Conference, who is now stationed at Tutwiler, Miss. The following dispatch relative to this regrettable occurrence was sent from Tutwiler to the Memphis Commercial-Appeal on November 5:

"Information reached this city early to-day from New Orleans that John Patterson Lester, late of this city, and now in the United States army, was missing in France. This report was confirmed later on in the day by officials at Washington who wired that "Private John Patterson Lester was missing." His family here do not know whether this means that he is captured or killed, and of course are very much worried and grieved at this sad news. Private Lester enlisted in the regular army last May in Memphis with the Sixteenth Infantry. From Memphis he was sent to Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and from there to Fort Bliss, Texas, and from there to Hoboken, N. J., where they sailed immediately for France. He went over with Pershing's expedition.

"Private Lester is 29 years old and a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South. He was born at Chester, Miss. His father, Rev. William Cook Lester, is pastor of the M. E. Church, South, of this city. His mother, Mrs. Alice Patterson Lester, and youngest brother, K. P., and Miss Daisy Lester, live here, while the other members of his family are as follows: First Lieut. William C. Lester, M. O. R. C.; Mrs. E. A. Thatcher, Dallas, Texas; Mrs. A. H. Bradford, West Point, Miss.

"Private Lester answered his country's call at the beginning, and the last statement he made to his many friends here was that his country had called him and he was ready and willing to go; that he wanted to get to the firing line as early as possible and was not afraid."

When we first noticed in the dispatches the statement concerning the probable capture of Mr. John Lester, we wrote Brother Lester, his father, concerning the matter to ascertain if he had been officially notified of the reported occurrence and promptly received from him the following noble and patriotic letter:

"Dear Brother Meek: Unfortunately this news is of our son, John Patterson Lester. We appreciate your sympathy and the sympathy of our many friends and brethren. We are hoping for the best. I have another boy in training in the Medical Corps in Long Island (N. Y.). One is at home, and if the war continues, he also will soon have to go. Hard as it is—though heart-rending and breaking up all past hopes—we place them on the altar for a cause as great, as grand, and as important as any that ever stirred the aspirations and noble ambitions of the human heart. We only ask to live to see the time when there shall come a world-wide democracy and a peace that shall make war impossible and enthrone the King of Peace as the unversal sovereign over the hearts and consciences of men.

Your brother and friend,

W. C. LESTER."

Brother and Sister Lester and the other relatives of this missing young soldier will have the sympathy and prayers of a host of friends in this time of great anxiety. And let the readers of the Advocate also earnestly pray that the heavenly Father may watch over and safely keep the young man who seemingly has fallen into the enemy's hands.

The First M. E. Church, South, at Clarksdale, Miss.

The most substantial achievement within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference this year was the completion of the splendid new church at Clarksdale, Miss., at a cost of about $65,000. This structure is one of the most beautiful and best equipped houses of worship in Mississippi. The talk of its construction began under the efficient pastorate of Rev. J. T. Lewis; things took a somewhat more definite shape when Rev. W. S. Lagrone, who followed Brother Lewis, was in charge; and the enterprise, after languishing somewhat, was definitely launched and carried to consummation under the tactful and capable leadership of Rev. R. O. Brown, the present pastor. Brother Brown and his growing flock are to be congratulated upon this magnificent achievement, which means much for Methodism in the great Mississippi Delta. Clarksdale is a progressive city of some 6000 or more people, situated in a farming section unsurpassed by any that can be found anywhere. Our church is the leading one there, and embraces in its membership many of the most influential citizens.

MR. THOMAS B. KING, NOW FINANCIAL AGENT OF THE METHODIST HOSPITAL.

Mr. Thomas B. King, of Memphis, Tenn., has been elected Financial Agent of the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., and will immediately take the field in behalf of this work. Though I had no vote in this election, not being a member of the Executive Committee, I was glad of the opportunity to express to the Committee my unqualified approval of Brother King for the position, and his election as my successor was a genuine pleasure to me.

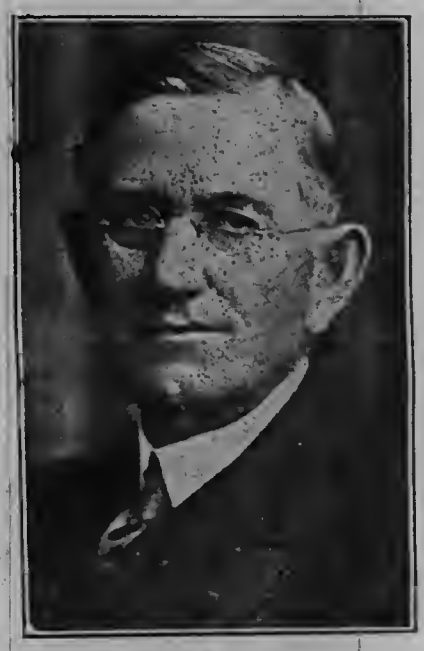
Brother King is so well known that an introduction to him is unnecessary, but I want to remind our good people that an exceptionally well qualified man has been secured for the leadership of their hospital canvass. He is a trusted and faithful layman and local preacher of our Church, whose loyalty to Southern Methodism is beyond question. He has been a member of all our General Conferences for about twenty-five years and has served on most of their important boards and committees. He holds the confidence and esteem of those who know him. He is no novice in the sphere of Church finance. He was at the head of the movement which raised the funds for the splendid Young Men's Christian Association building in Memphis and he comes to us now from the field agency of the Galloway Female College of the North Arkansas Conference, by which he had been employed to help raise its endowment fund.



Mr. Thos. B. King.

I earnestly bespeak for him in this new sphere of service of his loved Church your fervent prayers, your hearty and sustained co-operation, and for the Methodist Hospital your prompt and liberal offerings. The gratitude of our Southern Methodists for the abundant financial prosperity our Father has lavished upon us at this time ought beautifully to memoralize itself in a great Christian hospital, offering healing and salvation to all unfortunate sufferers of this great section.

I would have asked release from the Field Secretaryship last fall, had it not been for our plans for the city campaign in Memphis and the fear that a change at that time would not be helpful to that. Early in this year—March or April—I notified the President of the Board that another man must be secured. I am sure this is best for the hospital, as for me.

I have not accomplished what I had hoped when beginning this work, but I have made an humble beginning amid the unprecedented conditions under which I have been obliged to labor. More than $300,000 has been raised in cash and subscriptions, the most beautiful and appropriate site in Memphis has been secured for the institution, and the necessity for the hospital has been made evident. On this foundation, may there speedily be achieved a splendid and crowning success! It is something to have brought the enterprise to where others are now willing to take hold.

To my many friends throughout these Conferences, I wish to express my sincere thanks for their kindly sympathy and invaluable co-operation. May these stand, as I know they will, even more loyally and actively by my worthy successor, and may the blessings of the Father abide and multiply on them and their work! And may God speed the day when our hospital—the best in all the land—shall throw open its ample doors and stand as Southern Methodism's angel of mercy, inviting the suffering and afflicted to the ministry of our provident love!

H. M. ELLIS,
Retiring Field Secty. of the Methodist Hospital.
Memphis, Tenn.

UNIFICATION AND LAYMAN'S ADDRESS.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have been much interested in the discussion of unification and have tried to weigh fairly the argument on both sides. That boundary lines should be definitely established and respected, and that some practical plan for co-operation on the foreign field should be adopted, are generally conceded; but the dismemberment and absorption of our beloved Church is not necessary to accomplish these ends. The most of us are in favor of the kind of union described by Bishop Mouzon when he said, "We want an union in which we have grown together and not one that is carpenter-made." But our failure to agree on nearly all of the prominent and essential points makes it certain that if we have union at any time in the near future it will be of the "carpenter-made" kind. I think it is time that the subject was dismissed and our Commissioners were relieved from any further negotiations. I am sure that if it were left to the rank and file of the membership, that course would be pursued. I would not be surprised if the same feeling does not prevail among the members of the M. E. Church. We have heard much of the crying appeals and urgent demands for union that are coming from the border country, but it has been a little remarkable to me that the several laymen from the border with whom I have discussed the subject, some of them of the Northern and some of the Southern Church, have all been opposed to it. I was in company with some Northern laymen recently, and, learning that they had prominent connections in their Conference, I asked them how they were disposed towards unification? Their prompt reply was, "Our editors are in favor of it, but our members are opposed to it. Both Churches are doing well enough as they are." It is at least safe to say that all of the border people are not crying for union. Those leaders (Southern) that are saying they are for union on any terms are not representing the great Church to which they belong.

It is time for us to drop the whole matter and begin to repair the unfortunate results that have been brought about by the precipitation of this question and the unfortunate discussion connected with it. Let us dwell together in brotherly love and Christian fellowship, and co-operate with our sister denomination whenever we can, but, by all means, keep house for ourselves.

I have carefully read the so-called "Layman's Address" and much of the discussion it has provoked. I am in favor of any plan that will enlist in greater service the laymen who really "pay the bills" and shine at home as much as they do when they are away. But I am opposed to any plan that would make it possible for a few designing men to carry their points in the several Conferences. As a pastor, I have spent much of my time in trying to enlist this class and get them to take a more active part in all the work of the Church. Many times it has been difficult to get them to fill the offices to which they were elected and to induce them to attend the Conferences to which they were delegates. They have informed me usually that they were too busy with other things and that they expected the preacher to look after these matters for them. Even Brother Beeson, who, I suppose, pays his share of the bills and always attends the sessions of his Annual Conference when he is in the State, did not take time to read the "Laymen's Address," neither had he read it when he made his extensive explanations. Yet, he signed the card and became sponsor for it, when the address was an appeal to the laymen to enlist in a plan to revolutionize the government of the Church. We need improvement in the way of enlisting laymen, but it cannot be accomplished by the proposed legislation.

I am in favor of each pastoral charge electing a delegate to the Annual Conference who will have equal rights with the clerical members of that body, if some provision is made by which they are held accountable to the Conference for their moral conduct, just as the preachers are. If it is necessary to have rigid restrictions thrown around the preachers, it is also necessary on the part of the laymen. It is not just to have the preachers directly responsible to the Conference and the laymen only indirectly or remotely so. The preachers are no more prone to go astray than the laymen. Let it be asked of each layman, "Is there anything against him?" just as it is asked in the case of the preachers. I have nothing but love and admiration for the hundreds of faithful laymen who are benedictions to the communities in which they live and who support the preachers that are sent to serve them, and I shall welcome any plan that will conserve the interests of the Church and give them all the recognition they desire; but I am opposed to any plan that will put more power into the hands of the few who might yield to the temptation to use political methods in such a fertile field as an Annual Conference.

AN EXCEPTION.

Dear Brother: The free cars will run on all the railroads that gave free cars last year for the two Orphanages, on the dates mentioned in a previous article, except the I. C. and Y. & M. V. Railroads which will handle all donations to the Baptist and Methodist Orphanages on their regular trains, free of charge, on the dates advertised for the free cars on those roads. It is to be hoped that the people throughout the State will see that these free cars are well loaded and that fully as much will be sent on the I. C. and Y. & M. V. roads as last year.

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

AN OPEN LETTER TO DR. MUDGE.

(This open letter was sent to Zion's Herald, of Boston, in which Dr. Mudge's article was published, but it was not printed, nor its receipt acknowledged. It gives us pleasure to let the readers of the Advocate see it.—The Editor of N. O. Advocate.)

To Rev. James Mudge, S. T. D., Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir: In the Herald of Oct. 3, I saw an article by you entitled, "Providence in the Civil War," which interested me a good deal. This article was composed of four paragraphs, the burden of which were about as follows, respectively: "The North was defeated for two years, or until ready to free the slaves;" "The Monitor came at just the right moment to defeat the Merrimac, which otherwise might single-handed have defeated the U. S. Navy;" "A body of men, noble but unknown, were raised up at the critical time to save the nation;" "The mines of the West were opened at the exact time necessary to meet the great emergency, thus furnishing the money so necessary."

The burden of the article as a whole is to show that God was on the side of the North, and that it was through the acts of Providence that the wicked South was defeated. Such sentiments as these have been common in the North for many years. They have found expression in pulpits—especially Methodist pulpits—in newspapers and other periodicals, in so-called histories written by Northerners, and in daily conversation. Southerners have taken all this as a part of defeat, but have never admitted its truth. We have lived in the hope that with the passing years not only the hatred and the bitterness, but even the injustice might pass away.

It is a common trait of human nature to claim that God is on our side if our cause is victorious, and the North has worked this claim to the fullest since the Civil War. The poor, defeated, devastated South has been held up to the obloquy of the world. The finger of scorn has been pointed at her as a traitorous rebel and an inhuman slave-driver. It was the universal fashion to heap contumely upon her diminished head. He did God a service that would smite the vile sinner or could rub into her bleeding wounds the salt of intolerable persecution. In all the wide world there was no voice to say, "Neither do I condemn thee;" there was no forgiving hand outstretched toward us. Rightly or wrongly, many of us attributed to our Northern Methodist brethren a leading place in this company of anti-Southerners. In these times of unification efforts is it wise to give expression to such thoughts as those in your article?

The writer was born after the Civil War. His father was a Confederate soldier, and yet never a bitter word was heard to escape his lips. The Confederate Government and people tried to withdraw from the Union, but failed after a bloody and fateful war. Our soldiers laid down their arms with the idea that we were wanted in the Union, or you would not have struggled so to keep us, but the oppression and injustice during the long years of reconstruction caused us to wonder why we were wanted, and the continuous volume of abuse has made us feel that we were alone indeed.

As a child, I studied text-books in which my people were spoken of as rebels and the war was always the "Rebellion." In all the books or periodicals I have read, I have never seen the South well spoken of, except in one thing; that is where we were commended for our hospitality. The changes have been rung upon this one virtue until it has become almost sickening. Occasionally some great man, venturing upon a kind word, has said of the Confederate soldiers, "They fought for what they THOUGHT was right," conveying the idea that we were wrong but knew no better—a pitifully poor compliment indeed!

All this was perplexing to me as I grew older. I knew my father to be a godly man who would scorn to do a mean or unchristian act. Many other old Confederate soldiers I knew as men of probity and of the highest and purest motives. One of them, a citizen of this city, a man loved by the whole community and honored by the whole State, said to me several years ago: "The surviving members of the Louisiana regiment to which I belonged were all Sunday school boys. Only a few returned from the war, but not one of them would swear an oath." The morality of the private soldiers, together with the well known Christian character of our peerless leaders, such as Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson, didn't seem to me to fit in with the aspersions cast upon our people. So I determined to go into the matter more fully than the school histories did, and I made a somewhat careful study of the question of secession. I went back to original sources, and read, among other things, the speeches of Mr. Daniel Webster and some of the writings of Mr. Justice Story, the ablest exponents of the Northern contention. Mr. Webster afterwards virtually admitted that Mr. Calhoun's views were correct, and Mr. Story makes an historical blunder which, taken with an admission he makes, practically destroys his argument. I came to the conclusion, therefore, that any fair-minded man who would go back to the records would be forced to admit that the South was within her constitutional rights when she seceded. And I have been informed that some Northern people—notably a senior class in a certain university who made a study of the question—publicly made the same admission; though, I must say, I do not know of this myself. If, then, we had a right to withdraw from the Union, how could we be rebels or traitors? And what right had the North to invade the South? We have been hearing a good deal lately about a "scrap of paper."

Now, as to slavery, I wish to say that I know of no one not sincerely glad it has been done away with. As you admit in your article, the war was not begun to free the slave. The question, then, is, Was the war necessary to secure the freedom of the slaves? I do not think so. Slavery did far more harm to the whites than it did to the blacks. It taught the whites to depend upon the blacks, thus fostering a so-called aristocracy and causing many men to look down on servile work. Of course, that was harmful to the whites. But what about the blacks? How does the condition of the Negro in the South compare with his condition in Africa? I heard an able and highly educated colored man say, in a speech after a trip to the heart of Africa, "When I saw the condition of my poor people in Africa, I thanked God for slavery." Do you think God had anything to do with bringing the poor benighted blacks to America? And, if he did, how was it that the poor Negro was finally established in the South? Could it be possible that the Negro was divinely directed to the inhuman South rather than to the Christian North? I have an idea that God cares for his black children as well as for his white ones, and that it was only through slavery that the Negro could be reached. Or am I mistaken about this? Could it have been against his will that the Negro was brought to America? Who brought him to this country, anyhow? Was there ever a Southern ship engaged in the slave trade, or was it not rather the New England sea captains who brought him here?

You make use of Mr. Lincoln's statement that the war had to continue till the wealth piled by unrequited toil had been sunk, and every drop of blood drawn with the lash had been expiated by another drawn with the sword. I would like to ask you what became of the wealth piled up in New England by the slaves bought and sold by sea captains and masters who sold all their slaves and pocketed the money, but who resolved that the South should not be paid for her slaves. I would like to ask if you didn't know that almost the only people who used the lash upon slaves were the Northern overseers, and that this is brought out in "Uncle Tom's Cabin?" No man of judgment who owned slaves would mistreat so expensive a purchase even if not restrained by a feeling of humanity, nor would an owner permit an overseer to do so, if known to him.

But if God was on your side because we were so bad, how do you account for the wonderful fight we made? Without a navy, a shoe factory, a clothing factory, a gun factory, a munition factory, a medicine factory; with every port sealed by one of the greatest blockades ever known, not even a dose of medicine being allowed to enter; how could six hundred thousand men keep at bay two million six hundred thousand for four years? Doctor Dernberg said while in this country that in the Northern armies there were five hundred thousand trained German soldiers, or nearly as many as the total number in Southern armies. Besides, many Southerners from near the border fought in the Northern armies, one State—Kentucky—actually furnishing more troops to the North than to the South.

One of the old prisons used by the South for the confinement of Northern soldiers was moved to a great city in the North and exploited at the World's Fair as one of the awful places in which the inhuman Confederacy murderously imprisoned the soldiers of freedom. The statement has been made time and again that we inhumanly treated our prisoners, whereas the fact is that in spite of the absence of medicines and medicinal supplies, the death rate in Southern prisons was lower than in those of the North. Sir, why do your people do such things? You have the wealth, the schools, the publications, the leadership in every way; why not be fair to us?

Speaking of leadership, whose brains, whose valor, whose energy, whose patriotism laid the foundation for this great country? With the exception of New England and the four Middle States, did not Southern leadership secure every foot of territory composing this country? What about the Middle West and all the region beyond the Mississippi River, not to mention the Southern States themselves? And, mark you, this was during the period of our supposedly greatest wickedness.

Again, consider that in every great crisis the President of this country was a man of Southern birth. Washington has been spoken of as the one indispensable man; so has Abraham Lincoln; and now Colonel Harvey is speaking of Mr. Wilson as having been inspired, although he had bitterly opposed Mr. Wilson's re-election. Were not the circumstances attending both of his elections inexplicable from a human standpoint? Now, brother (if I may be permitted to use this term of endearment), I submit that if God has been on your side, he has been on ours, too.

Naturally sensitive, and intensely loyal to my beloved ancestors, the defeat of the South and the campaign of vilification against us has pierced my very heart. I did not believe we were so black as painted; I did not believe our Heavenly Father was against us for any such reasons as mentioned in your article. How explain, then, our defeat and our terrible punishment? To one believing intensely in the providence of God, and in his intimate and watchful care of his children, the question was insolvable. But now, thank God, I believe the divine purpose can be seen. This country had to be kept intact for the present great crisis. The long night of reconstruction and after, I prefer not to discuss.

But I have often thought that I should like to appeal to our Methodist brethren of the North to be forbearing with us. If you can not do so for our sakes nor for our works' sake, do so for the sake of our blessed Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

The Home Circle

THE LITTLE DO'S AND DON'TS.

Two companies of soldiers go
A-marching through the world;
The one, with gay flags streaming out;
The other, with banners furled.
Each child must travel with them,
In spite of wills and won'ts,
And march among his comrades
And the little Do's and Don'ts.

The pleasant things, the helpful things,
The worth-while things and true,
Are what their pledge requires of Each loyal little Do.
They tread to merry music, and
They're busy as the bees;
And they freshen tired people
Like a jolly ocean breeze.

The Don'ts do nothing, lazy drones!
They never try to fill
The empty minutes, hours and days;
They've neither strength nor will.
The world must turn without their aid;
For help it spin they won't!
Oh, I hope that you will never be
A useless, idle Don't!

A HALLOWE'EN REVENGE.

"Hateful old thing!"

"Hateful? I should say so; snapping us off like that when we offered to pay her for the window."

"I wish we'd broken every one of her windows since she's going to be so mean about it."

"So do I; 'twould have been good for the old woman if we had."

"Say, boys, let's get even with her. To-night's Hallowe'en."

"Let's! What shall we do?"

"Oh, there are a lot of things. Come out right after supper and we'll decide."

"All right, I'll be there."

"So'll I." "So'll I."

"Good-bye." "Good-bye," and the four boys separated to wait impatiently for supper and darkness.

Both came at last, and 7 o'clock found the boys at the appointed place.

"Hello! all here? What shall we do first?"

"Let's carry off her gate and upset her porch steps."

"All right; anything else? What do you say, Jim?"

"Nothing, only that I can't help you."

"Oh, ho! Somebody turned goody, has he? Better run home to his mother."

"No, I haven't, but I can't help and that's all there is about it. Boys, do you know it's just four years to-day since George died?"

A long drawn whistle showed that the boys did remember their schoolmate's death.

"I'd forgotten, but I guess it is."

"That's why Mrs. Green's eyes were so red to-day. I don't blame her now. What made us forget?"

"Say, boys; can't we do something for her to let her see that we've not forgotten?"

"I have it. Let's fill a big basket with apples and stuff and leave it at her door. I know mother will help."

"That's a good idea, and say, let's put new hinges on her gate; it's been off a long time. And, boys, why can't we stack up the wood in the back yard for her, too?"

"We can. Let's do it!"

Three hours later four tired, happy boys climbed into bed, but their happiness did not spring from the sidewalks overturned nor the gates stolen on their way home.—The Child's Hour.

DULLED TOOLS.

"Wouldn't you like a boy to take care of your fire, sweep, dust, and, perhaps, do errands for you after school and on Saturdays?" asked Fred Dyson as he stood on the threshold of Hiram Briggs's law office.

Mr. Briggs faced the door as he heard the question. "Perhaps so," he replied. "Come in and we will talk it over. Who told you to apply for the place?"

"Nobody. I knew you could not get an office in the Hartley building because all the rooms were taken when you moved here this fall, and I knew this building was heated with stoves, so I thought you would need help," was the answer.

Mr. Briggs felt drawn to a boy who had thus reasoned the matter out by himself, and as he had been his own office boy for three weeks and needed help, he engaged him to begin work the next day.

Fred went home delighted with the prospect of earning two dollars a week. "I think I shall be able to get a bicycle next summer," he told his mother.

"You must not count on it too much until you see if you can fill the place," she reminded him.

Fred smiled with a superior air. "It is easy enough to keep a place as office boy," he asserted. "I am sure I can please Mr. Briggs."

Fred did not go to the office in the mornings, as there was little time before school. He filled up the stove, emptied the ashes, swept, dusted, and did all his work evenings. One evening he neglected to pull out the check damper and the fire was burned out in the morning. Other things were left undone that Mr. Briggs told him about in a kind way, but the boy still forgot. One cold morning, because the damper was forgotten, the fire was out again, and the plants in the window were limp and lifeless. Mr. Briggs was sorry because he had loved and cared for the plants, which came from his boyhood home and had been his mother's gift when the home was sold.

"I find I must let you go on Saturday, Fred," was Mr. Briggs's announcement when the boy came to his work that evening. "You are not reliable enough for me."

"Why, I have been here every day," said the astonished lad.

"Yes, I know that you have been here," replied his employer, "but you do not keep your tools sharp and in good working order."

"I don't use any tools," said Fred quickly.

"I do not mean an ax, hammer or saw," replied Mr. Briggs with a quiet smile. "I mean your brain, nerves and muscles. You use too many of these," and he lifted a cigarette stub from his desk. "Fred, I wish I had kept count of the stubs I have found in the office since you came to work for me."

There was a peculiar look on the boy's face. "I never called my brain, nerves and muscles my tools," he said at last.

"They are the tools that are given you to work with to make a success of life," replied Mr. Briggs earnestly. "You are dulling your brain, shattering your nerves and weakening your muscles by constantly smoking cigarettes. The fact that you forget so many things shows that your brain is not alert. That is the reason that my fire has been out and my errands forgotten so often. Your yellow skin shows that you are slowly poisoning yourself with cigarettes. I am sorry that I must let you go, but the fault is your own. If you do not keep yourself fit for work, you cannot blame anybody for not employing you. Your success or failure in life will depend on how bright you keep your tools; and yours are dulled already. You are young, and if you try hard enough you can overcome this habit. It lies with you to say whether you will control yourself or be controlled by the little cigarette. Do you believe what I say is true?"

"Yes, sir," stammered Fred. "My mother says the same thing."

"Then take our advice and quit smoking," and Mr. Briggs laid a kindly hand on Fred's shoulder. "I am sorry, but I will have to get another boy."

That evening at supper, with a very sober face, Fred told his mother of the loss of his place. "It isn't so easy to be an office boy, after all," he confessed. "I see now that if I ever expect to be a lawyer like Mr. Briggs, and I want to be, I will have to quit smoking."

"Cigarette smoking keeps any boy from making the best kind of man, and doing the best work," agreed his mother.

When Fred went to work again, he did not dull his "tools" by smoking—and he kept his place!—The Union Signal.

Church News

It is stated that Bishop J. C. Kilgo is expected to return home from the Orient about November 30.

Dr. Theo. Copeland, pastor of the Lakeside Church at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, has received 164 members into the Church this year.

The Holston Conference raised last year for Missions—Home, Foreign, and Conference—$44,000, which was about $10,000 in excess of any previous year.

The Baptist Church at Brookhaven, Miss., has called as its pastor Rev. H. L. Martin, of Indianola, Miss., who has the reputation of being a preacher of unusual gifts.

Mr. J. J. Gray, Jr., who gave $25,000 to Emory University, was the first lay delegate elected to the General Conference by the Tennessee Annual Conference at its recent session.

Rev. Thomas Spurgeon, a son of the renowned Dr. Charles Haddon Spurgeon, recently died in London, England, at the age of 65 years. He was a worthy and useful Christian minister.

Dr. J. E. Harrison, President of San Antonio Female College, has lately been doing some excellent writing for the Church press. Dr. Harrison is a clear thinker and wields a trenchant pen.

Dr. C. F. Wimberly, of the Louisville Conference of the M. E. Church, South, has entered the evangelistic field. Dr. Wimberly is an author of considerable note. His address is 1463 S. First Street, Louisville, Ky.

The Baptists have laid the corner-stone of a new church at Jackson, Miss., which, it is stated, will cost about $4000. It will be on Bailey Avenue, near the Baptist Orphanage, and will be known as the Davis Memorial Church.

The new Mexico Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had a net increase of 15 per cent in membership and a gain of 16 per cent in the amount raised for ministerial support. There were about 2750 members added to the Church, making the total present membership more than 10,000.

PADEREWSKI WORKING IN WASHINGTON.

Daisy Fitzhugh Ayres, in one of her letters from the National Capital, says:

"The great and only Paderewski, supreme pianist and leader of the Polish national movement in the United States, has canceled most of his professional engagements and established his headquarters in Washington, where he's helping Colonel House gather data for the use of the peace commissioners at the end of the war. 'The end of the war'—a pleasant tune those words have."

We fear that the "end" of the stupendous conflict is farther in the future than many of us like to imagine. However, none can tell what a day may bring forth in seething, unsettled Europe. We may wake up any morning and read that the German throne has been overturned. It is certainly a fine example of wise forethought upon the part of our Government to be preparing for war and peace at the same time.

DO NOT MISS READING IT.

The "Open Letter to Dr. James Mudge," by Mr. W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, La., which we are carrying in this number of the Advocate, is an usually vigorous and informing piece of writing. It is a timely remonstrance, and does credit to the head and heart of the author. It is no mark of greatness or nobleness for one to lack veneration and respect for his fathers and to be willing to deride and trample depreciatingly underfoot the things for which they stood. The past is the scaffolding that sustains the present, and little to be admired is he who makes light of the labors, struggles, and sacrifices of the people from which he has sprung, or who permits others to do so with his seeming acquiescence. One of the most beautiful things in the earthly life of our Lord, and also in the life of St. Paul, was the reverential attitude shown toward the antecedent records and achievements of the Hebrews.

We should scarcely have believed that our esteemed brother at Baton Rouge could write so brilliantly as he has done, though we knew that he possessed more than ordinary gifts. The Louisiana Conference certainly has in it some choice and very able laymen.

APPLIES ALSO TO THE CHURCH.

The article which we are publishing this week, entitled "A Costly Fad," recently appeared as an editorial in the New Orleans Times-Picayune. This utterance of our contemporary is a very striking and suggestive one. And this fad for lawmaking is not restricted to secular legislative assemblies; the same disposition is seen in some of the Churches, and especially in the Methodist Church. This is a development of a connectional system of Church government, such as ours, that its originators perhaps did not at all anticipate. Why should our Church papers once in every four years, for several months, be largely taken up with all sorts of public harangues against the various features of our Church polity—nothing whatever, not even the Constitution of the Church, being spared from assault? That such a practice is wholesome or helpful or necessary, we are far from believing. The trouble is, such a constant and general attacking of our polity tends to create a prejudice against it in the public mind. This is true both with respect to outsiders and members of our own communion. It often doubtless happens that a person sees some feature of our economy severely arraigned, and never reads anything in refutation of it. Thus he becomes prejudiced against Methodism, when probably if he fully understood the issues involved he would think differently.

Of course, there must be some discussion of such matters, but it would seem that enough of this might be had by means of memorials, petitions, and a judicious use of the Church papers, and in the various assemblies of the Church, without such a continuous, extended, and indiscriminate rushing into the public prints to air what we conceive to be the defects of our system of government before the coldly critical world. It is our impression, from reading their papers, that scarcely any other denomination is as much given to such a procedure as are the Methodists. It sometimes appears to us that it would scarcely be a misrepresentation if we were termed "a Church of lawmakers." And we are frank to say that we do not think this a very noble occupation for a great body of Christian people. Surely, we should be able to find something better than legislative tinkering to engage our energies. While some among us are loudly affirming that our Church must be ever shifting and re-arranging her government to meet new and varying conditions, it is the proud boast of the Romanists that theirs is "the unchangeable Church." And if there is a more vigorous and effective ecclesiasticism in existence than Roman Catholicism, we do not know where it is to be found. In our humble opinion, a large amount of variableness and instability are not conducive to the strength that commands respect and wins confidence.

We haven't the least hesitancy in saying that we think less agitation about lawmaking would be helpful to Southern Methodism.

NOT SO SURE HE IS RIGHT.

Dr. S. A. Steel, in his article this week, affirms that we are certain to win the fight against the obliteration of the Southern Methodist Church. We earnestly hope that he is right, but we do not feel so sure of this. (Bishop Cranston stated to the Northern Methodist Bishops at their meeting a few days ago that he considered unification a certainty and that, in his opinion, it would be speedily consummated.) We believe that Dr. Steel is correct when he says that we have with us "the serried ranks of Southern Methodism;" but unfortunately the great body of our people have no vote in the settlement of this question. In all our Annual Conferences in any one year not more than 10,000 or 12,000 Methodists gather and they are not elected by the congregations; and the 300 or more men who make up the General Conference are elected by the small number of persons composing the Annual Conferences. So, we have two million members who will have no say whatever in determining whether their Church shall continue its glorious work, or be swallowed up in a larger denomination.

We believe that in the settlement of a matter so fundamental as this all our congregations should be allowed to express themselves; and that in case the merger carries, any congregation that prefers not to go into it, should be given the church property that it holds. This is democracy, and we think that such a course is morally right. The law of the Church does not provide for such a referendum, but it could be arranged by common consent on the high ground of equity. Nor would it be wholly without precedent; for, when the original Methodist Church in America was divided in 1844, the congregations were accorded the right to choose the place of their allegiance. For this right the Editor of the Advocate has pleaded in the present instance; but his pleas have met with no response from the Commission. If that body had given assurance to the Methodist public in the beginning that, in so far as it could, it proposed to stand for such a course as we have outlined, it would at once have largely quieted the fears of the people and have won the full measure of their confidence; but, instead of that, the constant talk has been of a quick consummation of the union movement without reference to the sentiments of the masses of our membership. The whole assumption has been that the few who have the machinery in their hands could herd them like a flock of sheep and deliver them, with all their property and sacred interests, into any kind of ecclesiasticism that they might choose to organize.

All that Dr. Steel says about the criticism that has been visited upon the Editor is true, and much more. But, though it has been far from pleasant to bear, we care little for this, having discharged our duty as God has given us to see it. And we have done nothing that we are not ready to meet at the bar of posterity and before the judgment throne of God.

One thing, however, we wish to make clear: We did not indulge in the slightest criticism of any word or action of any Commissioner, from the inception of the unification movement in the winter of 1910, until the breaking away from the enactment of our General Conference at Oklahoma City began. We challenge any man to show anything to the contrary. It was when the "Working Conference" (a body that had no official warrant from our Church) met in Evanston, Illinois, in February, 1916, and some of our Commissioners there dissented in the presence of Northerners from the Oklahoma City Plan of Union, as to its most salient features, BEFORE IT HAD REACHED THE NORTHERN GENERAL CONFERENCE TO WHICH IT HAD BEEN OFFICIALLY SENT, that we uttered our first words of protest. Then came the astounding procedure at Saratoga, participated in by Southern Methodist officials, who had no commission to speak and act for our Church, and the alarming transactions that have since followed—practically every movement being a mutilation of the scheme of unification approved by our General Conference. This has been the trend against which we have resolutely stood. We are ready to maintain the foregoing statements at any time.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Whitworth College now has 216 students. The Music Department has in it 149.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., is hoping to have a clean balance sheet when the Annual Conference assembles in his city on Dec. 5, and is bestirring himself to that end. We dare say that he will succeed.

Our Algiers Church, this city, has lately been bereaved in the death of a faithful and much-loved member, Mrs. Luella Dunn, her demise occurring on October 31. A fuller notice concerning the deceased will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. G. D. Anders, of Indian Bayou, La., sends us a report of his work which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which we hope to print next week. We are glad to know that his labors are being crowned with a goodly measure of success.

Writing last Monday, Dr. J. W. Beeson, President of Meridian College, said: "We are in the midst of a great revival, which is being conducted by Rev. C. M. Dunaway, of the South Georgia Conference. About 50 were at the altar to-day, and many were beautifully saved."

Dr. J. W. Price, an esteemed veteran of the North Mississippi Conference, writes us as follows from Greenwood, Miss.: "I am still on the sick list. The rented house in which we lived recently burned and we lost about all that we had. I have been much pleased with your good work in the interest of our Church." We are sorry to learn of Dr. Price's continued illness and misfortune. May the Heavenly Father abide with him consciously in the midst of his afflictions!

Dr. H. F. Tolle, of Biloxi, was one of the speakers on the occasion of the opening, a few days since, of the new dormitories for Confederate veterans at Beauvoir, Miss.

Dr. J. W. Lipscomb, a leading layman of our church at Columbus, Miss., favored our office with a visit last Monday. He had come to the city to bring a son for medical treatment. He spoke encouragingly of our Church work at Columbus.

In a letter that we received from Bishop Hoss last week, he stated that he was about to leave for Virginia. The Bishop will preside over the Virginia Conference, having Bishop Denny with him to render any assistance that may be needed.

The Coahoma and Lyon charge is reported to have led all the appointments in the North Mississippi Conference in what it has this year done for Grenada College. The pastor of this charge is Rev. J. E. Stephens, who in every way is showing himself to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

Rev. A. C. McCorkle, of Byhalia, Miss., says: "I am glad to report that the Byhalia charge has paid out in full, and that all moneys are in the hands of the several treasurers; so when I go to Conference I shall need to carry only the receipts for the same." We congratulate Brother McCorkle and his worthy flock upon this fine showing.

Two notable achievements in the North Mississippi Conference this year have been the construction of a $15,000 house of worship at Webb, where Rev. O. L. Savage is the popular pastor, and a $20,000 church at Louisville, where Rev. W. C. Carlisle is the efficient leader of our forces. These brethren have certainly wrought well.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate, sent in within the past few days: Rev. W. M. Young, Pontotoc, Miss., 3; Rev. J. L. Lay, Calhoun, La., 4; Rev. A. R. Beasley, Poplar Creek, Miss., 2; Rev. J. C. Price, Belcher, La., 5.

We have in hand a note from Rev. W. H. Saunders concerning his work at Fernwood, Miss., which will appear next week. Brother Saunders is completing four years of service in his present field, in which he has wrought well. He is one of the best preachers in his Conference, and his ministry wherever he has labored has been a fruitful one.

The address of Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, one of the honored veterans of the North Mississippi Conference, is 1617 19th Avenue, Gulfport, Miss., instead of Long Beach, as heretofore. Brother O'Bryant says that he misses being in the regular harness, but that he is still happy in the Lord. Nowhere can a choicer spirit than Brother O'Bryant be found.

Rev. J. L. Decell, of McComb, Miss., writes as follows: "Our work is closing up here with a good spirit prevailing. We will go to the Annual Conference with all assessments paid in full, and with all indebtedness of every kind on our Church property wiped out. Our congregations are as good now as they were in the beginning of the year." This is, indeed, a good record.

Dr. I. W. Cooper spent last Sunday in McComb, Miss., preaching three times to fine congregations. At 11 o'clock a. m., he dedicated the East McComb Methodist Church. Dr. Cooper speaks in high terms of the work being done by Brothers Ormond and Decell. On the fourth Sunday in November the Doctor will dedicate our church at Prentiss, Miss., where Rev. J. M. Lewis is the pastor.

Rev. W. L. Duren, our pastor at Columbus, Miss., who is rounding out his fourth year in that charge, says: "We have recently had a good meeting. I have received during the year 114 members, 49 of them on profession of faith. I shall turn over to my successor a big, well equipped and spiritual church. I sincerely hope that he may be as happy in the work here as I have been."

A report has reached us that Rev. C. F. Staples, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, was recently struck by a railway train and killed, and that his remains were carried to Ruston for interment. We know none of the particulars. Our heart goes out in tender sympathy to the bereaved. We trust that some one will send the Advocate a more definite account of this sad occurrence.

Mr. Joseph S. Chick, former Treasurer of the Trustees of the Scarritt Bible and Training School at Kansas City, Mo., who is charged with having misused and lost its funds, was on trial last week. A press dispatch said: "Chick is accused of a defalcation amounting to $143,000. He is related to Bishop E. R. Hendrix by marriage. Bishop Hendrix testified that Chick confessed he had used the money in oil speculation, and asked him to pray for him."

On Sunday, Nov. 4, an interdenominational service, commemorative of the 400th Anniversary of the Protestant Reformation, was held in the First Presbyterian Church of this city, beginning at 3 o'clock p. m. The speakers of the occasion were Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the Parker Memorial congregation of the M. E. Church, South, and Dr. W. McF. Alexander, pastor of the Prytania Street Presbyterian Church. It scarcely needs to be said that both of these addresses were of a high order.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Education, writes: "I have just received a check from Rev. A. C. McCorkle to cover the educational assessment of the Byhalia charge. I have also received from Rev. C. Wesley Baley and Rev. S. W. Bryant remittances to be applied on the assessments of the Strongs and Prairie and the Slate Springs charges, respectively." These brethren are doing the proper thing in thus reporting promptly.

A letter from Sister T. S. Randle, written from Calaveras, Texas, brings the information that Brother Randle has lately been quite ill, being at the time she wrote still confined to his bed. Sister Randle further says: "We are very lonely here. We have no Sunday school, no church nearer than five miles, and no car; but we are trying to organize a Sunday school. We had 8 present at the first meeting and 12 at the second. We ask our Louisiana friends to remember us in their prayers."

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of McComb, Miss., writes: "Mrs. M. M. Strickland, wife of Rev. E. R. Strickland, deceased, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ella Nelson, in McComb, Miss., on Monday morning, October 29, and was buried near Summit, Miss., on October 30. A suitable memoir will be furnished the Advocate later." We regret to chronicle the death of this faithful servant of the Master, and we pray that the bereaved loved ones may be sustained by "the everlasting arms" of the gracious Heavenly Father.

Rev. J. A. Wells, of Oak Ridge, Miss., sends us the following note: "On Friday, Nov. 2, my wife's father, Mr. F. M. Wall, passed to his final reward at the ripe old age of 73 years, leaving behind a godly influence and a Christian example. On Nov. 12, 1916, his beloved wife passed away, and my prophecy at that time was that he would follow her in the course of a year. He resided near Hickory, Miss." The Advocate extends sympatny to those bereaved by the home-going of this long-time servant of the Master.

In a letter bringing us two subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. W. M. Williams, of Collins, Miss., appends the following note: "We had our fourth quarterly conference yesterday, Nov. 5. The reports were encouraging. While the county is prosperous, we have in it only one church. Collins and Ora are largely dependent on lumber mills. The Ora mills have been closed for eight months; but Ora was the first place to pay its assessments. We are hoping to meet all claims in full. We have had 57 accessions to the Church during the year. We serve a good people."

We are in receipt of the following wedding announcement: "Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Clark requests your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Sarah Lovie, to Rev. Claude A. Parks on Sunday morning, Nov. 18, at 9 o'clock, at the First Methodist Church, Kosciusko, Miss." The bride-to-be is said to be a young lady of many graces and accomplishments, and the groom is an alumnus of Millsaps College and one of the most promising young ministers in the North Mississippi Conference. We extend in advance congratulations and best wishes.

A note from Sister Thames, of Jackson, Miss., brings the report that, in addition to being afflicted with a fractured hip, Brother S. M. Thames has also lately been annoyed with a severe cold. She states, however, that he is now recovering from the latter malady, and that his injured limb is not paining him so much as it did formerly. The attending physician is said to think that he is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances. We trust that brighter days will soon come to this worthy veteran of the itinerancy, whose many friends deeply sympathize with him.

Rev. T. L. Bryson, formerly of Haughton, La., writes: "I was transferred to the Holston Conference while it was in session at Pulaski, Va., and have been appointed to the Whitewell and Jasper charge, which is in Tennessee, near the Alabama State line. I am well pleased with the prospects for the new year. Southern Methodism is the strongest denomination in each of the towns that I will serve, and I shall do all I can to make it stronger." Brother Bryson's address is Jasper, Tenn. He sends greetings to the brethren of the Louisiana Conference and expresses the hope that they may have a pleasant session at Minden.

Rev. J. J. Garner, of Kilmichael, Miss., thus reports concerning his work: "I am now closing my fourth year in this charge. These have been four busy but pleasant years. At Kilmichael 107 members have been added to the Church, and there have been 166 additions in the entire charge. We have had a good revival at Kilmichael for the four years in succession. A good place will be open here for some preacher. The parsonage is a comfortable one and this is a choice people to serve. We shall have to go we know not where, but we shall follow where the Master may lead us in the future as in the past." Brother Garner is one of the solid men of his Conference, and the charge to which he is assigned will be fortunate.

We regret to know that Rev. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Greenville District, has lately been ill with a severe cold, but we are pleased to know that he has recovered sufficiently to take up his work. Brother Curtis and his efficient co-laborers are confident that they will be able to make good reports to the Annual Conference at Oxford.

Rev. C. E. Fike, of Rayne, La., writes: "I buried on November 6 Brother S. B. Robertson, who had reached his 96th year. His wife, who is 94 years of age, survives him. They celebrated their diamond wedding on March 1, 1917. They had been loyal members of the Methodist Church for 80 years. We sang at the funeral out of a Methodist hymnbook that Sister Robertson has had in her possession since she was 13 years old. The saints are passing on."

We are carrying in this issue of the Advocate some words concerning Mr. T. B. King, of Memphis, Tenn., the new Financial Agent of the Methodist Hospital at Memphis, from the pen of his predecessor, Rev. H. M. Ellis. Brother King is a capable man and a forceful speaker, and will doubtless take good care of the great enterprise which henceforth it will be his duty to promote. The brethren throughout the two Mississippi Conferences should give him their hearty co-operation. Brother Ellis, who will now return to the pastorate, has wrought faithfully and effectively in the interest of this great hospital enterprise, and he is entitled to the gratitude of the Methodists in the territory supporting it for what he has accomplished.

Several of our Churches in New Orleans took up offerings last Sunday to assist the blind in this city. If there were any of our congregations that failed to lend a helping hand to this deserving work, they are urgently requested to do so next Sabbath. Mrs. Henry Alcus, 1465 Soniat Street, is the Financial Secretary of the Louisiana Commission for the Blind, and reports may be made to her. It is stated that there are 150 blind persons in New Orleans, 75 per cent of whom are dependent. The State provides only for its blind children in an educational way. The objects to be accomplished with the funds now being solicited are to prevent blindness in persons born with defective sight and to establish workshops to help furnish adults with a way of earning a livelihood.

At the request of some of his friends in Jackson, Miss., who speak in high terms of the service which he has rendered as Manager of the Methodist Orphanage in that city, we are publishing this week what the Jackson Daily News had to say of the work of Rev. J. B Randolph in that capacity. Brother Randolph will return to the work of the pastorate in the North Mississippi Conference, in which he is greatly beloved, and where a warm welcome awaits him. We hope to present our readers next week a picture of the new Manager of the Orphanage, Rev. B. F. Lewis, and tell something of the good record which he has made in the service of the Church. We have known Brother Lewis for a number of years, and we have no doubt that he will take good care of the great trust committed to his hands.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

(Read this in connection with Brother Roberts' statement on Page 13.)

Dear Brethren: If you will furnish me the names of ten of your best paying members, together with the name of the President of your Missionary Society, it will be of great help to me in securing funds for this worthy cause. I have visited twelve towns in the interest of the cause and have found a ready response wherever the cause was presented and given a chance. Two of these towns are giving me as much as $125 to $150. It is our purpose to make of this a conservative community house, such as the Federal Council of Churches and the Rural Church Department of our A. and M. College are recommending—only we will own and control the property. Furnish me the names and I will do the balance. Pastors where I have been assure me that it will not interfere with their local work. One man 250 miles away has sent me his check for $20 and a woman 100 miles away has sent hers for $10. Are there not many others in our territory who would like to do likewise? If so, Uncle Sam will deliver it for three cents. Cordially,

Coldwater, Miss. H. G. ROBERTS.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We wish through your paper to express our appreciation to the papers, to our friends, and to the brethren for their words of sympathy and for the many nice things that have been said of our dear boy, John Patterson Lester, who was recently captured by the Germans.

Sincerely,

(REV.) W. C. LESTER.

With the Fingers!
Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.—Adv.

MRS. JULIA NUNN CARROLL

Wife of A. Carroll, of Lecompte, La., was born on October 18, 1864, and died on October 25, 1917, after a wife. She was a faithful helpmeet and affectionate wife, loving mother, and stylish and faithful friend, and always ready to minister to the needs of those dependent on her. Sister Carroll was for forty years a member of the M. E. Church, South, and loved her Church and pastor. She was a kind neighbor and a true friend. She was buried her remains in the Lecompte Cemetery, there to rest until the resurrection morn. She rests from her labors, and her works follow her.

L. E. SHEPPARD.

JOHN W. BARNETT was born in Hollow, LaWrence County, Miss., [illegible] 1, 1845, where he grew to manhood. He moved to Corinth, Miss., in 1[illegible], and became one of the successful farmers of Alcorn County. From there he moved to Texas, where he remained for only a few years when he returned to Corinth and secured employment with the City Schools. Here he remained until death came to him on September 16 from injuries sustained while crossing a railroad track. He lived about 30 hours after getting hurt. Brother Barnett professed faith in Christ in 1[illegible] at Corinth, under the ministry of Rev. Sam P. Jones, and united with the Methodist Church. When Second Methodist Church was organized in Corinth in 1[illegible], he was one of the charter members. In this new organization, in which he lived a consistent life until called to his reward, he loved his Church, his pastor, and his fellowworkers, and he was a loyal neighbor, a good citizen, and a Christian gentleman. He leaves to mourn his departure a loving companion, and seven children. William Barnett, of Memphis, Ernest, a painter, of this county, and Mrs. George Johnston of this city, two brothers, Rev. W. T. Barnett, of Memphis, Tenn., and A. J. Barnett, of Texas, and one sister, Mrs. Sally Gurley, of Fulton, Miss. To know Brother Barnett was to love him, and we all miss him. His pastor.

J. H. JAMES.

Died at Martinville, La., Sister LUTICIA HARPER. Sister Harper was born in the State of Tennessee in 1[illegible], and departed this life at Martinville, La., on October 2[illegible], 191[illegible]. Her first marriage was to [illegible] Lilley in 1[illegible]. Of this union were born six children—five of these children preceded her to the good world. After the death of Brother Lilley, she was married to Brother [illegible] Harper in 188[illegible]. The writer was her pastor twice during the past 30 years. She was a devoted Christian. Her house was a home for the minister of the gospel. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of 15 and lived a consistent member until death. The end was peace. She leaves a husband, one son, and a host of relatives to mourn their loss. She was a mother indeed to her children, a sweet-spirited companion, a good neighbor, always ready to visit the afflicted, and the poor and needy were never turned away from her door with an empty hand if it was in her power to help them. She could supply their needs. She was a mother in Israel and left us all to mourn not as those who have no hope. I would say to the aged husband, children, and relatives, strive while young, and let us imitate mother's example.

"No painter's brush nor poet's pen
Can honor to her name
Has ever yearned half nine enough
To write her precious name."

[illegible] HOLLADAY.

With the death of [illegible] CLEMENT was shot a life of active service devoted to the welfare of children, to the Edison of [illegible] Sunday School, the Bible class, the public [illegible], in love with his fellowmen. While serving the second term as assessor of his native county, after serving as sheriff, his poor health compelled him to retire from public [illegible]. Shortly after his resignation as the Federal Farm Loan Bank system was inaugurated, and Mr. Clement was appointed as a member of the board, which office he received honorable mention. While [illegible] of September 19[illegible] he married Miss [illegible] of Sebastian County, Ark. Establishing his home at Alma, he opened with the people of his friendly [illegible] manner, and he truly gave a home to [illegible] of young folks while the [illegible] public schools. Four children were born to [illegible], Esther, Estelle and Louise, and in these and his beloved wife [illegible] found happiness. While [illegible] made a home of rest and refuge from the turmoil of office. He conveyed his body to Almyra, the funeral passed the home of childhood, [illegible] a brief service was held and the [illegible] Father, three brothers, two sisters, his wife and children paid their loving tribute to one who had spent so many hours with them in the [illegible] of life.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. [illegible] H. [illegible] Methodist Church at Almyra, the writer being assisted by the pastor, Rev. [illegible] Doc. [illegible]. The choir was [illegible] with flowers from. offerings coming from all parts of the State. A great crowd [illegible] to testify their love for their friend, and a great assemblage of both white and black gathered around his grave. At Grumer's joined the Methodist Church at Sidon, [illegible] in 18[illegible], transferring his membership to Almyra. When in proper health Almyra warned him that he was soon to leave this world, he made ready for the end, assuring his wife that he was at peace with God. He attended faithfully to his duties, and when death came he passed serenely into the open gates of the city. May the angel of the resurrection guard his sacred dust until Jesus comes again!

POLISH NOT RELIGION

Do not mistake polish or refinement and culture for religion. Many men and women of the most polished manners are frequently utterly alien to God and to the things which pertain to eternal life. Love's behavior is courteous. Neither is boorishness and ill manners any indication of godliness. We must get down beneath the surface of life to find the true state of the heart, and that is according to the inner life that God judges.—Christian Advocate.

WHICH CLOSET HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try this! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, Danderine does the application; double the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have pretty, healthy hair while you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and soon the hair shrivels, loosens and dies. Then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store and try it!

RHEUMATISM AND INDIGESTION.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid disease, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect, and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

SINGING HELPS.

"General Bell says singing makes men fight easier.' This was the headline of an article in the daily paper the other day. It reminded me of a plumber who said, "When I'm mad I always whistle," and it is proverbially true that the biggest coward passing a cemetery whistles to keep up his courage. Let the praise service be given a prominent place this fall in every church and home circle. "In the dwellings of the just is heard sweet melody." To-day there is rarely singing at the family altar, but the vesper hour of the Lord's day should have this added joy. Happy the family large enough to furnish all the parts and united enough to call for full chorus in the great cresendo of song. —Christian Intelligencer.

THE SALVATION ARMY ON THE FIRING LINE.

The Salvation Army has erected seven great huts for the use of the American soldiers in France in addition to thirteen large tents which are being used until other huts can be erected. The Salvation Army meetings are reported to have made a great hit with the American lads in khaki, their regular religious services being attended by an average of 1000. Light refreshments are served, including candies, root beer and grape juice. In one hut recently 1500 eggs were served. The Salvation Army auditoriums are open to other organizations and are frequently used for entertainments provided by regimental talent. During the past six months a weekly average of 300,000 soldiers have been catered to by the Salvation Army in the United States, France and England.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

A REQUEST OF THE PREACHERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Almost every mail brings special requests from brethren as to their roommates during the Conference and which we are anxious to grant if possible. All who have such requests are asked to send either of us a card immediately on reading this notice. We will be helped also in making assignments if those who can not come will drop us a card. We would like to get from the presiding elders the names and addresses of all applicants for admission and all lay representatives (and they can help by giving names of superannuates or others who may not come) at their earliest convenience. While the Pledge Card drive is on, we are pledging ourselves to make the brethren comfortable, and have prospects of good success.

STOP THAT PAIN!

The few misguided people who argue against the relief of pain as a first step in treatment, either have never suffered from any pain themselves or else they do not know what they are talking about.

It is all right to realize that pain may be the danger signal for some more serious complaint and it is well to look deep into the reason for pain, but the first step is to gain as speedy relief as possible in a safe way.

Pain is the greatest ally that disease has. Pain is the artillery, it batters down the nervous defenses of the body so that disease can safely take hold of the body.

But not only does pain do physical harm to the body, but it also does moral harm which may be tremendously far-reaching in its effects.

The nagging effect of pain is such that it will change the disposition of a person to such an extent that they will become a burden to themselves and to everybody else. The person who has normally the sweetest temper may be readily turned into an irritable crank by a succession of unrelieved headaches or pains.

Stop that pain by using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills according to directions. They are effective, safe and harmless. They can be purchased at any drug store, and the druggist is always willing to return the purchase price if the pills fail to relieve pain. You are the judge yourself. It will cost you nothing to try.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

"Who Will Win This Battle?"

Your kidneys are the filters of the body. If they become inactive and fail to eliminate the waste matter, they are apt to throw the whole mechanism of the body out of order, thus toxic poisons can accumulate in the system and be as deadly as snake venom.

Besides causing the minor ailments of rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago and backache, neglect of the kidneys is apt to develop into more serious diseases, such as diabetes or stone in the bladder.

Rid the body of toxic poisons—clean the bladder and kidneys and cure the twinges of rheumatism with Anuric and you win the battle of life.

Anuric was first discovered by Dr. Pierce, and has benefited thousands of sufferers as well as appeased and eliminated the ravages of the more serious kidney diseases. Now procurable at any good drug store, or send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package.

HARTFORD, ALA.—"When I commenced the treatment of Anuric I was in bad shape. My back ached all the time and oh! how my back would ache at night until I would have to get up. I could never sleep all night. But since I have taken the Anuric Tablets my backache is all gone and I can lie down and sleep good and sound all night. Oh! how much better I do feel—no one knows but myself. My advice to all sufferers of kidney troubles is to give Anuric a trial and they will find relief from their trouble." —MRS. B. G. COKER.

Cough Nearly Gone in 24 Hours

That's the usual experience with this home-made remedy. Costs little—try it.

Anyone who tries this pleasant tasting home-made cough syrup, will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the United States and Canada than any other cough remedy. The way it takes hold of an obstinate cough, giving immediate relief, will make you regret that you never tried it before. It is a truly dependable cough remedy that should be kept handy in every home, to use at the first sign of a cough during the night or day time.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 65 cents and you have a full pint of the most effective remedy you ever used.

The quick, lasting relief you get from this excellent cough syrup will really surprise you. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FRANK G. CARPENTER

IN every Chautauqua Association and in nearly every town and village of the United States, Frank G. Carpenter is known as the man who can come back from some place and then tell about it so that you think you have been there. After going into all the odd corners of the world, Mr. Carpenter has now turned his steps toward the farms and factories of his native land. Already he has told stories in the Christian Herald of steel and cotton, of sugar and of sulphur, of oil and lumber, and he has only just made a beginning. This exceedingly interesting series of articles, under the title of the

GREATER UNITED STATES

appears regularly in the

CHRISTIAN HERALD

Mr. Carpenter is making studies of our farms, factories, and mines from the standpoint of efficiency and industrial preparedness, and will make careful investigations of the wealth and resources of the United States, telling in the Christian Herald how they may be mobilized in times of need.

The aim of these travels is to learn just what we have in resources and industry, and how they may be protected, developed, and made most efficient for the American people.

Mr. Carpenter is making extensive travels throughout the United States, covering the great agricultural and industrial centers. He is taking up the great industries and is showing the new things that are taking place in them, especially drugs, dyes, etc. These articles deal with New England, with the newest South with its iron and sulphur, cotton and chemicals, and with the bread and meat lands of the Mississippi Valley. He will show what is going on in and about the Great Lakes, including the vast iron mines on which our manufacturing industry is founded.

Mr. Carpenter will visit and tell about the fast-growing Southwest, the Northwest and the Pacific Slope.

WHY 300,000 FAMILIES LOVE CHRISTIAN HERALD

THE Christian Herald is doing something more than merely placing interesting reading matter in the homes of its readers. It is giving them a part in great enterprises. It is giving them spiritual and material helpfulness. It is the one magazine that represents in the most vital way all of the interests of Protestant Christianity and of the on-marching church of Christ. Week by week, the Christian Herald is giving its readers issues of absorbing interest.

You should be a regular reader of the Christian Herald and enjoy these special features which are now appearing:

"He who guides us in the calm,
Will not leave us in the storm."

NESHOBA CT., MISS. CONF.

Dear Brother Meek: I am finishing up my second year on the Neshoba charge. This has been a good year in many respects. I serve six churches along the east edge of Neshoba County. I have just closed my revival meetings. I was assisted by Revs. E. M. Crosley, G. L. McNeese, and M. L. White. The pastor did the preaching in two meetings. All of our meetings were good. We had quite a number of conversions and reclamations, and I received 53 into the Church. We have completed our new church at Sandtown. This church was started last year, but was not completed until this year. We have a neat country church worth $1500. It was dedicated on October 7, by our presiding elder, Brother Linfield. We have a movement on foot to build a new church at North Bend, and we hope to have it under way of construction before our Annual Conference in December. We have some noble people in this charge who are willing to do all they can to further the cause of Christ, while there are others that are slow to see their duty. We are behind along financial lines, but hope to bring up a good report to Conference.—S. E. Flurry, P. C.

Nov. 8, 1917.

COLUMBIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: Let me make a brief report of our work in the thriving little city of Columbia. Early in the year we held a meeting of nearly two weeks. Rev. J. A. Bowen did the preaching, and Brother John N. Robinson, of Kentucky, led the singing. They are as good help in a meeting as I have had. Bowen was at his best in every respect. Brother Robinson is deeply spiritual, modest, and untiring in his efforts. There were 25 accessions on profession of faith and something like 40 who accepted Christ. The people of this town would be glad for these workers to come again. From June 7 to June 10 our Epworth League Conference met here, and it was a veritable Pentecost. The sunrise consecration services were manifestations of power. Between 60 and 75 young people surrendered for service wherever God may call. Brother Hawkins is a great League worker. He loves the work, and God uses him. I never saw deeper spiritual work in my life than we had. Our local chapter has lost heavily—the colleges and the war getting recruits from our ranks, but we still live and are doing a good work. Our Sunday school thrives, and Brother W. E. Lampton is happy to see so many of his Sunday school scholars uniting with the Church and becoming Christians. Our congregations are good, and our prayer meetings are well attended. The Woman's Missionary Society is doing a fine work. To date, we have added 107 to the roll of the Church, 35 of them being on profession of faith. We have paid the entire debt on our church and parsonage which amounted to more than $6000. Our collections will be paid in full at Conference with several hundred dollars in specials. We have been in every "drive" and have done "our bit." No more loyal, faithful band than the Columbia Methodists can anywhere be found.—W. M. Sullivan, P. C.

A HEALTHY BODY.

Do you suffer from constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, or other forms of liver trouble? A healthy liver means a healthy body. When constipated don't poison yourself by failing to take the proper treatment. Don't force your perspiration to carry off through your skin pores more than its share of the impurities of your body by failing to keep your bowels clean and healthy. Take Van Lax for your liver. It is harmless, contains no calomel or habit-forming drugs, is pleasant in taste and results. It promotes a healthy condition in your entire digestive system. Take Van Lax and keep your body healthy. Sold by all reliable dealers. In bottles 50c. Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

THE CAMPAIGN UNDER WAY.

Preliminary campaign work has begun for raising $200,000 in the State of Louisiana for the war work of the Young Men's Christian Association. The State has been divided into twelve districts and a field secretary has been placed in each district laying out pre-campaign plans for the big drive, which began November 11 and lasts nine days. State campaign headquarters has been established in the Commercial Bank Building at Alexandria and a strong office force is working early and late lining up the campaign matter, both oral and written, to be turned loose on the public.

Prominent business and professional men are serving in official capacity in the campaign as follows: B. B. Taylor, Baton Rouge, State Chairman; O. B. Steele, Baton Rouge, Treasurer; A. K. Jones, Baton Rouge, Secretary; H. H. White, Alexandria, Chairman North Louisiana; H. N. Pharr, New Iberia, Chairman, South Louisiana; Hon. Martin Behrman, Mayor of New Orleans, Chairman of New Orleans District; John A. Goodell, New York, State Campaign Director; E. D. Hanck, Ft. Sill, Okla., Manager North Louisiana.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's.

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 60 cents.

TRUE EDUCATION.

To educate the head, heart and hand—the head to think clearly and express thoughts in correct English, written, spelled or spoken; the heart for God, love, justice, honor, truth and one's fellow-men; the hand in some art or craft that shall afford the individual a comfortable livelihood—this is the true education.—G. M. McClure.

EVER FIERCER THAN NOW.

The conflict between the Church and the world was never fiercer than it is to-day. The mania for entertainment seems to have taken complete hold of the public, and the value of things seems to be measured by the immediate pleasure that it will bring to those indulging it. With this crowd happiness is the end sought, and the only idea of happiness that is recognized is the thrill of the senses that accompanies it.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

SHOULD NOT BE MONOTONOUS.

Life is always opening new and unexpected things to us. There is no monotony in living to him who walks even the quietest and tamest paths with open and perceptive eyes. The monotony of life, if life is monotonous to you, is in you, not in the world. It is God, and the discovery of Him in life, and the certainty that He has plans for our lives, and is doing something with them, that gives us a true, deep sense of movement, and lets us always feel the power and delight of unknown coming things. — Phillips Brooks.

What a Pity!

Isn't it a pitiful sight to see a handsome face covered with pimples and other scaly patches? And it is still more pitiable that some people allow these cutaneous troubles to continue, growing worse each day, when the simple treatment of applying Tetterine salve will entirely eliminate skin troubles and will restore the skin to its normal health. 50c a box. From druggists or by mail from

SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

A SPIRITUAL LAW.

"A religion cannot be really strengthened at home by declining to extend its blessings abroad. It was said long ago that Christianity is a commodity of which the more we export the more we shall have at home. It is equally true that the less we export the less we may find at home."

Drugs Excite Your Kidneys, Use Salts

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

One thorn of experience is worth a whole wilderness of warning.—Lowell.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, bad colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

BUSY, HARD-WORKED MEN AND WOMEN

Will find that the sarsaparilla, pepsin, nux and iron treatment comprised in Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron will give brain and nerve force, relieve the nervous strain incident to "too much to do in too little time," characteristic of life today.

These blood and nerve medicine seem to lift the nervous and overworked into new life, enabling them to accomplish easily the things that have fretted them and have seemed to bring them to a standstill.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron are very effectively supplemented by Hood's Pills, in cases where a laxative is needed. These three preparations are all sold by your druggist. Get them today.

TO THE METHODISTS OF MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Co-Workers: Our presiding elder has asked me to devote a part of my time to one of the most serious problems of church work to be found within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference. The place of which I speak is Truslow, a country church three miles east of Sarah, in Tate County. This is a large community of people, a majority of whom are poor. We have an old, dilapidated church building there, and about sixty members, fourteen of whom are widows, with children to provide for. Only a half-mile down the road stands a cozy little Mormon chapel, with about thirty-five members. When this chapel was dedicated a few months ago 26 Mormon elders were present, bringing with them three women that they had picked up somewhere. All this and more is going on among a large number of bright-faced, eager-hearted young people. More young people attend church there than at any other place I have been.

The community is noted for its large families. Upon inquiry, I fail to learn of another Mormon church in the State of Mississippi. Of all the Missionary enterprises in our State, the need of none is greater than this. The purpose of this letter is to ask you to help these Methodist people to convert that old shack of a house into a comfortable and adequate building. I am endeavoring to secure a club of 100 men to give $5 each, or more, for this work. I feel that you will. If so, please write out a check and forward it to me at once.

Thanking you in advance for your liberality, I remain, cordially,

H. G. ROBERTS, Pastor.
Coldwater, Miss.

Presiding Elder's Endorsement.

I give to Brother Robert's my unqualified endorsement in the work he is doing. He has not given half the blackness of the picture. This Mormon church is a monumental disgrace to Tate County. It is a monument to our indifference. Help us to wipe out this shame.

J. H. HOLDER,
Presiding Elder of Sardis District.

THE WISHBONE AND THE BACKBONE.

"Don't carry your wishbone where your backbone ought to be." I saw this the other day on a card in a shop window; a piece of excellent advice which we all need, is it not? How much time we waste in wishing that things were other than they are; that our environment was different from what it is; that we were physically, or morally, or spiritually stronger than we know ourselves to be! Is it too much to say that the two little words "I wish," express the normal attitude of mind of a larger number of people? I do not suggest that the exercise of will power can altogether change our environment, or give us bodily health; but it might help to do both. It is of no use to ourselves or to others to spend our time and energy of soul in wishing that we and the world were better. It would be of a very great deal of use were we to exercise our will power in the matter; if, instead of saying, "I wish I were better," "I wish the world were better," we were to say, "I will be better, and I will do my part in making the world better, God helping me." If we, you and I, are to do any good work in our own souls, or in the world, we must leave off saying, "I wish," and begin to say "I will."—Southern Churchman.

Comb Sage Tea in Hair To Darken It

Grandma kept her locks dark, glossy, and youthful with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

The Inward Effects of humors are worse than the outward. They endanger the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla eradicates all humors, cures all their inward and outward effects. It is the great alternative and tonic, whose merit has been everywhere established.—Adv.

POLISH NOT RELIGION.

Do not mistake polish and refinement and culture for religion. Men and women of the most polished manners are frequently utterly alien to God and to the things which pertain to eternal life. Dives belongs to this class. Neither are boorishness and ill manners any indication of righteousness. We must get down beneath the surface of life to find the true state of the heart, and it is according to the inner life that God judges.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

What Do You Know About Your Blood Supply?

Your Ignorance May Startle You.

Few people know of the many functions of the blood supply, and just how important it is that it be kept absolutely free from all impurities. The health of the entire body depends upon the condition of the blood. You are invited to write and obtain a booklet that gives you some invaluable information on this important subject. It tells how to keep the blood strong and free from the many impurities to which it is constantly subject.

It gives the history of S. S. S., the world's most successful blood remedy, which has been sold for more than fifty years by druggists everywhere. This book will be sent free to all who write to Swift Specific Co., Dept. A., Atlanta, Ga.

ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM ST. MARK'S HALL, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The attendance at Sabbath school and church increased during the month of October. The increase was due to the fact that a number are coming from the clinic, classes, and clubs. This is a source of great joy to the workers.

The attendance at the clinic is still increasing. The number at a single clinic recently reached the eightieth mark. The nurse, Miss Vogel, is taking a course in laboratory work with Dr. Elizabeth Bass. Her place in the clinic is being filled by Mrs. A. S. Born.

The girls are enthusiastic about "doing their bit" for their country. They made 300 visits in a canvass for Women's Registration Day, and had charge of a precinct booth registering 169 women. At a recent meeting a lesson in war cooking was given by Mrs. Ihere and Miss Armstrong, of the Government Food Preparedness Commission.

The boys, not wanting to be behind, distributed literature for Registration Day, assisted in the sale of Liberty Bonds, and have been generally helpful.

Miss Jean Gordon was the guest of honor at the last meeting of the Mothers' Club. She told of the State and city laws relating to children, and was eagerly listened to by all present. The time of her stay was all too short, but a promise to return soon and continue the subject reconciled the women to her early departure.

The sewing school opened on September 29, with an attendance of 75. There were ten volunteer teachers to take charge of classes in modeling, dressmaking, kindergarten, little mothers who make baby clothes, and a class in knitting.

Boxes were received from Lake Charles and Mansfield, La. Many friends throughout the city were liberal in helping, too.

On October 19 the new deaconess, Miss Aletha Graham, of Shelliman, Tenn., arrived to take up her work at the Mary Werlein Mission. She will make her home with the workers of St. Mark's Hall.

A CHALLENGE TO CHRISTIAN WOMEN.

In these crucial days which are testing the character of all men and women, when the political and moral life of our nation is imperiled, we must face the fact that our missionary enterprises stand also in grave danger. With the appeals from the Red Cross and other relief organizations, to which our hearts eagerly respond, many a woman feels that the missionary cause must give way for a while to these other emergencies. But such a turning away of regular gifts upon which the Boards have depended would result in a crippling of established work and a loss of ground which would be nearly or quite irrevocable. It is time to send out a warning. The new need must not be met at the expense of the old.

The history of missions shows that times of great national crisis were also times of great missionary activities. To cite only a few out of many:

The American Board sent out its first missionaries during the war of 1812. The Woman's Missionary Union was born in 1861, 'midst the throes of the outbreak of the Civil War, and in the decade following nearly all the leading Woman's Boards were organized. During these last three years England has maintained all its missions and a Canadian Board had the largest receipts last year in all its history.

Women, the challenge comes to us. We must hold fast to the work to which God has appointed us. The great lesson of the war is that true Christianity has been lacking. To give Christianity to all the world is the supreme task of the Church, and have not we women dedicated ourselves to this task?

In the special meeting of the Federal Council held in Washington in May, Dr. John R. Mott and Dr. Robert E. Speer uttered stirring words, calling to a larger work of evangelism than ever before. Never were there such challenging opportunities as today. Africa and Asia stand at the crossroads. To-day we can lead them to Christ if we are faithful, but it may mean at such a cost as we never have dreamed.

The challenge is calling us to a greater unselfishness—yea, to sacrifice, and it is leading us out to a larger service than we have ever been capable of in the past.

How will you meet it? How will I?

Mrs. J. H. MOORE,
President of the Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America.

NOTES FROM THURBER, TEXAS.

Miss Parker writes from Thurber as follows:

"The kindergarten opened on the 10th, and since the first day we have had an average of twenty-four Mexicans, Italians, and a few Americans. The cooking class is very popular. We may have to organize more than one. A young lady from Strawn, a town eight miles away, has charge of this class. She is a graduate in domestic science. The sewing school is well attended, and I am now trying to get some one to help with that. The kitchen-garten is going to be very popular when we get well started. This class is composed of those who wanted to learn to cook, but are too young. The Sunday school is a joy, and we have about seventy-five enrolled. We haven't enough teachers, but one by one they are beginning to take hold. If the attendance keeps up, we soon won't have room to do our work as it should be done. The night school will open soon, and I am going to teach bookkeeping, that I may get in touch with some of the young Americans. Much interest is taken in the Red Cross. We meet every week and are doing quite a bit of knitting."

NEW KIND OF CALOMEL SAFE AND DELIGHTFUL.

The new kind of calomel, known as Calotabs, retains all of the good medicinal virtues of the old-style calomel, yet is entirely purified from all of the nauseating, disagreeable and dangerous qualities. You can, therefore, eat what you please and go where you please, with no loss of time from your work.

One Calotab at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. Next morning you awake feeling fine, your liver cleansed, your system purified and with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your druggist recommends them and will refund your money if you are not delighted.—Adv.

VALUABLE POSSESSIONS.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill. — "While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. SHELDON, 5657 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

Lemons Whiten and Beautify the Skin! Make Cheap Lotion

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it. Make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to whiten, soften, freshen, and bring out the hidden roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful for rough, red hands.

Your druggist will sell three ounces of orchard white at little cost, and any grocer will supply the lemons.

Vapo Cresolene For Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Asthma, Sore Throat, Coughs, Bronchitis, Colds, Catarrh.

Established 1879

Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing, and often fatal affections for which it is recommended. It is a simple, safe, effective and drugless treatment. Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once. In asthma it shortens the attack and insures comfortable repose.

The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath, makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights.

Cresolene relieves the bronchial complications of Scarlet Fever and Measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of Diphtheria.

Cresolene's best recommendation is its 38 years of successful use. Send postal for Descriptive Booklet.

From the Field

Oak Grove Ct., Miss Conf.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am sure you are crowded for space this near Conference, but I want to enlist the sincere and earnest prayers of the real prayers who may read these lines for a plan that has been launched on Oak Ridge charge for the collection of the Conference assessments in full. One of the largest department stores in Vicksburg is the promulgator of the plan, the offer to help on the work coming unsolicited, which is an indication to me that God had something to do with the matter. As a result of the movement, three of the six churches have already paid these assessments, so I ask your prayers for the realization of the goal the Lord gave me for the work in the beginning of the year.

Sincerely,
J. A. WELLS.

Vinton, La.

Not long since the Methodist Church of Vinton received two coats of paint on the exterior and yesterday Mr. L. H. Stanfield finished the work of repapering and decorating the interior. Both the auditorium and Sabbath school annex were decorated with rafter and center ceiling panels, and the side walls show Corinthian pillars from wainscoting to ceiling, capped under border. The seats, pulpit, chancel, and all woodwork have been given two coats of varnish.

Immediately behind the pulpit are two large Corinthian columns, with caps, supporting a large six-foot arch, with designs representing relief work. The space above the wainscoting under this arch contains a beautiful imitation of hand-painted, rugged Swiss mountain scenery, with trees and rustic cottages in the foreground. A new system of indirect electric lighting with three large white globes suspended from the ceiling by massive brass chains, is now being installed. Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, of Sulphur, is the loved and popular pastor of this prosperous and progressive church. A resolution was recently passed, unanimously expressing a desire to have him returned for another year.

When Brother Hoffpauir assumed charge of this church, two years ago, he found an interest-bearing debt of $208 against it. This debt he has raised, carried on the regular mission and other work of the church, and now under his ministry the church building, as above mentioned, has been given two coats of paint and has been re-papered and decorated throughout the interior.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, sallvates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, sallvating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not sallvate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more billousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

The official board of the Vinton M. E. Church, South, is composed of the following leading citizens of Vinton: A. W. Whiting, Jno. Cailoux, R. M. Davis, Frank H. Banker, C. P. Hampton, and J. H. Smith, with R. M. Davis, President.—A Methodist.

FREE THANKSGIVING CARS.

F. & G. R. R.—Car from Kokomo to Fernwood, Nov. 26, Rev. W. H. Saunders, Fernwood, in charge.

Please see that these cars are well filled. There are about two hundred children to be cared for, fed, clothed and warmed, and we need corn, flour, sugar, grits, cured meats, lard, all kinds of canned goods, molasses, sorghum, dishes of all kinds, boxes of clothing, shoes, hats, caps, hose, elastic, soap, pins, needles, thread, buttons, blankets, sheets, pillow cases and towels. We also need peas, velvet and soy beans—in fact, anything in the way of something to eat and wear that can be used in any well regulated family. Let pastors appoint live, wide-awake committees at each church to solicit donations, have the goods brought to the railroad station and marked plainly for the Methodist Orphanage.

Thanking you for your generous support and hearty co-operation, I am,

Yours respectfully,
J. B. RANDOLPH,
Supt. Methodist Orphanage.

REV. J. B. RANDOLPH'S WORK COMMENDED.

The retirement of Rev. J. B. Randolph from the position of Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage, in this city, removes from the community one of the ablest and most worthy men ever engaged in this or any similar work in the State.

Mr. Randolph's term will expire December 1, of this year, as he was not an applicant for re-election because of his intention to re-enter the pastorate, and he will be assigned to work by the Methodist Conference which meets November 21. His new field of work will be in the North Mississippi Conference.

During the twenty-seven months of his occupancy of the position of Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage at this place, Mr. Randolph has made a record for executive ability and general aptitude in management of the very highest order, and which is well worthy of emulation, endorsement and praise.

Upon assuming his duties at that institution he found a $5000 note of two years standing against the farm and a deficit, or debt, of $3200 in the current running expenses. Not only have both of these debts been paid, but he has also expended the sum of $2000 in permanent repairs and improvements on the buildings; has spent $500 in the construction of much needed concrete walks about the premises; has built a 100-ton silo and leaves it full of silage; has had built two splendid barns and has the material on the ground for another good barn, and, after all of these substantial achievements, will leave about $6500 net and clear, in the treasury of the institution. Besides, he has added largely to the fine herd of cattle, insuring a constant supply of milk, butter and beef for the many who have been under his care. Moreover, he has at all times had a plentiful supply of vegetables of all kinds, melons, etc., never wanting for any of these staple table supplies.

About twice as many children have been received and placed in good homes under his administration as in any like period of time, since the Orphanage was founded. The children have been well cared for in every respect—their social, physical, sanitary and religious life faithfully safeguarded, and as many as 136 added to the Church on profession of faith.

Mr. Randolph surrounded himself with the most worthy and efficient assistants; finding an especially able co-worker in Rev. G. L. Landerdale, the Assistant Superintendent, and Mr. J. J. Childre, manager of the Orphanage farm, one of the most competent farm managers in the State and a most worthy and excellent man.

The management and diet for pellagra, as recommended by the United Sates government, have been faithfully observed and carried out, with the result that not a case of pellagra has occurred in more than a year, and only one death from any cause has occurred at the institution during his entire term.

Surely this is a record of service and achievement of which Mr. Randolph may well feel proud, and the public has not been slow in according him that meed of appreciation which his faithful and conscientious discharge of duty so well deserves.

The people of Jackson, who had grown to know and appreciate his great worth as a splendid Christian gentleman, wish him the best that life affords.—The Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

THE TRUE TEST.

There is a strange legend of old St. Martin. He sat one day in his monastery cell, busily engaged in his sacred studies, when there came a knock at the door. "Enter," said the monk. The door opened, and there appeared a stranger of lordly look, in princely attire. "Who art thou?" asked St. Martin. "I am Christ," was the answer. The confident bearing and the commanding tone of the visitor would have overawed a less wise man. But the monk simply gave his visitor one deep, searching glance, and then quietly asked, "Where is the print of the nails?" He had noticed that this one indubitable mark of Christ's person was wanting. There were no nail-scars upon those jeweled hands. And the kingly mien and the brilliant dress of the pretender were not enough to prove his claim while the print of the nails was wanting. Confused by this searching test-question, and his base deception exposed, the prince of evil—for he it was—quickly fled from the sacred cell.

That is only a legend, but it suggests the one infallible test that should be applied to all truth and to all life. There is much in these days that claims to be of Christ. There be those who would have us lay aside the old faiths and accept new beliefs and new interpretations. How shall we know whether or not to receive them? The only true test is that with which St. Martin exposed the false pretensions of his visitor. "Where is the print of the nails?" Nothing is truly Christ's which does not bear this mark upon it. A Gospel without a wounded, dying Christ is not a Gospel. The atonement lies at the heart of Christianity. The cross is the luminous center, from which streams all the light of joy, peace and hope. That whch does not bear the marks of the Lord Jesus cannot be of Him.—J. R. Miller.

THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Louisiana Conference was organized in the town of Opelousas in January, 1847, so that the meeting that is to assemble in Minden on November 28 will be its 72d session. It embraces the entire State of Louisiana, and it has in full connection 158 ministers. There are seven presiding elders' districts; the number of pastoral charges is 149, and there are within its bounds approximately 37,000 Methodists. Much of the territory embraced in this Conference is of a missionary character—especially is this true of South Louisiana, where there is a large French population. Roman Catholicism is strong in that section, as it also is in the city of New Orleans, which is the home of some 375,000 people. Protestantism is in the ascendency in the northern portion of the State, and our Church is notably strong in Shreveport, which is a thriving city of perhaps between 40,000 and 50,000 people. Some of the other strong appointments are Alexandria, Baton Rouge, Monroe, Mansfield, Lake Charles, and Ruston. The Louisiana Conference maintains two institutions of learning—Centenary College, at Shreveport, and Mansfield College for Young Women, at Mansfield. These schools are in a better condition to-day than at any other time in their history and the outlook for them is quite encouraging. An excellent orphanage, located in Ruston, is also operated under the care of the Conference.

A unique feature of Louisiana Methodism is what is termed "The Legal Conference," which is designed to hold its special properties and manage them to the best advantage. The Conference is making good headway in building up a Superannuate Endowment Fund, and it has administered its home mission work much better than most of the Conferences, the funds for this cause being collected a year in advance, so that when a pastor serving a mission appointment is promised a certain sum toward his support, it is paid regularly and promptly during the passing year. The Baptists claim a considerably larger membership than our Church does in the State, but it is very doubtful whether their statistics are as reliable as ours. There is probably no Protestant religious denomination in Louisiana that is more influential than the Southern Methodist Church, if indeed there is any that is as much so. In proportion to area, there is no commonwealth in the American Union that is richer in its resources than Louisiana, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should have here a great future—one that is worthy of its noble and heroic past.

The Conference at Minden is to be presided over by Bishop E. E. Hoss, who easily ranks with the ablest Bishops that our Church has ever had, and who is one of the great figures of world-wide Methodism. Let prayer be made that the great living Head of the Church may guide in its deliberations, and that its work may be such as to honor Him and speed the coming of his glorious reign.

A QUESTION FOR OUR CONFERENCES.

The present is an abnormal time, and the high prices of the necessaries of life are causing it to be difficult for many people to "make tongue and buckle meet." Perhaps not since the Civil War has the purchasing power of a dollar been so small. The persons who feel this most acutely are those who are receiving salaries in which there has been little or no increase, and who have nothing to sell. To this class most Methodist preachers belong, and if those on the weaker charges are to continue to give their undivided time to the work of the Church, as by every token they ought to do, it seems to us that some way ought to be found to provide for them a better support. How a pastor, with a family, who is paid only $500 or $600 a year, is to manage to get along and keep out of debt under the conditions now existing, we are unable to see.

This is a question which, in our judgment, our Annual Conferences should consider at their approaching sessions. Would it not be a good idea for them to levy a much larger assessment than usual for home missions, and through their Boards of Missions to see that the funds thus secured are so used as to supplement the salaries of the workers serving the weaker appointments? We are decidedly of the opinion that, in view of the present situation, either this or some better plan should be put into operation to give relief to these brethren and those dependent upon them.

The neglected man of Methodism is the toiler on missions in the home field and on the poor circuits. Their position brings them no prestige and there is behind them no missionary treasury to see that they are paid enough to live on, with regularity, and are thus kept from want. It has long been our conviction that any minister that the Church can use at all is justly entitled to a fair support, and that she should see that he gets it. We cannot afford to be indifferent to the enlarged needs of these faithful itinerants in the present world crisis. In arranging to care for others, we should not overlook them.

A NOTE FROM DR. THOMAS.

Dear Doctor Meek: In your issue of the 1st you state that you are reliably informed that the Joint Commission on Unification in session at Traverse City ordered a statement that was to go to the Churches and the publication of the "condensed minutes." Then you add in heavy black type, "But up to this good hour the 'condensed minutes' that the Joint Commission by emphatic action ordered to be printed have not yet appeared." At the close of the session the Commission did pass a resolution as follows: "That as early as convenient the Secretaries have printed all the Reports tentatively approved or not acted upon and all matters referred, and send four copies to each member of the Commission." I voted for this resolution because it would save expense and the Secretaries a large amount of labor. Before adjournment, however, a member moved that the proceedings be printed in full. This motion prevailed. Whereupon a motion was made to rescind the first action, and the Chairman decided that it was unnecessary to put this motion, as the second motion ordering the proceedings printed acted as a substitute for the first.

Under this final action of the Commission the Secretaries were ordered to print the proceedings in full, including all the speeches. These proceedings are in the press. Their preparation for the printer has taken much time, as there are fifty members of the Joint Commission and the remarks of each man had to be submitted to him before being sent to the printer.

So that your information is inaccurate and the impression which you would give that the Secretaries have failed to carry out the emphatic action of the Commission is without foundation. I am,

Sincerely yours,
FRANK M. THOMAS,
Secretary of Unification Commission.
Louisville, Ky.

BY THE EDITOR.

Our editorial in the Advocate of November 1, to which Dr. Thomas refers, contained the following utterance: "Of course, we believe our information to be correct—otherwise we would not give it out—but if it should be authentically shown that we are in error at any point, we shall gladly make correction." It, therefore, gives us pleasure to publish the foregoing statement by Dr. Thomas. We did not have the slightest desire to misrepresent the Secretaries of the Commission, nor any one else, nor anything. The statement that we made that the Commission not only ordered the issuance of the brief address that was published immediately after its adjournment at Traverse City, but also the publication subsequently of the "condensed minutes" of its proceedings, was based upon the following grounds:

THE SECRET OF PEACE.

"It is not looking backward down the list of years
To see our failures, sins, temptations, follies, fears
—and tears,
Nor is it looking on with hope all bright and fair
To meet, so often, bitter disappointment there—and care.
No, it is looking up, a living Christ to see,
And leaning calmly, Lord, and, oh, so trustingly—on Thee!"

GOD'S WAY OF TEACHING.

The process by which God teaches us humility is sometimes a most painful one. It must be so; for the cutting down and crushing of pride is a severe work. There are hours when the soul of the believer is made to suffer bitterly. But when he is thus taken down into the valley of humiliation, much truth is learned that would not otherwise come home to him. Grace abounds in that valley; and he comes out of it more lowly, but more happy—more distrustful of himself, but more full of confidence, as he looks out of himself to his God.—Bishop Oxenden.

THE THING NEEDED.

Is there any gospel which offers me a heavenly gravitation to counteract the earthly gravitation—some triumphant power which will tug me towards the things which are above, as this mighty world-power drags me down to things which are below? In this Word of the Master I find the gospel I seek: "I, if I be lifted up, will draw...." That is the gospel we need. The power to resist the gravitation of worldliness, to "set the mind on things above." To think and live on the pure and heavenly heights, is to be found in a crucified and exalted Christ.—J. H. Jordan.

MINDEN METHODISM.

By Rev. K. W. Dodson.

The organization which is now the Methodist Church of Minden, La., antedates the existence of the town. Minden was settled in 1837, but prior to that period, in 1830, a church organization was effected, and services were held in Washbrook's Schoolhouse, near where the town of Athens, in Claiborne Parish, is now located. Here the famous "Uncle Billy" Stephens preached the doctrines of Methodism to the sturdy pioneers. For a number of years, this organization was like its preachers—itinerant. It moved from house to house.

In 1839 a church building was erected in Minden on a lot donated by W. Abner Drake, Sr. This plain wooden building sheltered the congregation for sixty-eight years, being many times enlarged to accommodate the ever-increasing membership. In October, 1840, at a camp meeting conducted by Richmond Randle, a few miles out of Minden, a large number of persons were converted and became members of the Minden Methodist Church. The piety and zeal of the converts of this young preacher made Methodism a power for good in Minden. In the last twenty-five years, the Church has enjoyed uninterrupted growth and prosperity. During its history, it has had a long and honored list of members, many of whom were distinguished for their intelligence and piety, and who have left a permanent impression upon the community. The wooden structure that was used so long has been replaced by a beautiful brick church, and on the same plot of ground, just north of the church, stands a splendid brick parsonage.

The following ministers have served as pastors in Minden since 1845: Richmond Randle, Joel Sanders, H. E. Goodwin, Thomas Sanford, R. M. Crowson, (in 1850 Richmond Randle was returned), Henry Avery, S. J. Davies, D. S. Watkins, David Lawrence, R. S. Trippett, B. J. Hamilton, R. R. Alexander, P. M. Goodwin, S. S. Scott, A. D. Shea, P. L. Henderson, N. A. Cravens, J. A. Miller, T. B. White, T. J. Upton, W. P. Kimball, H. O. White M. C. Manly, J. E. Bradley, J. M. Brown, J. A. Parker, J. A. Billingsley, C. Keener J. W. Metlock, J. P. Cassidy, A. D. McVoy, C. P. Smith, B. T. Crews, T. J. Warlick, J. R. Moore, R. H. Wynn, E. K. Means, A. G. Shankle, W. W. Drake, and K. W. Dodson,

We are looking forward with pleasure and anticipation to the coming of the Annual Conference, which will meet on November 28, at 9 o'clock a. m. Bishop E. E. Hoss will preside.

The following announcement of anniversaries to be held during the session may prove of interest to some:

Epworth League anniversary, Wednesday evening, with Dr. Paul M. Kern as the speaker.

Church Extension anniversary, Thursday evening, with an address by Dr. W. F. McMurry.

Educational Anniversary, Friday evening, with an address by Dr. Stonewall Anderson.

Sunday School Anniversary, on Saturday evening, with an address by Dr. J. W. Shackford.

THAT OVERLAPPING AND ELSE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I desire to repeat, and, as much as I can, emphasize, the following statement in Brother A. H. Williams' article on "Overlapping," in the Advocate of November 8:

"Why should the triumphant and successful Southern Church disband and depart from its sublime and divinely-given mission, simply to prevent the M. E. Church from wasting money and consuming workers by sending them into a territory already well occupied by the M. E. Church, South? If they squander money and literally wreck themselves in the overlapping investments it is strictly a matter which belongs to them only."

Yes, our Northern brethren alone are responsible for the "altar against altar" in the South. If there is any sin in it, they are the sinners. Had they confined themselves to the work among the freedmen, who so gladly welcomed them at the close of the war, it would not have appeared so much like an effort to "disintegrate and absorb" the Southern Church. But why should they establish themselves and waste men and money in Atlanta, New Orleans, and other cities and towns in the South? These, and all such places, were well cared for by Southern Methodism, and there was no demand for the planting of Northern Methodism among the white population of the South.

Fifty years ago we organized our colored members into a separate and independent Church. That Church lives and prospers, and is a power for good in the South. Now, after this long period our Northern brethren, in their zeal for unification—rather, for organic union—desire to force upon us 350,000 colored members whose fathers went out from us in the "days of reconstruction" because they distrusted us. And what is worse, they instilled into the hearts of their children "race prejudice" of the blackest hue. We can expect nothing good at their hands. If we cannot unify without them, we had better not unify.

THE MEASURE OF A PREACHER.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

Nothing is more interesting than the gauge by which we measure men—especially the guage by which preachers and the people measure a Christian minister. Only a few days ago, I heard a presiding elder, after complimenting the splendid pulpit abilities of a pastor, close by saying that his record as to getting his collections was against him, and I said, "What about that serving tables, and appointing of the seven, which is described in the 6th chapter of Acts?"

What about these laymen's conferences, if the preacher is to be burdened with the gathering of taxes? Many a pastoral visit has been spoiled by the pastor having to ask for a contribution for the church benevolences. In many charges it is impossible for the pastor to make more than one or two rounds a year, and at these he is embarrassed with the suspicion on the part of those visited, that he comes only for money.

Saint Paul wrote to Timothy: "Preach the Word"; and Luke writes of St. Paul (Acts 28:31) that he spent the time in Rome "preaching the kingdom of God and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ."

Knowing this to be the standard of his ministry, it may be well to ask, how much time, that should be spent in studying the Word, is given to gathering money? I find no place in all the Scriptures to warrant the above mentioned standard of measurement of the preacher; but I do find again and again exhortation to acquaintance with the Scriptures, that the preacher may be thoroughly furnished for the greatest work ever committed to mortal man.

Some would measure the preacher by the number of visits to the home of his people, regardless of the subjects discussed. Indeed, few people encourage the pastor to inquire into the condition of their spiritual life—it's only the chit-chat that they want. St. Paul himself seemed to have some trouble with that question in the church at Corinth, when he wrote that they had discussed long enough a certain collection, and that they now "perform the doing of it." The pulpit has been truly called the preacher's throne, and the more the people help them to make it so, the better it will be for all. As I look back on a life well near spent, I am convinced that there is too much time wasted chasing dollars, instead of ideas.

WAR CAUSED BECAUSE MAN'S MORALS DID NOT KOT KEEP PACE WITH MAN'S MIND.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

In George Gissing's "Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft" is this rather striking paragraph:

"I hate and fear 'science' because of my conviction that, for long to come, if not forever, it will be the remorseless enemy of mankind. I see it destroying all simplicity and gentleness of life, all the beauty of the world; I see it restoring barbarism under the mask of civiiization; I see it darkening men's minds and hardening their hearts; I see it bringing a time of vast conflicts, which will pale into insignificance 'the thousand wars of old,' and, as likely as not, will whelm all the laborious advances of mankind in blood-drenched chaos."

Commenting upon it, the Editor of Nature (London), says:

"We have on several occasions pointed out that it is merely pandering to popular prejudice to make science responsible for German barbarity or for the use of its discoveries in destructive warfare. Chlorin was used as a bleaching agent for much more than a century before the Germans first employed it as a poison gas; chloroform is a daily blessing to suffering humanity, but it is also used for criminal purposes; potassium cyanid may be used as a poison or to extract precious metals from their ores; and so with other scientific knowledge—it can be made a blessing or a means of debasement. The terrible sacrifice of human life which we are now witnessing is a consequence of the fact that the teaching of moral responsibility has not kept pace with the progress of science. As in mediaeval times, all new knowledge was regarded as of diabolical origin, so even now the popular mind is ever ready to accept such views of the influence of science as are expressed in Gissing's work. The pity of it is that the public press does nothing to dispel illusions of this kind by urging that what is wanted is not less scientific knowledge, but a higher sense of human responsibility in the use of the forces discovered."

In this utterance of the Editor of Nature is a sentence worthy of the most careful consideration by every thoughtful person who desires that the earth should be a safe place in which to live. It is this sentence: "The terrible sacrifice of human life which we are now witnessing is a consequence of the fact that the teaching of moral responsibility has not kept pace with the progress of science."

This statement is the simple truth—an awful truth. Men have become more skillful than virtuous, more powerful than conscientious.

The education which has prevailed in Germany during the last century, and which has been communicated to other nations, has all tended in the direction of increasing human power and diminishing the moral life of mankind. On its religious side it has been rationaiistic, and has run to skepticism. The religious element in German education having been weakened, the ethical element aiso has become feebie, until, in shameiess

REV C. D. ATKINSON,

Presiding Eledr of the Shreveport District, within the bounds of which the Louisiana Conference will this year meet. Brother Atkinson has been a successful pastor, a great church builder, and is making an excellent record as a presiding elder.

unfaithfulness to solemn pledges the most sacred treaties have been denounced by German statesmen as mere "scraps of paper."

The immoral outcome of culture overloaded with physical science and under-charged with moral science was inevitable. Hence we are witnessing a war in which science and savagery are united in the most hideous forms.

The cruel conflicts of barbarians in other ages revealed brute force operating without the restraints of humanity and morality, and, in this dreadful war, scientific power has taken the place of brute force, and the result is just as really barbarous as was ever wrought by painted savages. What worse did the Huns and the Vandals anywhere than the Germans have done in Belgium?

The President of the United States rightly concludes that with such a power unchecked there will be no safe place for democracy in all the world. And he might go much further, and say nothing will be safe in a world in which science outruns morality.

Science gives men control over the titanic forces of nature, and when these superhuman forces are not used in subjection to the moral law, nothing in the earth is safe—neither democracy nor anything else.

But let us not suppose the Germans are sinners above all who dwell on our planet. They are neither more nor less than human beings, with like passions as other men. They have simply become more scientific than conscientious, and in any land in which the moral and religious element in education is omitted altogether, or falls behind the scientific element, the people will revert to scientific barbarism.

We of the United States are traveling the same road along which German education has led the Teutonic tribes back to barbarism as ruthless as anything recorded in the "Germania" of Tacitus. Such culture will land us at the same end.

The Editor of Nature is quite right in decrying any disposition to depreciate, or diminish, scientific knowiedge. Such a disposition is as futile as it is foolish. Men are going to have scientific knowledge at any cost, and scientific darkness is not the remedy for any of the ills of the modern world.

But men mnst be as pious as they are powerful, or they wiii be a peril to both themselves and others.

It is not science, but secularism, which it behooves us to oppose.

The Editor of Nature deprecates most justly that "the teaching of moral responsibility has not kept pace with the progress of science." But how can a sehse of moral responsibiiity be taught in the absence of religion? To whom are men morally responsible, if the existence of God be denied, or the thought of God be dimmed to the human consciousness? A person cannot be responsible to an abstract moral law. Back of the law must be a divine Law-Giver, or the law will be impotent to restrain human passion, or impel men to observe sacred obligations. Any morality that is reliable is the fruit of religion, and we cannot have the fruit if we deaden the root.

Here we put our finger upon the deadly disease which has mortally affected German morality. Rationalism has destroyed faith, and religion has become the tool of state-craft. God has been dethroned and the state deified.

In our country, in which a republican form of government exists, the results of rationalism must be the same in substance, though they may take different forms socially and politicaily.

Rationalism in the modern world, with all its science, means ruthlessness, and the end of ruthlessness is ruin.

The modern man must have a strong religion to save his civilization from the self-destruction in which conscienceless power always ends. Without such a religion he will be both corrupt and cruel, whether he pnrsue the arts of peace, or engage in the conflict of war.

Our country must have a revival of religion in order to overtake its dangerons progress in science and turn its scientific advancement into a peaceabie and wholesome thing.

The whole world needs a revival of religion. Mankind is eating too freely of the tree of knowledge and partaking too sparingly of the saving fruit of the tree of life. Without more piety it must perish from its own power. Only holiness can save a high-powered world from self-destruction.—Atlanta Journal.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER FELTS.

Editor Advocate: Unification was born of Southern Methodism, grew, waxed strong, walked among us unafraid. The youngster was killed with a colored club, plus a few addendas. The death was not unexpected. There may be some among us who would say, "Come forth," but, alas! who will roll away the stone that covers the youngster's grave? Not the new Laymen's Movement—THAT WAS BORN DEAD.

I congratulate you, Mr. Editor, in that you have stood, and are standing, for what many of us believe to be the very life of our Church. Now, let us be about the Master's business; love each other, help each other, make such changes as are warranted by Holy Writ and provoked by the real "trend of the times," he used of God in the saving of men, and help bring about REAL, not SPURIOUS unification.

The Holly Springs District will make a decidedly better report in every way than last year.

With all good wishes for the Advocate, the Advocate family and her thousands of readers,

Holly Springs, Miss JAMES H. FELTS.

FACTS AGAINST FANCIES.

By Bshop E. E. Hoss.

My Dear Dr. Lovett:

In his recent very readable article in "The Methodist Review" on "The Constitutions of the Two Methodist Churches," Prof. Rembert G. Smith says that the "ritual of our Church contains forms for the ordination of deacons and elders, but none for the ordination of Bishops. The form is for the consecration of a Bishop."

Now, may I call the attention of Prof. Smith to the fact that consecration is simply a manner of ordaining Bishops? I commend to his notice the Century Dictionary, and Webster's, at the proper places.

Furthermore, though I have not a full set of Disciplines at hand, I can at least say with certainty that the ritual as prepared by John Wesley, and accepted by the Christmas Conference of 1784, had a "form for ordaining Bishops." This form continued in the Discipline till 1805—just how much longer I can not, under the above mentioned circumstances, tell, more than this, in the "Sunday Service and Ritual," published by order of the General Conference of 1866, under the editorship of that most careful of all Methodist scholars, Dr. Thomas O. Summers, there is still "a form for ordaining Bishops."

Just when and by-whose authority the change was made in the Discipline, I do not know; but it is certain that whoever did it, did not mean to make any change in the meaning of the ceremony, or else was too ignorant to complete his work.

In the Discipline of 1914, which is still of binding authority, the two elders who present a newly-elected Bishop are required to say: "We present to you this holy man to be ordained Bishop." That was exactly what was done in my case in 1902; and I was accordingly ordained "by the laying on of hands"—and prayer—just as in 1870 I was ordained deacon, and in 1872 elder. I have at least always thought that I was ordained Bishop. That was what I was presented for—according to the Discipline—Brother Smith to the contrary notwithstanding.

Prof. Smith further says: "Those who assert that the life tenure of a Bishop is a part of the Constitution probably also believe that the bishopric in Methodism is an order and not an office." This is an infelicitous form of words. I do not know of a single soul who believes that: "The episcopacy is an order and not an office." There are many, however, who believe that an order is nothing more than a permanent office, into which men are inducted by the process of ordination. To force any other meaning upon the words is to make a fatal concession to sacerdotalism and sacramentarianism. In the above sense of the word Methodism has, and has had from the beginning, three orders in the ministry. When Dr. Coke came to America, he brought with him from John Wesley "letters of episcopal orders," that is, a certificate of the fact that he had been ordained Bishop.

Against the superficial and contradictory view of Prof. Smith and some others, I set this view, which conforms to history, and to the New Testament.

It is not necessary to tell me, what I learned long ago, that Bishops and elders are frequently used in the New Testament as interchangeable terms. Yet, I also know that the New Testament does not prescribe any particular form of Church Government, but leaves every Church free to adopt one order, in the ministry as the Wesleyan Methodist Church of England, and the Methodist Protestant Church in our own country has done, three, or thirteen—or any number, as it may choose.

Our own Church has never at any time declared "that we have two orders and an office." The Northern Church did so declare in 1882. But in 1884 Dr. D. D. Whedon, in "The Methodist Review," broke that doctrine into fragments, and ground it into powder. Whatever portions of it were not by him subjected to such process of comminution, Dr. John Miley utterly destroyed in his great paper read before the Centennial Conference in the same year These Methodist theologians, moreover, were simply following in the tracks of Wilbur Fisk, Henry B. Bascom, and Moses M. Menkie.

If Prof. Smith is disposed to call in question the historical accuracy of what those above said, I shall be glad to furnish him with the confirmatory documents, with pages and paragraphs properly marked for easy reading.

A LETTER FROM SISTER RANDLE.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just received a picture of our grandson, Tom Randle, who came to live with us after his mother's death at less than five years of age. Our son, Robert, his father, died when he was one year old. He enlisted in June in the Navy from Yoakum, Texas, where he, with us (his grandparents), was visiting Mrs. S. C. Tharpe, our daughter, Pauline. He went to the training station in San Francisco, where he stayed three months. From there he went to New York, where he remained about two weeks. On his way, at Salt Lake City, he wired us $50 for our golden wedding present. He is now on his way to France on the United States steamer Covington. He writes, "I want you and grandfather to pray for a safe voyage. Do not worry about me. I will be sure to return to you."

TOM RANDLE.

I write so that all of our dear friends and loved ones can join us in asking our heavenly Father to spare him, care for him, and bring him back safe in soul and in body, if it is His will. He is all that we have left now. And Mr. Randle's pension as a Confederate soldier has stopped unless we move back to dear old Louisiana, which we would gladly do, but the doctors declared that he must "go West and remain there or die," and we are not yet ready to spare him. Do you think that it is right after he served the entire South during the Civil War, very little of this service being in Louisiana, that he should thus be deprived of his pension? Help us to try not to think hard of the Pension Board. The Governor says that "they control in the matter altogether." I wrote requesting him to use his influence in our behalf. We know that the Lord will provide, but he earned that money and is still suffering from the exposure to which he was subjected in camp. Pray for us and ours. Yours in Jesus' name,

Sister T. S. RANDLE.

A LAYMAN SPEAKS.

Dear Dr. Meek: As an humble Layman in the Southern Methodist Church, I ask a place in the Advocate to protest against the methods being used to force upon us a unification of the two branches of American Methodism. I have read with keen interest your editorial in the New Orleans Advocate of November 1, and I am convinced that my suspicions that there is an effort to withhold from the people the real purpose and plans of the Commission by some members of it are not without foundation.

From Dr. J. M. Moore's statement at Lake Junaluska, and at Niagara Falls, N. Y., it seems that somebody is determined to set aside all instructions given by our General Conference, and, before the millions of Southern Methodists are aware of what is impending, to unite the Churches on their own terms, and that on such terms as would result in the dismemberment and absorption of the Southern Methodist Church. I protest against it vigorously. I think that the Church has a right to know what the Commission and the Sub-committees are doing, before another move is made. Let us have the proceedings and the full texts of the reports submitted, that the Church may be informed as to what is proposed.

From a study of the map you presented and the suggestions as outlined in the plans for unification, I can only see the Southern Methodist Church dwindle into a negligible minority, with Northern and Negro domination. Such an arrangement would never appeal to Southern Methodists. I hope that the Annual Conferences will take some action that will curb the activities of those among us who are aiding in our disintegration and absorption. I think you deserve the thanks of all our Church for the defense you are making for us. We look to you and pray that you may preserve these dear principles of the Church.

Yours truly,

Kosciusko, Miss. SAM N. GILLILAND.

A VOICE FROM THE MASSES.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am constrained to write you in regard to your article on "Unification" in the issue of the Advocate of Nov. 1. Why is it that some people try to manipulate their way in this world, as it seems to me that some are doing in regard to unification? I am only a layman of the M. E. Church, South. I am opposed to unifying first, last, and all the time. I can only see another "Vanderbilt University" case in it, so far as the methods being employed are concerned. When I state my position about it, I think that I voice the sentiment of the people of my district (Durant District, North Miss. Conf.). I only wish that I were fluent with a pen so that I could tell the people what I know about this proposition. I have read everything that I have been able to get my hands on on the subject and have studied it closely. "It will not do." it would mean ruin to our Church, as I see it. It would mean the absorption of us—the taking away of our rights and independence as a Church and people. We have a lot of folks that will not tolerate it at all. They will quit the Church first. Give us the facts—the plain truth—as they are, if you can get them. We have a right to be informed, as much so as the Northern Church is. If that Commission would report in full, it would make the matter look much better, and it would be better.

Yours for the right,

A CURE FOR EGOTISM.

"Let those who are inclined to think at all highly of themselves commence writing a short memoir, or an account of their doings which have at all benefited mankind. If the perusal of that does not serve to humble them, let them ask somebody else to supply the list, and then peruse that; and finally let them contrast their opportunity of doing good with the good they have done."

THE NEW MANAGER OF THE MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE.

Rev. B. F. Lewis was born in Jefferson County, Miss., being the oldest child of the late Rev. W. B. Lewis, who, for over fifty years, was an active and beloved pastor in the Mississippi Conference. He received his education in the old Centenary College at Jackson, La., and at Vanderbilt University. He joined the Mississippi Conference at Natchez while still a youth, in 1884, Bishop Kavanaugh presiding. He was ordained Deacon in Meridian in 1886 by Bishop McTyeire, and Elder in Jackson in 1888 by Bishop Keener. He was married in 1889 to Miss Mary Francis Otken, a daughter of the late Dr. Chas. H. Otken, for many years one of the most prominent educators of South Mississippi. While pastor of the West Jackson Station, now Capitol Street, he was elected Assistant Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Dr. C. W. Carter being chief. He was for eight years Chairman of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, and was one of the two Chairmen of the Southern Methodist Church who saw possibilities in the present annual meeting of our Conference Chairmen of Sunday School Boards and Field Secretaries, and asked for such a meeting. He is now serving his second pastorate at Canton, and was not an applicant for the position of Manager of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home, being called to that responsible position without the least seeking upon his part. This is the second time he has been asked to take this work.

Well-poised, genial, and capable, Brother Lewis' many friends believe that he is admirably fitted for the important duties that will now devolve upon him, and it is felt that he will have a valuable assistant in his labors in the person of his talented and consecrated wife. Let all the Methodists of Mississippi rally to the support of our splendid Orphanage at Jackson, and carry it forward to yet larger things under the new administration.

A CALL FROM BIBLE LANDS.

By Dr. E. B. Chappell, Sunday School Editor.

The Sunday School War Council is a body officially designated by the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations and the International Sunday School Association to bring the Sunday schools of the country into co-operation with the Government in all kinds of war relief. At a meeting held in Cleveland, Ohio, on September 26, the War Council passed a resolution asking all the Sunday schools in the United States to take special Christmas offerings for Armenian and Syrian relief. At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the General Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the plan proposed by the War Council was unanimously approved and the Sunday School Editor was instructed to send an appeal to all the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism to join in this worthy undertaking. The American Committee on Armenian and Syrian Relief is asking a million dollars from the Sunday schools of the country, and it is the earnest hope of the Executive Committee that the schools of Southern Methodism will do their full share towards the raising of this amount.

This is one of the most deserving and at the same time one of the most urgent calls that has come to us. No atrocity in modern times, or, indeed, of any time since the ruthless conquest of Assyria, equals in magnitude and brutal cruelty the devastation of Armenia and Syria by the "unspeakable Turk." Millions of people, men, women and children, have been murdered and millions more have been driven from their homes and robbed of all their earthly substance. It is estimated that at least one million of the latter class have already perished from starvation and hardship. But more than two millions still survive, 400,000 of whom are orphans, and practically all of whom are homeless, destitute and helpless except for such help as may reach them from the outside. Dr. James L. Barton, Secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, says: "We are now witnessing in this twentieth century the crucifixion of the three ancient races of Christendom, all three having a large and significant part in the transmission of the Word of God and of Christian traditions and the oracles of the Church down through the centuries. All three are suffering through no fault of their own, but because their lot was cast in a land where no Christian power was able to protect them and because, forsooth, they would not remove the Lord Jesus Christ from their altars and put Mohammed in his place. These are the people who stretch out their hands to us for sympathy and aid."

The situation is pathetic enough to melt a heart of stone. Surely the Christian boys and girls of America will not refuse to lend a helping hand to the persecuted, tortured, disinherited Christian boys and girls of Armenia and Syria, and surely the Christian fathers and mothers of America will not turn a deaf ear to the pitiful appeals of the fathers and mothers of Bible lands, who, because of their loyalty to our common faith, are subjected to the most horrible suffering that our modern world has ever been called to witness.

It is estimated that it will require $30,000,000 to keep these unfortunate victims of Turkish barbarity through the winter, and most of this must come from the United States. We are the only great Christian people on the earth that are in a condition to give the relief they so sorely need. Will we do it?

To be sure, many financial appeals are coming to us just now, but the times are exceptional and demand exceptional sacrifices. We must do without, if need be, even to the point of real privation, in order that we may do our part in meeting the awful emergency. We cannot withhold our aid in the face of the suffering which now appeals to us without sacrificing those high moral values which ought to be dearer to us than our physical lives.

Plans have been made whereby the preparation of Sunday schools for the taking of this offering may be made both interesting and educational. Special programs have been prepared which may be obtained free upon application to the American Relief Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, 1 Madison Ave., New York.

Because we want to know how much is contributed by our Southern Methodist Sunday schools, we request that all offerings be sent, properly designated, to Dr. E. B. Chappell, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee.

"Frugality, self-imposed for the sake of service, will come back to us in rich reward in character and power."

A STRONG PROTEST.

Five Northern Methodist Annual Conferences Have Protested Against the New un-Methodistic Course of Study Adopted by their Church.

The Southern California Conference has grown to be one of the great and influential Conferences of Methodism. At the recent annual meeting it lined up with the Philadelphia, New Jersey, Baltimore, Wilmington and other great Conferences, in condemning the new Course of Study for young preachers, by passing the following:

"Whereas the Course of Study for ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, published in the Discipline of 1916, has awakened a widespread dissatisfaction because of the introduction of doctrines contrary to our accepted standards; and whereas about three thousand of our young ministers, the future leaders of Methodism, who ought to be thoroughly indoctrinated and established in the fundamentals of our faith, are being taught doctrines plainly contrary to the teachings of God's Word and the standards of Methodism; and whereas books which have been from the beginning of Methodism the unquestioned standards of doctrine, such as 'Wesley's Sermons,' have been replaced by books containing teachings contrary to the Word of God and the standards of Methodism; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Southern California Conference, in annual session assembled, protests against the present Course of Study, and that we earnestly recommend a careful reconsideration and reconstruction of the Course of Study, so as to bring it into harmony with the Scriptures, Methodist doctrine and history, and our Articles of Religion.

"That the Conference Secretary is hereby instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the fall meeting of the Board of Bishops, at Atlantic City, New Jersey, October 23-30, 1917, requesting them to refuse to confirm the present Course of Study for ministers." * * *

Our Bishops are having their semi-annual meeting this week in Atlantic City. I have been asked: "Will the Bishops take any action at the present meeting on the Course of Study?" I think not. The action they did take was illegal, and they know it, but they never will admit it, because the Course of Study, with its un-Methodistic and anti-Biblical teaching, is according to their liking, and they are responsible for it, seeing they appointed the Commission that prepared it, and approved its work, though their action was illegal and revolutionary, and it is now in the Discipline.—Dr. L. W. Munhall, in the Eastern Methodist of Oct. 25.

DR. WERLEIN AND UNIFICATION.

Dr. Werlein's article on "The Question of Unification," which appeared in the Nashville Advocate of Oct. 12, and the New Orleans Advocate of Nov. 8, deserves somewhat of a review.

The Church of the future is held in trust by us of to-day. The unification of Methodism by reorganization is the most tremendous task of its kind ever undertaken in the history of the Church. The consideration of this issue is a very different thing from Congress recognizing war which was being waged against us and other democracies. If the question of uniting our nation with France, another democracy, under one governmental regime had been pending, it is safe to say "all partisanship would not have been laid aside.

The Cause of Disunion.

The Doctor emphatically states, "The Negro separated them in 1844 and keeps them apart now." To the first clause history responds that there is just ground to conclude that the underlying cause was not the Negro, but, as the speech of Bishop Soule, whose deft hand wrote the Constitution, reveals, it was the different interpretation of a principle of law involving the rights of the General Conference to expel a Bishop without legal charges. Though such profoundly great men as Winans, Pierce, Capers and Soule took part in the debate, there was not a voice lifted in defense of slavery. The separation was made and has continued not because of "perversity but diversity."

As to the second statement, "The Negro keeps them apart now," it is possible that history will record that the boundary lines and legislative powers of the Regional Conferences, and a General Conference with excessive executive, legislative, and judicial functions, along with the Negro problem, had somewhat to do with the failure of unification.

Dr. Blake recognizes "The race problem is looming larger and growing more difficult each year." In mentioning the two first-named problems, we would not diminish the seriousness of the last-named one—the Negro problem. One side wants the Negro in the Church; the other out and in a Church of his own.

Our Southern Church in desiring an emancipation which will insure the Negro his ecclesiastical independence does not seek to wound him on the road to Jericho, but to take him "to an inn" and help him in the largest way, feeling that the "rights and duties of each race are to develop according to its instincts and to make its own distinct contribution to the world." And we must bear in mind our obligation to the 1,750,000 Negro Methodists who have set up housekeeping for themselves and who are doing it successfully, being manifestly well satisfied. Talk all you will about "manhood rights," "associate connections" and "separate Jurisdictional Conferences with equal rights," but the testimony of the three leading Negro Methodist Churches in America establishes the fact that "the vast majority" prefer racial Church autonomy to ecclesiastical bondage.

The Doctor is gallant when he exclaims, "The consideration shown the Negro by the Methodist Episcopal Church tends to social equality, they say. This is not true." A Mississippi Negro presiding elder who was a delegate to their 1916 General Conference was entertained in one of the most elegant white homes in Saratoga and rode to and from the sessions with his host's family in the same car. This is according to his statement. Of course, this "wuz up nawth." Dr. Perrin, a distinguished white Northern Methodist residing near Boston, says that he and his family entertain Negro guests on nearly every Thanksgiving Day, entirely unmindful of the fact that they are of a different color. Dr. R. E. Jones, the colored editor of the Northern Methodist paper published in New Orleans, says that the white Northern Methodists have been eating and sleeping in Negro cabins for over forty years. With possibly one or two exceptions, nearly all the Northern States permit marriages between whites and blacks, and it is well known that they do not sympathize with the idea of having separate cars, waiting-rooms, and residence sections in cities for colored people, and that they are against the Southern policy of keeping the Negro out of politics. Why, then, does Dr. Werlein seek to make it appear that the Northern and Southern people do not differ in their views concerning the policies to be pursued in dealing with the colored population? It is true that the Church, North, has separate Annual Conferences for the Negroes, but it should be remembered that most of these are in the South where any other policy would not be tolerated by the Southern white people. There were, if we are correctly informed, something like 75 Negro delegates to the last General Conference of the Church, North (a number of these being colored women), who mingled in the social functions incident to that gathering. Has the Doctor become so nonsectional and inter-racial that he favors such a regime as this? And if the plans of the unificationists should work out, would there not be more than 1,750,000 Negro Methodists to be given due representation in the General Conference if that idea of handling the Negro question should prevail?

There is no doubt but that social intermingling determines inter-marriage, and the white people of the South will insist upon having social as well as legal security. This is not discrimination against any certain race nor "a matter of race pride, but of race preservation." If such ideals cannot be fostered and made regnant in one Church, they will be in another.

His Plans of Reuniting.

In studying the Doctor's article, it appears that his plan for unification is "just any plan, at any price, and for just anybody, who will to pay it." One thing is promulgated which he is sure of, and that is unification is objectively a divine necessity.

He first turns his plaintive tones homeward and calls upon Southern Methodism to make the "magnanimous sacrifice," assuring us only "a very respectable and influential minority" oppose unification. He further pleads that if the Negro is left in the re-organized Church he fears no more offensiveness than now exists in the Northern Church. And, anyhow, we have a Mission in Africa. We should like to have the Doctor to adduce his authority for the statement that our Church proposes to set up a different relation to these Negroes from that which it sustains to the C. M. E. Church.

It is presumed any Southern Methodist would favor unification that was based upon "oneness of spirit" and not merely upon a mechanical uniformity of law—a oneness that would provide a measure of autonomy and protection for minorities.

Enough has been said in a previous paragraph relative to the position of the Negro. The African Mission, along with those of China and Brazil, etc., will, we hope, some day develop into Methodist ecclesiasticisms, founded for the highest promotion of Christ's glory according to racial consciousness.

The Doctor leaves home and travels northward to let the strains of his pleading voice fall upon the ears of the Blake-ites and Jones-ites to corral them into harmony. Then he hastens back to Dixie and makes a commendable appeal to the Negro, calling upon him to become the Moses-race to lead the white people out of their wilderness of foolishness into the Canaan of the "magnanimous sacrifice." He wants "somebody to lead"—it makes no difference who, nor over what road, just so they arrive at "unification." He is so obsessed with this that he sees visions.

Imaginary Landslide for Unification.

The Doctor avers that all of heaven and most of earth are for unification. He quickly affirms: "God urges the unification of Methodism." It isn't clear to many devout hearts that God does urge this human contrivance of unification. There are no iron-clad rules of exegesis and exposition which necessitate the construction that our Lord's high-priestly prayer is God's voice urging Methodist unification. Neither are there such laws of interpretation of this prayer or any other Scripture as would place any one who does not see in them organic union or mechanical sameness into the category of being "standpatters," for "caste," "ignorant," intensely sectional" and "prejudiced."

One thing that must be clear to all, is that if God urges unification he is not so capricious as to urge it on the "just any plan" or "any price plan," to achieve the great event. It is presumptuous to assume that God favors any plan which would in any wise hamper or make less effective in the least a channel through which he has poured his saving grace with fruitful and glorious consequences for more than three score years and ten.

It is further claimed that "the vast majority want union," and that "the voice of the Southern Church has been unmistakably heard in the spontaneous and almost unanimous action in every Conference," and that "the Woman's Missionary Council endorsed union with but two dissenting voices." The term "unification" may include any one of many conditions. The Doctor barrages his logic with the indefiniteness of a general term. He does not suggest upon what condition the "almost unanimous action" was taken. If his plan of union "at any price" had been before them, no doubt his "vast majority" would have dwindled into a very small minority. The sisters do not differ from their brothers upon the issues. It isn't a vague unification term that is pertinent, but what is the equitable and just plan. One of our most versatile leaders says: "We will readily accept a plan of unification which does not hinder the work of God committed to our hands." Such unification we believe the majority would accept, but to assert that the vast majority want "just any plan, though it might involve the obliteration of Southern Methodism and give us a re-organized Church with untenable social probabilities, is to make a claim which cannot be substantiated.

Amid the glare of the Doctor's "vast majorities," he behoids ghosts of Joshua and Caleb. He accords, from his view-point, to this neither helpless nor hopeless minority power to thwart the will of God and block the desire of the majority. If the powers that be will just permit "the soldiers from the trenches in our part of the Kingdom, and the laborers from the broad fields of our Zion, to come up and register their choices in the final settlement of this unification issue, we do not fear but that the will of God will be done and the "vox populi" will be "pro bono publico."

There is no reason that, should unification fail, it would be "a concession to prejudice, a step backward, and * * * displeasing to God," but rather should we go forward with a better understanding of each other, in a spirit of brotherly love over the "highway of holiness," macadamized by experience, to a fuller accomplishment of our tasks, and feeling that unity in diversity is that which must ever distinguish our Christianity from sacerodotal bulkiness. As the immortal Dr. Olin said in '44, "If our difficulties are unmanageable, let our spirit be right." God grant that it may so be!

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

FRIENDSHIP.

By Rev. W. A. Hays.

How priceless is a loyal friend,
One upon whom you can depend!
When the night is dark and high waves roll,
A friendly hand to guide your barque,
And pulsing love of kindly heart,
Are then as balm to a wounded soul.

One who understands and knows,
And suffers, too, when you have woes,
And shields you just as he would himself,
And cheers you up with cordial word,
Is a gift divinely conferred—
Riches far greater than loveless pelf.

Then, why not scatter riches forth
And give to life its truest worth,
Be a friend to man as life's true end?
And as you sow, so shall you reap:
Weep with others, with you they'll weep;
Be a friend, and you shall have a friend.

Decatur, Miss.

WHEN BOBBY WAS RICH.

"When I get rich I'm going to have everything I want," said Bobby, looking wistfully after the ice cream man with his jingling bells. "I'll have ice cream every day, and maybe twice a day."

"That will be fine," said mamma, with a smile. "And does my little boy think he would be very happy if he could be rich?"

"Of course," said Bobby, positively.

"Bobby, do you want to play being rich awhile?" asked Uncle Frank, laying aside his newspaper. "Tell me what is the first thing you would do if you were rich."

"Go down town and buy peanuts," was the prompt answer, and Uncle Frank took up his hat just as promptly.

"Come on, Bob," he said. "If we are not home by dinner time, Hattie, you will know that we have not finished our purchases yet."

"Let's sit right down here and eat the peanuts," proposed Bobby, when his uncle paid for five sacks of the crisp, warm nuts. "They smell so good."

So the two sat down on a little bench by the peanut man's stand, and while he ate Bobby planned what else to buy. "I guess I'll take some ice cream soda," he said, long before one sack was empty. "I'm getting thirsty."

After the ice cream soda came candy and bananas and pop-corn. Uncle Frank bought a basket to put the things in, and urged the little boy to get what he wanted. Bobby was trying to make up his mind which ball and bat he would take in the toy store when a queer feeling came over him. He tried to put it by, but his knees seemed shaky and his head very light. Uncle Frank was watching closely, but he said nothing.

"I guess I'll go home till after dinner," said Bobby, holding his poor, aching head.

"But you were to buy everything this morning," said Uncle Frank. "We were only to play you were rich till we went home."

"I don't want to be rich," wailed Bobby. "I want my mamma."

And what do you think Uncle Frank did? He just picked up the litle boy, and in less than five minutes mamma was doctoring her small son and making him comfortable on the big lounge.

"Well, Bobby, do you want to be rich this morning?" asked Uncle Frank, as he came into the sitting-room next day.

"No, sir," said Bobby. "Uncle Frank, I'm sorry I spent so much of your money. Maybe if you take the things back you can get some of it again, for I never want to see peanuts and ice cream any more."

How Uncle Frank and mamma laughed! "You spent just seventy-three cents," said Uncle Frank gravely, drawing out a small account book, "so I think I will not ask the storekeepers to give my money back."

"Seventy-three cents!" cried Bobby, with wide-open eyes. "I thought I must have spent ten dollars, anyway. Mamma, won't you give away the things in the basket? I never want to see them."

But in a few days Bobby changed his mind and ate the goodies. He never wished to be rich again, and whenever mamma said, "You have had enough, Bobby," he was willing to put away the candy or whatever treat he had.

"I was awful sick that day," he often says, "and I guess it's better when you're poor, isn't it, mamma?"—Southern Churchman.

HONOR THE PHYSICIAN.

This advice is good, even hallowed. It is taken from the Holy Writ. From time to time we break our small wit upon him. But when this machine, which is us, is up to the hubs in mire,

"When the blood creeps, and the nerves prick
And tingle; and the heart is sick,
And all the wheels of being slow," the masque of Comus falls away. We are never so serious as when we want to get rid of a pain. We call upon the man of lore and medicines, and the disciple of Esculapius arrives; tired after a long day's work, dragged out of his bed, perhaps, to minister to our needs, supposed or real. Peace is all about him, healing is in his wings. If he can't do anything else, he gives us a word of cheer, and most probably leaves something that will put us to sleep. There is no doubt that in these emergencies the physician shall not lack his meed of honor. Then he looks to us as Aunt Polly did to Huck Finn, "as sweet as an angel, half-full of pie." But afterward the glamor may vanish. Things appear different when one is well, particularly if the physician, despairing of ethical hints, has properly "rendered" an equally ethical bill. It seems an imposition to pay out so much for the removal of one small distemper. Besides, most doctors are wealthy, and all of them "can get along somehow."

Yes, they can, and that is precisely what most of them are doing. The average income of physicians, all of whom invested a pretty sum in their education before they ever saw a patient who possessed anything that looked like money, is $700. That is a smaller sum than the annual stipend recommended for street cleaners in New York. Honor the physician by all means, but honor alone makes an empty platter. Pay him what you owe him, and don't make him cringe, hat in hand, while you dole out what is his. There is really an obligation in conscience to pay one's debts, even to a physician.—America.

KEEP UP THE STITCHES.

It is astonishing how soon the whole conscience begins to unravel if a single stitch is dropped. One sin indulged in soon makes a hole you could put your head through.—Buxton.

WILLIAM WALLACE DORMAN—A TRIBUTE.

(Reproduced from the Alabama Christian Advocate.)

William Wallace Dorman was born in Spartanburg, S. C., on February 3, 1858. He was the son of Ebenezer and Elizabeth Dorman. At the age of 12 years he was converted and joined the Methodist Church, and devoted his whole life to the service of his Lord. While yet a child he removed to Mississippi, and was educated at Blue Mountain Academy and Vanderbilt University. He joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1876, being only 18 years old. On December 20, 1888, he was happily married to Miss Frances Steger. To this union were born four children, two girls and two boys. One of the girls died in early childhood. The other three are still living, and, with their mother, mourn their great loss. In 1891 he was transferred to the North Alabama Conference and served Scottsboro for four years, and was then transferred to the Northwest Texas Conference, where he remained four years, serving Baird station two years and Whitney two years. He was then transferred back to the North Alabama Conference and served the following charges: Collinsville, Blocton, Jonesboro, East Lake, Springville, Albertville, Walker Memorial in Birmingham, Holmes Street, Huntsville, Ensley Highlands and Montevallo. He was appointed to Montovallo at the Conference held in Bessemer in 1916. This was his last appointment.

Brother Dorman was a good preacher, pleasing in manner, forceful and clear in deliverance. He was sound in doctrine, and the people to whom he preached had the gospel given to them in much earnestness. He was true to his ministerial vows and sought in all ways to build up the kingdom of God. He always accepted his appointments, though sometimes hard, with becoming grace. More than a thousand souls were added to the Church under his ministry, and he was always seeking more for tho Master he served.

In his home life he was all a husband and father could be. By example and precept he sought to make the parsonage family an example to the flock he served. As a friend he was warm-hearted and loyal. It was a great pleasure to be with him and enjoy his fellowship. He loved his brethren and was always interested in their welfare and rejoiced in their success. At Montevallo, his last charge, he had won for himself a warm place in the hearts of his people. Not only was this true of his own church, but also of other denominations. The pastor of another church, writing about his death, speaks of him in the highest terms as a fellow-worker and the hold he had npon the town. Soon after he went there his health began to fail, and in May he became much worse and soon was unable to preach any more. He suffered much, but in it all was patient and submissive. On Sunday morning, when he could no longer go to the church, he had his bed placed near a window opening towards the church, where he could hear and as long as he was able would join in the singing. His people were devoted to him and did all in their power for him. He was very anxious to preach one more time and had prepared notes on the sermon he wished to preach, taking for his text John 15:17: "These things I command you, that ye love one another." This was an expression of the desire of his heart.

On Tuesday, September 4, at the parsonage in Montevallo he closed his eyes in sleep and passed from earth to heaven to behold the King in His beauty and enjoy His presence forever. On Thursday following we laid his body in the quiet little cemetery at Ryland, Ala., to await the resurrection morn. A good preacher, a brother beloved, has passed from us; but we know where to find him.

A NOTE FROM DR. THOMAS.

1. Several members of the Commission; when not together, conveyed to us precisely that information. And though they recognize the fact that the Secretary's official record must be accepted as setting forth the actions taken by that body, some of these gentlemen still say that such was, and is, their recollection as to what took place. We quote from one of them: "All I can say is that my understanding of the matter was that the 'condensed minutes' of the Traverse City transactions were to be published and made public. Dr. Thomas, having the record in his hands, is, of course, in a better position than I am to state what the minutes show, but I was not aware until now that the publication of the 'condensed minutes' was to be abandoned and the text of the proceedings in full substituted therefor. I did understand that the proceedings were to be printed in full, but understood that this was to be done to preserve a permanent record of the complete proceedings and was to be preceded by the publication of the 'condensed minutes.'"

2. The statement that the Commission had instructed the Secretaries to publish the gist or "condensed minutes" of the meeting has been repeatedly made in the Church press within the past four months, and there had been no correction of it made when we wrote (nor any until now). Hence, we felt that the representation was true beyond question, and that the use of emphatic language was fully justified by the existing situation—especially so, since the permitting of this statement to stand unchallenged in the public prints was re-enforced in our mind by what the aforementioned Commissioners had told us.

3. But this is not yet all. Before we wrote our editorial entitled, "Is Southern Methodism About to be Dismembered and Absorbed?" desiring to be careful not to do any one the least injustice, we wrote to two of the Commissioners who had previously given us our information, specifically asking them if any explanation had been made to them as to why the "condensed minutes" had not been printed, according to the order of the Joint Commission. We quote from the letter of one of these brethren: "I have your letter of October 20, and, replying, would say that no explanation whatever has been made to me as to why the 'condensed minutes' of the Traverse City meeting have not been published." The response of the other Commissioner to whom we wrote was substantially the same as this.

One or two more things we wish to say. Dr. Thomas's statement is to our mind quite ambiguous. We do not think he makes it clear whether the "full proceedings" that are to be published are to be for general circulation, or for the Commissioners only. If the "full proceedings" were ordered to be given to the general public, we respectly submit that our criticism of the Secretaries for their long delay in getting this information to the Church applies with scarcely less weight than it would have done if only the publication of the "condensed minutes" had been provided for, especially in view of the fact that the Annual Conferences have been meeting and electing delegates to the General Conference, which is expected largely to determine the future destiny of our beloved Church. To be sure, to get the "full proceedings" in shape for the printers would be expected to take somewhat more time; but in this day of stenographers and fast mail trains, it would seem that it ought not to require several months for such a piece of work—the Commission sat, if our memory serves us right, scarcely a week. When the "Working Conference on the Union of American Methodism," was held in Evanston, Illinois, in 1916, and adjourned on February 17, its proceedings, making a handsome volume of 588 pages, were out and in use before the meeting of the Northern Methodist General Conference at Saratoga, the first of May, and the "Foreword," introducing the volume, bears the date of March 10, showing apparently that it went to the printers within less than a month after the Conference ended.

Dr. Thomas makes the following statement: "These proceedings are in the press. Their preparation for the printer has taken much time, as there are FIFTY MEMBERS of the Joint Commission, and the remarks of EACH had to be submitted to him before being sent to the printer." In the light of other communications that have come to us, this statement of the Doctor needs to be explained somewhat, for some of the Commissioners have informed us since his communication has reached us that no remarks or papers of any kind have been submitted to them for review. Possibly Dr. Thomas did not express himself quite as he intended. We shall be glad to carry any additional statement that he may care to make, and our columns are also wide open to any of the other Commissioners who may desire to point out any errors that they may think we have made. We wish to give the public only the facts.

It should be kept in mind that Dr. Thomas's note does not touch upon anything that we have said concerning the various features of the pending scheme for the unification of the two Churches. As will be remembered, Dr. R. E. Jones, a member of the Northern Unification Commission, declared in the paragraph which we quoted from his paper last week that our statement was substantially in accord with the facts, and another Commissioner since then has written us as follows: "So far as I am able to recall, your statement is practically correct." WE CHALLENGE ANY ONE TO DENY THE CORRECTNESS OF THE MAP IN OUR ISSUE OF NOVEMBER 1 SHOWING HOW, ACCORDING TO THE SUB-COMMITTEE'S REPORT, IT IS PROPOSED LITERALLY TO CHOP SOUTHERN METHODISM INTO SMALL FRAGMENTS IN THE VERY HEART OF THE SOUTH.

REV. T. H. MORRIS DEAD.

A note from Mrs. Thomas H. Morris, written from Dallas, Texas, brings the sad news that her husband, Rev. T. H. Morris, died in that city on November 13 at 6:30 p. m., after being critically ill only one day. He was buried in Dallas on Thursday, November 15. Brother Morris was a member of the Louisiana Conference. His health failed to such an extent about a year ago that he had to give up the active work. He was born in Elberta, Ga., and was reared in Kentucky. He served in the itinerant ministry for twenty-two years, having been a member of the Louisville Conference and the Texas Conference before coming to this State. He was fifty-five years of age last May. We are writing this notice just as we are about to close the forms for this issue of the Advocate; hence we can not say more at this time. We extend our deepest sympathy to Sister Morris and the other bereaved loved ones. We trust that some one in a position to do so will send the Advocate a fitting memoir of the deceased at an early date.

DR. WHEAT'S OPINION OF MR. DAVIS.

Apropos of the fact that writers in certain Northern Church papers have recently been aspersing the motives and character of Jefferson Davis, it may be interesting to some of our readers to know what Dr. J. J. Wheat, of Mississippi, who was one of the ablest and saintliest preachers that ever adorned the Southern Methodist Church and who was close to "the Chieftain of the Lost Cause," thought of him. In the second volume of Mrs. Davis' "Memoir" of her distinguished husband there is a somewhat extended reminiscence concerning him from the pen of General Robert Ransom, from which we take the following:

"He was a devout man, modest and humble in his relations to his Maker, without a tinge of the Pharisee. At his table 'he said grace,' or 'asked a blessing,' first seating himself, and then with bowed head, in silence making the invocation. When he lived in Memphis, I sometimes met at Mr. Davis' residence the venerable and Reverend Dr. Wheat, between whom and Mr. Davis there existed the sweetest relations. As together, on one occasion, we left his residence, Dr. Wheat said to me, 'If that man were a member of the Romish Church, he would be canonized as a saint, and his sufferings for our and the South's sake should forever enshrine him in our hearts as our vicarious sacrifice.'"

PROHIBITION GAINS.

In the recent November election, the prohibitionists carried the State of New Mexico. Ohio is very close. The latest figures that we have seen placed the "wets" slightly in the lead. The prohibitionists, however, made wonderful gains in the State, and have every reason to be encouraged. They also won the battle in many restricted areas in various parts of the country. The star of prohibition is still mounting upward.

GOOD FOR SHREVEPORT.

In the election held on Thursday, November 15, to settle the question as to whether the city of Shreveport should continue to have a "restricted district," the reformers won by a large majority, the vote standing 1376 against the district, and 703 in favor of it. The abolition ordinance is expected to take effect about November 25. With New Orleans and Shreveport rid of licensed harlotry, the moral conditions in Louisiana should soon show a decided improvement. This is one blessing that the war has brought to this section.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Brother W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, La., was in New Orleans last Saturday and favored the Advocate office with a call. He spoke encouragingly of the work of our Church at the State Capital.

Dr. S. A. Steel wrote us some days ago that the revival meeting at the First M. E. Church, South, at Shreveport, La., was developing a great interest. As has been stated in the Advocate, the preaching in this meeting is being done by Evangelist Browning.

A note from Mrs. S. J. High, of Tupelo, reports that her mother, Mrs. John M. Allen, has gone to a sanitarium in Mobile, Ala., for a few weeks' treatment. Sister Allen is stated to have been far from well since the recent death of her distinguished husband.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Education, reports as follows: "I have just received from Cochrane, Coldwater, Mayhew, Coahoma, and Webb checks to be applied to the educational assessments of those charges."

Rev. J. D. Harper, the pastor of our church at Opelousas, La., was recently the guest in this city of his son, Rev. R. H. Harper. Brother Harper is one of the solid men of the Louisiana Conference and has contributed influentially to the establishment of Methodism in this State.

Hon. G. L. Jones, who some years ago moved from Mississippi to Texas, has returned to his former home, New Albany, Miss., where he has resumed the practice of law. Brother Jones is a fluent and forceful speaker, and he once served with distinction in the Mississippi Legislature.

Rev. W. W. Jones, of Luia, will report for the Advocate the proceedings of the North Mississippi Conference; those of the Louisiana Conference will be reported by Rev. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans, and those of the Mississippi Conference, by Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of New Augusta.

Rev. W. Fred Long, Secretary of the International Sunday School Work in Mississippi, was in New Orleans last Monday and paid our office an appreciated visit. Brother Long carries sunshine wherever he goes.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate sent in within the past few days: Herbert M. Fant, Coahoma, Miss., 10; Miss Bessie L. Cunningham, Nettleton, Miss., 10.

A correspondent informs us that Rev. H. Armstrong, of Oila, La., will celebrate his 80th birthday on Dec. 5, 1917. Brother Armstrong is one of the esteemed veterans of the Louisiana Conference, and we trust that the occasion mentioned will in every respect be a happy one.

Rev. H. R. McKee, of Rose Hill, Miss., writes: "Please state that this is our third year here and that we are expecting this to be the best year of our stay here. We have paid a debt on the parsonage that had been hanging on for nine years, and we hope to be able to pay at least one-half of a debt on one of our churches by Conference."

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, of Donaldsonville, La., contributed to the November number of the Bulletin of our General Board of Education a very interesting article on "The Relation of the Public School Teacher to the Church." This article has been issued in pamphlet form for general distribution and may be had of the author at 10 cents each, 75 cents per dozen, or $5.50 per hundred.

Many of the Protestant pulpits in New Orleans were filled last Sunday by delegates to the Prison Reform Congress, which opened its business sessions in this city on Monday of this week. Rev. John L. Sutton perhaps contributed more toward making this notable gathering a success than any other citizen of Louisiana. Brother Sutton takes a deep interest in all work of a reformatory kind.

In order that the Publisher and Editor might get off in time to the North Mississippi Conference, now in session at Oxford, Miss., the forms for this issue of the Advocate were closed on Monday, instead of on Tuesday as usual. This will explain to some correspondents who may be disappointed in not seeing their communications in this number of the Conference organ why they do not appear.

In a letter renewing her subscription to the Advocate, Mrs. J. M. Stevens, of Grenada, Miss., says: "I am very much interested in the question of unification, and I hope that you will continue to oppose an issue which can only mean the humiliation and annihilation of our beloved and, so far, Divinely guided Church. Keep fighting, and may God give you 'thoughts that breathe and words that burn,' in your editorial work."

Brother C. O. Chalmers, the Publisher of the Advocate, will be present at all three of the patronizing Conferences to look after the financial interests of the Conference organ. The brethren are requested to see him as early in the Conference sessions as possible, since he will not, because of the pressure of the work in the office, be able to remain until the last day of any of these gatherings. Brother Chalmers is a delegate to the Louisiana Conference.

In a note received a few days since, Dr. John W. Boswell, of Nashville, Tenn., expressed the hope that he would be able to attend the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference, of which he is a member, but stated that the question of his coming would depend largely upon weather conditions. No minister in the North Mississippi Conference is more highly esteemed than Dr. Boswell, and he will be much missed if anything should keep him away from the meeting in Oxford.

Evangelist W. M. McIntosh, of Iuka, Miss., is at this writing engaged in a fine meeting at Louisville, Miss., a brief account of which appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. Brother McIntosh speaks in high terms of the service which the pastor, Rev. W. C. Carlisle, is rendering in that developing charge. One of the notable achievements of the year has been the construction of a handsome new house of worship, at a cost of about $20,000. Brother Carlisle and his worthy flock are to be heartily congratulated upon the consummation of this enterprise.

Rev. Hugh C. Castles, of Vimville, Miss., thus reports in a communication bringing us some subscriptions to the Advocate: "We have had a good year, the accessions to the Church since the last Conference numbering 85. Brothers Gunn, Broadfoot, and Jim Smith of Rose Hill have assisted me in meetings. All three of these brethren are good helpers. Our Sunday schools sent me to Lake Junaluska, thus giving me a treat that I greatly appreciated. These people are kind and know how to treat a preacher. The pastor's salary is in sight and the payments on the Conference claims will be in excess of last year.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of McComb, Miss., is booked to preach a Thanksgiving sermon in Magnolia, Miss., on Thursday, Nov. 29.

Rev. Hugh Jamieson was a visitor in the Crescent City last week. He gave an optimistic report of the work of the Church in his charge and throughout the Shreveport District.

The South Georgia Conference, just adjourned, by a large majority refused to request the appointment of Dr. Ed F. Cook to a professorship in the Moody Bible Institute, and Dr. Cook requested and was granted a location. Even Dr. Cook's friends, as was declared in a resolution requesting his appointment, expressly disapproved of "the methods used in circulating the so-called Laymen's Address" and of the writing and circulation of the noted Cook pamphlet.

From a recent issue of The Magnolia (Miss.) Gazette, we take the following: "Rev. B. F. Lewis, formerly pastor of the Methodist Church here, and one of the most widely known ministers in the State, has been elected superintendent of the Methodist orphanage at Jackson, and will assume direction of that institution on December 1. This will be most gratifying news to friends of Mr. Lewis and of the orphanage as well, as his fitness for such a responsible position is recognized by all who know him. Not only so, but Mrs. Lewis is most admirably adapted to the care and training of children. She is a daughter of the late Dr. Chas. H. Otken, formerly superintendent of education of this county."

From a letter from Rev. E. Nash Boyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, we take the following: "I have just received a check to cover the educational assessment of the Macon Circuit, which is served by Rev. I. F. Holland. Brother Holland has done a wonderful work since his appointment to this charge. This year he has finished his Conference Course of Study by correspondence, and has held his own meetings and had something like 70 accessions to the Church. In the two years that he has been on his present work he has had 102 additions. All his Conference collections are in hand and the proper remittances are on the way to the several treasurers." This is, indeed, a fine record.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, will leave on December 8 for Washington, D. C., to attend the National Anti-Saloon Convention to be held in that city. A generous friend will bear the expenses of his trip. Dr. Cooper has lately received from Rev. W. H. Morgan, formerly the Baptist pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., but now a chaplain in the United States Army, quite an interesting booklet, accompanied by the following note: "I am sending you a souvenir that I brought from London. It came from the house in which John Wesley lived, and, as you will notice, it is a fac simile reproduction of his first sermon and of some of his manuscripts. I am a great admirer of the great man, and spent some time in his home and church, both in London and at Oxford. I knelt and prayed in his private prayer chamber, with my knees on the same pad he himself had worn as he knelt and prayed."

DANCED HERSELF TO DEATH.

The following dispatch has been going the rounds of the secular press:

"Fort Yates, N. D., Nov. 14.—Mrs. Red Tomahawk, wife of the Indian policeman who is said to have killed the famous Sioux chief, Sitting Bull, danced herself to death on the Standing Rock Indian reservation, near Cannon Ball, according to word received here to-day. Reports indicated that Mrs. Tomahawk, about 60 years of age, participated in an Indian dance last Sunday night and overexerted herself."

Poor, unfortunate Mrs. Red Tomahawk is not by any means the only female who has danced her way to death or something worse.

ONE VOTE MIGHT DECIDE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have read in the New Orleans Advocate Mr. Moore's recent article, "Pile on More Dust." He is right in emphasizing the importance of sending to the next General Conference men who are thoroughly sound on the great issues before the Church—men who are not only right now, but who may be counted upon to stay right, no matter how the issues may be shifted or what influences may be brought to bear upon them. The great Vanderbilt fight at the last General Conference was won by only 11 votes—a change of only 6 votes would have made a different educational history for the Church. One vote in the next General Conference might decide whether the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is to continue to exist or to be wiped out. Can we afford to permit ourselves to be governed by personal friendships or personal dislikes in naming delegates at such a time as this? If one Conference does this, others may do the same thing, and thus all may be lost. The great interests of the Church should weigh more than one's fondness or even personal obligations to any man.

P. B. JONES.

A GREAT MEETING IN LOUISVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are now in the closing days of one of the most wonderful revivals that has been held here in many years. There have been something like two hundred conversions and reclamations, and the end is not yet. The bank and other business houses have been closing during the entire week for our day services. The meeting has been remarkable for the conversion of many men. It has been a community meeting and all the preachers and churches have taken part. Brother Carlisle, our pastor, had made great preparations for our coming. He has done a great work in Louisville, and he is very popular, not only with his own people, but also with all the community. He has just completed one of the most modern and up-to-date churches that I have seen anywhere. We expect to close our revival Sunday night, and will meet you at Conference next week. Yours fraternally,

Louisville, Miss. W. M. McINTOSH.

RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Quarterly Conference of the First Methodist Church, South, of Greenville, Miss., Nov. 9, 1917.)

Whereas, by the law of the Methodist Church, our pastor, Rev J. Tillery Lewis, can no longer remain with this charge, having served the full four years permitted, and will soon depart with his family from us, we, the official members of the First M. E. Church, South, of Greenville, Miss., assembled in Quarterly Conference, do hereby adopt the following resolutions:

Resolved (1), That we wish to express to Brother Lewis our deep appreciation of the faithful and efficient service rendered us as pastor for the past four years, and to testify to our realization of the benefits derived by us as individuals and by the congregation as a body from his ministrations. He has been genial, but dignified, cordial and most pleasant in his social relations, without ever permitting his duties as a pastor and spiritual guide to be eclipsed in the slightest degree. The relations between the family of Mr. Lewis and the members of the congregation have been exceedingly pleasant, and the congregation regrets the necessary severance of these relations.

Resolved (2), That Brother Lewis has realized that the minister is a citizen and has rendered this community valuable service by promoting every public-spirited movement, and aiding by his counsel the development in the proper direction of public opinion, and, in the great crisis which confronts the country as well as this community, he has been a shining example of American patriotism.

Resolved (3), That, in view of our warm personal friendship for Mr. Lewis and his family, our deep appreciation of his service and influence, we express to him our sincere appreciation thereof, that we rejoice to have had them with us for four years, feel a deep regret upon their leaving us, and assure them of our best wishes for their continued health and happiness wherever they may go.

Resolved (4), That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Conference, a copy given to Mr. Lewis, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate with the request that it be placed in its columns.

PERCY BELL, Chairman.
For the Committee.

Rev. W. A. Swift, Editor of the Central Christian Methodist (Lexington, Ky.), has been advised by physicians that the confinement incident to editorial work is not good for him physically. Mr. Swift is offering his paper for sale to the two Kentucky Conferences for the sum of $5000, volunteering to be one of fifty to give $100 each for the purchase of it for the Conferences, or toward the formation of a stock company to take it over. The Joint Commission representing the Conferences met in Louisville a few days ago, but came to no definite decision concerning the matter of acquiring this publication.

A Series of Striking Pictures of Bible Scenes

Beautifully Colored

With a Collection of Applicable Bible Verses, Carefully Selected

By fitting the appropriate verses to pictures the reader actually takes a unique and fascinating journey to Bible Land.

This is the Christian Herald plan to encourage more general Bible reading in which $3500.00 in cash has been awarded, $5628.00 is awaiting the decision of the Judges and $5000.00 in cash is now being offered.

Do you want to go into the beloved land of Bible days?

Do you want to travel to some of the scenes the Bible tells us of so beautifully?

Go with us, and as our guests. As you go you will be carried back to the Bible period; you will meet for a brief time some of the characters of the eternal story.

And as you go the story will be brought home to you perhaps as never before, for you will be comparing the scenes with the Bible verses that tell of them—you will actually be seeking out and fitting together the Bible verses that best apply to the pictures.

Thus while feasting your eyes and diverting your mind you will be learning more and more of the Bible, seeing more and more the significance of the Bible story.

Yet so delightful will the journey be that you may not awaken until later to the good it has done you. While learning much you will be enjoying much; because of the interest in your journey you will be acquiring, almost unconsciously, a better understanding of the Bible.

Aid to Sunday-School Teachers

The "Picture Journey" plan is that of our National Bible Picture Study, a great competition, based on the International Sunday School Lessons, in which $5,000.00 in cash will be awarded. Teachers will be intensely interested in this wonderful study-entertainment, for it will cover the ground of the lessons which they are studying. First reward will be $1,000.00 in cash.

Our Gift to You

Send in the free Request Card, and let us present you, as an outright gift, postpaid by us, the inspiring and beautiful "Picture Journey." We know it will delight you, and surprise you, too. Send for it—right now, while you are thinking of it. You put off too many things—do not procrastinate in this. Cut out the Request coupon and send it in—NOW! There is positively no obligation.

Mrs. MARY BULLEN was born in March, 1826, near Fayette, Jefferson County, Miss.; was married to my uncle, Benjamin Bullen on May 10, 1842, and died on October 8, 1917, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Katie Watson in Memphis, Tenn. Her body was laid to rest in Elmwood Cemetery. Many were the floral offerings placed upon her casket by the hands of those who loved her. She was loved by all who knew her, and they were many. Aunt Mary was the mother of four children, two of whom are still living, Mrs. M. Lee, of Bentonia, and Mrs. Watson, of Memphis, Tenn. Auntie was a devoted wife, a loving mother, and a true friend. She was ever ready to minister to the needy—ever faithful to her church and to her God. Her husband was a steward for many years—to him she was indeed a helpmeet. In his last years he was quite feeble and to him she was an angel of mercy. As the sun rose in its golden splendor, the saintly spirit "crossed the bar," and went to the City of the great King to be forevermore with her loved ones gone before.

JESSIE ABEL.

Mechanicsburg, Miss.

Brother G. B. FRANKLIN was born on Nov. 14, 1885, at Bluff Springs, Fla. He united with the M. E. Church, South, in Alexandria, La., in 1914, where he was married on Dec. 26, 1912. At the time of his death he was connected with our church at Kiln, Miss. Our church has lost a devoted member and a faithful steward and our community a citizen with a big heart that touched nearly every life at the big mill plant, where he had been at the saw since the mill began operations. With his devoted wife and little son, he was doing "his bit" to make the world brighter and better, when suddenly by an accident he was snatched away. Never did the community experience such a shock. Everything stood still under the shadow of a great sorrow when "Brown" Franklin was no more. He was buried at Alexandria, La., where he awaits the resurrection, and these loved ones sorrow and wait in Christian hope for the time when there shall be a sweet reunion. His home here was truly a happy one, and he was never happier than when his pastor was there last. He still lives.

W. T. GRIFFIN.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. MARY TANNER, was born in 1840, and died on September 7, 1917. She was first married to Brother Wyat Joyner, and of this union one child was born, Brother G. R. Joyner. This union lasted only a few years, being brought to an end by the death of Mr. Joyner. Mrs. Tanner was then married to Brother James T. Tanner, and of this union four children were born, three of whom are living. Her last husband preceded her to the grave some seven years ago. Sister Tanner was a loving mother, and a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South, for about 50 years. She loved her Lord and her Church. The pastor could always look for Sister Tanner to be present at church. Her presence at church was felt and appreciated. Her home was the home of the preacher. She always enjoyed a visit from her pastor. It was the writer's pleasure to visit her home often during her illness. We never found her lacking in faith. During the last years of her life, she made her home with her son, Brother G. R. Joyner, who was faithful to her until the last. All that earthly hands could do for her was done, but God saw fit to call her up higher. We feel confident from the evidence left behind that she has gone to be with God. May God comfort the children and all others who have been bereaved by the death of this faithful servant of the Master! Her pastor,

A. R. BEASLEY.

Mrs. MARY ELIZABETH KING was born on March 10, 1844, and died on December 13, 1916, having reached the ripe old age of 72 years, 9 months, and 3 days. She was married to Brother B. F. King on December 14, 1865. Had she lived only a few more hours, they would have been married 50 years. Of this happy union were born 8 children, 3 of whom preceded her to the grave. The other five are members of the Church. Sister King was a member of the Methodist Church for over 50 years, and was faithful to her church and pastor as long as she lived. Her favorite paper was the Christian Advocate. We had known Sister King only two years, but I feel like my life has been made happier and my hope of heaven brighter by having known her. She was as noble a Christian lady as I have ever met. She left the brightest dying testimony that I have ever heard, which is a great consolation to her bereaved loved ones. The future seemed bright to her. There was nothing in the way. She only fell asleep here to awake safe in the arms of Jesus. None knew Sister King but to love her. Her home was the preacher's home. We would say to the heart-broken ones, Live the life she lived; follow the example she taught, and all will be well in the end. She was tenderly laid to rest on December 15 at Bethel Cemetery, there to await the second coming of our Lord. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, A. R. Beasley.

Our mother, she has gone to rest;
Her voice no more we'll hear,
'Till we shall reach the land of bliss.
Then we'll see mother, dear.
Oh, how we miss her smiling face
And loving, tender care!
Our home is now a lonely place,
No one to use her chair.

Written by one who loved her,
Mrs. A. R. BEASLEY.

The subject of this sketch, M. L. SANDERS, was born on February 23, 1860, in McNairy County, Tenn., where he grew to manhood. He moved to Alcorn County, Miss., in 1880, and was married to Miss Jennie Clawsell on March 13, 1881. Of this union were born three children—one son and two daughters. He professed religion in 1888, and united with the Methodist Church, and lived a consistent Christian life until death came, on September 24, 1917. Brother Sanders was in the employment of the Railroad Company, and was apparently as well as usual on the morning that death claimed him. Soon after reaching his place of business, he complained of feeling bad, and was conveyed at once to his home and a physician was called; but in 30 minutes all was over. A sudden stroke of apoplexy was the cause of his demise. Brother Sanders grew up on a farm, and being good-humored and pleasant, he made friends everywhere he went. The writer knew him in his young manhood, had met him often since, and had been his pastor since last December, and he feels safe in saying that he was too kind-hearted for his own material good, yet he provided well for his family, giving his children splendid school advantages. His son, John W. Sanders, is one of Corinth's noblest citizens; and his daughters are among the best ladies of the county—the eldest, Mrs. J. L. Dalton, lives near Corinth; the youngest, Mrs. O. E. Spencer, lives in Corinth, and both are doing well. All three of the children are very affectionate, and were very fond of their father, and none the less of their mother. Besides the wife and three children, Brother Sanders has left two brothers—Harris W. Baton, of Corinth, and Jno. B. Sanders, of Booneville, Miss. (a half brother), and a sister, Mrs. Frank Brewster, of Corinth. In the death of Brother Sanders, not only has his family sustained a great loss, but also the entire community and the South Side Church, of which he was a member. Gone, but not forgotten!

His pastor, J. R. JAMES.

MEETING OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

At the fall meeting of the College of Bishops, held at Jackson, Tenn., all of the Bishops were present except Bishops Key, Morrison, Kilgo, Waterhouse, and Mouzon. From the official report by Bishop Collins Denny, Secretary, we take the following items:

"A communication referring to the necessity of better provisions for our superannuates was also received, and in the Episcopal Address to the General Conference this matter will be given consideration."

"In 1919 the Centennial of American Methodist Missions is to be held, and such preliminary work as could be done to make the celebration successful and worthy of the occasion was cared for. In that connection the following resolution was adopted: 'The College of Bishops is in heartiest sympathy with the movement under the direction of the Board of Missions to celebrate, in conjunction with the Methodist Episcopal Church, the one hundredth anniversary of the beginning of foreign missions by the Methodists of the United States, and this College will do all within its power to advance this work throughout the Church.'"

"Through Dr. George S. Sexton, our attention was called to a legacy by the late Charles W. Blair, of our Church, and the following resolution was unanmously adopted:

"'Resolved, That Dr. George S. Sexton be and he is hereby authorized to receive from J. A. Thigpen, executor of the last will and testament of Charles W. Blair, deceased, the legacy of ten thousand dollars, provided in said will to the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to be used for the benefit of Granbery College or for such other purpose as the Bishops may see proper, as more fully shown by said will, the said Dr. George S. Sexton being authorized to execute such receipt as may be necessary.'"

"A request from the International Purity Congress was received, asking the appointment of delegates from our Church to a meeting of that body in Louisville, Ky., November 8-14, 1917. The following delegates were appointed: Rev. Frank M. Thomas, Louisville, Ky.; Rev. A. R. Kasey, Louisville, Ky.; Rev. Sam M. Miller, Owensboro, Ky.; Rev. J. W. Perry, Morristown, Tenn.; Rev. U. V. W. Darlington, Barboursville, W. Va.; Rev. E. B. Chappell, Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. W. B. Taylor, Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. J. S. French, Knoxville, Tenn.; Rev. L. E. Todd, St. Louis, Mo.; Hon. W. G. M. Thomas, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Mr. Settle, librarian, Louisville, Ky."

"The need of our soldiers and sailors for religious work by our Church, particularly work in the camps, was given careful attention; and a committee was appointed to prepare an address to the Church asking co-operation in plans to be suggested in that address. A copy of this address will be furnished you as soon as possible."

"The American Bible Society asked our co-operation in the effort to raise $400,000 to provide army and navy Testaments, and we were glad to give assurance of our cordial co-operation for this worthy purpose."

"No questions of law were presented to the College at this meeting."

"As is always the case in the meeting of the College of Bishops, attention was given to the general interests of the Church at large, and care was taken to meet with the greatest possible efficiency the heavy responsibilities the Church has ever laid on its chief pastors."

NERVOUSNESS AND DISORDERS OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

The energy that gives life to the body is known to be nerve force. It is this hidden energy that creates the difference between the living and the dead body. It is the indefinable something that the body is robbed of in death.

Irregular distribution of the nerveforce is responsible for many of the disorders of the system. Consequently any remedy that has the power to soothe the irritated nerves, thus regulating the supply of nervous energy, is of inestimable value.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is such a medicine. It not only soothes the irritated nerves, but it induces a more regular distribution of the nerveforce, and thus assists the bodily organs in performing their proper functions. Furthermore, it induces a natural sleep, which is nature's greatest tonic and strengthener.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is especially recommended in cases of Sick, Bilious and Nervous Headache; Epilepsy; Fits; Irregular, Profuse and Painful Menses; Neuralgia; Sciatica; Sleeplessness; Melancholy; Backache; Nervous Irritation and Nervous Dyspepsia.

For more than 25 years Dr. Miles' Nervine has been largely used, and the success that it has met with on all sides is the best proof of its merit.

If you think that Dr. Miles' Nervine is suited to your case, procure a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, which you will find wrapped around the bottle, and then if you are not benefited return the empty bottle, one only, to your druggist and he will return your money in full. The Miles Medical Co. repays him the full retail price, so there is no reason why he should not return your money promptly.

DEDICATION OF THE EAST McCOMB METHODIST CHURCH.

Sunday, November 11, 1917, was a great day for McComb Methodism. The dedication of a Methodist Church is no small event for any community.

The East McComb church building was dedicated last Sunday by Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, who was assisted by the pastor, Rev. F. B. Ormond and a faithful Board of Trustees. Dr. Cooper preached the dedicatory sermon, using as a text, Haggai 2:7: "* * * The desire of all nations will come and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of hosts." Thought drawn from a wide field of knowledge, applied with spiritual power and enforced by an enriched life, made the sermon to lift the great congregation to heights of supreme joy. In the afternoon, at the South McComb Church, Dr. Cooper delivered another inspiring message on "Why Nations Lose Their Power."

At the beginning of this year the pastor, Rev. F. B. Ormond set his face toward dedication day. To the surprise of many he succeeded, and every cent was paid before the day of dedication. Also he has provided for the major portion of the parsonage debt at South McComb. With one discouraging debt out of the way and another almost met, the way is open for more rapid development in this fruitful field. This is the pastor's fourth year, and his membership, with members of other churches, regret to see his time come to a close. He has wrought well and will go up to the Conference with a glad heart of "well done."

STOPS TOBACCO HABIT.

Elder's Sanitarium, located at 508 Main St., St. Joseph Mo., has published a booklet showing the deadly effect of tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days at home.

As they are distributing this book free, anyone wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.—Adv.

A GREAT MEETING AT HAZLEHURST.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am glad to report a great meeting at Hazlehurst in October, which began on the 10th inst. and closed on the 23d. We had with us Rev. D. E. Kelly, our Conference Evangelist, who did all the preaching, and it was well done. Prof. J. Douglas Swagerty, of Shreveport, La., conducted the music, and he delighted all who heard him. Our congregations were large from the first night, and after three days the capacity of our church was taxed to the limit. Even after putting in 100 extra seats, we could hardly take care of the crowds. The whole town was greatly blessed, for the Lord was truly good to us. The other pastors of the town threw themselves into the meeting as if it were their own, and made a very large contribution toward the success that naturally followed. The business houses all closed and the men, as well as the women, came to the morning services, which played no small part in our success. About 40 persons were added to the churches, the membership was greatly blessed, and the spiritual life of the whole city was quickened. We expect a good report at Conference.

Yours very truly,
L. L. ROBERTS, Pastor.

TRY THIS FOR YOUR HEALTH.

For diseases which do not readily yield to drug treatment, such as chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism uric acid poisoning, and diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and liver, the best physicians send their wealthy patients to the famous mineral springs. Some even spent months at the Spas of Europe and were almost invariably benefited, or permanently relieved.

I believe that the Shivar Spring is the greatest mineral spring ever discovered, and I believe it so firmly that I offer to send you enough water for a three weeks' treatment (two five-gallon demijohns) on my guarantee that if it fails to benefit your case I will refund the price. You would hardly believe me if I told you that only about two out of a hundred, on the average, say that they have received no benefit. The water is restoring thousands. It restored my health when my friends and physicians thought my case was incurabe, and I am willing and anxious for you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If I win, you become a life-friend of the Spring. If I lose, I will be sorry for you, but I will appreciate your courtesy in giving the water a trial and will gladly refund your money on request. Sign the following letter:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-E., Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

A Woman's Burdens

are lightened when she turns to the right medicine. If her existence is made gloomy by the chronic weaknesses, delicate derangements, and painful disorders that afflict her sex, she will find relief and emancipation from her troubles in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If she's overworked, nervous, or "run-down," she finds new life and strength. It's a powerful, invigorating tonic and nervine which was discovered and used by an eminent physician for many years, in all cases of "female complaints" and weaknesses. For young girls just entering womanhood; for women at the critical "change of life"; in bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, ulceration, inflammation, and every kindred ailment, the "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine put up without alcohol—ingredients on wrapper.

SYLACAUGA, ALA.—"My wife has used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for trouble from which women suffer and it surely did give good results. All women ought to use this remedy as it is fine. Dr. Pierce's Cough Syrup is good also."—REV. J. N. COOPER.

ALBERTVILLE, ALA.—"Two doctors gave me up—said I had a bad case of dropsy and that my system was all run-down. I could not keep any vituals on my stomach. My husband found one of Dr Pierce's pamphlets and I began taking 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription.' I took three bottles of each kind and in six weeks I was able to be up. I also used the 'Pleasant Pellets.' I recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to all suffering women, and am glad to say they saved my life when others failed."—MRS. SARAH C. RAINS, R. F. D. 1.

RENWAR RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanitarium treatments, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should anyone doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

LITERARY NOTICE.

God's Minute.—New Holiday Edition. A book of 365 daily prayers—60 seconds long arranged in calendar form—a prayer to a page, with a verse of Scripture at the top of the page on encouragement to worship. The prayers were written expressly for this book by 365 of the most eminent evangelical clergymen and laymen in the English-speaking world. Purple cloth, gold top, stamped in gold, 384 pages; price, 50 cents net; (plain cloth, 35 cents.) The Vir Publishing Company, 200 North Fifteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"Lord, teach us to pray," one of the early disciples asked the Master, and that prayer is now being repeated by millions of anxious souls in these perplexing and distressing times. To all such, this book will come as a benediction. It will quicken and inspire a devotional spirit, and will re-light the altar fires that have died out in many homes. It is packed full of devout, inspiring thoughts and aspirations. Anyone reading one of these short prayers every morning, earnestly and quietly, cannot but be the better for it during the day. It not only has value as a prayer book, but it is a mirror, unconsciously revealing the deep spiritual character of each of these many contributors. There is no book published like it, and it can have no substitute. It will be one of the choicest gift books of the season for fathers, mothers, sons, daughters and friends, and it would be fine to see that our soldier or sailor boy has a copy to read in the trenches or camp, or on the deck of the boat as it plows through the dangerous seas. Among the contributors to the book are Wilfred T. Grenfell, Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, Reverends John Clifford, F. B. Meyer, Washington Gladden, Hugh Black, Timothy Stone, Bishop Quayle, Russell H. Conwell, David J. A. L. Burrell, Ira Landrith, Floyd W. Tomkins, Bishop Woodcock, Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice, Miss Eva Booth, Maud B. Booth, President E. Y. Mullins and many others eminent in the evangelical religious world. Since its publication just one year ago, four large editions have been issued.

Don't think because you have taken many remedies in vain that your case is incurable. Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured many seemingly hopeless cases of scrofula, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney complaint, dyspepsia and general debility. Take Hood's.—Adv.

A NOBLE ACT.

A good story comes to us from Camp Lee. A "rookie," at the end of his first day in the cantonment, knelt down at his bunk to say his prayers before turning in. The act was greeted with laughter and jeers from his thoughtless comrades in the long barracks. At that moment a young officer in the course of his duties stepped in at the door. Taking in the scene at a glance, he advanced to the proper position near the kneeling boy and stood rigidly and reverently "at salute" until the prayer was ended. Then, in the quiet that had fallen, he delivered his orders and walked out without a further word.

It was a fine, soldierly act. The moral courage of a subordinate was recognized, and likewise that unseen Presence was acknowledge before whom the cub recruit and the trained officer alike owed worship and reverence. We doubt that the chaplain had that day preached a more timely or telling sermon. — Southern Churchman.

THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA.

If one could move over the bottom of the sea, he certainly would make great discoveries for himself. There he would find a workshop of the Almighty, where He has curiously wrought what eye has never seen, or what has never entered into the heart of man to conceive. Great, rolling plains, wide plateaus and deep precipices would appear. Fauna moves there of all strange forms and features, and flowers bloom to blush unseen. In addition to all this work of God, he would also find the vast wreckage by the hand of man. This wreckage has been greatly increased in the period of the present world conflict. Ships upon ships are strewn here and there. Jewels and gems of great price are there, and are lost forever. The bodies of men, women and babes are strewn upon the plains, and hidden in the caves—forms once, and still, loved and cherished. What a treasure-house is the sea. How can she be made to give up what she holds?

There is another deep—the great mind, plan, purpose and power of God in all things. When one thinks and feels, he is compelled to the conclusion, "Oh, the depths of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!" Yet He will reveal His deep things. The day is coming when "the sea will give up its dead" and the purposes of God will be revealed.—Presbyterian.

TO-DAY.

Yesterday is gone forever. To-morrow may never come. To-day is in my own hands.

If I shirk to-day's task, I shall be adding to my wasted yesterdays.

If I postpone to-day's duty, I shall be increasing to-morrow's burdens.

If I accomplish what to-day sets before me, I shall be doing my best to atone for yesterday's failures, and to prepare for to-morrow's successes.

Therefore, I will endeavor to use my time and opportunities that to-day shall leave me a little wiser and abler than it found me.—Southern Churchman.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

THE MARK OF THE PERFECT MAN.

As virtue is the perfection of human life, so is action the perfection of virtue; and zeal is that perfection of action which is required in a saint of God. Such an one was Moses, "mighty in word and deed," as well as "learned in all the ways of the Egyptians." Such an one was St. Stephen, as full of a divine ardour and irresistible fervency of spirit as of an irresistible wisdom; and such an one was the irresistible Cornelius, a devout man, one that had transfused and derived the fear of God from his own bosom throughout his family and relations, and friends, too—one that gave much alms, and prayed to God always. This is that which distinguishes the perfect man from all others—the victories of faith, the labors of charity, the constancy and patience of hope, and the ardors of devotion.—Lucas.

Auto-Intoxication Causes Death

Do you know why you have sick headache, diabetes, neuralgia, rheumatism and liver or kidney troubles? It's because you are being poisoned by products of your own body. Your organs of elimination are not working properly. Waste material that should be thrown out is being retained to poison and intoxicate your system. That could not happen if the bowels were kept open with Granger Liver Regulator. This splendid preparation is purely vegetable and non-alcoholic. Demand Granger Liver Regulator at your drug store—25c a box—and take no other. There is nothing "just as good."

CONCERNING STATISTICAL REPORTS.

To The Members of the Mississippi Conference.

Statistical blanks will be mailed each pastor in due time. On account of the cost of envelopes and printing, you will have to secure your own envelopes in making your reports. The usual course of reports and auditing will be followed.

W. T. GRIFFIN, For Auditing Committee.

A REQUEST OF THE PREACHERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Almost every mail brings special requests from brethren as to their roommates during the Conference and which we are anxious to grant if possible. All who have such requests are asked to send either of us a card immediately on reading this notice. We will be helped also in making assignments if those who can not come will drop us a card. We would like to get from the presiding elders the names and addresses of all applicants for admission and all lay representatives (and they can help by giving names of superannuates or others who may not come) at their earliest convenience. While the Pledge Card drive is on, we are pledging ourselves to make the brethren comfortable, and have prospects of good success.

T. B. HOLLOMAN,

THE LOVE OF GOOD READING.

Fortunate is the boy or girl who is reared in the atmosphere of good books, who has early learned to love good reading. He need have no lonely hours nor lack for pleasant company. The great men of the earth, the wise and witty and learned are his friends, or he can play if he will with the people of the lands of fancy, the fairies and giants, the princes and princesses of romance. He can live in kings' palaces, or with the humble folk in cottages. He can travel to far distant lands and visit strange peoples. He can look upon the wonders of the world, ancient and modern; he can climb the highest mountains, cross the pathless deserts, sail the greatest rivers, explore the Arctic regions or the tropics. He can live in every age of his own land, or any land, and see what is taking place at any time. He can go a-sailing Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea, or he can fly in an aeroplane over the warring armies of Europe. There is no limit to the range of the travels or the experiences of the reader of books. * * *

Whatever else you give your children, give them good books, and let them form as early in life as possible the habit of reading. Cultivate the imagination and the love of good English in the early years. It will prove to be of greater educational value than anything that can be gained from the text-books of the schools.—The Congregationalist.

SINGING KETTLES.

The Japanese, who know so well how to add little, unexpected attractions to every-day life, manufacture, in a great variety of forms, iron tea-kettles which break into song when the water boils. The song may not be a perfect melody, but it is perhaps as agreeable as the notes produced by some of the insects which the Japanese also treasure for their music. The harmonious sounds of the tea-kettles are produced hy steam hubbles escaping from hcneath thin sheets of iron fastened close together nearly at the bottom of the kettles. To produce the hest effects some skill is required in regulating the fire. The character of the sounds varies with the form of the kettle. These curious singing kettles have heen used hy the people for many centuries.—Youth's World.

WHAT GRETA COULD DO.

Greta was only six years old and very small for her age. When she came into the Sunday school she wished very much to do something for Jesus. "Only I'm so little," she sighed, "and there isn't anything, not a single thing, I can do."

"Tut!" said grandfather, who had overheard. "Who opens my paper and finds my spectacles and brings my book from the library table?"

"And who puts the ribbon in my cap and gives puss her saucer of milk, and teaches her to play so nicely with a string?" added grandmother.

"Who is the little girl that carries my slippers and rolls my chair up nearer the fire?" asked father, his eyes twinkling.

"I know somehody who can do errands as nicely as any one," said mother. Then Sister Belle told what she knew, and Greta's eyes beamed with delight.

"Every little task that we do willingly makes the Lord Jesus glad in heaven," finished grandmother, patting Greta's brown curls.—The Mayflower.

NOTES ROM THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

The work in the Meridian District has been moving steadily forward during the third quarter.

Our District Secretary has been looking well after the rural work and I have no doubt when she closes her third quarter's report that the figures will show a good increase. Instead of a district meeting this year she has been holding "All Day" meetings at different points on the work.

It was my good pleasure to be with her at Scooba and Quitman; the interest at Scooba and Quitman has grown since then and one of the results of the meeting has been the organization of a new Study Circle at Scooba. At Quitman we had quite an enthusiastic meeting at night; next morning the ladies met again and seemed eager to learn more of the work.

Mrs. McQueen has held other meetings, from which she brings good reports, two of these places being DeKalb and Stateline. At each of these meetings she emphasized the good that can be done at the Wesley Houses, at the same time laying stress on the needs of these institutions.

In Meridian the interest is good and from what I can see and hear the auxiliaries are well attended. There were two of these "All Day" meetings held here in the city: one at East End and the other at Fifth Street Church.

It was indeed a treat to have the Conference Corresponding Secretary with us in these two meetings. The programs were well planned and the different phases of the work were discussed.

"The Ten Per Cent Increase," "Our Children's and Young People's Work," "Christian Stewardship," "Mission Study," "Our Missionaries," and "Our Conventional Work" were some of the things discussed; Mrs. Lewis gave talks on "Our Work."

These two meetings were very pleasant, too, in a social way. At Fifth Street Church a delightful lunch was served at the noon hour in one of the Sunday school rooms. It is really an inspiration to go to Fifth Street Church and mingle with these zealous women. Their enthusiasm is refreshing. What makes this, you say? Well, you can hardly understand unless you know the pastor's wife. Suffice it to say, where she is, the missionary work moves forward.

At East End the Young People's Missionary Society served a plate lunch with coffee and followed with cream and cake. This social hour was spent at the district parsonage, where the ladies made everybody feel at home; music was furnished during the time.

At night, after a talk from Mrs. Lewis, there was a stereopticon display at the church of our work in China and Korea.

May I pause here long enough to say a little about this Young People's Missionary Society at East End Church? It is a real new society but growing rapidly. They began a little over two months ago with eight members and now have eighteen. Each member went right to work as soon as the society was organized to learn what was her duty as an officer or as a member, and now they are enthusiastic over the work. None refuse to do the part assigned to them and a number pray in public. They also have a study circle.

They have made and put into the church charts bearing the names of the Council, Conference and District officers. Then, too, they have helped to make other charts, showing where we have work, and what kind of work is being done; they have also made one showing the financial part of our work. I am expecting great good to come from this society of young people.

The Junior members, too, are interested in the work at this church; it could hardly be otherwise with the efficient leadership of Mrs. Peebles.

It hardly seems necessary to mention Central Church, for the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference know the women of this church never let the missionary work drag. The auxiliary meetings are full of interest, as are the mission study and Bible classes. They seem to be looking well after finances, too.

The Young People's Society of Central Church is doing a fine work; they have well-attended meetings; their mission study class is good and they are interested in the Wesley Houses, as well as doing social service.

The president of our Mission Board is by no means lagging in her work and the interest of the deaconess and kindergarten teacher at the Wesley House is on her heart as well as the interest of those with whom they labor. No word of praise is too high for these two women; the work they do tells for itself.

The Missionary Board of the Methodist churches of our city has had Mrs. W. J. Ferguson in the field in the interest of our Wesley House. She has done some good work in this department, as well as everywhere else she is called to serve.

During the quarter there were nine new adult study classes organized and one revived. There were three young people's, and one junior, and one intermediate, mission study class organized. The districts reporting these were Brookhaven, Jackson, Meridian and Newton. Can we not hear from the others? Surely we can expect little of our work where the people do not know of it. Get them to study and then they grow interested; when they get interested they will work, pray, and pay.

Our missionaries need our time, our prayers, and our money as never before. Let us make this fourth quarter the best of the year; let us do all we have promised, and then some more.

Mrs. G. H. THOMPSON.

FERNWOOD, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: We are winding up the year here, and it is the end of my fourth year on this (the Fernwood) charge. Our report will be in full and will reflect the character of the Fernwood people as being among the best in the Church. My stay with these people has been a great blessing to me, and I trust also to some of them. I have, as a result of my work here, a larger view of the Kingdom and a fuller recognition of its claims on the people for a much larger support than it gets. There are some of the most noble-hearted people here that I have ever served, and when I go I would like to take them with me to the new field, but I am sure that this would be unfair to my successor. My wife and children say that they would be glad to spend the balance of their lives in Fernwood, and if the law of the Church would let us that might be the case, if the people were willing, and they have been tried in a time that meant much to us. We love all the people in the community—Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians—and in our taking we would take some of these other denominations along to compose our next pastoral charge. The people at the other two churches, Knoxo and Kokoma, could not be improved on, and they have been extremely kind to us and true and loyal to the Church. Our love and prayers will be with them when we leave, and we trust and pray that they may have a better preacher, a better pastor, and a better man in every respect next year, and in the years to follow, to minister to them in spiritual things.—W. H. Saunders, P. C.

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE."

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 100% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European medical institutions, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Field

Sulphur and Vinton Charge, La. Conf.

Dear Doctor: The time for our Annual Conference is just about here, and I shall go up to Conference with a glad heart because of the many blessings that we have received. The best report that has ever gone up from this work will be made this year. We are going to report about 50 additions to the Church, and more improvements materially than we have ever before made in this field. We would love for you to see our church at Vinton, which has been repaired both outside and in. The last improvement that was made was the repapering and revarnishing of the interior at a cost of $300; and, best of all, one of our generous-hearted stewards, knowing that Conference was near and that the different claims would need to be met, just paid that bill, and relieved us of providing for it. And our hearts have been made glad because these strong men are not only spending their money, but are giving themselves to the upbuilding of the great causes of Christ and his Church. We doubt whether a more loyal and spiritual people than they can be found anywhere. We are looking this way for another year, but we haven't seen the Bishop yet. We are only trusting that he will be generous enough to let us stay.—L. Hoffpauir, P. C.

Indian Bayou, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: Yesterday, Nov. 4, was a great day in the history of Indian Bayou charge. Brother May came in on time and preached two sermons of a high order, which were very much appreciated by my people. He cried as he preached, and we cried, too. Some "elders" never cry, except at Annual and District Conferences. Again, I say, deliver me from a dry-eyed presiding elder. The spiritual and financial reports of the charge are 100 per cent ahead of anything in the history of our church here. I am bogged up in the high prices, but I can prove by Brother May that I have enough red gravy to eat my way out. We have held three great revivals, conducted by Rev. D. E. Kelly, Mississippi Conference Evangelist, and Rev. B. L. Sutherland of Meridian, Miss. We claim not less that three hundred mourners' bench conversions. We had old-time Methodist shouting in the camp. The Lord has been with us from the first service of the year, and I am sure that he will be with us until its close. We are going to do our best to send delegates to the General Conference who have held at least one revival somewhere on this earth. We want to get rid of some of our "small agitators"—I mean political trimmers. —G. D. Anders, P. C.

New Iberia, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am almost at the end of my second year in New Iberia, and it has occurred to me that some of the brethren might be interested to know how things Methodistic are going in this part of the moral vineyard. We have had our part of the losses and reverses incident to these unsettled times, and we are feeling the pinch of war conditions as are other sections of the country. The church lost its oldest member, and one of its most faithful stewards this year in the death of Captain John T. White, on August 4. But the Lord has not forgotten us, for New Iberia Methodism is enjoying a season of prosperity along some lines that will be gratifying to its old pastors and friends. We have prospered spiritually. We held a series of evangelistic services in June, assisted by Rev. W. W. Drake, of Shreveport. As a result, the spiritual life of the Church was quickened, and 20 members were received by profession of faith. Ten others have been received during the year, eight of whom were by certificate. We have also prospered materially. Early in the year Mr. H. N. Pharr proposed to the Board of Trustees through its Chairman, Mr. W. J. Bernard, that if they would pay off the church debt of ten years' standing, he would build a new parsonage. They accepted his offer, took up the note the day it was due, with the very liberal assistance of the Missionary Society, and Mr. Pharr has more than made good on his parsonage proposition. Those who are familiar with the lay of the land in New Iberia will be interested to know that we have acquired the Morse property immediately in the rear of our church, facing St. Peter Street. The house is all we could ask as a parsonage, having ample room and many conveniences. The yard is large and shady, with ample room for a garden, a tennis court, and a poultry yard. The Missionary Society, with the aid of Mrs. H. N. Pharr, has added about $300 worth of furniture, so that we are very comfortably situated. The old parsonage, on Jefferson Street, will be fitted up for Sunday school classrooms, a social center work, and such like. The auxiliaries of the church are doing good work. We have a flourishing Epworth League; a splendid Sunday school, which promises to be even better when we have room to expand; a Missionary Society that not only does its connectional work, but is the very best kind of a Ladies' Aid Society as well. I would not swap my Missionary Society for the best Ladies' Aid in the State, even from a local, selfish standpoint. In fact, Dr. Meek, we are so well satisfied here that we are not making any arrangements to move on just yet. Fraternally,

H. N. BROWN.

THE NEW CALOMEL FINE FOR COLDS AND GRIPPE.

Calotabs, the New Nausealess Calomel, Breaks Up a Severe Cold Overnight.

Physicians and druggists have at last found a quick and dependable remedy for colds and grippe. One Calotab on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. Next morning your cold has vanished and your liver and entire system are purified and refreshed without the slightest unpleasantness or interference with appetite, diet or work.

Doctors have always contended that calomel is the best medicine for colds, bronchitis and la grippe and the first medicine to be given in pneumonia and acute fevers. The new calomel, Calotabs, is purified and refined from all of the sickening and dangerous effects and with the medicinal virtues vastly improved.

Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages; price 35c. Your druggist recommends and guarantees them and will refund your money if you are not delighted.—Adv.

The Cause of Gray Hair.

Hair grows gray by reason of the same cause which produces dwarfed, yellow stalks of corn instead of strong, dark green growthy stalks—lack of nutrition. Hair, like the crops of the field, must be fed, either naturally from the scalp as the stalk of corn is fed from the soil, or artificial hair food may be applied as fertilizer is applied to the soil to enrich it. Unless your hair is supplied with natural oil—the food on which it subsists—you may expect it to cease its flourishing and lose its natural luster, color and beauty. The hair must have food on which to live. Don't neglect it or it will lose its luster, become stiff and coarse and eventually gray. Begin now and prevent the appearance of age by using a natural hair oil, "La Creole." It will keep the hair soft, fluffy and beautiful. Ask your dealer and if he can't supply you send $1.00 to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn., for a trial bottle.

"ALEXANDRIA, U. S. A."

Dear Dr. Meek: Since such interest has of late been centered in our city I understand that some of our progressive citizens have been designating their place of residence by the above caption.

Alexandria has not heretofore been as highly appreciated by the world as she is destined to be in the future. It is sadly true that conditions here, in many particulars, have been far from perfect, but, all along, there have resided here some of the choicest spirits of earth who have continuously fought the battles of righteousness, and conditions have been constantly improving.

This city, being in the very heart of a great State and surrounded by some of the most beautiful and fertile country in the world, is a very inviting business center, and during the past few years many most excellent new citizens have come to make it their home and to help make it a city beautiful, prosperous, and great. There has been, therefore, a gradual growth in population, in material development, in progressiveness of spirit, and in the elevation of ideals.

The coming of Camp Beauregard has brought the city many blessings, chief among which was the closing of her vice district. It has also brought into our midst, from time to time, great and good men whose presence and work among us have helped to strengthen the loftier standards of life for which some of us had been standing.

The War Y. M. C. A. has given us, in the Camp, thirty Secretaries, who are among the most consecrated and capable men to be found in our entire country. Some of them are millionaire business men, returned missionaries, trained Y. M. C. A. Secretaries from the great cities, and distinguished pastors, who have all made sacrifices to give themselves to this important work. There exists a delightful spirit of brotherly love and co-operation between these men and the religious leaders and workers of the city. It has been the privilege of the writer to participate in services and to preach in some of their Y. M. C. A. buildings in the Camp, and to have some of these Secretaries preach in our pulpit.

Another blessing that has come to us with the coming of the Camp is the drawing of all denominations of the city into a closer relationship, as we have unitedly undertaken war-work activities. Priests, rabbis, and Protestant ministers of all creeds sit down together in consultation as to how we may best serve the humanity that has been brought within our reach.

During the past years the Methodist Church has been one of the chief agencies for good in this community, and it is constantly becoming a more potent factor in the transformation of the life of the city. And at present there are evidences to encourage us in believing that its influence is reaching at least some of the many thousands of soldiers in Camp Beauregard and of the hundreds of visitors and strangers who pass this way.

We are having truly great congregations of attentive listeners, who seem eager to hear the simple messages of the Gospel in its application to the needs and conditions of this awful hour in which we live.

Our membership has grown to nearly one thousand; new activities have been launched among our young people with gratifying results; the spirit of our work, throughout the various departments, has greatly improved; and had it not been for the unsettled conditions incident to the war we doubtless would have had our contemplated Sunday school building erected. We expect to see it completed during the coming year. "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

WILLIAM H. COLEMAN,
Pastor.

MRS. LUELLA DUNN.

On October 31, 1917, occurred the death of Mrs. Luella Dunn, one of the best loved members of the Algiers Methodist Church. She was buried from the church at 10 a. m., All Saints' Day. The services were conducted by Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor, assisted by Rev. R. M. Brown, a former pastor. Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, was also in attendance.

The Rev. Mr. Brown spoke of her prayer life, and of how upon one occasion he had asked her to explain the secret of her victory in life, and her answer was simply—"Prayer." The pastor spoke of her beautiful Christian life; though handicapped by a feeble body, she never murmured nor complained. He had often left her cheerful presence and had had the secret wish that some of the able-bodied men he knew, who have a grouch and were sore at the world, might know her and learn a lesson of value from her. Her remains were laid to rest in beautiful Greenwood Cemetery. Mrs. Dunn leaves four children, Messrs. C. E. Lee and Lester T. Dunn, Mrs. Jessie Summers, and Miss Luella Dunn, all officers in the church, and one grand-daughter, Miss Orrie Summers.—The (Algiers) Tribune.

TAKE THE CHURCH PAPER.

Let us here give a piece of good advice taken from the columns of The Continent:

"Take the church paper. Read it from cover to cover. Here is found the thought of many sermons.

"Take the church paper. It is the cheapest paper published, considering the quality of its reading matter. It is an assistant pastor who will visit you without fail. It is a window through which the reader may look each week to see what God is doing for and in and through our denomination, as well as what our representatives are doing in the uttermost parts of the earth.

"Readers of religious papers are too appreciative of good sermons to stay away from church service, but if forced to absent themselves they need not lack Christian inspiration or knowledge. It's the best church insurance—is the religious weekly."

"Whoever would do good, will find life too short for the work he will find to do."

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 64—No. 48. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3223.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1917. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

CRAWFORD STREET (VICKSBURG) M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

To give more than a very brief sketch of Crawford Street Methodism would require more space than is available in the columns of a newspaper, for it is coeval with the earliest white settlers of this section, and had its beginning in the earliest decades of the 19th century. Eight miles east of the city of Vicksburg there is a small, well kept cemetery, where are to be found five marble slabs, all to the memory of the Vick family. On one of these slabs, upon which is chiseled two clasped hands, is the inscription: "Rev. Newett Vick—born in Virginia, March 17, 1766, died August 5, 1819; Elizabeth Vick—born April 16, 1772, died August 5, 1819." Both husband and wife died with yellow fever on the same day. This is the family of Vicks in whose home, near the town of Fayette, Miss., was held the first session of the Mississippi Conference, in 1813. The exact date of the coming of Mr. Vick to Warren County can not be ascertained. In the diary of Rev. John G. Jones we read that in 1825 he preached in the home of Rev. John Lane, "there being no church building." In 1828 the Rev. John G. Jones was appointed pastor of the Warren Circuit when he "consolidated what members he found in and around Vicksburg into a regular church organization"—thus began the history of Crawford Street as a separate congregation. On November 21, 1832, the Mississippi Conference held its session in the Methodist Church in the town, which had grown to a population of 2500—Bishop Andrew, presided. Henceforth Vicksburg has been counted a station among the appointments. When it took the name of Crawford Street can not be learned, as it is known that the first preaching place was in another part of the town. There have been at least three, and possibly four, houses of worship occupied by this congregation, the one now being used having been built under the pastorate of Dr. A. F. Watkins, being brought to completion in 1900. A debt of $8000 embarrassed the church for a while, but was finally liquidated in 1905, and the church was dedicated in June of 1906 by Bishop Chas. B. Galloway, who himself had served as its pastor for four years. And it may be said, in all truth, that it was during this pastorate that the eyes of the Church and of the State began to turn upon the young man, soon afterwards to be exalted to the highest position in the gift of his denomination. His fight against the saloon and the licensed evils of the city marked him as a man to be reckoned with, and his matchless eloquence brought him forth on all great occasions.

Crawford Street claims the distinction of having sent out Rev. J. B. Fearn, now a medical missionary in China. For many years Crawford Street was the leading appointment of the Conference, and in our picture gallery may be found the faces of Linfield, the eloquent; R. J. Jones and C. G. Andrews, who were princes and great men in their day; and there were others whom we delighted to honor, now numbered with the redeemed.

Because of removals and deaths, we have lost greatly in numbers during the past few years, which, coupled with an embarrassing debt of $10,000, followed by the appearance of the boll weevil, has greatly hindered our progress. The present membership is about 500—thirty-five of whom have been added this year.

The traditions of Methodism in Vicksburg and Crawford Street Church remain in localism (?), such as "Open-weed Street," leading to the original home of Rev. Newett Vick; "Lane's Hill," on which is the old home of Rev. John Lane, son-in-law to Rev. Newett Vick; the "Marshall home," a colonial structure owned by the silver-tongued C. K. Marshall, also a son-in-law of Newitt Vick; the tomb of William Hyer, who died in the yellow fever epidemic of 1855; the unknown grave of Alexander Talley, missionary to the Choctaws; and last, but not least, the city itself, which bears the name of the first Methodist preacher in this section, Rev. Newett Vick.

T. B. HOLLOMAN,

Now closing 7th year (not consecutive) as a pastor in Vicksburg.

REV. M. B. SHARBROUGH,

Presiding Elder of the Port Gibson District, within the bounds of which the approaching session of the Mississippi Conference will be held.

TOGETHER WITH GOD.

The true Methodist spirit was exhibited by members of a certain congregation who met in their pastor's home just before he left for Conference, at the end of his fourth year. They spoke of their love, in a way that touched the hearts of the pastor and his faithful wife. They expressed their appreciation of the work which had been done, in a way that made the pastor and his wife feel that life for the Master was worth while.

During the evening of good fellowship, their thoughts turned naturally to the future, and there were speculations as to who should come to serve the church the following year. And the pastor who was going away was pleased to hear his people express their purpose to co-operate with the pastor who was to come, and to give him their loyal support. Surely that was in good place.

At this time the interest of many churches is centered in a change of pastors, and many of our people may be looking to the future with some apprehension. The words of Paul, with reference to certain divisions in an ancient church, may also be applied to the solicitude which is often felt in the change of pastors. But it is neither Paul nor Apollos, however much each may be loved, but God that giveth the increase. And we should not forget that, first of all, we are laborers together with God.

Human institutions are imperfect, but we believe that the Methodist system has been honored of God in the past, and that He works through the prayerful consideration of the field and the men, by the Bishop and those who counsel with him—for the advancement of the kingdom.

Then, while testifying to our love for him who has planted, let us look forward with love to him who shall come to cultivate the field, resting in confidence of the fact that we are laborers together with God.

THE NIGHT COMETH.

Margaret E. Sangster.

The night cometh!
Amber and opal the sunset burns,
Tender and steadfast the moonrays fall,
Touched by God's finger, the planet turns,
And the angels lean from the jasper wall.
Weary and worn, God's children wait
Till the night drifts out from the starlight's gate.
The night cometh!

Cometh with charm of the sifted sleep,
That comforteth eyes that used to weep;
Cometh with store of the sweetest rest,
For the little ones that the Lord loves best;
Cometh to some who shall waken here,
To some who shall wake beyond toil or tear.
The night cometh!

Wherefore, whoever thou art to-day,
Faring along on a stony way,
Bowed with the burden, bent with care,
Lift to thy Father a grateful prayer.
Tell him, thy Father, how glad thou art
For the golden gift from heaven's heart.
The night cometh!

After the night, shall morning rise
On the glorious summits of paradise.
After the gloom of this land of sin,
Into perfect peace shall we enter in.
Never a night on that shore of balm,
Where the ransomed lift the unending psalm.
The night cometh! And also the morning!

Consecration is not wrapping one's self in a holy web in the sanctuary; it is going into the world and using every power for God's glory.—Henry Ward Beecher.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. W. W. Jones.

The forty-eighth annual session of the North Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met this morning (Wednesday, Nov. 21, 1917) in the splendid town of Oxford, Miss.—a town famous and also historic because of the great contribution it has made to the citizenship of our State in the way of high-toned Christian men and women, who have given their lives for the cause of civic righteousness, and whose names are on record and illumine the pages of both Church and State history. Many of these names find a place in the reports of the proceedings of the Conference.

Historical Society.

The annual meeting of the Historical Society was held Tuesday evening, Nov. 20, 1917, in the Methodist Church with Rev. J. A. Bowen, President, in the chair. Rev. W. C. Lester was called to the rostrum, where he and Brother Bowen knelt together for silent prayer before opening the service. The splendid choir and congregation sang together, "Faith of Our Fathers Living Still." Brother Lester led the opening prayer and read a Scripture lesson.

A paper, "Oxford Methodism," was read by Rev. E. S. Lewis, the popular and beloved pastor of the church at Oxford, whose quadrennium of efficient service to this church expires with the adjournment of this Conference. Methodist activity dates, in this town and adjacent territory, back to the early 40's. Amongst the names prominent in the establishment of Methodism in this part of the State, as mentioned in this and a paper read by Rev. C. D. McGehee, are those of J. J. Wheat, Wm. Gordon, Longstreet, Lamar, and W. B. Mitchell, father of Revs. J. H. and W. W. Mitchell, members of the Conference at this time. The paper read by Brother McGehee was prepared by Rev. John W. Boswell. Dr. Boswell related some of the interesting experiences of a faithful Methodist preacher in the earlier days, when he was a boy-preacher 20 years of age.

A paper was read by Rev. Asbury Lewis, father of the pastor. Brother Lewis said: "My mission in the world has been to pinck the thistle and plant the flower." His paper was a brief history of the Pioneer Church in Chicasaw County, from whose Sunday school went out to bless the world 8 preachers, 2 lawyers, 2 physicians, and 20 teachers. After brief remarks by this honored veteran of the Cross, the choir sang, "How Firm a Foundation," and J. J. Beck led in prayer.

A paper prepared by Dr. N. R. Hamer was read by Rev. O. W. Bradley. Dr. Hamer was pastor in the Mississippi Delta at a time when overflows were common and automobiles undreamed of. It was during "Reconstruction" days that he served this country, dating his ministerial labors as early as 1873. Among the names mentioned are those of the Montgomerys, Hulls, Ganongs, Bobos, Paces, and Clarks, especial mention being made of Mrs. John Clark, who built the first Methodist church in the Mississippi Delta.

Rev. J. T. Lewis read a paper which was a concise history of the Methodist Church in Greenville, Miss., mentioning the names of some active laymen who have wrought well, among them being the Somervilles and the Theobolds. From the altars of the church at Greenville have been held the funerals of many who died in the faith. "The success of the Church at Greenville is not due to wealth, but to the loyalty of her members, who stand for what the Church stands for."

Rev. J. A. Bowen was elected President, and Rev. T. M. Bradley, Secretary, of the Society.

Brother Bowen made some striking remarks with reference to our Southland: "The first wedding on the continent was in the South." "The first chartered college on earth for women was in the South." "We have seven open ports." "The heart-broken people of the world are coming to us for comfort." "We should control for the sake of the foreigner." "The men of the hills are needed, and the fertile lands of the Delta." Mention was made of the fact that President Wilson was more familiar with John Wesley's Journals than many of the Methodist preachers.

A prayer was lifted by the entire congregation, with the inspiring hymn, "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing," and the benediction was pronounced.

First Day—Wednesday Morning.

Conference Proper.—At 9 o'clock this morning our own beloved Bishop Murrah called the Conference to order by announcing the hymn, "O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing My Great Redeemer's Praise."

Bishop Murrah led the opening prayer, which contained the following expressions from the great heart of a man of God: "Our souls return instinctively to Thee." "We rejoice in the contemplation of Thy matchless perfection." "We make grateful mention of Thy good providence in bringing us together again." "We have brought our morning song; we have recited the articles of our precious faith." "Take us and direct us in all the business of this great Conference." "May we have the deepest sense of Thy presence at this time." "Let us not forget the source of our strength." Prayer was offered for the President of the United States, for the soldiers, that they might be saved from the evils of sin, and for the sanctification of our physical suffering to our spiritual good.

Before arising from prayer, there was awakened in each heart the consciousness of the presence of God. On arising, "The King of Heaven His Table Spreads" was sung by the congregation. The presiding elders took their places around the table for the consecration of the elements and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, after which "Thou, My Everlasting Portion" was sung.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, for several years Secretary of our Conference, called the roll. On calling the roll of lay delegates, the name of J. B. Streater was substituted for the name of Dr. R. C. Elmore, Dr. Elmore being in the U. S. Army.

J. R. Countiss was elected Secretary. No one else was nominated, since it was the wish of all that Brother Countiss serve. Revs. R. A. Tucker, A. T. McIlwain, and S. F. Harkey were chosen as Assistant Secretaries.

The various committees were nominated and confirmed by the Conference. The name of C. W. Baley was substituted for that of W. D. McCullough, deceased, on the Committee on Admissions. The name of B. P. Jaco was substituted for that of J. H. Holder on the Joint Board of Finance. The name of Dr. Kretchmar was substituted for that of J. D. Barbee on the Board of Education.

A communication, embodying a report from Emory University, from Bishop W. A. Candler was read. Six hundred and fifty-four students are enrolled in the University; 4 new buildings have been erected, and others are under construction. Eight hundred and twenty-three students are enrolled in Southern University. We have more students in the Theological schools than ever before. This fact is full of significance: "We are greatly in need of more buildings."

Dr. T. N. Ivey, Dr. John M. Moore, Mr. C. O. Chalmers, and Mr. I. G. Campbell were introduced to the Conference. The presence of Dr. Wilson, the efficient representative of the Publishing House, was noted. Dr. Wilson knows the needs of a young preacher, and his advice as to the purchase of books is good. The Rev. Mr. Bruce, pastor of the South Street Presbyterian Church, was introduced to the Conference.

Revs. S. H. Caffey and R. G. Lord were appointed Conference Postmaster and Assistant Treasurer of the Sunday School Board, respectively.

Dr. T. N. Ivey addressed the Conference. He said: "I am glad to meet the North Mississippi Conference, for the history that you have made, and are still making—such history entitles you to respect." "The Nashville Christian Advocate is the oldest newspaper in Southern Methodism, dating its beginning in the year 1837. We have many subscribers who have been taking it 60 years. Our great Church Extension movement, Epworth League, and many other institutions, have come after it." "We run no syndicated contributions." "We furnish news not found in other papers." "It is the one connectional agent of the Southern Methodist Church." "It does for the Church what the heart, as a connectional agent, does for the body." "We should guard our connectionalism." "As a Christian newspaper, its contributions, news items and articles must represent the spirit of Jesus Christ." "It must stand for the composite doctrines of Methodism, and Southern Methodism." "It stands for every man, woman and child in the Southern Methodist Church." "Articles from the humblest will be given equal consideration with yours, Bishop Murrah." "The North Mississippi Conference stands above the average in number of subscriptions." "The Kingdom of our Lord is resting upon five columns, the preached Word, the Christian home, the Christian school, the Christian life, and the Christian printing press." A most inspiring and instructive address, in which emphasis was placed upon the importance of the Christian printing press as a means of information, was enjoyed by all present. We hope Dr. Ivey will visit us often.

The Bishop called question 22: "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" The names of the presiding elders were called, the characters of all passed, and items from reports made by them follow:

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of the Aberdeen District, reported advancement in all departments of the work, good financial reports, and 400 received into the Church on profession of faith; much improvement on church buildings and parsonages.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, of the Columbus District, who is closing his quadrennium, reported most of the charges as having paid all assessments in full, a year of revivals and debt-paying, and 650 received into the Church on profession of faith. Rev. J. C Park arose and represented the District by presenting Brother Woollard with a token of appreciation from the preachers, stating that it was the wish of the preachers that Sister Woollard share the honors with her husband as he presented a nice set of silverware. Brother Park said: "Brother Dorsey has been called by some an exhorter, Brother L. M. Lipscomb an expositor, and Brother Felts a rare bird, but Brother Woollard is a preacher."

Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of the Corinth District, reported great improvement in property, much indebtedness paid, great revivals, and unusual attendance at the preaching services.

Rev W. W. Mitchell, of the Durant District, reported many churches built, people liberal, and many old church debts paid. Bishop Murrah has recently been in the Durant District and had noted the improvement.

Rev. J. H. Felts, of the Holly Springs District, has had many buildings improved and a net gain of 500 in church membership.

Rev. V. C. Curtis reported more accessions on profession of faith and greater increase in membership in the Greenville District than ever before, all assessments paid in full, liberal donations to education and the various institutions of the Church. Many excellent church buildings have been erected.

Rev. J. H. Holder, of the Sardis District, reported nearly one thousand accessions, splendid revivals, and Sunday school work unusually good. The Sunday school that goes into winter quarters is the exception rather than the rule. The Epworth Leagues are active and the women of the Sardis District lead Southern Methodism in the work of the Missionary Societies. Preachers' salaries have been increased and assessments for benevolent purposes have been well paid. The pastors are all spiritual and hard-working men.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb reported great revivals in the Winona District, large increase in membership, 3 new brick churches at a cost of $16,000 each, with practically no indebtedness following. The preachers' salaries have all been advanced, and all except two charges have paid all assessments in full. Brother J. H. Mitchell commended Brother Lipscomb for his faithfulness.

Dr. R. A. Meek presented a letter from Judge E. V. Hughston, of Greenwood, containing, in due form, a paper wherein he tendered his resignation as member of various boards and committees and offices which he had held in the Church. The Conference expressed appreciation of Judge Hughston's services in the past and reluctantly accepted his resignation as offered in the paper.

Question 22 was resumed, and the names of the superannuate preachers were called. Some of them, being present, made statements respecting their life and labors; others were absent but were represented by their respective presiding elders. The characters of all were passed, and the following were continued in the superannuate relation: J. W. Anderson, W. J. Burt, Thos. Cameron, D. L. Cogdell, H. C. Edmonson, W. S. Harrison, T. G. Freeman, W. C. Harris, J. M. Huggin, Eugene Johnson and A. W. Langley.

The names of R. I. Allen and G. W. McLain were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the supernumerary relation.

When the names of R. M. Davis and A. P. Leech, were called, the presiding elders answered by saying that they had been called home. Their names were referred to the committee on memoirs.

H. C. Moorehead, J D. Newsom, W. J. O'Bryant, B. P. Patterson, J. W. Price, C. N. Terry, S. M. Thames and T. C. Wier were continued in the superannuate relation.

The activity of the superannuate preachers has been remarkable this year. Many of them have been immeasurably helpful to the pastors in meetings, League work and in the Sunday schools.

After many interesting and inspiring talks by these old brethren, who told of the joys and sorrows belonging to the superannuated preacher's life, many of whom are soon, no doubt, to be transferred to the home above, the congregation sang "How Firm a Foundation."

Chancellor Powers, of the State University, was introduced to the Conference and he cordially invited all the preachers to visit the University, especially for the purpose of seeing the military drill in the afternoon. There are 400 volunteers in the University. They have volunteered to fight not only for democracy and American ideals, but in behalf of Christian ideals—the foundation of pure democracy and liberty.

First Cabinet Meeting.

Bishop Murrah gave the presiding elders a cordial invitation to his room, at Dr. J. O. Crider's, at 3 p. m., which was accepted by every one of them.

Wednesday Afternoon.

The Veteran Ministers' Association met in the Methodist Church on Wednesday at 3 p. m., at which time Rev. J. T. Lewis preached an able sermon from Matt. 5:14. At the close of the sermon the veteran ministers appeared at the chancel, "Old Time Religion" was sung, and the congregation expressed appreciation of the lives and labors of the old preachers by shaking hands with them. W. M. McIntosh lead the closing prayer.

Wednesday Evening.

At 7:15 p. m. Rev. L. P. Wasson preached at the Baptist Church. At the same hour the Missionary Anniversary was held at the Methodist Church, Rev. W. N. Duncan, of Winona, presiding. Your reporter attended the Anniversary Meeting at the Methodist Church.

The opening hymn was announced, No. 649. Rev. W. M. Young, of Pontotoc, led the opening prayer. The choir sang "The Golden Gate." A Scripture lesson, Matt. 10:1-16 was read by the Rev. J. T. Lockhart, pastor of the Methodist Church at Lambert.

Brother Duncan introduced Dr. John M. Moore, Secretary of the Home Department of Missions.

Dr. Moore asked the congregation to stand and sing, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." After singing it, Dr. Moore brought to us a timely message full of information, and with the vision of an Isaiah he discussed the present conditions of the world and the future opportunities of the Church in the reconstruction of nations yet to be born. The offices filled by him demand careful study of the great problems now confronting us, and he amply meets the demands of his high calling. Some of the remarks of the speaker were: "Denominationalism is not a crime, but a virtue. The Christian Churches are co-operating in an effort to make a Christian country." "Could we only call forth a man after the order of Isaiah to make us realize that God still rules!" "We are looking upon the events that are remaking the world in which we live." "God has not deserted us, but is working in the movements to awaken us to a knowledge of His presence and leadership." "If there is any period in which man should choose to live, it is to-day." "We are watching the birth of new nations—a new world." He mentioned the fact that Germany was bringing about her own downfall by her impositions upon the world, and that it was a German intrigue that represented Japan, at one time, as our enemy. He spoke prophetically of the new world to arise out of the present confusion. We have come to the present because we are winning. You can't put new wine in old bottles. "We can not put Christianity into the heart of an old Manchu Dynasty." "We can not put pure democracy into Russia without first driving Nicholas Romanoff on the prairies, in the plains, and into prison." "We have been preaching Christianity until people are coming to believe it." "Christian ideals are transforming the world." "To Christianize the ideals of the nations of the world and establish international good will, is the task of the Church." "Jesus speaks in international terms: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' 'Love your enemies.' He says to Texas, love Mexico; to Germany, love France; to the United States, love Germany." "What does God have for the United States to do?" "Christianity has staid the man in the White House. I am glad President Wilson is a Presbyterian elder. I am not much on the Westminster Confession, but if he can stand it, I can; it makes a stiff backbone. I thank God, the President of the United States is a Christian." "The Monroe Doctrine was good for its day, but we have come to the Wilsonian Doctrine; it is big enough for the world." "A democracy that shall rule the world has its inspiration in Christianity." "I think the world ought to be made safe for democracy, politically, socially, industrially, commercially, and ecclesiastically." "Who offered peace? The Kaiser? The Pope." "We must make the world safe for Christianity, the open Bible. We must save the world from infidelity, anarchy and despotism." "The Church must send to the nations prophets, preachers, and school teachers. Russia needs ten thousand teachers and five thousand preachers. The Y. M. C. A. is the best agent we have to represent the Churches in a co-operative effort to save the world from the evils that threaten us."

Brother Duncan announced the hymn, "The morning Light is Breaking." Dr. Moore pronounced the benediction.

Thursday Morning—Second Day.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. John Ritchey. The Scripture lesson was the sixteenth chapter of John; the hymn sung was "A Charge to Keep I have"

After calling the roll of absentees the name of G. R. Stokely was substituted for that of Rowan Thayer, absent lay delegate from the Winona District. R. L. Ward was placed on the Board of Education in place of E. V. Hughston (resigned), whose time also expired with the meeting of this Conference.

From the report from the Orphans' Home, read by J. H. Sherard, we learn that there is a good Epworth League and a good Sunday school in the Home. They are making a greater effort to secure good Christian homes for the orphans. The Orphanage Committee was asked to assnme the duties of Special Hospital Committee.

Revs. B. F. Lewis, Manager (elect) of the Orphans' Home; M. M. Black, Commissioner of Millsaps College; R. Selby, Commissioner of Lamar Law School, Emory University; Drs. A. F. Watkins, President, and W. M. Sullivan, Professor, of Millsaps College, and Dr. R. P. Wilson, of the Publishing House at Nashville, were introduced to the Conference.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, Conference Secretary, read a letter from Brother W. C. Harris in which he gave an account of his labors and sent love to the brethren. Also a letter from Sister McCullough, who has three sons in training for army service. The Methodist parsonages in North Mississippi are well represented in the U. S. Army.

The following brethren were elected to Deacon's orders: W. B. Baker, W. C. Beasley, S. H. Caffey, S. F. Harkey, R. G. Lord, C. A. Parks, W. I. White, N. N. Maxey, and Chas. D. McGehee.

A. J. Beasley, not being before the committee on account of quarantine, and R. G. Moore, who was not before the committee on account of imperative duties that prevented his preparation for examination, were continued in the Class of the Second Year, their characters being passed. A. J. Henry was continued in the Class of the Second Year, and asked for leave of absence to attend the bedside of his mother who is at the point of death. J. D. Boggs, in the Class of the Second Year, asked to be discontinued, and his presiding elder asked permission to use him as a supply.

M. E. Scott, J. S. Duncan (son of the Rev. P. E. Duncan, deceased), J. A. George, and R. S. Henry were admitted on trial.

The candidates for admission into full connection were called to the chancel for a lecture. The Bishop placed timely emphasis on the fact that ours is an itinerant Episcopal Methodist ministry, and voluntary on the part of the candidate. He said: "Unless you expect to meet the conditions, you may voluntarily retire from the service." "Wesley and his associates assauited the stronghold of infidelity and proclaimed a Bible doctrine. Throughout the history of the Church we have been true to the Bible. It gives shape to all our policies and all our methods. The source of our power is in the truths of the Bible. We are great believers in doing things decently and in order. To lose the spirit of evangelism is to lose our power. The spirit of Methodism is the spirit of service. The ills of the world will never be cured until sin is eradicated. Methodism is the spirit of co-operation. We believe in doctrinal convictions, but also in co-operation. We do not go round apologizing for our Church, but we have a brother's hand." The disciplinary questions were asked, and, satisfactory answers being given, the class was elected to Deacons Orders. Bishop Murrah started the old-fashioned and ever-living hymn, "O Happy Day that Fixed my Choice," and the young preachers received the right-hand of fellowship. Your reporter heard a happy shout, and on looking round witnessed the meeting of Dr. H. M. DuBose and the Bishop.

R. G. Hefling was discontinued, at his request.

Received by transfer: N. G. Augustus, from the Little Rock Conference; E. D. Simpson, from the Tennessee Conference.

Received, as a local preacher, from the Baptist Church, J W. Jones. Brother Jones appeared at the altar and answered the disciplinary questions.

A. R. Beasley, W. D. Bennett, C. R. A. Brantley, J. B. Connor, A. T. McIlwain, Guy Ray, meeting the necessary requirements, were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year.

The name of H. M. Cockrum was referred for the supernumerary relation.

G. L. Lauderdale, assistant manager in the Orphans' Home, was not before the committee. His character passed and he was continued in the Class of the Third Year.

R. H. Ruff, having taken the fourth year's course of study, and preparing for Y. M. C. A. service in the U. S. Army, was elected to Elder's orders.

Drs. H. M. DuBose and Stonewall Anderson and Mr. T. B. King were introduced to the Conference.

Thursday—Afternoon.

At three o'clock the auditorium was taxed by reason of the previous announcement that Dr. H. M. DuBose would preach at that hour.

Dr. DuBose led the opening prayer, read a Scripture lesson from the first chapter of Galatians and announced hymn No. 325, "Break Thou the Bread of Life, Dear Lord, to Me." After the singing, the preacher announced as a text Galatians 1:8: "Bnt though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

Extracts from the great sermon: "A perverted mind easily and naturally becomes a polluted soul. An old error in the mind quickly becomes a new an it the heart." "Some of the heresies mentioned are that respecting the virgin birth, the divinity of Christ, and the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures." "Germany enjoyed for a while the blessings of Luther's Gospel of Justification by Faith, but she heard another gospel the result of which was Prussian militarism and the final end will be the overthrow of the Empire." "England turned from the faith of the fathers, the ritualists engaged her mind and she has been brought near the verge of destruction." "America rejected one hundred years in the messages of the fathers and at last turned to materialism." "The gospel we have heard has brought the guns of war." "Sin is the ancient curse, but is the world's most modern destruction." "Only the gospel of Jesus can bring to the world the knowledge of sin." "The gospel of Jesus is the discovery of the ancient world's soul needs." "Jesus brings not only cleansing from sin. He brings an ideal and strength: I can do all things through Him." "The gospel of Jesus is the answer to the ancient soul's needs." "A knowledge of the sacrifice made by Christ should bring us to repentance for our misinterpretations." "A curse upon you if you preach any other gospel, a curse upon the lives of those who brought it to you."

With the fires of enthusiasm burning in the heart of the congregation, with repentance upon the part of any who had been unfaithful in the preaching of the gospel of Jesus, with a determination to be true to Him, our sacrifice and our life and resurrection, the benediction was pronounced without a closing song. May the message live in the hearts of the hearers and may they carry it to those who were not there to hear it.

Thursday Evening.

Educational Anniversary.

After devotional exercise, Dr. Meek introduced the speaker, Dr. Stonewall Anderson, who delivered a most excellent address on the subject of Christian Education. Dr. Anderson said: "The Church must maintain its place in the field of education or its days are numbered." He discussed the ancient types of culture, mentioning the Egyptian, Grecian and Hebrew, then the modern types in the United States. "The United States stands for Christian culture that gives every child a chance. There are other types in the United States which make humanism their God. There were illustrations given of professors in the United States who teach unsound doctrines. "Let us teach the girl to can tomatoes, but also teach her that the girl is worth more than the tomato she is canning. Christian Education stands for the development of character. It has an ideal which we find in Christ. It stands for the teaching of the Bible in the schools. It stands for establishing an atmosphere."

Dr. Anderson pronounced the benediction.

Friday, Nov. 22—Third Day.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. T. W. Lewis, a former member of this Conference, now pastor of St. John's Church, Memphis Conference. Hymn No. 702 was sung, and the Scripture lesson, 103d Psalm, was read.

After reading the minutes, the election of delegates to the General Conference was taken up. Delegates elected this morning were: Lay: E. M. Pant, J. G. McGown, J. H. Sherard. One more is to be elected. Clerical delegates: R. A. Meek, J. R. Countiss, T. H. Dorsey, and one more to be elected.

The name of J. T. Gaines was substituted on the Sunday School Board for that of Herbert Holmes.

W. N. Dodds and J. W. Ward were advanced from the Class of the Third Year to the Class of the Fourth Year.

W. W. Bruner, absent on account of sickness in his family, was continued in the Class of the Third Year. J. R. James, not appearing before the committee, was also continued in the Class of the Third Year. W. T. Bazzel, absent, requested, through his presiding elder, his location, which was granted.

J. H. Brooks, who has been called to Y. M. C. A. service in the army; C. T. Floyd, I. F. Holland, F. H. McGee, J. D. Wroten, and Olin Ray were elected to Elder's orders. D. R. Wasson has withdrawn from the ministry, voluntarily surrendering his credentials.

Bishop Mouzon represented the movement to erect a statue of Bishop Asbury in the City of Washington, D. C. After a brief statement by the Bishop, an opportunity was given for subscriptions whereby our part of the work should be accomplished as a Conference, special request being made that every member of the Church should have an opportunity of contributing, and the necessary provision were really made by preachers and laymen. T. M. Brownlee was appointed Conference Treasurer for this movement.

A resolution from the Epworth League Board asking for an assessment of ½ of 1 per cent on the basis of the assessments for pastors' salaries, for the purpose of defraying certain necessary expenses, was offered. After discussion, the resolution was lost.

The name of E. P. Goar was referred for the superannuate relation. W. R. Williams said the pastor's salary had been raised to $1000 by his charge. E. H. Boyd, being absent, his name was referred for the supernumerary relation. Dr. J. W. Boswell was not present, but sent a message of love to the brethren. J. A. Bowen has been active in the evangelistic work, having had calls for 110 weeks' service, 52 weeks being asked for in the North Mississippi Conference. He could not meet the demands, but has seen over 1000 conversions. C. A. Northington had baptized 13 infants. J. J. Baird paid his Conference collections in full by May. J. W. O'Bryan has withdrawn from the ministry.

Rev. J. A. Randolph, our well known army chaplain, sent his report from under the U. S. colors in France. He sent greetings and told us how the chaplains and the Y. M. C. A's. are all working to guard the soldiers against the dangers that confront them.

Rev. R. O. Brown represented Clarksdale in extending to the Conference an invitation to hold the next annual session in that great little city. All were glad to accept the invitation.

The report of the Committee on Hospital was read. We note the fact that they contemplate beginning work on the buildings at an early day. J. H. Sherard spoke encouragingly of the movement with respect to plans and anticipations. Memphis is doing her part in the campaign for funds and is enthusiastically co-operating in every way possible. Mr. T. B. King was introduced to the Conference. This great layman, who has recently been elected Field Agent for the Hospital, brought us a message unsurpassed during the Conference. Mr. King is no stranger to the North Mississippi Conference. The following are some extracts from his address: "I am not here of my own selection.....Feeling the burden of this great responsibility, and the immense weight of it, I could not undertake it without going to God, as you preachers do under the weight of extreme burdens.....I have always contended that the business end of the Church should be in the hands of the laymen." (The opportunity came for Mr. King to show his colors, and he backed up his convictions with his life.) "Have attended thirty-one Annual Conferences, have had 22 pastors, and never fell out with one of them in my life..... I have had the privilege of living in the same town with a Bishop, and am still on speaking terms with him.....I love the Methodist Church better than money or life, not for the mere sake of the Church, but for what it has done and is doing for me.....H. M. Ellis has done a magnificent work for Methodism. You can well afford to follow those who have wrought so well amongst us..... The Methodist Hospital can not be built with penny collections—not with hat collections..... We must look to the men who have been remarkably blessed financially.....I shall not ask a single preacher for one dollar, not because you are not able to pay it, but as a matter of principle.... We need your prayers, help, and information when we come to you.....One man got religion by giving $20,000. It started a song in his heart..... We laymen have established a sentiment that if any man dies rich and leaves nothing to the Church and its institutions, his name goes down in disgrace.....The greatest grafters are the men whose business increases by reason of unearned profits and who fail to contribute to the institution that has increased his values 400 per cent.....The man with the one pound lied; the Church never reaps where it does not sow..... When we link up to Methodism we link up to a world-wide institution; this is what we must learn .....The Hospital is coming; it requires faith on both sides—faith in the men and faith in the Church—and we have it.....Because of our connectionalism, the Methodist Church can do things that can not be done by other Churches.....The bonds of the Methodist brotherhood is something that the commercial world can die on."

Some man said: "Ring ought to be a preacher." We need more laymen like him, but they are coming. God is raising up men for this great age.

The report on the Efficiency Conference, read by Brother Woollard, shows that there is an increase of interest in this institution on the part of both preachers and laymen. The Efficiency Conference has kept within the bounds of the provision made by the Boards for necessary expenses.

Conference adjourned, after announcements with the doxology and benediction.

Friday Afternoon.

At 3 p. m. a large congregation assembled to attend the laymen's meeting. This meeting was presided over by Parham Williams, of Lexington. Song by the choir, "Peel Out the Watchword." Scripture lesson, 4th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. Rev. D. W. Babb led the prayer. Hymn by choir and congregation, "Faith of Our Fathers."

Parham Williams made brief remarks concerning the Laymen's Movement. He said: "We have not done what we should have done, nor what we expected to do, for want of concerted action."

Mr. J. B. Marmon was introduced and addressed the meeting. Mr. Marmon is the son of a Methodist preacher who wrought in our Conference in years past, and whose last appointment was Holly Springs, though he never lived to reach the place. He said: "It is foolish to let the failures and mistakes of yesterday hang as a weight about us and impede the progress of to-day. Make good to-day. The acts of to-day effect the deeds of to-morrow.....From the Bible we learn the secrets of knowledge and power.....A man who will use his mind can get any price he wants for it..... A church composed of a membership who are satisfied with anything less than the best they can do is a very weak and unprofitable church..... Being busy inspires self-confidence.....I do despise to hear a man swear; there is no use in it .....If we fail to do all we are able, we lose self-respect."

A solo was sung by Mr. Templeton, after which Mr. T. B. King addressed the congregation. No service has been more profitable than the laymen's meeting.

Some of Mr. King's remarks: "The laymen of the Church are in possession of more power than they are exercising to-day.....It is a shame upon us as Methodists that we put any organization ahead of the Church.....The strongest tie binding men's hearts should be Christian love." He read Paragraph 425 of the Discipline, commented upon the opportunities of the Laymen's movement, and then said: "When God saved me he saved me not for myself alone, but that I might go out and bring to the foot of the Cross some other fellow.....We have gotten to where we depend upon the preachers to save men—that is why we laymen have no more religion.....I am tired of the common use of the term, 'duty;' God needs the man who loves the Church. What would you think of a man who went out to marry because it was his 'duty?' What would the girl to whom he was proposing marriage think?" He related the story of his little home church and how it helped him to be reared religiously, of the consecrated father, and then said: "Brethren, you don't need any more authority. I don't want any more laymen in the Conference. In the Quarterly and District Conferences, the laymen are in the majority—if they do their duty in attending these meetings. There is where we start the preachers. How much more power do you want? I am tired

GIBSON MEMORIAL M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

Like many other churches, Gibson Memorial had its origin in a Sunday school. In the year 1886 a Sunday school was organized in the old Marine Hospital by members of the Crawford Street Church. From time to time preaching services were held there. Later on, the members of Crawford Street Church built a chapel on Short Mulberry Street, now known as Oak Street. That building still stands and is used as a residence. The Minutes show that W. T. Beall, a local preacher, was appointed as the first regular pastor, and he organized the church. The record shows that gratifying progress was made during his pastorate of two years, 1889 and 1890. Since then the following have served as pastors, most of whom are yet in active service—some now in other Conferences: F. M. Keene, in 1891; Ira B. Robertson, in 1892-3; W. H. Lewis, in 1894-5; H. R. Singleton, a few weeks in 1895, Lewis having transferred to St. Louis; K. S. Enochs, in 1896; J. A. Moore, in 1897; W. W. Cammack, in 1898-9; H. P. Lewis, Jr., in 1900; H. D. Howell and W. H. Mounger, in 1901; G. P. McKeown and C. M. Simpson, in 1902; E. L. Alford, in 1903-4; W. A. Terry, in 1905-6-7-8;

REV. T. B. HOLLOMAN, D.D.,
Host of the Mississippi Conference.

REV. O. S. LEWIS,
Pastor of the Gibson Memorial Church at Vicksburg, Miss.

W. L. Linfield, in 1909; W. H. Saunders, in 1910-11-12-13; L. L. Roberts, in 1914-15-16.

Many varying and unique experiences could be related by these pastors. The record of struggle and achievement is quite interesting. In 1902,

The Crawford Street M. E. Church, South, in which the 104th Session of the Mississippi Conference Will Convene on Wednesday, Dec. 5, With Bishop W. B. Murrah Presiding.

under the pastorate of C. M. Simpson, the location of the church was changed to South Washington Street, and a new church, valued at $2000, was built. The name was changed from South Vicksburg to Washington Street. Some improvements were made on the church while E. L. Alford and W. A. Terry were pastors. During the pastorate of W. H. Saunders, this building was sold and a lot was purchased on the corner of Washington and Klein Streets. Upon this lot L. L. Roberts built the present beautiful and commodious edifice in 1914. This building is very attractive, both outside and inside, being elegantly furnished in the main auditorium. It is worth fully $15,000 or more. In December, 1916, the church was dedicated by Dr. H. M. Du Bose, after a successful campaign for funds that wiped out the indebtedness. The church was named Gibson Memorial for Tobias Gibson, the first Methodist missionary to the territory of Mississippi. His grave is within three miles of the church. A beautiful memorial window, the gift of the Mississippi Conference, adorns the church.

The membership has been growing steadily for many years, though losses by frequent removals have cut down the net gain. During the present year there has been a spiritual awakening that has resulted in great and lasting good. About 60 members have been added this year. The present membership, exclusive of those lost sight of, is about 275. The labors of those who have wrought here in the past are bringing forth fruit. The future looks good for Gibson Memorial. To God be the glory! OSMOND S. LEWIS.

A DANGEROUS PROPOSITION.

Dear Doctor Meek: I want to say to you that the whole Church, South, owes you a debt for turning the light upon the Traverse City meeting of the Commissioners on Unification. The way they propose to hack up the Southern Church will do more to defeat unification than anything else, unless it be the question of the relation of the colored people to the unified Church. On the plan proposed, the Church, South, will be completely absorbed and become a thing of the past. Your brother,

W. H. SAUNDERS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, TAKE NOTICE.

Dear Brethren: We are mailing out cards with directions for finding homes to all those whose address we could obtain. Most of the places can be reached easily by car lines, if directions are observed, and by making inquiries of conductors who will kindly assist in instructing. There is also a taxicab system which will serve those who prefer to use it. Presiding elder Leggett is the only one who has responded to our request for names. Therefore, the lay members of the other districts will please come to Crawford Street Church, and also all applicants for admission on trial, as we have no list of the names of these brethren. There will be ample rooms for all Boards and Committees in the church. Wishing for all a pleasant session, we are sincerely yours,

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

DRINKING IN JAPAN.

From "The Far East," published in Tokyo, we clip the following, which indicates the world-wide trend of temperance reform:

Recently it was reported that the authorities were about to place the ban on drinking among railway men. Whether this is correct or not, it is a fact that the most serious disaster in the history of Japanese railways which took place a few months ago in the North, is officially considered to be primarily due to neglect of duty by an official who was addicted to sake drinking. Under the circumstances, it would be impossible to overlook the potentialities of this evil, and the railway authorities would not be doing the duty they owe to the public if this growing evil in Japanese life were overlooked. The consumption of all forms of alcoholic liquor has greatly increased in Japan; drunkenness is much more common now than formerly, and the railway authorities will have the public support in anything they do to check the evil among their employees.—The National Advocate.

SEND THEM TO BED WITH A KISS.

O mothers, so weary, discouraged,
Worn out with the cares of the day,
ou often grow cross and impatient,
Complain of the noise and the play;
'or the day brings so many vexations,
So many things going amiss:
But mothers, whatever may vex you,
Send the children to bed with a kiss!

The dear little feet wander often,
Perhaps, from the pathway of right,
The dear little hands find new mischief
To try you from morning till night;
But think of the desolate mothers
Who'd give all the world for your bliss,
And, as thanks for your infinite blessings,
Send the children to bed with a kiss!

For some day their noise will not vex you,
The silence will hurt you far more;
You will long for their sweet childish voices,
For a sweet childish face at the door;
And to press a child's face to your bosom,
You'd give all the world for just this!
For the comfort 'twill bring you in sorrow,
Send the children to bed with a kiss!"

THE BLACK MARKS.

Little Ethel had been told that she must not make pencil marks in her father's books, and she was so obedient that her father often lent his pencil to her. One day, however, she grew tired of scribbling on pieces of paper, and thought she would just make a little mark on the edge of the page. So she made a little mark in one of the books on the table, and the little mark made her want to make a big mark, until pretty soon she was scribbling all over the reading. Suddenly she thought of her father, and tried to rub out the marks with the eraser on the end of the pencil; but that only made long, black streaks and mussed up the paper.

"Oh, dear; I can't unwrite these marks!" cried little Ethel, and she rubbed with the eraser until she rubbed a little hole in the paper.

Just then her father came into the room, and he told her that the black marks on the white paper were like the marks of naughty words and actions in little girls' hearts. The right way is to be obedient and not make the black marks; for, after they are made, it is very, very hard to rub them out again.—Shepherd's Arms.

HOW KINDNESS WON.

Dick was a very little donkey to have such a will of his own. You wouldn't have thought, unless you knew donkeys, that this small brown animal with the bright eyes and long ears could be so stubborn. He stood there in the road and refused to go one step further; neither would he turn his head towards home.

"Oh, dear! What a bad donkey!" exclaimed little Bertie in despair. "How shall we ever be able to make him move?"

Her brother, Lloyd, with the confidence of eight years, ran to the side of the road and brought back a short stick, with which he industriously switched the obstinate animal's sides. Alas! the donkey bore it better than he did, and he soon stopped, breathless.

After a moment's thought, Bertie, as a last resort, drew an apple from a basket in the little cart and held it up in front of Dick's nose. For a single instant he sniffed at the rosy fruit, then moved forward obediently and took it in his mouth.

"All aboard!" cried Lloyd, and he and his sister clambered upon the seat.

And if you will believe it, whether he had forgotten his late ill-temper, or because the kindness of his good little mistress had conquered him, Dick set off at a lively pace, still munching the apple, and they had no more trouble with him during the remainder of the drive.—Sunbeam.

BILLY'S LESSON.

Billy Browne frowned at his book and told himself over and over: "I never can learn that old lesson! I know that I can't!"

Every time Billy said this, the lesson seemed to grow more hard and hopeless. It would have been easy in school, but it is tedious work for a boy to make up in vacation lessons he has missed while away on a visit.

The real trouble, you see, was not that the lesson was hard, but that part of the time Billy's mind was out on the street where Dick and Allen were playing, and the rest of the time it wouldn't work because Billy wouldn't let it. He kept discouraging it all the time.

"What's the use trying to understand a lesson when you can't?" he grumbled.

Just then Mr. Beach came down the street with his family of goats—Billy, Nannie and Kiddie. At once Billy dropped his work and rushed out to see the goats. Dick and Allen joined him, and all began asking eager questions, for none of them knew goats well.

Mr. Beach was leading Billy Goat by a halter. At an order from him, the goat stood proudly on his hind legs.

"He's like an old man, with his long beard and his sober eyes," said Billy.

"He's like a small boy in many ways," answered Mr. Beach. "He likes to climb and he's full of fun and tricks."

"That's like a boy," agreed Dick.

"And he seems always to be hungry," Mr. Beach added.

"That's like a boy, too," laughed Allen.

"If he's left in the yard," Mr. Beach went on, "he eats everything green in sight—grass and leaves and shrubs. Even the flowers do not escape him. I shut him and his family up in a pasture with a wire fence around it, which I knew he couldn't climb. One day I found him outside of it, nibbling a young tree. You see, the fence was braced at the corners with long poles, and he had climbed the inside one and walked down the outside one."

"Just like a boy!" again laughed Dick. "Was it hard to train him to do tricks like standing up in this way?"

"No," answered Mr. Beach. "Goats, as a rule, are easily trained. At first Billy didn't want to stand on his hind legs, but that was only because he thought he could not. Even a goat can't do a thing till he gets rid of that notion. He hadn't found out then how very easy it is."

Right here Billy Browne might have said: "That's like a boy, too!"

It was very much like a boy Billy knew. He said nothing, but he was thinking busily, and his thoughts ran like this:

"I'm not going to let Billy Goat beat Billy Browne. I can learn that lesson, and I'll do it, too."

And Billy did learn it. He laughed when he was through to think how easy it had been.

The next day, when he passed Mr. Beach's pasture, Billy Goat looked at him with a wise air, as if he would say: "Didn't you learn a good lesson from me, Billy Browne?"—Selected.

ONE THING IT HAS DONE.

"Whatever else the war may have done, it has shifted the whole center of our religious thinking from the speculative and critical problems of our religion to its practical problems."

CALLED HOME.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have recently buried from our Church Mrs. Ellen Adams, who was the oldest member we had. She was nearing eighty-nine years on this earth. Uniting with the Methodist Church when but a girl, she was for nearly eighty years a Methodist, being twice the wife of a Methodist preacher. Her first marriage was to Rev. A. F. M. Fly, of the Mississippi Conference. Her second husband was Rev. J. D. Adams, of the Louisiana Conference. She had been a member at Bunkie during the past decade or more. She died a triumphant death. A more extended notice will appear soon. She leaves a large number of relatives and friends.

Her pastor, J. M. ALFORD.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE IN MINDEN IN 1885 AND ELSE.

November 28 will be the opening day of the Louisiana Conference in Minden. Another Conference session was held there in 1885, commencing on January 3. That year the writer was present. Bishop Hargrove presided, and it was very manifest that there was a downpour of the Holy Spirit and an overflow in many hearts. From all parts of Louisiana—north, south, east, and west—and from other States and Conferences, the people came. There were in attendance many lay and clerical helpers—efficient men and women, coworkers in the vineyard of our Lord and Master.

Pardon me while I relate some incidents that occurred during that Conference and some of the consequences that have followed since that long-ago date, which is so dear to my heart and memory that it seems to me as if it were only yesterday. I recall the bright glow of genial countenances, and seem to hear the truth of God as it was proclaimed by his ministers, endued with the Holy Spirit. Long since many who were there have passed away—fathers, mothers, and children. How they then sang the old-time songs, such as "Children of the Heavenly King," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "O it Will be Joyful," "The Gate Ajar For Me," "What Wondrous Love is This," "Time Speeds Away," "Amazing Grace," and "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" The use of the old hymns meant that there was true gospel singing.

In the company there on that occasion were James A. Parker, John A. Miller, Marcus M. Manlery, James E. Bradley, K. K. Fauntleroy, Robert Parvin, Dr. C. W. Carter, Dr. Walker, Joe Medlock, Frank Patterson, Robert J. Harp, the White brothers, and many others who were live wires and a great power in the Methodism of the State at that time. Some of these who were then veterans broke the ground and plowed and traveled difficult paths, where our young preachers now serve up-to-date appointments. This rising generation know little of class meetings and the old-time campground revivals that were so much enjoyed in the good old days of yore.

"Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove,
With all thy quickening powers,
Kindle a flame of sacred love
In these cold hearts of ours!"

"MINISTERIAL ETHICS."

This is the subject of an admirable address contained in the volume of Bishop Charles B. Galloway's speeches, "Great Men and Great Movements," which was brought out two or three years ago under the editorial supervision of Bishop Candler. As our patronizing Annual Conferences are on the eve of meeting, it may be wholesome for us to quote a few paragraphs from this illuminating utterance. Touching upon the duty of a retiring pastor to his successor, Bishop Galloway said:

"In our itinerant system, with its limited pastoral term and frequent changes of ministers, the relation of outgoing and incoming pastors is peculiarly delicate and intimate. Out of this relation grow certain definite duties that a minister owes to his successor. If his ministry has been distinguished for fruitfulness and popularity, he can largely affect the success or failure of the one who follows him. The character of the introduction or commendation which he gives will determine the welcome his successor receives and will have a potent influence upon the entire history of his pastorate. If douhts are expressed as to his ahility or availahility, if fears are intimated that he lacks at certain vital points or has some objectionahle pecuiiarities, if adverse confidential predictions are made "just to one or two very special and discreet friends," the brother comes with a mountain of prejudice to scale and silent hut positive opposition to conquer. On the contrary, if he commends his virtues, applauds his abilities, tells of his fidelities, rejoices in his successes, and congratulates his old flock that they are to be under such competent and consecrated pastoral care, he comes with hearts to welcome him, spiritual sympathy to sustain him, and assured victory to cheer him."

In the course of his discussion, the Bishop aiso had something to say concerning the duty of the incoming to the outgoing pastor, which we quote in part, as follows:

"Another duty is to defend his predecessor's reputation. Every man of positive convictions will have had some antagonisms. His style was not according to every taste. Some oversensitive ones felt themselves siighted. On his first pastoral round a preacher wiii discover that his predecessor had a hlade that cut and a twanging bow that sent an arrow to the mark. He will hear criticisms favorable and unfavorable. Then and there he has an opportunity to display the true chivalrous brotherhood of the ministry. By defending and honoring the Lord's anointed he promotes his kingdom. He can inflict upon him untold injury, or, like a true brother in Christ, he can honor and exalt him. He should rememher two things: First, his own ministry has to come under the same hypercritical test; second, the very persons who discuss so freely his predecessor will give him a similar introduction to his successor. It is also a preacher's duty to honor the lahors of his predecessor. What has been accomplished shouid not be undervalued. Much of our work is to reap where others have sown. Their sowing should have equal honor with our reaping."

Prudence in speech is a great virtue for any one, and no person needs it more than a Methodist minister. It sometimes happens that when a pastor has reached the end of his quadrennium in a charge he does the brethren of his Conference a great injustice in a kind of wholesale fashion. The people at such a time are naturaliy soiicitous ahout who is to serve them next year, and in conversing with them he yields to the temptation to take up the men who are considered the most eligihle for the place, one by one, and to point out what he conceives to he their defects. A layman whose pastor is at the end of his four years was in our office a few days since, and we soon discovered that he was pretty thoroughly informed as to all of the reputed peculiarities of the ministers most likeiy to come to his church, though some of them he had never seen. Evidently some preacher had been doing some unwise talking, and possihiy he has put in the way of the man who may be assigned to that field an obstacle that it will he very difficult for him to overcome. It is quite easy to arouse a prejudice against a brother hy magnifying some minor fault and have iaymen at the Conference objecting to him; when if he had been let aione and sent to them as their pastor, he would have done a great work. We talk much of the brotherhood of the Methodist itinerancy—let us strive so to deport ourselves toward one another that it shall be a hrotherhood in fact, and not simply in name.

"OVER THE TOP."

A recent cartoon in an afternoon paper represented a tremendous British lion going over the top of the German defenses. The cartoon, of course, referred to the recent smashing hlows of the English opposite Cambrai. The reports of the colossal drive along a front of thirty-two miles told of the irresistible bravery and determination with which the British troops went "over the top."

But the phrase had aiready become current. Besides the victorious rush of troops, it had heen applied to the success of those who are tarrying by the stuff, in the Liherty Bond issues, and in the iarge sums raised for the work of the Red Cross and of the Y. M. C. A.

The phrase and the achievements connected with it may furnish a standard and an example to the Church. Sureiy the demand of patriotism can be no greater than the caii of loyaity to the Kingdom of God. It shouid be the desire of individuals and of churches to measure up to their fuli duty, and to all the things required of them. It should be the invariable rule that no church could be satisfied with less than meeting all its assessments in full, from the sense of duty and of pride, and, above all, from a realization of the great needs and demands.

During this time of reckoning for the Conferences of our patronizing territory, it is to be hoped that the reports will show that few churches indeed have failed to go "over the top," and that the deliherations may he characterized hy a prayerful determination to measure up to all the demands and opportunities of the hour, and of the Church, during the future, a determination that springs from the sure knowledge of the fact that all the unfailing resources of heaven are back of the men who undertake to do the Lord's will.

R. H. H.

THE NASHVILLE-CHATTANOOGA PROPAGANDA CONDEMNED.

At the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference the laymen heid a great meeting, which was presided over by Mr. Parham Wiiliams, of Lexington, and at which addresses were made hy Mr. J. B. Marmon and Mr. T. B. King, of Memphis. Mr. King in the course of his address, said:

"Brethren, you don't need any more authority. I don't want any more laymen in the Annual Conference. In the Quarterly and District Conferences, the iaymen are in the majority, if they do their duty in attending these meetings. There is where we start the preachers. How much more power do you want? I am tired of laymen who never exercise the rights they have and who rareiy go to church, sitting back and saying, 'We want more power.' What we need, as laymen, is not more 'power;' we need more of God."

The foiiowing sets forth the action taken by the Conference without any opposition:

"Report No. 2, of the Committee on Laymen's Activities.

"We, your Committee on Laymen's Activities of the Conference, have no sympathy with the Chattanooga propaganda, and are strongly opposed to it in purpose and plan. We are ioyai to Methodism as it is, and in these unsettled times depiore and condemn any movement from any source which aims radicaiiy to alter our methods, organism, or doctrine.

"Respectfully submitted and signed by Dabney Lipscomb, for the Committee."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The work is making good headway on the Ida (La.) charge, of which Rev. E. B. Daniel is pastor. A good report wiii he made to the Conference at Minden.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. R. E. Rutledge, of Vaughan, Miss., says: "This charge will pay up in fuii this year. We have a most excellent peopie to serve."

Rev. W. A. Hays, of Decatur, Miss., thus refers to his work: "We are rounding out our fourth year on this charge, with probahiy the best report of the four." Brother Hays is one of the choice men of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. C. E. Downer, of Petal, Miss., writes: "Brother Isaac L. Peebles preached here for us morning and evening on Thanksgiving Day." It scarcely needs to be said that Dr. Peebles gave his hearers a strong and inspiring message.

Rev. Thos. J. Beck, of Morgan City, La., writes: "I have been transferred to Arkansas, and I desire to have my paper hereafter maiied to me at Heiena. We have had a pieasant year at Morgan City and are ciosing out with everything in fine shape."

In a business ietter to our office, Rev. W. W. Graves, of Roiling Fork, Miss., appends the following note: "We are moving along niceiy in this Delta charge. This is truly a great country in many respects. Our Church finances will 'go over the top.'"

We regret to state that Mrs. E. D. Mouzon, the wife of Bishop Mouzon, died at Dailas, Texas, on Nov. 19 after an iiiness covering a period of several months. Bishop Mouzon wiii have the sympathy of many friends in the sore hereavement which has come to him.

A note from Sister H. G. Henderson, written from Georgetown, Ky., on Nov. 21, announced it to he her purpose to leave in a few days for Sardis, Miss., where she expects to spend some time. She said: "I iove the people of Mississippi and never expect to forget them."

A correspondent of the New Aibany (Miss.) Circuit speaks in high terms of the service rendered during the past two years by Rev. C. A. Northington. Brother Northington is evidently a workman that needeth not to he ashamed, and it is his habit to bring things to pass wherever he labors.

Rev. J. A. Alford ,pastor of the Second Methodist Church of this city, and Mrs. Kattie Kundert Flanders were married at the New Orieans District parsonage on Thursday evening, Nov. 22, 1917, Rev. W. W. Holmes officiating. The Advocate extends to this worthy young couple congratuiations and best wishes.

Rev. C. M. Morris, who for the past two years has served the Epworth M. E. Church, South, of this city, has been transferred to the Upper South Carolina Conference. Brother Morris has made a good record in the Louisiana Conference and we heartiiy commend him to the South Carolinians as a worthy itinerant and a brother heloved.

From a personal letter from Rev. J. H. Rogers, formerly of North Mississippi, hut now of Oklahoma, we take the following: "The East Oklahoma Conference has come and gone. The Bishop sent me to Wewoka Station, which is one of the best appointments in the Conference." We are pleased to know that our esteemed hrother is to be pleasantiy situated during the coming year.

Brother J. L. Beii, of Newton, Miss., sends us the foiiowing note of interest: "Miss Virgie Goiden and Mr. J. H. Ivey were married on the evening of Nov. 18, by Rev. W. M. Wiiliams, of Coiiins. Miss Golden was reared in the Orphans' Home at Jackson, Miss., while Brother Wiiliams was the manager. Mr. Ivey is a prominent druggist of this city. They will make their home here."

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. W. J. Porter, Sicily Island, La., 5; Brother B. F. Chambers, Beach, Miss., 4; Rev. J. M. Corley, Lake, Miss., 4; Mabel McMims, Courtland, Miss., 3; P. S. Carpenter, Denham Springs La., 2; Mrs. J. S. Boucher, North Columbus, Miss., 7.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, pastor of the Main Street M. E. Church, South, at Hattiesburg, Miss., writes as follows: "We have had 200 additions to our membership this year, a net gain of 139. Our Sunday school and Epworth Leagues are doing a great work, and our financial report will be in full. We find great joy in ministering to the boys at Camp Shelby, large numbers of whom come to our church every Sunday."

Rev. H. T. Carley, Professor of English and History at Centenary College, Shreveport, La., says: "Everything is moving along very smoothly at Centenary this year. We haven't a very large student body, but we are doing good work." Though not as largely endowed as some of the colleges of the Church, the instruction given at this institution will compare favorably with any of our schools. The Faculty is a very competent one.

A regrettable error was made in the Advocate of last week in representing Minden as being in the Shreveport District, whereas it is in the Ruston District. In the rush of geting off to the North Mississippi Conference, our forms were very hurriedly made up. We apologize to all concerned for this mistake. The presiding elder host of the Louisiana Conference, which is now in session, is, of course, Dr. J. M. Henry, instead of Rev. C. D. Atkinson.

We have on our table a neat pamphlet, entitled "The Holy Ghost or Spirit" from the prolific pen of Dr. I. L. Peebles, of Meridian, Miss. It is an able and interesting discussion of this great theme, which covers 38 pages. It is Scriptural, clear, and very informing. Brother Peebles is unusually gifted as an expositor of God's Word, and in this treatise he is at his best. We wish for his pamphlet a wide circulation. Write him for a copy, addressing him at 1522 13th Avenue, Meridian, Miss. The price is 10 cents a copy.

of laymen who never exercise the right they have, and rarely go to church, sitting back and saying, 'We want more power.' What we need, as laymen, is not more 'power;' we need more of God."

In closing, the hymn "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," was sung, after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Ben P. Jaco.

Friday Evening.

At 7:15 p. m. a large congregation assembled on the occasion of the anniversary of the Church Extension Board.

W. C. Carlisle conducted the devotional exercises. Hymn No. 208, "I Love Thy Kinkdom, Lord," was sung. Prayer was led by Rev. Ben P. Jaco. R. W. Evans read a lesson from Psalm 184. The Conference Board of Church Extension was seated on the rostrum. The report of the Conference Board was read by Rev. J. R. Bright.

Dr. W. F. McMurry, General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, was introduced to the congregation. We take some extracts from the address: "I am surprised not to find an American flag in this auditorium. I shall provide one. (He spread a flag on the stand.).....We owe our liberty to the church house.....Let Prussian militarism win, and they will tell you what sort of church house you shall have and what you shall put in them.....We call this war a war for democracy. It is a war for the Christian religion. After it is over, we shall win. (He called for the "Star-Spangled Banner," but we could not sing it.) He said: "I am not surprised at this generation not knowing how to sing it. We have felt secure in our religious liberty. The next generation will know it—and they will be singing it in Dutch before we are through with them. It is remarkable that, in this conflict, the Government has turned to the church house. Let us continue to build churches.....Church debts are in the way of preachers. This is a good time to pay off.....We have many places where, if we fail to build a better house of worship, we shall soon lose our crown.....It is a good day for any community when they have a church house dedicated..... Mr. Roosevelt said: "In the pioneer days of the West, we found it an unfailing rule that after a community had existed for a certain length of time a church house was built, or the community began to go down?.....If the Methodist Church is to dominate the religious and moral life in the State of Mississippi, it must house itself." He mentioned the Department of Architecture and Building, and asked that we get information from the Church Extension Board when contemplating the construction of churches. The meeting closed with the benediction.

SOME WORDS FROM DR. SAWYER.

Dear Doctor Meek: I wish to state my full agreement with you in your views, so ably expressed in the Advocate, in regard to Unification and other live issues in our Southern Methodist Church at this time. You are wielding a powerful pen, and have given not a few unanswerable arguments for letting our two American Methodisms remain related to each other in fraternal fellowship as at present. I cannot think that the M. E. Church, South, could possibly be benefited by becoming a small part of the sister Church, and her existence lost in the larger organization. Let the two Churches go on as they have gone since the separation, and our God will, as he has all along, continue to bless each in her own field of labor. As Sam Steel exhorts you, "Keep it up," to the end that our Church may be undisturbed in the splendid work she is doing for the Master.

By the way, that clear-cut and wholly true article of Brother W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, in last week's Advocate is exceedingly refreshing and deserves all the praise you have given it. That the Editor of Zion's Herald of Boston, the "Hub of the Universe," failed to publish "An Open Letter to Dr. Mudge," not even acknowledging its reception, shows anything else than the fraternal spirit. It may be best for our two Methodisms not to get too deeply in love with one another through the unification plan. Let us love each other as brethren, and each run our own house.

New Orleans, La. JOHN T. SAWYER.

THE PHANTOM OF SUMMER.

Willie Conger Page.

"Yes, I am the Phantom of the Summer days, gone by,
You met me by the seaside, where the gulls like spirits fly;
On the mountain-top we saw the glory of the sun's first rays,
The shadows deepening in the valley, saw the close of happy days.

"Together we saw the wine of joy sparkle in the crystal bail,
Goldenrod burst into flame, the rose and myrtle crimson by the wall,
You'll bear my impress—star-shine, tear-stain—for Love found you on the way;
I am but a mile-stone on your journey. The call has come—I must obey.

"I go with pilgrim's pack of these dear memories in my hand,
In pilgrim's sandals tread out to the far-off distant land—
If you've done good or ill, the records here will tell,
To rose-hued dreams and the untelling stars to guard you. Farewell."

HEADACHES AND OTHER ACHES AND PAINS.

Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are willing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains, and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad after-effects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nerves pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

MARTHA R. NESMITH was born on July 7, 1841, and departed this life on July 22, 1917. Sister Nesmith was married early in life to Mr. C. R. Nesmith, and to this happy union were born five children, one of whom died early in life; and the remaining four—two sons, Mr. C. B. Nesmith and Mr. Early Nesmith, and two daughters, Mrs. C. B. Darden and Mrs. Wade, of Natchez—survive their mother. Sister Nesmith was a lifelong Methodist. She united with the Church in her youth and lived a consistent Christian life, being always true to the Church. She was buried in the family cemetery at Buch Grove, Miss., to await the resurrection morn.

J. W. PRICE, P. C.

CORNELIUS R. NESMITH was born on Nov. 14, 1839, and departed from his earthly home on Nov. 10, 1917. Brother Nesmith heard the call of his country in 1861, answered the call, and served as a Confederate soldier for four years—until the close of the war. He was made a captain because of the brave and efficient service which he rendered. Early in life he joined the Methodist Church and remained a Methodist throughout his long life. He leaves four children and many friends. The county and the Church have lost a strong man. He was buried in the family burying-ground at Buch Grove, Miss., on Nov. 11, 1917. Sleep on, Brother, until the resurrection morn.

His pastor,
J. W. PRICE.

On Nov. 6, 1917, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., the death angel came to the home of our well beloved sister, Mrs. Hettie (Hoss) Martin, and took her. She was born on June 22, 1873, near Longwood. She united with the Munnerlyn Chapel Church in 1887. She is survived by one brother, A. J. Hoss; her husband, A. G. Martin, 6 step-children, 8 grandchildren, and 1 great-grandchild. Not having any children of her own, she devoted her time and self unreservedly to the care of her foster children. She was a kind and loving wife, a dutiful neighbor, and a never-tiring mother to all who came in contact with her. As they wept for Tabitha on account of her good works, so many a heart is sad on account of her death. Rest on, dear one, until the Master shall call all the redeemed home.

(Rev.) E. B. DANIEL.

SARENA ADELOIDE WILKINSON, the fifth daughter of John H. and S. A. Hedrick, was born on June 13, 1849, at Vasges plantation. She was married to Mr. L. H. Wilkinson on Dec. 18, 1868, and to this union were born seven children, five of whom are still living—J. C. Wilkinson, Robert Wilkinson, L. H. Wilkinson, Sam Wilkinson, and Mrs. Lillian Valentine. Sister Wilkinson is survived by her husband. She joined the M. E. Church, South, when 12 years of age at the Brandywine Church and devoted her entire life to the service of her Lord and Master. She was a devoted Christian woman, being one of the most consistent Christians that this writer has ever known. She was loved by all who knew her. She lived as near like her Lord as she could, in that she "went about doing good." On Nov. 19, 1916, the good Lord said, "It is enough," and called her home to rest. We buried her in the Port Gibson cemetery on Nov. 20, 1916, to await the resurrection morn, when the dead in Christ shall rise. Sleep on, dear Sister; husband, children, sisters, brothers, and friends hope to see you some bright day after awhile.

Her pastor, J. W. PRICE.

Little MARY FRANCES WATSON came into the home of her parents, Mr. William Stone Watson and Mrs. Mary Vest Watson, on the 15th day of September, 1915. About two months after she came, her splendid and noble-hearted father, in the very prime of life, with a bright future before him, crossed over the river to await the coming of loved ones. On this precious little girl the mother bestowed all the wealth of her affection, and, in caring for her, found a respite from the sorrow caused by the death of her husband. On Sunday afternoon, Oct. 15, 1917, after having attended Sunday school with her mother, in the forenoon, she was taken suddenly ill, and the next afternoon she returned to God and to rejoin her father, where they both await the coming of the mother and the other two girls. During these two years and one month her little life shed much sunshine and gave much joy to the home, and her going hence casts shadows that only the face and voice of Jesus will brighten. With His help the other members of the family will keep their faces towards the Father's house, and after awhile they will all be united in an unbroken circle in the home of the good.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

Mrs. ELLA COUNCIL BERTHEA, the subject of this sketch, was born in Flora, Miss., on Nov. 8, 1854, and died in New Orleans, La., on Oct. 29, 1917. She came of that good old Southern stock which has made our Southland famous for its intelligence and magnanimity. She was a lifelong Methodist and died triumphant in the Christian faith. She was buried at Slidell, La., on Nov. 2, 1917. Her children and grandchildren showed their great love for her by coming so far to her funeral. Her son, George W., came from Newport News, Va., and Mrs. Edw. Kirsch from Cincinnati, Ohio, while her two grandsons, Fred and Chas. Fogg, came from Detroit, Mich. A large concourse of friends and relatives followed her body to its final resting place, thereby attesting to the high esteem in which she was held. Many have been her trials, but she overcame them all, and gave to the world a pure life and a noble Christian character, which had been her shield in life's battles. While we shall meet her no more here, and may think of her as one loved and lost, beyond the sunset's radiant glow she still lives and waits to welcome us to the eternal home of the soul.

Her pastor, T. J. EMBREE.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Resolutions on the death of Brother W. C. Ellis, by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Florence charge, Jackson District, Mississippi Conference.)

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in His wisdom, has called from us to his reward one of our faithful members, a steward and co-laborer in the Master's cause, Brother W. C. Ellis; and whereas, he will be greatly missed in the church and community; therefore be it resolved

(1) That the wisdom and ability which he has exercised in the church and community, in service, contributions, and counsel, will be held in grateful remembrance.

(2) That the removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by all the members of this body, and will prove a serious loss to the Church and general public.

(3) That with deep sympathy for the bereaved relatives of the deceased, we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for our good by Him who doeth all things well.

(4) That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the pages of the Quarterly Conference Record, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy to the bereaved family.

Signed: J. B. King, P. C.; J. H. Singletary, J. I. Long, N. B. Singletary, P. H. Hale, W. G. Cooper, W. B. Price, J. H. Loflin, E. P. Harper, J. H. Shack.

THE CHURCH BEHIND THE ARMY.

Putting the inspiration of a militant religion into the morale of the American forces at the front is the object of a campaign now being launched by the American Churches, which will put a Testament into the hands of every American soldier and sailor. The American Bible Society, which has assumed the responsibility of raising a fund of $400,000 to cover the cost, is getting out a special soldier's edition—free from the usual trappings of gilt and morocco, khaki-bound, easy to handle and to read—a book for the fighting man.

Those who are accustomed to think of Christianity as a milk and water affair will be interested in reports from the front. The Y. M. C. A., which will be one of the principal distributing agencies for the Testaments, reports that the Bible is the most popular book in the trenches, and that the demand far outdistances the present supply. The trials and temptations of war make a demand on the spiritual stamina of men, and everywhere there is a turning toward old values and old virtues.

It is perhaps the emphasis on sacrifice, on the trivial value of life, as compared with great principles, which makes the Christian religion so comforting and sustaining to the man in the trenches. "He that loveth his life shall lose it," says the Book; "And he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it to life eternal." Confidence in immortality, belief in a force stronger than ourselves, "which makes for righteousness," purity, courage, and loyalty—these are the things which make armies formidable, preserve morale, win wars.

A recent number of the Literary Digest reports Admiral Sir John Jellico to have sent these words to the British navy: "Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God will keep thee whithersoever thou goest. Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king!"

Commander-in-Chief Pershing clearly recognizes the significance of religion as a force for the preservation of morale among the troops. "Hardships will be your lot," he writes to an American soldier. "But trust in God will give you comfort. Temptations will befall you, but faith in our Savior will give you strength."

Men facing danger and death feel no flippancy about religion. Instead, there is everywhere a groping toward light, a demand for further understanding of life's paradoxes and sacrifices. If the Church can meet that demand, it will perform a service for the fighting forces of Uncle Sam not second to that which satisfies physical needs. This campaign, which is to be concentrated into the period between December 1st and 11th, should have the support of every patriotic Christian American.

OUR METHODIST COLLEGES.

Concerning the student enrollment of our Church schools, Mr. W. E. Hogan, Assistant Secretary of Education, says:

"During the past summer there was carried on a remarkable campaign in the interest of enrollment for institutions of higher learning. All of our Southern Methodist colleges participated to a greater or less extent in this nation-wide educational propaganda. The present enrolment in our colleges shows the gratifying results of this organized effort to keep the greatest possible number of students in our colleges.

"Reports just received from fifty-three of the fifty-five colleges, including junior colleges, of our Church disclose the following facts:

"1. Thirty-one of the fifty-three colleges report an enrollment larger than that of last year. In three others the attendance is the same as it was last year. The increase is from two to thirty-five per cent. Nineteen colleges have more than ten per cent increase in attendance, ten have more than twenty per cent increase, and two have more than thirty per cent increase.

"2. As was to be expected, the falling-off in attendance is at colleges for men and coeducational institutions. Only two colleges for women have decreased in enrolment, and only five coeducational institutions report a decrease in number of girls. Four colleges report an increase in the number of boys.

"3. In the nineteen colleges which have a smaller attendance than last year the amount of decrease varies from two to thirty-five per cent, although only one has a decrease of as much as thirty per cent; in eleven the decrease is between twenty and thirty per cent.

"4. A number of colleges for women would now have more students if they had the dormitories to accommodate them. While the blank used in collecting this information did not call for it, several colleges reported that girls were refused admission for lack of room."

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever and the grip, is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.—Adv.

THE LOUISIANA ORPHANAGE VISITOR.

To-day we are printing another edition of The Louisiana Orphanage Visitor, the little newspaper issued quarterly by the superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage, located in this city. This little Visitor, which is printed in six pages this time, will be a welcome guest in the homes of thousands of Methodist families in Louisiana. It will tell them of the manner in which their institution for the care of poor little orphan children is being conducted, and will acknowledge the receipt of amounts of money and supplies recently furnished the Home. There may be larger and more pretentious institutions for the care of orphan children—there are over one hundred in this one—but we do not believe that there is one better and more economically kept than is this one in Ruston. There is none whose superintendent devotes more of his time and painstaking care to each little child entrusted to him than does Superintendent Robert W. Vaughan of the Ruston Methodist Orphanage.—Ruston (La.) Daily Leader.

SHINING IN THE DARK.

A candle flame is not noticed at all when the sun is shining, but what a world of help and comfort there is in its steady light when all around is darkness! The girl who always keeps cheerful may not attract much attention when everything is going pleasantly, but if trouble comes, her bright face is as welcome as a sunbeam, and her cheery courage helps all who come near.

SELF-POISONING.

Did you know that when you allow a slight case of constipation to continue you are poisoning yourself? The pores of your skin cannot carry off all the impurities of your body, and you should never force them to do more than their share by not keeping your bowels open. When constipated take Van Lax for your liver. It cleanses your entire digestive system. It does not gripe or nauseate. Contains no Calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant in taste and results. It is the ideal treatment for constipation and auto-intoxication or self-poisoning. Try it. Sold everywhere in bottles 50c. PROF. JAMES M. GRAY, D.D.

PROPHECY and the World War

IN these days of universal tribulation, the world has been looking for some authoritative voice to speak. It looked not for a Prophet, but for an Interpreter of the Prophets—for one who, by reason of his eminence in the study of God's Word, could speak and command attention; one of whose Christianity there could he no douht. The Church, regarding Prophecy as a sealed book, had put it aside as an unprofitable study, although the Saviour during his ministry on earth constantly referred to the prophets in illustration of his teachings.

Now, at the crisis, a fearless Expositor has appeared. In the articles hy Dr. Gray now appearing in the Christian Herald, the great prophetic themes are dealt with by the master hand of a consecrated writer, whose interpretations are made in the spirit of inspiration. He shows convincingly that we are living in the days of prophetic fulfilment.

What are those vital questions which all earnest men and women who desire to learn more of the Divine will for this earth, and its rulers, and peoples, want to know? Do they not ask —How is the present war related to Prophecy?

—Has the United States a place in Prophecy?
—Is this war to end in Armageddon?
—What of the Millennium, and when?
—Who is Antichrist?
—What is meant by "The Kingdom"?
—Is Turkey assigned a role in Prophecy?
—What is the right attitude of God's people toward Prophecy, and in what consists the duty of preparation?
—What is the Restitution?
—When will the "Times of the Gentiles" end?
—When will the Lost Tribes return?
—What shall be the fate of Papal Rome?
—Is Germany an agent in Prophecy?
—Are the Anglo-Saxon nations identified in Prophecy?
—What is the true teaching concerning the Second Coming?
—Is Russia identified in Prophecy?
—Which nation or power is prophetic Babylon?
—What is the "End of the Age"?
—What is the Restoration, and when?

These are only a few of the many questions answered in the

Little SPENCER AUGUSTUS DELEE, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Delee, was born on May 10, 1917, and died on November 16, 1917, aged six months and six days. The One who is high over all saw fit in His infinite wisdom to call this little, tender flower from Brother and Sister Delee and plant it in his beautiful garden above to bloom, making heaven sweeter through all eternity. Jesus emphatically said, "For of such is the kingdom of heaven." We can not understand why God took the little one; but we know that our Heavenly Father doeth all things well, and may His grace enable those who sorrow to say, "Thy will be done."

Felixville, La. A FRIEND.

Mrs. MARTHA FORD (nee Owen) was born on May 17, 1838, and departed this life on October 31, 1917, being 79 years, 5 months, and 14 days old. In 1857 she was married to Mr. George Ross, and he died in 1860. In 1869 she was married to Rev. Middleton Ford. He died in 1886, and since his death she had made her home with her children. She had been in bad health for two and one-half years, suffering with heart trouble, but she became worse on September 15. Everything that kind hands could do was done, but to no avail. She became a member of the Methodist Church at an early age, and lived a consistent, faithful life until she was called to the home of the good. It was so hard to give "Grandma" up, and oh, how we miss her sweet face; but we can realize our loss is Heaven's gain. She is survived by one son, five daughters, thirty-three grandchildren, ten great-grandchildren, and one sister. May her children look to Jesus and trust in the sweet promises of God's eternal truth for help and strength to help them bear up under their trials. Rev. B. W. Lewis, of Utica, conducted the funeral service.

By her GRANDDAUGHTER.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. JESSIE PORTER WILSON, was born in Windsor, Ontario, on November 28, 1886, and died in Natchez, Miss., on October 19, 1917. In 1891, she moved to Natchez with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Porter, where she has since resided. In the sixteenth year of her age she united with the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, of which she was a devoted and consistent member to the end of her earthly life. Immediately after her conversion she entered into active religious work as a teacher in the Sunday school, and in the Epworth League. Later, she became actively identified with the Woman's Missionary Society, serving as treasurer and as president, and became widely known for her consecrated activity as Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society for the Port Gibson District. On March 24, 1914, she was happily united in marriage to Mr. Otis L. Wilson, who, with two young children, a daughter, aged two years, and a son, aged five months, survives her. Having made the all-important decision for Christ early in life, she developed a character of unusual strength and beauty. Her devotion to the Church of her choice was evidenced by her remarkable fidelity to all of its claims and interests. In the prime of life, while apparently in the best of health, she was suddenly stricken with an incurable disease. Noted specialists from a distance were summoned and every effort that love and skill could devise were tried in vain. Having learned the secret of an undaunted faith in Him "who is able to keep that which she had committed unto Him," she met death in great peace and triumph. It was the privilege of the writer to visit her often and pray with her during her last illness, and the gentleness and beauty of her life were remarkable. Besides her husband and children and parents, she leaves three sisters, Mrs. L. T. Kennedy, Mrs. Leslie Kaiser and Miss Mabel Porter. She will be sorely missed by those who loved her devotedly and by the community in which she lived. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor in the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, which was filled with friends, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery to await the resurrection of the just. Her departure is but a link forged by the hand of God in the chain that binds the family on earth to the family in heaven. May the God of all hope and comfort sustain them and finally bring them without the loss of one into the Eternal City! C. F. EMERY.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

Whereas, since our last meeting, sorrow has visited the home of our devoted President, Mrs. Vest, in the death of her son, Willie Vest, which occurred on Monday, Oct. 29; therefore be it resolved by the Methodist Missionary Society of Lake Comorant:

(1) That we extend our deepest and tenderest sympathy to the family, and to his devoted mother, a beautiful Christian character, being conscious of the deep affection that bound her to her son, and of her passionate and sacrificial love for him.

(2) That we extend to his many friends our sincere condolence.

(3) That these resolutions be inscribed on a page of our Minutes, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy to the family.

Signed by all the members of the Lake Comorant Missionary Society.

CONFIDENCE IN GOD.

Nature is not always serene, but God's promise of seed time and harvest fails not. The lilies of the field are as beautiful to-day as when Jesus pointed to them as an indication of God's love for the beautiful and God's greater care for His own children. We, like the psalmist of long ago, may still lift up our eyes to the mountains and realize that our help comes from Jehovah. If we approach "God's beautiful out-of-doors" with an open mind we are forced to the conclusion that there is a power controlling the universe which is wise and beneficent, and who, we may also learn from Jesus Christ, is forever loving, too.—Howard A. Bridgeman.

"Special providences are only God's every-day acts made visible to us."

LETTERS FROM RHEUMATICS.

Possibly you have imagined that you could never get your consent to write a testimonial letter, but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of Rheumatism you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including Indigestion, Gout, Uric Acid Poisoning and Liver and Kidney diseases, but no patrons of the Spring are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water than those who have been relieved of their Rheumatism. Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the Management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism or any curable disease accept the guarantee offered below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

NUX, IRON, PEPSIN AND SARSAPARILLA

The combination of two great medicines, Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron, by taking them in conjunction, one before eating and the other after, brings into co-operation the above-named substances, best for the blood, nerves and digestive organs.

This combination is especially recommended in cases that are scrofulous, or rheumatic, anemic and nervous, or where the blood is both impure and pale, deficient in iron—one of the most common disease conditions of the present day.

In cases where a laxative is needed, Hood's Pills should be taken. They work in perfect harmony with Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron, and are mild and efficient

Sunday School

NEW ORLEANS SOUTHERN METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

As I stood looking out into the faces of the 562 Methodist Sunday school pastors, superintendents, officers, teachers, and pupils congregated in the spacious auditorium of First Methodist Church last Sunday afternoon, I could but remark to a fellow-speaker on the program "This is the end of a perfect day." (For it marked the close of the writer's field work for this Conference year.)

Knowing the class of institute work done in the meetings preceding the mass meeting, I am confident that this year's work in the New Orleans city-wide Methodist Institute marks a period of considerable advancement for the new Conference year 1917-1918.

Reports came in like this: "Our school has promoted only one pupil from this teen-age department who had not become a member of the church before promotion;" "Twenty have joined the Church from our teen-age department this year;" "Fifty are in our teen-age department, only eight of whom are not members of the Church now;" "At promotion we had a valedictorian who made a splendid address;" "Three hundred dollars were paid by our teen-age department on the church debt." I could go on and use more space than can advisedly be allotted to me, reciting reports which go to prove beyond a doubt that New Orleans, in every department of her Sunday school work, is abreast of the times, and that the forces in Southern Methodism, from presiding elder down, are taking the work seriously and are attaching a deserved importance to doing work worth while. Did I say presiding elder? Well, yes. His heart is in the work, his mind is capable of formulating plans, and his ability for leadership is so thoroughly appreciated by New Orleans Methodism that he has the necessary co-operation for obtaining desired results in Sunday school improvement. Then, too, there is an advantage over against numerous disadvantages in our New Orleans Methodism, in that the forces and churches are within close reach of each other, and if the forces should for any reason need to be brought together under one roof it can be done.

Next in order comes our city pastors, and our superintendents, together with the departmental superintendents. There are too many of them, and too many good things to be said of each of them for me to give personal mention; but, judging from what I saw and heard, the aforementioned force is about everything I called the presiding elder, and only by the splendid co-operation of the teachers, and the student body of our schools, with their splendid loyalty manifested, could we have begun a Sunday School Institute with 213 present by actual count at the opening session and an attendance of 562 at the close.

Plans have been made for considerable improvement. A systematic campaign for thorough organization and enrollment of classes eligible for Wesley Bible Class Certificates—this is to be done with a view to getting into and keeping in closer touch with our Methodist constituency in the Crescent City.

If it were not for making this article too long, I would like to make personal mention of many who contributed so materially to the success of the Institute. Suffice it to say that all who had the privilege of doing the thing assigned them left nothing undone that would in any way help the visitors being inspired to give the best that was in them.

Dr. Chas. D. Bulla and Mr. A. L. Dietrich were present. We put them through, and they met every demand as only men of their caliber can.

Four hundred for the reception, 200 for every session of Institute work, and 1000 for the mass meeting in 1918 is what some are planning for. We are at work on it now, and, with twelve months in which to put the thing over. It can be done, and, if it can be done, New Orleans will do it.

Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, General Superintendent Elementary Department of our Church, has just completed a tour of the State in company with Miss Neil Richardson, and a later article will tell something of the splendid work done on this tour.

WOMEN ARE NEEDED

TO HELP IN WAR.

Women can be usefully employed in nursing the wounded, in making up the soldiers' kits, and a thousand other ways. Many American women are weak, pale or anemic from woman's ills. For young girls just entering womanhood; for women at the critical time; nursing mothers and every woman who is "run-down," tired or over-worked—Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a special, safe and certain help. It can now be had in tablet form.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and found it would do what it is recommended to do. It did me more good than the doctors; I had several and none of them did me any good. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the only thing for weak, broken-down women. I feel like a new woman after taking it. I weigh 155 lbs. and never felt better in my life."—MRS. AGNES TATUM, 175 L. Green St.

WILTON, ALA.—"My little girl, Kathleen, had been sick with La Grippe and when she got over it she was taken with a breaking-out all over. We had the family doctor, but he did not seem to do her any good. I got a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Medical Discovery and gave it to her. One bottle cured her and she has been in better health than ever, and has never been bothered with the breaking-out since. I will recommend the 'Discovery' to anyone."—MRS. MAMIE MCDONOUGH.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 862D Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

We are not poorer, but richer, because we have through many ages rested one day in seven. That day is not lost. While industry is suspended, while the plow lies in the furrow, while the exchange is silent, while no smoke ascends from the factory, a process is going on as important to the wealth of the nation as any process which is performed on more busy days. Man, the machine of machines, is repairing and winding up, so that he returns to his labors on Monday with clearer intellect, with livelier spirits, with renewed vigor.—Lord Macaulay.

HELP THE HOME BASE OFFICE.

The postage bill of the Home Base Secretary is, under normal conditions, about twelve hundred dollars a year; hence the increased rates are of very great moment. Economy must be exercised in every way possible, and the missionary women everywhere are asked to help meet the situation by observing the following rules:

1. Receipts will not be sent to those paying bills unless stamps for postage accompanies payment.
2. Send price of all supplies with order, that bills may not have to be sent.
3. Whenever possible, send postage for free literature. The Woman's Missionary Council provides the workers with a great deal of free literature and has not required postage. If each one ordering would make a small allowance for postage, it would help to relieve the serious situation in the office.

A CALL TO CHRISTIAN WOMEN.

It is perfectly possible to secure prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor in the United States by Federal amendments to the Constitution of the United States, which has already passed the Senate and goes to the House in December. Who is your Congressman? Where does he stand on this question? He will be influenced by his constituency, among whom are liquor men who will leave no stone unturned to secure their ends and profit. Their first argument is that the license revenue amounts to $300,000,000 yearly. They do not mention that, as a result of their traffic, we—you and I—pay tax bills every year which are, at the lowest figures, ten times the amount they pay into our treasury. They say nothing of the enormous quantities of grain which they use for beer and the vast stores of sugar they are consuming. They argue the rights of the laboring man for his dram. Will you speak for the rights of the laboring man's mother, his wife and his children? We have a semi-war prohibition law which protects our boys at camp in this country. It is not enough. The same law should protect young manhood everywhere.

There are certain things that you can do—you who read this. You must act immediately and as though the whole success of the movement depended upon you. It is important that meetings be held throughout the country between now and December 15 to secure action in favor of this amendment. Organize the strongest possible committee at once in your town or city, including all churches and organizations of men and women, if possible.

1. Write to, and, if necessary, advertise in, your local papers. For information regarding the advertising plans of the Federal Council of Churches, address Mr. Charles Stitzle, 105 E. 22nd St., New York City.
2. Ask your minister to preach on the subject, and secure action by your church.
3. Urge prominent men in your locality to write to their Congressmen and work for State legislation, if necessary.
4. Plan for great mass meetings and send telegrams from the meeting to the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., and to the State Legislature through your representative or Congressman.
5. Pray singly and in groups for wisdom, persistence and courage to abolish this curse forever.
6. Secure action in as many men's organizations as possible—Y. M. C. A., Board of Trade, men's Bible classes, and clubs.

When planning for a mass meeting, try to secure a really effective speaker. If this is not possible, plan your program, select a fine chairman for the meeting, and limit everybody strictly to time. Be sure the people selected have voice enough to be heard and can speak to the point. Arrange for a large choir, led by a band, to sing patriotic songs.

Send a report of your meeting and action to M. H. Leavis, West Medford, Massachusetts.

Signed: Mrs. J. H. Moore, President Federation Woman's Foreign Mission Boards of N. A.; Mrs. Fred Bennett, Chairman Council of Women for Home Missions; Miss Anna Gordon, National President, W. C. T. U.; Mrs. H. R. Steele, member Executive Committee, Federation Foreign Mission Boards of North America.

For the assistance of any one who wishes to plan for the mass meeting mentioned above an excellent program has been prepared and same will be forwarded upon application being made to the editor of this department.

WHY SOUTH AMERICA NEEDS CHRISTIANITY.

Every effort has been made by Roman priests to prevent the spread of evangelical truth. The Bible is pronounced an immoral book and the priests seize every opportunity to destroy it.

There is startling irreverence of expression even in the most "religious" countries. One comes upon such signs as "Butcher Shop of the Holy Spirit," "Furniture Shop of the Savior."

There are several million Indians and other native peoples who have not been reached by any church whatever and are as pagan as any tribe in the heart of Africa.

In any one of the ten republics of South America a missionary could have a city and dozens of towns for his parish. In some of the countries he could have one or two provinces without touching the field of any other evangelical worker.

There are more ordained ministers in the State of Iowa than in all South America, with Mexico and Central America added.—World Outlook.

Why Don't You Smile?

Are you melancholy, and pessimistic, wearing a disagreeable frown on your face? The trouble is with your liver. If you had an active and healthy liver you would be cheerful and happy. The well-known reliable remedy, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator makes lazy livers active and restores that smile to your face. If you have a sluggish liver, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator will rectify the trouble, relieving you of the possible dangers of auto-intoxication or self-poisoning which is the inevitable result of habitual constipation. RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, we, the stewards and officers of the Shiloh charge, Newton District, Miss. Conf., are deeply appreciative of Brother W. L. Linfield's faithful service as presiding elder; therefore be it resolved:

(1) That we heartily endorse his stand against sin and unrighteousness.

(2) That we earnestly request that he be returned to our district.

(3) That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our Minutes, a copy be sent to his family, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy, costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations, can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 65 cents and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effectual, pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

All Choked Up With Catarrh? Why Continue Makeshift Treatment?

Sprays and douches will never cure you.

Catarrh is annoying enough when it chokes up your nostrils and air passages, causing painful and difficult breathing and other discomforts. But the real danger comes when it reaches down into your lungs.

This is why you should at once realize the importance of the proper treatment, and lose no time experimenting with worthless remedies which touch only the surface. To be rid of Catarrh, you must drive the disease germs out of your blood.

Splendid results have been reported from the use of S. S. S., which completely routs from your blood the Catarrh germs, for which it is a perfect antidote.

Iron Is Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

A Secret of the Great Endurance and Powers of Athletes

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician who has studied widely both in this country and Great European Medical Institutions when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Field

Perth, Miss. (Nebo charge, Miss. Conf.)

Dear Dr. Meek: This has been an unusually good year with us on the Nebo charge, not so much because of additions, for nearly every one on this circuit belongs to some religious denomination now, but because so many backsliders have been reclaimed, and, openly confessing their wrongdoings, have promised at the same time to lead better lives, and have asked that they may have the earnest prayers of God's people. Christians also were considerably strengthened in the true faith. Our revivals were deeply spiritual. The Holy Ghost with his lightning bolts of conviction was present in every meeting, and showed himself master of the situation on every occasion. These gracious refreshings pitched the spiritual fervor high, which in return resulted in establishing and re-establishing family altars, in running the Conference collections up in advance of last year, and in sending several subscriptions to the Advocate at the same time. I would like to see the Christian Advocate in every Methodist home on this charge. Well, Doctor, the tangible results during the year were 36 members added to the Church, together with a great many conversions and reclamations. To God, our Heavenly Father, be all the praise, honor, and glory.—N. S. Loftus, P. C.

Biloxi, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are just finishing our year's work on Back Bay and Wolf River Mission. The Lord has been with us and has blessed us graciously all during the year. Our first meeting was held at Finley. We had a glorious revival, and there were four accessions to the Church. From there we went to Big Ridge, on Back Bay. We had an old-time revival there, and all took part in it. Brother R. A. Allums did the preaching, and 36 members were added to the Church. Some of them were Baptists, Catholics, Campbellites, and Christian Scientists. When we went to Big Ridge at the first of the year, we had no house of worship except a union church, which was just about half finished. With the help of Brother J. R. Jones, our dear presiding elder, and Brother W. T. Griffin, we secured a building at Utle for a Methodist Church, provided we would finish it. We have all the material on the ground to complete it. This was donated by Brothers Colmer, Dantzler and Wood, of Moss Point, Miss. We expect to have it finished by the last of the year, and then we can say that we have the finest and most beautiful country church in the Mississippi Conference.

Last, but not least, we have baptized about 70 babies during the year, and expect to make a full report at Conference.—L. Fayard, P. C.

Jena, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Just ten months ago to-day I got started in my work as Conference evangelist, and have only one more week's work before Conference.

The year has been pleasant, but strenuous. I have already preached six hundred and forty times, although I was sick for nearly a month in the spring. I have spent almost every day in a meeting and have led as many as five services a day. I held one camp meeting, preaching four times a day for ten days, except four sermons preached by another brother.

I have had about twenty-five hundred people accept the Savior in these meetings, but that looks like a puny year's work compared with the results gotten by the great Mr. Sunday. However, I've done my best.

A number of young men have given themselves to the Lord for the ministry, and several young women have consecrated themseves to Him for mission work.

My application has been accepted for a chaplaincy in the army, though I have temporarily withdrawn it, because I did not think I could stand the camp life just now.

I hope to be reappointed to the Conference evangelistic work and have already begun making my slate for next year, giving the dates, conditioned on my reappointment to the work.

The brethren have been very, very kind to me. I could not help all who offered me work, but I have done all that I could toward it. Their kind words have helped me to bear many a cross with greater ease. May the Lord abundantly reward them!

I have been aided and helped in many ways by a host of men and women over this State who compose the laity—not all of them in our Church, either. May God, our Father, give unto them His choicest blessings. I remember them daily.

Fraternally,
HENRY T. YOUNG.

P. S.—I am ready to discuss dates for the winter and spring with any brother anywhere, conditioned as mentioned above.

Second Methodist Church, N. O.

With the consent of the forces of the Advocate, at the close of this, my second year's pastorate, I should like to give a brief notice of our work.

With a sense of the ponderous tasks and of the mighty problems with which a down-town city church is confronted, and with a keen sense of inability to cope with the issues, we began our work, as many locally know, with many misgivings and grave apprehensions. With a knowledge of scarcely more than the rudiments of the work of the average country pastor, to my utter surprise, I was read out for Second Church. If you think you can, imagine how I felt. My heartbeats were audible, my voice was tremulous, and my hand-shake nervous, as the brethren congratulated me. Never has a schoolboy faced a hard examination with impending doom more certain. But I knew nothing more certain than that I was called to be the servant of the Church, and that the power of God was my only source of comfort and help. So, with stammerings and blunders, the tasks were undertaken. The people have been very charitable and forbearing, and God's favoring hand has been upon us.

Through these weeks and months, not many pastors have had greater evidences of an overshadowing Providence. Some degree of success has been given. We have received forty-five into the Church, but have lost some valuable help. Mothers Wilhelm and Teeis passed over the river last November. This year Mrs. M. Feiger, the president of our Woman's Missionary Society, was called to her reward. There are many in our church who are feeble and infirm, unable to attend church services, but who are rich in the faith and mightily sustain the church. There is a long list of worthies, both pastors and people, who fought, bled and died on the Lord's battlefield here, about whose lives and works many hallowed memories cluster. The pastors of late years have wrought well, and left "footprints upon the sands of time."

Last year all Conference benevolences were paid, and over, with a slight deficit on ministerial support. This year all claims upon the church will be met, and a possible excess is expected. Our Woman's Missionary Society and Sunday school are next to the best in the Conference. We have some loyal and devoted workers, diligent and painstaking in the Lord's business. Our greatest needs are an Epworth League and a men's Bible class. But to-day the harbinger of a better day is dawning for Second Church, and the morning star of a brighter hope is on the horizon. Let all who read these lines breathe a prayer for God's work in this great and needy field.—J. A. Alford, Pastor.

FOR COLDS AND GRIPPE FOLLOW DOCTOR'S ADVICE.

Ask any physician or druggist and he will tell you that the first step in the treatment of a cold, cough or grippe should invariably be "a brisk calomel purgative, preferably the nausealess calomel, called Calotabs." This alone is often sufficient to break up a severe cold over night, or cut short an attack of grippe and possibly prevent pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea, nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished and your entire system is purified and refreshed. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages; price thirty-five cents. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists everywhere. Price refunded if you are not delighted.—Adv.

R. H. BARR HIGHLY COMMENDED.

Whereas the close of this Conference year completes a quadrennium of faithful service by Brother R. H. Barr in the Adams charge, and, whereas, owing to the polity of our Church, he can not serve us longer, but must be sent to another field to continue his labors in the Master's kingdom; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the departure of Brother Barr and his family from our midst brings sorrow and regret to our hearts.

2. That we commend these faithful workers to any charge in our Conference to which they may be sent, praying that the same success which has attended their labors here may crown their efforts in the next charge, and hoping that they may be more liberally rewarded in a material way.

3. That we assure them that our prayers and best wishes will attend them as they go to their new charge.

Signed: J. M. Foster, Steward: S. E. Denman, President Board of Stewards.

Editorial

"If self the wavering balance shake,
It's rarely right adjusted."
—Burns.

• • •

Love is not by any means all gentleness and tenderness. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."

• • •

Without holiness no man is fit to be in the Christian ministry, whatever else may be his attainments. And true holiness means much more than mere outward morality.

• • •

The whoop-'em-up war sermon is a poor substitute for the Gospel of our risen Lord. We can be loyal to our country without sidetracking "Christ and him crucified" in our pulpit messages.

• • •

There is but one plan of salvation. It is the same now that it was in the beginning, and it will be unchanging to the end. What we most need as Christian workers is not to bother so much about the so-called new discoveries of the scholars, but to learn how to be effective in influencing men to accept this plan, apart from which they must perish. As it may help us to lead the unsaved into this glorious way, scholarship is valuable to the ambassador of Christ; but if becomes his chief pursuit and an end in itself, it defeats the fulfillment of his high calling. This latter possibility is undoubtedly one of the perils of the Church in this day. Nothing should trouble a preacher like a spiritually unfruitful ministry.

A MODERN FALLACY.

There are some who talk as if dollars were all that is needed to save the world; but, though money, rightly used, may help in the task of redeeming mankind, it is far from being the only or the chief essential in the achievement of that glorious end. Sound doctrine, a ministry with the mind that was in Christ Jesus, and such obedience to the Divine Word as brings the co-operation of the Holy Spirit are factors of far more importance than mere material funds in making true Christians of those who know not our Lord. Christianizing the nations is a very different work from that of promoting big business and secular enterprises. This is a profound truth that some of the Church leaders of this age seem to have lost sight of. It is a spurious teaching that one religious denomination is about as good as another, and that convictions as to the Scriptures should weigh little or nothing when money can be saved by sacrificing them. Without the Gospel in its deep and full significance, and the living Divine agencies that work through it, all the wealth of the world could not deliver a single nation from sin and make its citizenship Christlike. It is because of the spiritual power that it wields that we want a pure and unadulterated Methodism to continue to sound forth its messages in all the lands of earth.

THE NEW PASTOR.

Many of our charges in Mississippi and Louisiana will have new pastors coming to them within the next two or three weeks. In every instance the new preacher may not be the man that the people would have preferred if they had been allowed to select their own minister; but all should remember that that the pastors assigned to them have not chosen their fields of labor and are not responsible for being sent to the flocks that they have been designated to serve. Our itinerant system, which has been so abundantly vindicated by the unparalleled success of Methodism, is based upon a mutual compact upon the part of the preachers and the churches to leave to the constituted authorities the right to say where the various laborers shall be placed from year to year, and it devolves upon all concerned to adhere faithfully to this agreement. If either party to the compact should undertake to break away from it, the other cannot reasonably he expected to observe it. Nor do we think that there is any merit in the contention that the presiding elder, because he is a minister, cannot properly represent both the preachers and the laity in the cabinet when the appointments are being made. When did the clergy and the lay membership of our Church become so different in nature and so diverse in their interests, that a preacher may not rightly act for the great body of our people in any matter, and that a layman may not worthily represent our ministry in any capacity? This new preachment, has no sound basis in reason, and it is, in our opinion, generating a feeling of needless distrust and doing not a little harm.

In the light of the foregoing statements, if a charge has been placed in the care of a different pastor, it obviously is the duty of the people composing it to welcome him heartily to his new field and seek to make things as comfortable and pleasant for him and his family as possible, that he may speedily take up the work in his new parish and that the Master's cause may not suffer. Frequent moving is one of the dreaded hardships of the Methodist itinerancy, and it is greatly lessened if the new-comers, upon their arrival, find the parsonage in order, with fires brightly burning, with the pantry well filled, and with a committee on hand to greet them kindly. The Methodists in most places know how to smooth the way for both the outgoing and incoming pastor and never fail to do so; but there are some communities which have not yet learned this noble Methodist art and who need the exhortation that we have given.

One thing more we wish to say. It costs money to move, and, since they do not receive large salaries, preachers entering upon new works are usually pressed financially. So, if any of their new parishioners can manage to pay their quarterage soon after their arrival, it is well to do so. Official boards ought to confer with the new pastors and, if necessary, lend them a helping hand in this respect, without waiting for the quarterly conferences, which may be weeks off, to convene. It is a most unpleasant situation for one, with perhaps a family, to be among strangers, without means, at a time when necessarily many expenditures must be made. A church seldom fails to prosper under the leadership any minister, if it adequately supports him, prays for him, and fully co-operates with him in his efforts to extend the Kingdom of our Lord.

"THE EPISCOPACY SUPREME."

Some time since we called attention to the fact that nearly all of the Northern Methodist official organs had commented sympathetically upon the Eleazer-Fritts agitation in our Church, apparently as if they wished to give it a boost. Now, we desire to say that it was with pleasure that we noted a comment of quite a different character in he Cenral Christian Advocate of November 28. Dr. Cladius B. Spencer, the distinguished editor of that publication resides in Kansas City, Mo., and perhaps understands conditions in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, better than any of his colleagues on the tripods of Northern Methodist journals. The following is Dr. Spencer's impressive utterance, which we commend to some of our Southern Methodist scribes who have been belaboring our Bishops as self-willed and usurping autocrats:

"One of the points contended for in the so-called democratic movement in the Church, South, is that there shall be a fresh understanding between the Missionary Society and the Episcopacy so the Missionary Society will have a greater power in determining who shall man the missions abroad and how, when and where those missionaries shall be appointed. The Bishops for their part maintain that the appointing power inheres in their office, that they cannot divest themselves of that function even if they would, and, so far as the Bishops speaking are concerned, they have no intention of undertaking to do so.

"The position of our own Church is that the power of appointment inheres in the Bishops; and our experience is that no appointment is ever made except by Bishops, nor, so far as we can ascertain, has the plan ever occasioned the slightest discord.

"It would seem that somehow down there a bit of grit had got into an otherwise well working mechanism. There is no doubt in our mind that the General Conference next spring will start things to going again normally. The will to harmony and mutuality seems to be all that is disturbed."

A VISIT TO LAMAR'S GRAVE.

On Monday afternoon, November 26, after the adjournment of the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, in company with several brethren, we wended our way to St. Peter's Cemetery at Oxford, and, after a brief search, stood before the grave of the Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, the renowned jurist, statesman, and orator. The resting-place of this great Mississippian is marked by no perpendicular column, there being above it nothing but a very low incasement or marble or concrete, upon the top of which are simply chiseled his name and the dates of his birth and death. Near by, in a grave similarly incased, sleeps his beloved wife, Mrs. Virginia Lafayette (Longstreet) Lamar, while not far away is an attractive tombstone erected above the grave of his distinguished

A HUNDRED YEARS FROM NOW.

Eugenie De Maurier

The surging sea of human life forever onward rolls,
And years in the eternal shore its daily freight of souls;
Though bravely sails our bark to-day, pale death sits at the prow,
And few shall know we ever lived a hundred years from now.

O mighty human brotherhood! Why fiercely war and strive,
While God's great world has ample room for everything alive?
Broad fields, unmeasured and unclaimed, are waiting for the plow
Of progress that shall make them bloom a hundred years from now.

Why should we try so earnestly in life's short, narrow span,
Our golden stairs so high to climb above our brother man?
Why blindly at an earthly shrine in slavish homage bow?
Our gold will rust, ourselves be dust; a hundred years from now.

Why prize so much the world's applause? Why dread so much its blame?
A fleeting echo is its voice of censure or of fame;
The praise that thrills the heart, the scorn that dyes with shame the brow,
Will be as long-forgotten dreams a hundred years from now.

O patient hearts, that meekly bear your weary load of wrong;
O earnest hearts, that bravely dare, and, striving, grow more strong;
Press on till perfect peace is won; you'll never dream of how
You struggled o'er life's thorny road a hundred years from now.

Grand, lofty souls, who live and toil that freedom, right and truth
Alone may rule the universe, for you in endless youth,
When 'mid the blest, with God you rest, the grateful land shall bow
Above your clay in rev'rent love a hundred years from now.

Earth's empires rise and fall, O time, like breakers on thy shore;
They rush upon thy rocks of doom, go down, and are no more;
The starry wilderness of worlds that gem night's radiant brow
Will light the skies for other eyes a hundred years from now.

O Father, to whose sleepless eyes the past and future stand
An open page, like babes we cling to Thy protecting hand;
Change, sorrow, death are naught to us if we may safely bow
Beneath the shadow of Thy throne a hundred years from now.

RUN THE STRAIGHT RACE.

Rev. J. H. Jowett, D. D.

"Make straight paths for your feet."—Hebrews 12:13.

The nearest way Godward is always the straight way. Any other road takes us out of the way, and we become vagrants in fields of trespasses, and it will be an awful work to get back again. And therefore our first concern, whenever we are face to face with any practical problem, must be to see the straight road. There is such a thing as a crooked mind, and such a mind cannot perceive the path of rectitude. In my boyhood I had a bullet-mould which was not quite "true," and every bullet shared the crookedness of the womb in which it was born. And a crooked mind turns out crooked judgments. And, therefore, if our judgments are to be true, and reflect the holiness of God, our minds must be renewed, there must be "truth in the inward parts." And if the mind has been adjusted to the mind of the Lord, then we can think with assurance when we set out to find the straight road across the wide and perplexing moor. "Show me Thy way, O Lord!"

And now I am interested to notice that the apostle who counsels us to look for the straight path counsels us in the very same chapter to "run the race that is set before us." Find the straight road, then run! We must always keep in motion on the road, and the motion must be swift if it is to be safe. For one thing, it is by motion that we retain our vision. On these great highways of the spirit, when we cease to go we cease to see. To become at ease in Zion is to become blind. And for a second thing, it is only by progress that we can retain our strength. To lie down is to become soft, and we lose the very power of continuance. That is the Nemesis of ease. It saps the springs of perseverance! But our motion must be swift if it is to preserve our sight and our strength. We must run the race that is set before us. Everything must be swift. Our discernment must be swift; "swift to hear." Our desire must be swift: "Be swift, my soul!" Our obedience must be swift: "Take my feet and let them be swift and beautiful for Thee." The angels that excel in strength do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His will.

And in swift movement on God's straight road rest will come of itself. The Lord Himself will look after that. "They shall run and not be weary." Rest is imparted to us while we are on the road. "Ye shall find rest unto your souls." For in these great matters rest is just the invigorating and consoling sense of the presence of the Lord. "They drank of that rock which followed them, and that Rock was Christ."

WILL GOD INTERVENE?

Rev. S. H. Werlein, D. D.

This dreadful and atrocious war into which we as a nation have been forced, which has already resulted in the killing of millions and in which other millions will doubtless fall, still drags on, and multitudes of Christian people are asking why does not God intervene and stop the carnage and bring about peace. Acts of cruelty and injustice so stir us that we naturally wonder why God, possessed of infinite goodness, wisdom, and power, does not arrest the arm that afflicts, and rebuke those who have done the wrong.

We remember the slaughter of the Huguenots. The arch-enemies of these devout servants of the living God conspired to do this great wrong, and God knew their evil intentions, and yet lifted not his hand to prevent it. So Herod decreed the death of the children that were in Bethlehem and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, and Matthew tells us that "In Rama was there a voice heard—lamentation and weeping and great mourning—Rachel weeping for her children and would not be comforted because they are not." So in the beheading of John the Baptist, who was slain by the caprice and cruelty of Herod—the life of this faithful servant of God being snuffed out as of no importance. So in the persecution and crucifixion of our Lord. So in the case of the Apostle Paul, who, according to tradition, was decapitated in the circus of Nero.

Stonewall Jackson was a servant of God, and a man of prayer. He fell at a time when his presence was greatly needed by the Southern army. God did not intervene. Godly people, if exposed to peril, do not seem to have any more assured protection than those who are ungodly. The massacre of the Armenians, God allowed. The atrocities in Belgium by the barbarous Germans are still continued. It is said by some that intervention is not according to God's wisdom.

It is not a question as to whether God has the power. He has given man the power of will, and the power to choose, and for God to intervene would be to prevent the logical results of the use of man's free agency. For a parent to work out the problems of his child would be to dwarf the intellect of the child.

The Word of God declares: "What a man sows, that shall he reap." If God should make this law inoperative, confusion and uncertainty would result. The race of man grows and develops by meeting the results of the deliberate decisions and choices which have been made. Wisdom comes from experience and observation. If penalty is not to follow wrong action, and reward is not to result from right action, moral chaos would be the inevitable result, and there would be no moral government. Intervention on the part of God to prevent the moral and logical results of conduct would be in contravention of the teachings and principles of the Kingdom of God. The child learns that fire will burn by coming in contact with fire. Thus the child learns to be careful and watchful. The great lessons which exercise a dominant influence upon the race have been learned at great cost.

This awful war will enforce great convictions and bring about marvelous changes in the minds of the race. Perhaps it was a dreadful necessity, in order to remove great obstacles which have been for ages standing in the way of the real progress of mankind. The world is learning as never before the significance of the teaching of Christ and its superiority over all other religious standards. The importance of practicing the ethics of the Gospel will be emphasized as never before. The necessity of spiritual regeneration in order to the peace and security of the nations is becoming more and more obvious. If the Church needed to have a larger missionary conscience, and it did, this war will develop it.

But does not the Bible teach that intercessory prayer has been signally answered by God? Does it not teach that at times of great emergency God did intervene? Moses prayed for Israel, and did not God save the people in answer to his servant's prayer? Was it not by God's intervention that the Israelites were led out of Egypt into Palestine? God said to his servant Gideon, "Arise, get thee down unto the host; for I have delivered it into thine hand." By a miracle or by the hand of a great and valorous leader, God has delivered His people. What would long since have befallen us individually, if God had not come between us and peril?

Have we any right to pray for victory? That depends on the cause for which we fight. James the Apostle says: "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." "From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members?" The Apostle here clearly teaches that where the purpose is to glorify self, to pander to lust for power, prayer avails nothing.

President Wilson in his recent proclamation asking that prayer be made for the success of our armies, said: "It behooves a great, free people, nurtured as we have been in the eternal principles of justice and of right, a nation which has sought from the earliest days of its existence to be obedient to the divine teachings which have inspired it in the exercise of its liberties, to turn always to the Supreme Master and cast themselves in faith at his feet, praying for his aid and succor in every hour of trial to the end that the great aims to which our fathers dedicated our power as a people may not perish among men, but always be asserted and defended with fresh ardor and devotion, and through the divine blessing set at last upon enduring foundations for the benefit of all the free peoples of the earth."

Some one says that while we may pray for our cause, there are devout people on the other side who are praying that their army may be blessed by God. Whose prayer will God hear? On Mt. Carmel the prophets of Baal and Ashtaroth prayed. God heard, but did not answer their prayer. Elijah prayed and God responded by sending down fire. God will not answer those whose cause is unjust. They may prevail for a time, but their success will not be permanent. The right will eventually triumph.

During the war of the Crusaders, Moslems prayed and Christians also prayed. Had God given the Crusaders conspicuous triumph over their foes, it would have appeared that God approved the planting of the Cross by the sword. That is not the Christly method of promulgating the Gospel. We know that our cause is just. We have no desire to enlarge our territory nor to do injustice to any other land. We are simply asking the privilege of enjoying our God-given rights, and are determined at any cost to defend them.

It is a lack of faith which discourages many to pray for the interposition of God's power in bringing about such conditions as would end this war, and result in a peace honorable and enduring. Luther did not hesitate to ask of God great things. He felt that the ends of the earth were compassed by his mission, and he poured out his soul before God that wonderful things might be brought to pass. He lived to see the spiritual condition of Europe changed, and it was largely the triumph of his faith. Who can doubt that our Revolutionary fathers were sustained in the unequal war they waged for American freedom by the help of the Lord God? Who can doubt that God sided with the defenders of the American Colonies?

While for His own reason, God seems in many instances to withhold the special help craved, there can be no doubt that in others He does intervene. The Scriptures affirm this with great emphasis, and personal experience and the history of the world corroborate it.

New Orleans, La.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. R. H. Harper.

The Louisiana Conference began its seventy-second session in Minden, La., on Nov. 28, 1917, at 10 o'clock a. m. Minden is an old town in the northwestern section of the State. Its history began in the early part of the past century, as did also the history of the Minden Methodist Church, an interesting sketch of which has already appeared in the Advocate. Minden is within the bounds of the Ruston District, Dr. J. M. Henry, being the presiding elder. Rev. K. W. Dodson was the host of the Conference.

The activities of the Conference really began on Tuesday, Nov. 27, with the arrival of committeemen, and applicants for admission, and undergraduates for the work of the several committees of examination. The majority of the Conference members and delegates had arrived by night, and a large congregation assembled to hear a very able sermon by Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League. Dr. Parker chose as a text the beautiful words, beginning "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden."

First Day—Wednesday, Nov. 28.

The opening devotional service was led by Dr. F. N. Parker, and consisted of singing hymn 19, "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing;" hymn 560, "And Are We Yet Alive?" and hymn 208, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord;" of prayer and a Scripture reading from John 15 by Dr. Parker, and prayer by Rev. J. D. Harper of Opelousas. Dr. Parker made a very timely talk to the Conference, in the course of which he said that, in the very beginning of the session, the brethren should realize the great opportunities and responsibilities before the Church of God. The world is in chaos. A great war is raging. Selfishness is widespread. The time for the prophet has arrived, for the man who sees from God's standpoint. The Conference should be characterized by an intense seriousness, and by earnest prayer that what some one has termed "a Pentecost of calamity" which is upon us may be turned into a Pentecost of blessing by the grace of God.

At the conclusion of Dr. Parker's remarks, Dr. J. M. Henry read a telegram saying that, on account of illness, Bishop Hoss was unable to attend, and that Bishop Murrah would reach the seat of the Conference as soon as possible. Meanwhile, Dr. Henry was directed to open the Conference, and call for the election of a president to serve until the arrival of the Bishop. The Secretary of the preceding Conference, Dr. F. S. Parker, was asked to call the roll. The large proportion of the members of the Conference and a number of lay delegates were found to be present. In the list of delegates from the New Orleans District, the name of Van Carter, alternate, was put in place of Edward Alvis, delegate, not present.

Dr. F. S. Parker was unanimously re-elected Secretary; J. F. Foster and R. H. Harper were elected Assistant Secretaries, and R. W. Vaughan was made Statistical Secretary. Dr. Henry then directed the Conference to vote by secret ballot, according to the Discipline, for a President. The ballot resulted in the election of Dr. F. N. Parker, and he took the chair amid applause and general satisfaction.

W. W. Holmes, for the presiding elders, read the nominations for committees, and they were confirmed by the Conference as follows:

Public Worship—J. M. Henry, K. W. Dodson, and N. R. Grigsby.

Church Publications—W. L. Doss, Jr., S. J. Davies, and H. N. Harrison.

District Conference Records—J. C. Rousseaux, John Sholars, R. S. Walton, George Fox, W. W. Perry, A. J. Gearheard, and C. E. Fike.

Sabbath Observance—C. C. Miller, C. F. Shepard, Alonzo Early, W. F. Henderson, and R. W. Tucker.

Temperance—S. H. Werlein, O. A. Wright, W. W. Drake, H. W. Rickey, and R. E. Bobbitt.

Evangelism—J. G. Snelling, W. W. Drake, Van Carter, and H. N. Brown.

A report was read from the international Committee of the Y. M. C. A., asking the Conference to align itself with this great work among the soldiers. A special committee was ordered to consider the communication, and W. H. Coleman, W. E. Thomas, and Van Carter were named as the committee.

Communications from various general boards were referred to the respective Conference boards and committees. The report from Centenary College by the President, Dr. R. H. Wynn, showed the school to be in good condition. The report from the Orphanage at Ruston showed that great institution to be in a very prosperous condition.

Question 22, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called. Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, reported that the work was making progress, and that all the pastors had been faithful to their trust, and in the discharge of their ministerial duties.

Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, reported forward movements in all departments of the work, and that a number of old debts had been paid on churches and parsonages.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, reported, for the Monroe District, that a large number of the churches had bad gracious revivals, resulting altogether in 1000 conversions. Improvement along all lines of work was also reported.

Rev. W. W. Holmes reported a great year in the New Orleans District. He reported a fine union revival in the beginning of the year, and the organization of a district board of church extension. Most of the churches in New Orleans would report all their assessments in full.

Dr. J. M. Henry reported a good year on the Ruston District. Rev. C. D. Atkinson, of the Shreveport District, stated that only a very small deficit would be reported in the assessments of the District.

Dr. R. H. Bennett, Director of the Correspondence School, was introduced to the Conference, and he made an eloquent address, which held the close attention of the audience throughout. He stressed the importance of ministerial training and interspersed his address with humorous remarks, and again with touching illustrations of the rewards of the ministry.

Dr. J. M. Moore asked only for a few minutes to address the Conference. He spoke of the great needs and opportunities the present disturbed condition of the world has thrust upon the Church, and he especially stressed the need of faithful and efficient workers in France, Italy and Russia.

After announcements from the several boards and committees, adjournment was taken. Dr. Frank Parker pronounced the benediction.

Wednesday night was devoted to the Epworth League Anniversary, presided over by Rev. W. E. Thomas, of New Orleans, President of the Epworth League Board. Mr. Carroway, State President of the Epworth League, made a fine address on the work of the League in Louisiana. Dr. Paul Kern, of the Southern Methodist University, made the chief address of the evening. Dr. Kern is an eloquent and forceful speaker, and his presentation of the League work as an answer to the needs of the young life of the Church was very fine.

Wednesday morning, at 6:30, began the first of the "Morning Watch" services, under the direction of the Conference Committee on Evangelism, composed of J. G. Snelling, W. W. Drake, Van Carter, H. N. Brown and R. O. Randle. The subject for this first service was "Devotional Hour and Personal Life," and the leader was Rev. W. E. Thomas. Despite the dark, rainy morning which ushered in the first day of the Conference, a number were present at this devotional service, which recalled the "sunrise prayer meetings" of the campground.

The program for the succeeding meetings in the early morning was announced as follows:

Thursday morning, 6:30, Bible Study and Spiritual Growth, Rev. R. M. Brown.

Friday morning, 6:30, Personal Service in the Kingdom of God, Rev. W. L. Doss.

Saturday morning, 6:30, Stewardship, Mr. W. M. Spinks.

The Committee on Evangelism also announced the following program for afternoon meetings:

Wednesday afternoon, 3:30, Our Evangelistic Opportunities—ten-minute talks by Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, Rev. J. B. Williams and Rev. H. T. Young.

Thursday afternoon, 3:30, Our Evangelistic Responsibilities, Rev. W. W. Drake and Van Carter.

Friday afternoon, 3:30, Our Evangelistic Plans for 1917-18, Rev. J. G. Snelling.

Thursday's Session, Nov. 29.

The Thanksgiving Day session of the Conference began with a devotional service conducted by Rev. J. D. Harper of Opelousas, Dr. F. N. Parker presiding.

The minutes of the preceding session were read and approved; the roll of absentees of yesterday was called, and the further calling of the roll was ordered to be dispensed with during the remaining sessions.

A fine financial showing for the Woman's Missionary Society was made in the report submitted by Mrs. J. J. Holmes of Minden, Treasurer. The report follows:

Receipts, Oct., 1916, to Oct., 1917—

Alexandria District	$ 1,935.32
Baton Rouge District	657.16
Lafayette District	1,541.84
Monroe District	1,223.22
New Orleans District	1,642.72
Ruston District	1,410.35
Shreveport District	4,390.85
Other contributions	347.26
Total	$13,148.72

The report submitted from Mansfield College showed that institution to be in good condition.

The regular routine of the Conference was taken up, and the names of the superannuates were called. Only two of these worn soldiers of the Cross were present: Rev. R. S. Isbell, who now makes his home at Magnolia, Arkansas, and Rev. H. J. Boltz. Brother Isbell spoke for a few minutes and his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the same relation. Brother Boltz submitted a report of the work he had been doing, and stated that the severe affliction of the throat which had led him to ask for the superannuate relation had been relieved and that he desired to be placed again upon the effective list. In the absence of a motion to refer his name to the Committee, he became effective.

The names of the other superannuates, who could not be present, were read, their characters passed, and they were referred to the Committee for the same relation. A number of these brethren had sent letters to the Conference, which were read by Rev. J. F. Foster. Their names are as follows: J. F. Wynn, F. G. Hocutt, J. L. P. Sheppard, H. Armstrong, J. F. Patterson, T. S. Randle, R. A. Davis, F. N. Sweeney, W. G. Jenkins, and Dr. John T. Sawyer of New Orleans.

Question 22 was resumed, and the names of a number of the brethren were called, their reports heard, and their characters passed. F. B. Hill made an interesting report. He is an Englishman and has two sons in the British Army which is drawing ever nearer to Jerusalem. He said that in England they give thanks at the close as well as at the beginning of a meal, and he set forth his view of a preacher's life in the quaint thanks of an old lady at the close of a meal:

"We thank Thee, Lord, for what we've 'ad;
If it 'ad been more, we should 'ave been glad.
But since the times they be so bad,
We thank Thee, Lord, for what we've 'ad."

There was also present at the Conference a young Englishman who has been doing effective work as a local preacher in New Orleans, holding membership in Parker Memorial Church. He was a Wesleyan lay preacher and since coming to New Orleans several years ago as British Vice-Consul, he has identified himself with the Methodist Church, and has been active in many forms of Christian work. This young man is the Rev. Mr. Goodall.

E. G. Wood and A. A. Phillips were discontinued at their own request.

Dr. John R. Stewart was presented to the Conference, and he spoke in behalf of the Superannuate Endowment Fund.

One of the most interesting features of the session was the address of Prof. J. A. Bray, Secretary of Education of the Colored Methodist Church. He is a Negro of high attainments, and his words made a very fine impression upon the Conference. His flashes of wit were very effective. He declared that the Negro youths were ready to give their lives for their country, and that there had never been any question of the loyalty of the Negro—you always know that he is an American. He also touched the tender chords and dwelt upon the faithfulness of the slaves during the Civil War, and appealed to those who had known and loved "old black mammy" to help the children of "old black mammy." He told something of the schools of his Church and of the work they are doing, and asked, if possible, that the Conference give him $400. Dr. Parker at once made a call for subscriptions, and in a few minutes $455 in cash and subscriptions had been raised.

A Thanksgiving service had been made the order of the day for eleven o'clock. Dr. S. H. Werlein, of New Orleans, had been named as the preacher of the occasion, and his sermon was a fervent and patriotic discussion of the vital issues arising out of the great war now raging, and the manner in which they affect the Church of God.

The close of the Thanksgiving service, which had been made by vote a part of the day's session, marked the adjournment.

Thursday night was devoted to Church Extension. The meeting was in charge of Rev. K. W. Dodson, pastor of the local church and President of the Conference Board of Church Extension. The largest congregation which had yet assembled, and which taxed the capacity of the PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Fourth Day—Saturday Morning.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. D. W. Babb. The Scripture lesson was read from the twelfth chapter of Romans, the hymn was "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing."

The fourth year class was called. M. A. Burns and G. W. McLain were continued in the class of the fourth year. Under call of Question 22—T. L. Houston was represented by his presiding elder who stated that he was detained at home on account of sickness in his family. W. M. Langley was granted the superannuate relation. Rev. R. A. Clark, formerly of this Conference, now of the Memphis Conference, was introduced. Mr. P. T. Callicott read the report of the Joint Board of Finance. A deficit of $82 occurs in the collections for delegates' expenses to General Conference and it was requested that that amount be raised early in the year, that it may be properly appropriated in due time. Mr. Callicott asked for leave of absence, which was granted.

The final ballot resulted in the election of Rev. W. W. Mitchell, clerical delegate to General Conference.

Rev. J. C. Park read a resolution endorsing President Wilson, pledging co-operation in all efforts of the Government, recommending that special prayer be made for those who have gone to the colors and those who shall be called. The resolution was adopted by a rising vote and singing the National hymn, "America."

Rev. J. H. Felts was called to the chair, and presided with ease and dignity. Dr. A. F. Watkins addressed the Conference and brought us good reports from Millsaps College. Jackson is taking great interest in the college. The boys displayed much enthusiasm at the declaration of war. The senior class in unusually full. The course of Bible study in the college has been increased to meet a growing demand for the study of the Bible in schools. There is an increasing interest in the denominational schools. The Greenville District is paying the expenses of one ministerial student in Millsaps College.

The ballot was taken for election of alternate delegates to General Conference and resulted in the election of W. W. Woollard and J. H. Felts, clerical; and Parham Williams, lay.

The Sunday school report showed much interest had been taken throughout the Conference. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney was highly commended for his faithfulness which had been attended with success, and the Board asked for his reappointment as Field Secretary.

Under call of question 2, S. W. Bryant, W. R. Lott, J. H. Mitchell, A. F. Moore, J. W. Robertson, having passed in the prescribed examination, were advanced to the class of the second year. J. T. Simmons and S. W. White, both of whom were absent, were continued in the class of the first year.

The report of the Committee on the Orpbans' Home was read by Rev. T. M. Brownlee, and adopted.

Mrs. Conger, Conference President of the Woman's Missionary Society, was introduced and addressed the Conference, telling of the great progress of the Society in all departments of its work. She came not with a plea, but with expressions of gratitude. The Missionary Society has gone beyond its expectations and the reports show a distinct gain over last year. The one problem with which they have to deal is the follow-up work in holding a society when once organized. The address was received with great applause, which indicated the interest that was being taken in the work.

Hon. G. L. Jones read the report of the committee on Temperance, which was a battle cry of freedom from the evils of the liquor traffic. The report contains resolutions which will be found profitable if you will read them in the Minutes of the Conference. The Conference adjourned to meet at 3 p. m.

Afternoon Session.

Question 22 was called, and Rev. E. S. Lewis made his report from the church at Oxford, whereupon the Bishop arose and said: "The report of the work of the church at Oxford calls up many sacred and tender memories, and to be in the town where I was in years gone-by pastor recalls many faces that are now gone."

When the name of J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, was called he made his report from the college. The college is enjoying the most successful year of its life, having the largest enrollment it has ever had. Forty high school graduates entered this year. The building is crowded and a new dormitory needed. Brother Countiss asked for the furtherance of the enterprise, that the new building may be ready for the opening next fall. The Conference fully endorsed the President. He occupies the place of highest responsibility in the Conference, and is amply fitted by natural endowment and acquired equipment to meet the demands upon him.

T. M. Brownlee made report of his work as commissioner of Grenada College, in which he said: "We have secured $15,000 in cash and subscriptions during the year."

The report on Lay Activities was read by Dr. Dabney Lipscomb. The report contains the following statements: "The laymen's movement is the latest expression of the Church councils..... No other department has done or can do that which has been outlined under the head of Lay Activities.....One of the reasons why the movement has not reached its highest aims is because of the obsoleteness of the Church Conference.... The Committee nominates Dr. Dabney Lipscomb for Conference Lay Leader. Report No. 2 has been published in full.

Question 22 was again called. Many of the brethren gave encouraging reports of their work. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sunday School Field Secretary, had travelled in the interest of the Sunday school work during the year, 10,045 miles, 1455 of which had been by private conveyance, 10 new Sunday schools had been organized. Much progress had been made in the country, to which Brother Gladney had devoted much time; many church building had been enlarged to meet the demands of increasing Sunday schools.

When the name of J. H. Mitchell was called, his name, after many expressions of appreciation and esteem by his presiding elder, L. M. Lipscomb, Bishop Murrah and others, was referred for the superannuate relation.

J. H. Ingram reported a new church building at Ruleville costing $20,000 and out of debt.

Report No. 2 of the Joint Board of Finance was read, in which was a request for an endowment for superannuates and that a layman be placed in the field to raise such fund. Mr. Jack Wilson, who is well known to the Conference, was accordingly chosen, after proper deliberation.

Rev. W. N. Duncan read the report of the Board of Missions. "This has been a good year for missions in that collections were early" (which always means good collections). "The reason there are so many mission charges is because of poor stewardship and inadequate organization." The week preceding Easter is set apart as a week of special prayer for missions.

Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner for Emory University, addressed the Conference. Brother Selby said: "Emory University is a recruiting station for the ministry.....It is the purpose of the University not to employ a teacher who is not a member of some Church.....Emory University is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. A layman said this fact should be stressed for the benefit of the people.....The law and medical schools are as good as any.....I believe in all the institutions of the Church, Grenada College, Millsaps, and the rest, but the greatest single interest of the Methodist Church, east of the Mississippi River is Emory University.....More than twice as many young men are preparing for the ministry in the theological schools of our two universities as we ever have had at one time in Vanderbilt.....May we not be satisfied until we have built equal to Oxford, England!"

Mr. Ralph E. Nollner, Assistant Secretary of Epworth League was introduced and addressed the Conference with reference to the purpose of the Epworth League "Big Drive," which has for its motto, "A League in every charge and every League a standard League."

Many of the brethren seemed to be restless and given to undue haste in the dispatch of business—this the Bishop discouraged and expressed appreciation of the laymen who were present.

The Conference adjourned with the benediction by Bishop Murrah.

Saturday Evening—Evangelistic Meeting.

At 7:30 o'clock the auditorium was filled, and the committee on Evangelism was seated on the rostrum. As the choir rendered a voluntary, "Bells of Heaven," the preacher of the hour appeared and took his place in the pulpit. Rev. W. M. Young presided at this meeting. Hymn, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," was announced. Rev. W. J. O'Bryant led the prayer, invoking blessings upon the preachers and their wives; the laymen; the old veterans who have rallied round the blood-stained banner upon many battle field, that they may shout victory at last, and for the soldier boys upon the field and in the trenches. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev O. W. Bradley. Mr. Templeton sang a solo, the congregation sang "Revive Us Again." Rev. W. M. McIntosh announced the text, "Let him deny himself," and stirred the souls of all present as he preached a great sermon upon the subject, as announced by him, "The Good, the Enemy of the Best."

Fifth Day—Sunday.

The following brethren preached at the several churches in Oxford, on Sunday, morning and evening in the order in which their names appear: At the Methodist Church, Bishop W. B. Murrah and J. A. Hall; Presbyterian Church, E. N. Broyles and W. N. Duncan; Baptist Church, R. O. Brown and W. S. Lagrone; South Street Presbyterian Church, O. W. Bradley and W. L. Graves; M. E. Church, J. A Goad and W. V. Shearer; C. M. E. Church, T. E. Gregory and W. M. Commander. A Y. M. C. A. meeting was conducted at the University Y. M. C. A. Hall, in the afternoon, by Rev R. H. Ruff who is engaged in the Army Y. M. C. A.

At 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning Rev. J. A. Bowen conducted the Conference Love Feast at the Methodist Church. The Lesson was read from the fourth chapter of First John by Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. Revs. S. F. Harkey, W. H. Baker, R. G. Lord, A. T. McIlwain, C. D. McGehee, E. H. Cunningham, Olin Ray and J. J. Baird were called to the chancel and asked to pass the elements to the congregation. It was an old fashioned Love Feast. The young men were asked to talk first. So many were anxious to tell of their love for God and for the brethren that they came near taking up all the time. The older brethren were also full of love and their talks were laden with expressions of love and good will. When the hour for preaching arrived Brother Bowen had to close the service with a number of the older brethren on their feet. It was to our deep regret that their words were not permitted to be heard. The lives of these veterans is a part of the history of our Church.

At eleven o'clock Bishop Murrah announced hymn No. 69, "Safely through another week." Rev. J. C. Park led the prayer. Scripture lessons, First Psalm and Sixth chapter of Matthew, were read by the Bishop. He gave valuable expositions on some of the messages in the N. T. Lesson. Hymn No. , "Come, thou almighty King," was sung. The text is in the third verse of the First Psalm, "Whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." It was a great sermon, upon a timely theme and delivered in a forceful manner. "How Firm a Foundation" was sung at the close of the eloquent sermon and the morning worship ended, after the ordination of deacons, with the benediction and blessing.

Sunday afternoon, Dr. R. A. Meek, presided at the memorial service. The opening hymn "My Faith Looks up to Thee," was sung. The prayer was led by Rev. J. W. Dorman. The Scripture lesson was read from the 37th Psalm. After the hymn, "There is a Land that is fairer than day," was sung, Dr. Meek called Question 21, What preachers have died during the year? which was answered as follows: W. D. McCullough, R. M. Davis and A. P. Leech. Memoirs as follows were read: the tribute to Brother McCullough, by W. M. Campbell; to Brother Leech, by W. L. Duren; to Brother Davis, by J. W. Dorman. After a number of touching tributes to the deceased brethren, the report of the Committee on Memoirs was adopted; the congregation sang hymn No. 617, "On Jordan's Stormy Banks I Stand," and the benediction was pronounced.

At 7:15 o'clock Sunday evening the auditorium of the Methodist Church was again filled. After preliminaries, Mr. Jack Wilson, of Grenada, appeared on the rostrum and stated his plans for performing the duties to which he had been called. Mr. Wilson said: "I have prayed for an opportunity to give God ten of the best years of my life without money or price.....We have not been fair with the men who have helped build for us a civilization." The laymen responded to Mr. Wilson's remarks with hearty Amens.

Rev. J. A. Hall, of Greenwood, Miss., who had been appointed to preach at that hour, announced as a text, Psalm 107, verse 30, and eloquently delivered an able sermon. After the sermon the candidates for elders' orders, having been duly elected, were called to the chancel where they assumed the vows and received ordination at the hands of Bishop Murrah, assisted by Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Ben P. Jaco, V. C. Curtis, and J. J. Brooks. Those ordained were, J. H. Brooks, C. T. Floyd, I. F. Holland, F. H. McGhee, Olin Ray, J. D. Wroten, and R. H. Ruff—R. H. Ruff being the first man in our Conference to be ordained in military uniform.

Sixth Day—Monday Morning.

Conference opened at 9 o'clock, with J. W. Dorman in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by H. C. Morehead. The minutes were read and approved. On motion of W. D. Wendel a committee was appointed to take under advisement the matter of appointing a Conference Treasurer. The motion carried and the committee was appointed as follows: Revs. J. B. Randolph, J. E. Thomas, and W. D. Wendel. Various reports were read. Those of unusual interest were the report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance, in response to which Dr. Meek spoke bringing good news from the city of New Orleans and showing that the laws regarding the violation of the Holy Sabbath can be enforced; the report on Spiritual Interests of the Church, which shows by actual figures that worldliness is decreasing and godliness is coming into its own, the reward of the labors of the preachers during the year being 5000 conversions; the report on Evangelism commending the work of the evangelists and recommending the reappointment of J. A. Bowen and J. H. Bell as Conference evangelists, and also commending the labors of Rev. W. M. McIntosh, as one of our general evangelists. Following the report of the Board of Education, J. E. Cunningham, J. H. Felts, B. P. Jaco, and E. M. Fant were elected trustees of Grenada College, and R. A. Meek, W. L. Duren, J. B. Streater, trustees of Millsaps Col-

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By the Editor.

Rev. E. E. Lewis made an admirable host, and the hospitality of Oxford was all that could be desired. The University community actively cooperated in caring for the Conference.

Among the visitors who looked in on the Conference were Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, Rev. E. A. Clark, of Covington, Tenn., and Rev. E. P. Craddock, of Iuka, Miss. They were cordially welcomed by their many friends.

After a two years' stay in Arkansas, Rev. N. G. Augustus has returned home, having been assigned to Coffeeville, a most delightful charge. He is a scholarly and strong preacher, and his many friends in North Mississippi will be glad to have him back among them.

The sermon of Rev. John Tillery Lewis at the meeting of the Young Ministers' Association on Wednesday afternoon was an able and eloquent one. His text was, "Ye are the light of the world," and for nearly an hour he held the rapt attention of the fine audience in attendance. Brother Lewis is a speaker of unusual gifts.

Our evangelists, Rev. J. A. Bowen and Rev. J. H. Bell, were recommissioned to go on with their work. They wrought nobly last year, leading many into the Kingdom, and living not a few to higher spiritual heights. Rev. W. M. Melancon, one of the Church's General Evangelists, also resides within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference.

The Greenville District, under the splendid leadership of Rev. V. C. Curtis, paid all the assessments in full, and some of the other districts were close behind it. Quite a number of excellent churches were constructed in the Conference during the year. Methodism is virile and aggressive in North Mississippi, and has the promise of a great future.

Rev. John H. Mitchell, who for 35 or 40 years has wrought so efficiently in the Conference, was given the superannuate relation. He has left his impress all over North Mississippi, and his friends there are numbered by the thousands. Mr. R. T. Jones, a generous layman at Greenwood, Miss., has given Sister Mitchell a house and lot in that city, where she and Brother Mitchell will now reside.

Bishop Murrah's presidency gave great satisfaction. In the chair he was courteous and considerate, and his platform and pulpit work measured up to a high standard. The members of the Cabinet spoke in terms of commendation of the manner in which he made the appointments, of which we heard very little complaint. The North Mississippians will always be glad to be served by their own much loved Bishop.

The Methodist Hospital at Memphis had as its spokesmen Mr. T. B. King, the new Financial Agent, and Mr. J. H. Sherard, President of the Board of Trustees. The outlook for this institution is very bright, and those in a position to know the situation predict that its doors will be opened for service in the not-distant future. Let all our preachers and people lend Brother King a helping hand in the noble work to which he has consecrated himself.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, after four years of effective service on the Columbus District, was sent to Oxford, the seat of the State University, which is called "the Athens of Mississippi." There was a very general feeling that this assignment was a happy one, both for the preacher and the charge. One of the interesting events of the Conference was the presentation to Brother Woollard of a beautiful collection of silverware by his associate workers in the Columbus District.

The connectional brethren were much in evidence. The list of them included Dr. T. N. Ivey, Dr. John M. Moore, Dr. H. M. DuBose, Dr. Stonewall Anderson and Dr. W. F. McMurry. All of these brethren were heard with interest. The speeches of Dr. Anderson and Dr. McMurry were, we thought, particularly impressive. Dr. DuBose caught the Conference with his inimitable humor. The Publishing House was represented by Dr. R. P. Wilson and Brother I. G. Campbell.

We recall the names of the following esteemed brethren who were not at the Conference: Dr. John W. Boswell, Rev. S. M. Thames, Rev. C. N. Terry, Rev. J. D. Newsom, Rev. W. S. Harrison, Rev. T. G. Freeman, Dr. J. W. Price, Rev. Eugene Johnson, Rev. J. W. Anderson, Rev. W. C. Harris, Rev. Thomas Cameron, Rev. W. J. Burt, Rev. D. L. Cogdell, Rev. B. P. Patterson, Rev. R. I. Allen, Rev. G. W. McLain, Rev. J. A. Randolph, and Rev. J. M. Moose. These were all missed by the brethren, who hold them in loving remembrance.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, gave a report of his labors which showed that he had been diligent and self-sacrificing. He may be counted on to do his best and to bring things to pass in the way of Sunday school development. The Epworth League work, under the leadership of Rev. R. P. Neblett, is also looking up. The Conference permitted the League Board to levy an assessment of $500, that it may have more means to promote this important interest. We must look after the religious welfare of our young people.

The following delegates were elected to the General Conference. Clerical—E. A. Meek, J. E. Cummins, T. H. Dorsey, and W. W. Mitchell, alternates—W. W. Woollard, and J. H. Fain. Lay—E. M. Fant, J. G. McGowen, J. H. Sherard, and J. B. Streater; alternates—Parham Williams and Lindsey Lipscomb. The delegation is a conservative one. North Mississippi is loyal to the Church as it now exists, as the laymen of the Conference expressed it in their noteworthy pronouncement. Not a single memorial to the General Conference was introduced. There was no indication of dissatisfaction or restlessness.

Sunday was a great day in Oxford. Many Methodists from the surrounding country came to attend the services and all the hotels and boarding-houses were crowded. Beginning at 9:30 o'clock a. m., an inspiring love feast was conducted at the Methodist Church by Rev. J. A. Bowen, and at 11 o'clock every inch of space in the building was occupied to hear the great discourse delivered by Bishop Murrah. The other churches of the city were also largely attended, and we heard many good things said of the messages given by the preachers. The Editor worshiped at the Presbyterian Church, where Rev. E. Nash Broyles preached a feeling and uplifting sermon to an excellent congregation.

Upon the recommendation of the Committee on Books and Periodicals, the Conference endorsed the plan to put on a campaign for 1000 new subscribers to the New Orleans Advocate the last week in January. An apportionment was made, giving the number expected from each presiding elder's district, and the district stewards in each district were requested to indicate to each charge in it its pro rata. We trust that all the presiding elders and pastors will cooperate in making this campaign a success. The North Mississippi Conference has been leading in the support given to the Advocate, and we trust that it will set the pace in this needed effort to give it a wider circulation throughout its patronizing territory.

The Joint Board of Finance, through Mr. W. E. Stokes, of Macon, made a report outlining a plan to start a campaign to increase the Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund to $250,000, which was endorsed by the Conference. Mr. Jack Wilson, a Grenada layman, will lead in this undertaking, serving without any salary. Mr. E. M. Fant, of Coahoma, gave $1000 in cash to this cause. This forward movement is much to be commended. The North Mississippi Conference has been lagging far too long in the urgently needed work of making adequate provision for its retired ministers, and it is to be earnestly hoped that this timely project will command widespread support and be carried speedily forward to success.

Millsaps College was represented at the Conference by Dr. A. F. Watkins, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, and Commissioner M. M. Black. Rev. Robert Selby most efficiently represented Emory University. It was a source of gratification to the Conference that Brother Selby had sent to the Emory Treasurer during the year more cash than any other Commissioner working anywhere in the Connection, save one who had received a gift of $25,000. President Countiss and Commissioner Brownlee gave a most encouraging account of the conditions at Grenada College. The Trustees of that institution were authorized to proceed with the construction of such additional buildings as may be necessary to meet the increased demands that are being made upon it by its growing patronage.

THE LAST QUEEN OF THE HAWAIIANS.

On Sunday, the eleventh day of November, Liliuokalani, the last of the royal queens of the Hawaiians, passed into the great beyond. It was a most pathetic event in the lives of the natives, in that it closed forever the royal line, and in the passing of their last queen, they saw the only link binding their (to them) glorious past, with the hustling, busy present. She represented the "old regime," the day of pomp and ceremony, and they felt for her a love that we Southerners felt for Jefferson Davis. He typified the "Lost Cause"; she the day of their own independence, now lost forever.

In many respects, she was a remarkable woman. Her enemies never accused her of disloyalty to the United States, and her name was never mixed with plots for revolutions, or any treasonable designs. She lived a quiet, dignified life, and it was often said that her last days were her queenliest. Her last years were saddened by the great war, and she delighted in helping the Red Cross Society, of which she was an honored member. Her charming manner, quiet dignity, and pleasant, sympathetic services, completely disarmed her enemies, and the entire populace delighted to honor her on all occasions. Her birthdays were celebrated all over the city, and she always had a number of callers on that day.

From midnight on Monday, to midnight on Saturday, her body lay in the old church which she loved, and thousands visited it to see the beautiful floral and other decorations. While in state, her brow was crowned with the royal diadem, and the stately kahilas waved around the casket. The guard of honor was ever in attendance, and the members of the native secret orders paid all possible reverence to her memory.

The funeral on Sunday, Nov. 15, was the most imposing ever seen in the city of Honolulu. In it were combined the ancient barbaric rites, the stately ceremonies of the Episcopal Church, with the Bishop himself as celebrant, and the pomp and splendor of a military funeral. General Wisser himself directed the military matters, and, under the leadership of Colonel Carnahan, it was a most imposing spectacle. The dashing cavalry, with drawn sabres, the marching infantry—two regiments—the sullen, efficient field artillery, filled over a mile of the street and was witnessed by tens of thousands of people. President Wilson, by cable, directed that a beautiful wreath be sent in his name. If any doubt of the feeling with which Americans regarded this good woman remained, it was undoubtedly dispelled by the honor paid her memory by both the military and civilian population. In fact, all flags were at half-mast for the entire week.

The Hawaiians seemed touched by the honor paid their queen, for it is certain that she was devotedly loved by her people, not only for her royalty, but because she was a tender, helpful friend.

The summer still lingers, and, although December will be with us next week, it is like May in Louisiana and Mississippi. It seems so far to the old home State, and the customs and habits of a life time. But we have our work to do, and in this great struggle each must do the part nearest his hand. I am still of the opinion that the great Methodist Church does not see the marvelous opportunity that God has given us, but I hope that we will yet wake up before it is too late. Our friends foget us when we are out of sight. Only one of my friends—a Roman Catholic—remembered to send me a paper, yet all know we are interested in things "back home," and New Orleans, Jackson, Vicksburg, and Natchez papers "look good to us." Mails are too irregular to subscribe for a daily paper. We would get eight or ten in some mails.

At this writing, the outlook is particularly dark, and things seem anything but propitious for an early peace. However, we have the promise that the "meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." As I understand it, this refers to those nations that love peace, and will fight only when forced to do so in the defense of their national existence. But I will close this letter, which is too long.

Let me thank those who have expressed in letters their appreciation of other communications. If they only knew how good it is to get a letter "from home," they would write oftener.

Cordially,

J. C. BALLARD,
Captain Medical Res. Corps.

WEDDING BELLS.

Dear Dr. Meek: This morning at nine o'clock the Rev. B. P. Fullilove and Mrs. W. R. Ramer, of Chewallah, Tenn., were married here by the writer, at the home of a relative of the bride, where she had been visiting for several days. Immediately after the ceremony, the happy couple left for their parsonage home at Chalybeate, where a bountiful dinner had been prepared for them. We wish for them all the happiness God has in store for them, and pray that he may bless their labors in His vineyard.

We are glad to be at Ripley for another year. These are good folks, and they know how to treat a preacher and his family.

With best wishes for yourself and the Advocate, I am,

Fraternally,
JAS. J. BAIRD.

Ripley, Miss., Nov. 27, 1917.

DOUBLE TEN.

There's something that vexes you, laddie,
I know by the flush on your cheek;
But just hold your temper a moment
And count double ten ere you speak.

There's some one has angered you, lassie,
I know by the flash in your eye;
Perhaps you can answer them sharply,
But count double ten ere you try.

For words, dear, like horses, need reining,
Or else they will fly off the track;
And words that escape once, remember,
Can never be coaxed to come back.

So hearken to me, little lassie,
And laddie with anger-flushed cheek.
Remember the maxim I give you,
And count double ten ere you speak.

A VERY SHORT LESSON.

"Oh, dear!" whined James. "I just hate to do errands. Does Sarah need the sugar right away?"

"Right away," said mother. "She is baking doughnuts, and wants the powdered sugar to roll them in while they are warm. Run, dear, and get it as soon as you can."

"When I get big, I'll never do a single thing that I don't want to," said James, when he was back at his play once more. "It seems little boys have to do all the mean jobs, and it isn't fair."

"But you like doughnuts so well," said mother, "and Sarah does so many nice things for you that I should think you would like to do errands for her once in a while. Do you think you would be happier if you only did the things you enjoy?"

"Course," said James, promptly. "I'd like to try that way for a while."

"Well, suppose you try it this week. We'll all do just the things we like, and see if we get along better. I think you will be ready to go back to the old way before supper-time, though."

"Indeed I won't, mother. That is the best thing you could say, for I want to play in the sand pile all day at my fort without having to do a single thing. Are you sure you mean it?"

"Perfectly certain, James. We will wait till you are ready to go back to the old way, if that is a month."

"Nothing but bread and butter for dinner?" said James, in great surprise. "I'm as hungry as anything."

"I told Sarah to get some other things," said mother, buttering a slice of bread for herself, "but she said she wanted to finish canning her berries. She hates cooking anyway. Don't you want anything for dinner?"

"Yes, please spread me some bread, mother."

"I just hate to spread bread, dear. Help yourself."

"This is the afternoon of the party, mother," said James, watching the hands of the clock drag slowly around to three. He thought that surely he would get something besides bread and butter at the party, and he was hungry! When he asked Sarah for a doughnut in the kitchen, she was too busy to do more than complain because he bothered her.

"Is that so?" asked mother, without looking up from her book.

"When will you get me ready, mother?" went on James, as the big hand moved a little farther. "I'm afraid I'll be late."

"I don't want to stop reading," said mother. "I thought we were to do only the things we liked to-day, and I don't like to leave this comfortable chair."

James went slowly to his room and began to put on his new suit by himself, but everything went wrong. A button came off, and he couldn't find his shoes, and his hands looked dirty in spite of all his efforts, and the first thing anybody knew the big tears were rolling down his cheeks. "I want to go back to the old way, mother," he sobbed, throwing himself down on the floor by her side. "I didn't know how horrid it was to be selfish till to-day."

"Are you sure?" asked mother lifting the little head from her lap to look straight into the tearful eyes. "Do you want to do the hard jobs with the easy ones?"

"Indeed I do; and, mother, won't you please hurry so I can go?"

"Well, well," said Sarah next day, "how's this? My kindling basket is full, and I didn't have to say a word about the scraps for the chickens. I think a small boy must have had a very good time at the party yesterday."

"I did, but I found out before I went that it doesn't pay to be mean and selfish," said James. "Could I have a cooky, Sarah?"

"Half a dozen if you want them," said Sarah, heartily. "I wish all boys and girls would learn that lesson, and the world would be a lot nicer place then."—Hilda Richmond, in United Presbyterian.

LITTLE BOYS AND LITTLE SHEEP.

Joe came home with his clothes, and even his curly hair, all wringing wet. "Just knew the ice wasn't strong enough," he grumbled.

"Then why did you slide?" asked auntie.

"'Cause all the other boys did," said Joe; "so I had to, or they'd laugh."

His aunt gave him dry clothes, set him down by the fire, and made him drink hot ginger tea. Then she told him a story.

"When I was a little girl, Joe, my father had a great flock of sheep. They were queer things; where one went, all the rest followed. One day the big ram found a gap in the fence, and he thought it would be fun to see what was in the other field. So in he jumped without looking where he was going, and down he tumbled to the bottom of an old, dry well where father used to throw stones and rubbish. The next sheep never stopped to see what had become of him, but just jumped right after, and the next, and the next, although father tried to drive them back, and Watch, the sheep dog, barked his loudest. But they just kept on jumping till the well was full. Then father had to pull them out as best he could, and the sheep at the bottom of the well were almost smothered to death."

"My! what silly fellows!" exclaimed Joe. Then he looked up at his aunt, and laughed.—London Sunday School Times.

A LITTLE GIRL'S PHILOSOPHY.

Very strong peppermints are grandfather's favorite confection. One day he gave one to four-year-old Marjorie, and waited slyly to see what she would do when she should discover the pungent flavor of the candy. A few minutes later he saw her take the partly eaten peppermint from her mouth and place it on a table beside an open window.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Don't you like the candy?"

"Oh, yes," replied Marjorie, "I like it, but I thought I'd let it cool for a little while."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

A PAUSE IN THE PRAYER.

"If I should die 'fore I wake," said Donny, kneeling at grandmother's knee. "'f I should die 'fore I wake—"

"'I pray,'" prompted the gentle voice. "Go on, Donny."

"Wait a minute," interposed the small boy, scrambling to his feet and hurrying away downstairs. In a brief space he was back again and, dropping down in his place, took up his petition where he had left off. But when the little white-gowned form was safely tucked in bed, the grandmother questioned with loving rebuke concerning the interruption.

"But I did think what I was saying, grandmother; that's why I had to stop. You see, I'd upset Ted's menagerie and stood all his wooden soldiers on their heads just to see how he'd tear around in the mornin'. 'If I should die 'fore I wake,' why—I didn't want him to find 'em that way; so I had to go down and fix 'em right. There's lots of things that seem funny if you're goin' to keep on livin', but you don't want 'em that way if you should die 'fore you wake."

"That was right, dear; it was right," commented the voice with its tender quaver. "A good many of our prayers would not be hurt by stopping in the middle of them to undo a wrong."—Wellspring.

THE TEACHER.

Dear Teacher, patient with our childish ways,
Teach us the common things of common days;
While careless hands the dog-eared pages turn,
Teach us the easy things, so hard to learn.
The truth—that needs no learning to declare,
Pure, white-souled truth, than noonday sun more fair;
And faith—that midst all doubts and fears and woes,
Sings on the children's lips—"Well—Teacher knows!"
And love—that hath ten million times been told;
Love—that is older than the world is old;
Love—that will live when all the worlds are dead.
When these great little lessons have been said,
Then heaven and earth in one great school will meet—
Learning old lessons at the Teacher's feet.

When you go to the Father never lose sight of the Sovereign, lest you dishonor Him and disgrace yourselves.—B. Wilkinson.

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

A VISIT TO LAMAR'S GRAVE.

father-in-law, the Rev. A. B. Longstreet, who was widely known as a minister, lawyer, author, and educator, and to whose counsel and assistance Mr. Lamar acknowledged himself to be so deeply indebted.

At first, we were somewhat disappointed at the absence of a more fitting monument to the brilliant Southerner, who shed such luster upon Mississippi, and who filled the whole Republic with his fame; but, upon more mature reflection, we said to ourself he needs no towering shaft of bronze or marble to perpetuate his memory, for he lives in the imperishable pages of his country's history, in the deathless speeches that fell from his golden lips, and in the hearts of his admiring fellow-countrymen. And as we stood there above the ashes of the mighty dead, we could not but recall the unrecorded story of one of Mr. Lamar's utterances in a public debate when he was a candidate for Congress. According to this report, his opponent was a Republican of not the highest character, and Mr. Lamar, perhaps unconsciously, had fallen into the habit of referring to him, with possibly some contempt in his tone of voice, as "This man." To this, complaint was made by the opposing candidate, who charged that Colonel Lamar was treating him discourteously in referring to him as "This man, instead of this gentleman." In his rejoinder, the great orator is represented to have said something like this: "Fellow-citizens, when I shall have served my day and generation, by the will of God, and am finally laid to sleep beneath the generous soil of Mississippi, as I hope to be, and my people erect some modest marble slab to mark my last resting-place, I want no nobler epitaph inscribed upon it than, 'Here lies a MAN!'" The effect is stated to have been electrical and the applause which followed, overwhelming.

The modest tomb, to which he referred, has come to the translated leader and publicist, and the epitaph which he suggested certainly would not have been for him an unfitting one. For, greater than all his marvelous intellectual endowments; greater than his imperial eloquence, upon which listening thousands hung entranced; greater than all his conspicuous achievements in life's shifting arena, was his outstanding manliness, of which the cardinal elements were a rock-ribbed integrity, an undaunted physical and moral courage, a deep-seated sense of justice and fairness to his fellow-beings, and a resolute determination to adhere to his highest conceptions of right and duty. As much as he outstripped most of his contemporaries in public life in his extraordinary capacity to think and give expression to his thoughts, he towered above them to even a more remarkable extent in the sterling qualities of his splendid manhood.

If the space were at our disposal, we should like to tell of the first time we ever saw Mr. Lamar, of the three times that we heard him speak, and of the occasion when we last saw him—after his elevation to the Supreme Bench of the United States; but, for the present, we must forbear. We have seen the grave of S. S. Prentiss, two miles south of Natchez, and we have visited the tomb of Senator J. Z. George, near Carrollton, Miss., and, though none of these sacred spots are pretentiously marked, that of Mr. Lamar is the least so of the three. A painting of him is in the State Hall of Fame at Jackson, however, and possibly some day Mississippi may place a bust of him in Statuary Hall at Wahington, where he met in debate in the Senate the Nation's foremost men of his time and lowered his shining lance to none. The Mississippi Methodists are now doing a most appropriate thing in providing a building for the Lamar School of Law at Emory University, at Atlanta—the College Department of which was his alma mater.

REV. W. S. HARRISON DEAD.

On Monday, December 3, we received from Rev. J. C. Park, our pastor at Starkville, Miss., the following telegram: "Brother Harrison passed away this morning, triumphant in death."

We had not heard that Brother Harrison was ill, and this dispatch was to us quite a shock. No truer, worthier man than W. S. Harrison ever wrought in the Methodist itinerancy. He was endowed with a vigorous intellect, was an earnest student, and a teaching preacher of uncommon ability. But, best of all, he was a noble and great-hearted Christian, who lived far above all that was sordid and low. He was a shining light in the Kingdom, and one could not live in the community with him without being impressed with his Christlike spirit and the purity of his character. He was a frequent contributor to the Church press and an author of note, the best known products of his pen being "Sam Williams, a Tale of the Old South," and "The Articles of Religion as Amended, Supplemented, and Explained." The translation of this high-minded and well-known Christian minister will touch with sadness many hearts in North Mississippi and elsewhere. We hope to secure for the Advocate at an early date a more extended account of his useful career. May the Heavenly Father sustain the sorrowing loved ones and have them in his gracious keeping!

THE GALLOWAY MEMORIAL CHURCH DEDICATED.

On Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 29, the beautiful new Galloway Memorial Church at Jackson, Miss., perhaps the finest religious edifice in Mississippi, was dedicated by Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of Kansas City, in the presence of a great congregation. The Bishop's text was, "The joy of the Lord is your strength," and his message is reported to have been a very able and impressive one. The noble structure that was formally set apart to sacred uses on this occasion was projected under the pastorate of Dr. A. F. Smith, now of St. Louis, and was brought to completion under the leadership of Dr. W. G. Henry, who has served the large congregation that worships in it for your years. It was named for Bishop Charles B. Galloway, the most eloquent and widely known minister that Mississippi Methodism has produced. Just across the street from it stands the residence of the late Bishop, which is still occupied by Mrs. Galloway, his widow, and his worthy son, Dr. E. H. Galloway, and his family.

ABE MULKEY'S PRAYER.

In the Nashville Advocate of November 30, Dr. T. N. Ivey, writes interestingly of an evening service held at the recent session of the Texas Conference in the interest of the circulation of Christian literature. After addresses by Dr. Ivey, Mr. Louis Blaylock, Publisher of the Texas Christian Advacte, and Dr. W. D. Bradfield, Abe Mulkey, the well known evangelist, was, according to the Editor of our General Organ, called on unexpectedly to pray and offered the following stenographically reported supplication, which we reproduce for the reason that its application may very well extend beyond the confines of the State of Texas:

"Heavenly Father, this is the first meeting of this kind I ever was in. This is a service devoted to the Advocates. We are glad to look in the face of Dr. Ivey. We have been subscribing forty years to his paper. We have looked forward with pleasure to its appearance every week. We peruse its pages carefully. We are helped by it in every way. Lord, continue to bless the paper. We are glad to hear Dr. Bradfield talk on our Texas Christian Advocate. We are paralyzed to hear the report made by its publisher, Brother Blaylock. God have mercy upon these rascals who have defrauded this man of his just dues. The idea of a man buying a paper and not paying for it is as bad as buying a Bible and not paying for it. Lord, we do not know what is to become of a man who will read a religious paper and not pay for it. We cannot imagine where he expects to go. Have mercy upon the abominable rascals. Amen."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. S. A. Steel has been announced as one of the speakers at the Convention of the National Anti-Saloon League, to be held in Washington City, December 11-13.

Mrs. M. B. Dottery, who has spent several months in Carbondale, Ill., was expected to return to Okolona, Miss., about November 21. Mrs. Dottery takes an intelligent interest in all the affairs of Southern Methodism.

The North Mississippi Conference has given two very capable young men to the Y. M. C. A. war work—Rev. R. H. Ruff and Rev. J. Howard Brooks. Let our preachers and people remember these young ministers and the noble cause which they represent in their prayers.

Without giving the date, a correspondent sends us the following wedding notice: "Married at the home of Mr. Hargrove, a relative of the bride, at Columbia, Miss., Mr. James L. Berry and Miss Margaret Lewis, Rev. James M. Lewis officiating." We wish those whose lives have thus been linked together much happiness.

The name of Dr. J. W Boswell was unfortunately omitted from the appointments of the North Mississippi Conference in our last issue. He continues to be Assistant Editor of our Sunday School Literature at Nashville, and his name should have appeared in connection with the Aberdeen District. We regret this omission.

Writing from Shreveport, La., under date of Dec. 3, Rev. J. S. Purcell says: "My dear sister, Myrtle Purcell, died of typhoid-pneumonia at the North Louisiana Sanitarium at 7:45 a.m., Dec. 3. She was a trained nurse in this city." We regret to receive this sad message, and we pray that God may comfort and sustain the stricken loved ones.

The address of Rev. E. H. Rook, who at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference asked to be relieved of active work in the pastorate, will hereafter be Como, Miss., R. F. D. No, 1. We are grateful to Brother Rook for an invitation when opportunity offers to visit the community with which he now purposes to identify himself.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not elsewhere been made for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. H. R. McKee, Rose Hill, Miss., 4; Rev. M. F. Adams, Flora, Miss., 5; Brother W. K. Miller, Morton, Miss., 2; Brother W. E. Akin, Clay, La. 2; Mrs. W. A. Kirkpatrick, West Monroe, La., 11.

From the Lexington (Miss.) Advertiser, we take the following: "Rev. C. P. Moss has been assigned to the Methodist pastorate at Shaw for the next year. During his residence at Tchula, Mr. Moss endeared himself to all the people, regardless of denominational affiliations. He is a splendid speaker and a very effective pastor in all the details of the work. Shaw is to be highly congratulated on the acquisition of the Rev. Mr. Moss and his estimable family."

Rev. C. A. Parks and his attractive young bride were cordially greeted by their many friends at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference. Mrs. Parks is a daughter of the late Rev. W. A. Clark, who was a member of the Conference for many years, and is a most superior young woman. Mr. Parks is a graduate of Millsaps College, and is a young minister of much promise. He was assigned to Ackerman, an excellent appointment, for the next year. May Heaven bless these young itinerants, and crown their labors with a large measure of success!

PROCEEDINGS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

lege. The report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals was read by Rev. E. R. Smoot wherein the following were nominated for election as members of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate: W. W. Woollard, T. H.

Lipscomb, and J. H. Felts. It was the request of the report that the last week in January be set apart as campaign week for the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Dr. Meek called attention to the promiscuous circulation of vicious literature over the country, recommending the broader circulation of our own literature as a means of guarding agalnst the evils attending it.

Bishop Murrah and the presiding elders arrived from a short meeing, and Bishop Murrah took the chair. Rev. W. L. Duren tendered his resignation as a member of the Board of Missions—his resignation being accepted, and Rev. Ben P. Jaco was elected to fill the vacancy. A resolution of thanks was read by R. P. Neblet, in which mention was made of the town of Oxford, the pastor, the choir, other churches, etc. The resolution was adopted by a rising vote.

W. W. Mitchell represented Brother W. M. Langley and the Conference responded with an expression of love and esteem for the valuable young minister who, because of ill health, has retired from the active service so early in life.

E. G. Mohler and Hon. G. L. Jones were elected delegates to the National Anti-Saloon League.

The report of the Ministerial Relief Association was read by Rev. J. C. Park. The Conference took a brief recess and the Ministerial Relief Association held a short meeting for the election of officers and the reception of new members.

Bishop Murrah took the chair and spoke of the great pleasure it had been to hold an Annual Conference in the town of Oxford, of the brotherly feeling and congeniality of the presiding elders, and of the general good will that existed throughout the Conference, and called Question 53, Where are the preachers stationed next year? The Bishop raised the old Christian battle hymn, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" The Bishop was called to the telephone and Dr. Meek was called to the chair. The minutes of the final session were read and approved, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney led in prayer. Bishop Murrah, having resumed the chair, read the appointments which sent nearly half of the preachers to new fields of labor and to many of the pastoral charges new pastors. Thus went into history the best session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference it has been the good fortune of your reporter to attend. Not a word of dissatisfaction was heard.

NOTES.

The Conference was well attended by the citizens of Oxford. The preachers were punctual. The man who was absent when his name was called was the exception rather than the rule. We were sorry that a few were unavoidably detained at home. The laymen took unusual interest in the proceedings of the Conference. The choir rendered music on all occasions that was equal to the best. The solos by Mr. Templeton added to the services in a remarkable way.

Brother Lewis was faithful in the entertainment of the preachers and delegates. The reports to the Commercial Appeal were accurately made by our efficient reporter, E. H. Cunningbam, who is thoroughly conversant with the business of an Annual Conference, and even knows the difference between a deacon and an elder.

Walter M. Campbell was moved out of the Greenville District, but remains in the Delta. Brother Campbell has been 21 years in the Delta, a longer period of time than any other man in the Conference has served in that country without taking a little recess in the good old Mississippi hills. He has built 4 churches in the Delta and had raised about $10,000 on the charge he left for the erection of Sunday school rooms and additional accommodations for the church. If you ever met him, you will know him on meeting again—there is nothing like him.

It was very gratifying to learn that the health of Mrs. D. W. Babb had so wonderfully improved that she was visiting friends while her husband was at Conference.

It looked like old times to see the old friend of the Conference, Hon. G. L. Jones, taking part in the deliberations.

A CALL FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE.

The article sent out from the office of the Board of Church Extension, and which has already appeared in all of our church papers, set forth in some detail the reasons for the creation of a Department of Architecture, and what is contemplated in its work.

It is not the purpose of this department to in any sense enter into competition with professional architects, but rather to secure the best service from architects scattered throughout the Church. The Board believes that it is possible to secure such co-operation between this department and the architects as will be mutually helpful and profitable.

The plan contemplates making of this department a kind of clearing-house for architectural ideas and service, and the gradual getting together of plans of various grades of cost, that most thoroughly conform to the ideas of the Board, and are best adapted to the entire work of our Church. It will, I think, be readily appreciated that our greatest and most needy field is that of the small and medium-priced church, located in small towns, villages, and the country. Large churches are able to secure good professional service, and the Architectural Department will serve them by advice and suggestions as to the men nearest them best fitted to do their work, and in other advisory ways. But the small church does not always interest the professional architect. Such congregations often do not feel able to employ him, and, sometimes, do not appreciate their need of his services, and as a result the church suffers injury in various ways. It is this class of churches that will need to be supplied with plans at a nominal cost directly from this office. This department is addressing itself primarily therefore to preparation to meet this need. To this end the sympathetic co-operation of a large number of architects in various parts of the country is being secured. But realizing that this is after all a practical matter, and that men dealing first hand with the problem can often give most valuable advice and suggestions, and that many preachers and presiding elders, often of necessity, turn architect, I am here and now inviting any preacher or Sunday school superintendent who will do so, to submit any plans that he has knowledge of that most ideally meet the need of a given church for its work, with special reference to the operation of the Sunday school.

This does not necessarily mean plans drawn by an architect, though I will very much appreciate the name and address of any architect who has efficiently served the church, as we are adding to our list of references all the time. But a rough outline, with measurements and directions sufficient to give the essential features, will be sufficient.

Suggestions as to how an old church has been modernized, Sunday school rooms added, fresh ideas as to any special features, all of these will be appreciated, due credit given, and all that is adapted to our purposes carefully worked out.

It is not to be forgotten that parsonage building is an important part of the work of the Board of Church Extension, and that up-to-date parsonage plans are a part of the work undertaken by this department. Suggestions are invited from preachers and preachers' wives especially, as to the best plan for a preacher's home.

Send your communication to the Board of Church Extension, Louisville, Kentucky.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Mrs. BERTIE TILGLEMAN (nee Booth), who was born and reared in Carroll County, Miss., passed to her heavenly home on Saturday night, Nov. 17, 1917. Her body was laid to rest in Bluff Springs cemetery, the funeral service being conducted by Rev. W. J. Wood. In early life she united with the Methodist Church at Bluff Springs and had ever remained faithful and loyal to her Master. Her devotion to the Church was shown by a remarkable fidelity to its claims and interests. When death came she was ready, having learned the secret of unswerving faith in God and having spent her life in service for others. She died in perfect peace and in triumph. She will be sorely missed by the family and a host of friends. She leaves a husband and seven children to mourn her departure. We point the bereaved ones to Jesus, and pray that the Holy Spirit may comfort them.

A. FRIEND

J. H. HART was born in Bardstown, Ky., on Nov. 6, 1837, and died in Silver City, Miss., on Nov. 22, 1917, being 80 years and 16 days old. He and his wife moved from Kentucky to Rodney, Miss., in 1861, and for a long time he was in business at that place. He bought a home in Silver City, Miss., about twelve years ago, but only occupied it for a short time. For the last ten years he had lived with his children. The first part of this year he moved back to his house in Silver City, with his daughter, Mrs. Price. He and his wife were married a little over 51 years ago. Four children were born to them, 2 boys and 2 girls, all of whom still live, together with their mother, to mourn their loss. The deceased has a brother and a sister living in Kentucky. Brother Hart joined the Methodist Church early in life and was a consistent member of the same until God took him. He was a Sunday school superintendent for many years and as long as he was able to go he was a regular attendant upon all the services of the Church. To know Brother Hart was to love him, for he was always happy and cheerful and carried sunshine wherever he went. In his last illness he was never known to complain. He died without a pain or a struggle. A good man has gone from us. We pray that God's blessings may rest upon those who are left behind. We laid him away in the cemetery at Yazoo City, Miss., on the morning of Nov. 23, 1917. Dr. W. H. Huntley assisted the writer in the funeral services.

J. H. FOREMAN.

IN MEMORIAM.

My first acquaintance with Brother Dock Wall was in the year 1891. I was his pastor in 1892. He was born on Feb. 12, 1842, and went to heaven on Nov. 2, 1917, having lived out more than the allotted three score years and ten. As I recall, he served in the Civil War, being both a soldier of his country and a soldier of the Cross. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Suttles in 1866, and they walked the path of life together for 51 years. Of this union there were born 13 children, 8 of whom are living to mourn the loss of their father and mother—the mother went away to glory a few days more than a year ahead of her husband. Brother Wall was an upright citizen, a faithful husband, and a thoughtful father. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, having served as a steward for many years. He was a quiet, unassuming Christian. We laid his body to rest in the Spring Hill cemetery on November 3.

"Sleep on, old body,
And take thy rest;
The soul in glory
Is supremely blessed.
Some day, 'mid flames
And fleeing sky,
Thou wilt leave thy bed
And mount on high;
And with thy comrades gone before
Praise thy Master evermore."

Loved ones, weep not—he is at home.

THE AUTUMN REVIVAL AT MERIDIAN COLLEGE.

Another great revival has been held at Meridian College, Meridian, Miss. Rev. C. M. Dunaway, the evangelist of the South Georgia Conference, led the forces to victory against sin. For weeks before the time set for the coming of the evangelist, preparation had been made in the way of organizing class prayer meetings, faculty prayer meetings, and by preparatory preaching by the college pastor. Not a week had passed since school opened without some being saved. Thus it was easy for the evangelist when he came. He found prepared soil and a spiritual atmosphere.

On the first Sunday, fifty seekers were at the altar, seeking in the old-time Methodist way. There was not a fruitless service from beginning to end. Many wept and prayed their way through to God. Many made confessions to those they had wronged and others made restitutions, and by the end of the ten days 150 people from the College and community were definitely blessed of God. Many were converted, some reclaimed, and quite a few entered the experience of perfect love. It was a delight to see a dozen on their feet at once, eager to give a glowing testimony to what Jesus had done for them. There was no fanaticism, no wild fire, but the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit in His saving power.

The revival has made a great change in the lives of students. There is a general uplift in the spiritual atmosphere of the College. It pays from every standpoint to have revivals in a college. We plan for one in the fall and one in the spring of each session. We feel that they are as much a set part of our College program as examinations and classroom work. Instead of losing time, we gain by a better quality of work when consciences have been quickened and students become earnest, active Christians. The revival is the reaping time, the climax, the goal of the college work. Getting right with God and the developing of the spiritual life have more to do with the future success of college students than any other college event.

There are still a few of the nearly 400 enrolled students who are not saved. The Faculty and Christian students are still burdened for these. Let praying people join us in prayer that all may yet be reached. We have the largest enrollment and the finest student body we have had for many years. God is wonderfully blessing our efforts. Pray for us.

Hair Needs Food

just as every other living thing does, and, just as every other living thing, it will die if it is not fed. Hair food takes the form of the natural oil on which it subsists. Fifty years ago the Creoles of Louisiana, who prided themselves on their hair, discovered a recipe for beautiful hair. By the use of this natural hair oil, "La Creole," they kept their hair beautiful, light and fluffy. This secret has been handed down through generations and presents the very best hair food and hair disease remedy. Does your hair fall out? Is it coarse? Is it stiff? Has it lost its natural luster? Then ask your dealer for a bottle of "La Creole" hair dressing. The price is only $1.00 and it will be the life of your hair. If he can't supply you, write at once to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER HERRING.

Dear Brother Meek: I came over from Byhalia two weeks ago, and, among other interesting things seen and heard, I have had the pleasure of listening to that great preacher and ex-evangelist, George Stuart, who is now pastor of the First Methodist Church of Birmingham. Being in settled harness has not taken away his evangelistic fire. He draws great crowds—in fact, so large that it is difficult to seat the people in this great church. Some of the congregation this morning had to stand during the service. The usher gave me a seat in the chancel. One of the attractions was a quartet of young men who work in the Army under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. They sang four times during the service; the singing was splendid.

Rev. Geo. Stuart preached on the relation of the Church of Christ to the nation. Sometimes I felt like clapping my hands in approval of his patriotic utterances, especially when he pronounced a splendid eulogy upon our great President. It is worth while to go to hear George Stuart.

The people of Byhalia, Miss., have been specially blessed in having Brother McCorkle as their pastor. He has seen the light, and shows this by his earnest, instructive sermons. He is a Tennessean, as are also the Rev. Mr. Felts, the presiding elder, and the Rev. Mr. Harris, who came over from Arkansas and preached a week for us with good results. The latter has a fine vocabulary and knows exactly how to express his views. It is very seldom that one has an opportunity to hear such sermons as were preached by him at Byhalia.

Brother Felts has preached several sermons for us besides those delivered on the quarterly meeting occasions, and a gentleman who knew what he was talking about said that one of his sermons was worth meditating upon for six months.

Taken altogether, we have had a splendid year in Church affairs. Brother McCorkle has done a good work and is beloved by his congregation.

Tobacco Habit Easily Conquered

A New Yorker of wide experience has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily and completely banished in three days with delightful benefit. The author, Edward J. Woods, 1629-A, Station E, New York City, will mail his book free on request.

The health improves wonderfully after the nicotine poison is out of the system. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits reported. Get rid of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette, snuff or chewing tobacco to pacify morbid desire.

THE LAYMEN'S ADDRESS.

By D. S. Harmon.

The "Address" issued by certain laymen a few weeks ago has created considerable alarm in the minds of some, and has brought about much discussion through the Church papers. What has struck me forcibiy about it all, is the great excitement and alarm which has been created over the suggestion of a few changes in the polity and working machinery of the Church, when so little distress is exhibited over the spirituai decay and constant lopping off of those customs which always made for spirituality and power, and which were the real vitality and great forces which impelled the Church on its God-given mission of redeeming and saving men.

The Church has drifted so far away from its mission and has so lost its power that it impelled the Committee on Evangelism at the last Generai Conference to say: "This is an age of doctrinal looseness and careless thinking. In the midst of theories of sociai uplift, there is danger of forgetting the solemn 'words, 'Ye must be born again.' We live in an age of luxury, and it is to be feared that softness and needless self-indulgence are eating at the core of our life. Worldliness has poured in upon us, and we can scarcely doubt that we have members in our churches who know not their right hand from their ieft spiritually."

This is a fearful indictment coming from the highest body of the Church, composed of some of the most capable and brainy men of the connection. Yet never a word of lamentation or expression of alarm was heard outside the Conference room, or were any suggestions offered that might change such alarming conditions.

Again, the same Committee further says: "In one of our Conferences great revivals have followed the general circulation among the preachers of Wesley's Journai. Your Committee comes with no new thing, but with a piea for a return to the oid paths or the adaptation of the ancient things to the new times."

The Committee, in its wisdom, did not prophesy of things to come, but directed a look backward, to those things which had made the Church ali powerfui and glorious, and pleaded for a return to the old paths.

Who are they of the old preachers that do not know what these oid paths were? Yet there is no manifestation of regret over the departure from these old paths.

A young preacher in quite a late Conference, when being publicly censured for following the old paths in preaching the doctrine of sanctification, said to the presiding Bishop that he got his authority for so preaching from two books in the prescribed course of study, when the Bishop said, "Oh, but those books have been eliminated from the course."

Yet never a word of lament nor any great alarm was uttered about this sorrowful decadence of the one-time great doctrine that made the Church all-powerful and glorious.

The ciass meeting has gone, fast days are forgotten, the sacrament is neglected, and now the aitar is being looked upon with disfavor and gradually being abandoned, and yet all this spiritual decadence is causing no stir or aiarm, but a suggestion of a few changes in the polity of the Church has stirred things.

Let the Church get back in the old paths and regain its spiritual power; then all these minor detaiis of government will be rightly adjusted.

Meridian, Miss.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

FROM A LOUISIANA LAYMAN.

Editor Advocate: Several weeks ago Dr. S. A. Steel wrote two articles on the views held concerning the Negro by Northern and Southern Methodists that I wish every Northerner could read. Recently there appeared an article in your columns from the pen of Dr. S. H. Werlein on unification that I wish every Southern Methodist could read. He has the right spirit. The articles of Messrs Battle and Barbee did not appeal to me.

I have long thought the two large Methodist Churches should not invade each other's territory, even if they could or would not unite. I believe the Churches should, and eventually will, unite; but it will take time, wisdom and religion to bring them together on satisfactory terms.

I believe our Church should be organized on the plan of the U. S. Government—congressional districts to compare to presiding elders' districts, Bishops to U. S. Senators, and each Conference or State controlling its own church property, but the Methodist polity, doctrine, etc., being adhered to by the whole body. Then the "Yankees" couldn't get the best of us.

Anyway, isn't it about time the Massachusetts yankee and the Mississippi rebel were shaking hands? I think so.

Poor Negro! He is the bone of contention. I wish that I could have a heart-to-heart talk with every sensible, reasonably disposed Negro. They are not wanted in the white Church, not on account of religious reasons, but for racial reasons, of which man is not the author. I really believe that the colored people will become stronger, more self-reliant, and self-respecting when they assume responsibilities of a high order, and certainly the Church is one of the best agencies for their uplift. Where the colored brother has no church to attend, I believe we should provide for him to attend our church. In fact, I believe we whites should lend the colored race a helping hand in the church and out of it, but there is no doubt in my mind about the wisdom of the colored people owning their own churches, controlling their own Conferences and electing their Bishops or other officials.

I can't see why these "crack-o'-doom" fellows can object to that plan, nor can I see why these "red-headed" stand-patters (who have religion) can object to the Negro going in our church when he has none of his own to which to go. Let reason rule.

A METHODIST LAYMAN.

THOROUGHNESS NEEDED.

"Neglect reacts most seriously on character. The habit of doing things in a half-hearted and careless manner will grow upon the person doing things in this way. We must be careful to cultivate the habit of thoroughness. After a time it will become a part of ourselves. We all know people who cannot do any work except in the best way possible. Giving of their best is bone and flesh in their existence. Let us develop this method of work in our society. What wonderful results would be accomplished!"

STOPS TOBACCO HABIT.

Elder's Sanitarium, located at 503 Main St., St. Joseph Mo., has published a booklet showing the deadly effect of tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days at home. As they are distributing this book free, anyone wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.—Adv.

COMMENDATORY RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved (1), That we, as the M. E. Church, South, at New Albany, Miss., Official Board, voice our own estimate and that of the members of our church, and of the people generally, of the city of New Albany, in saying that, as a gentleman and citizen, we have found Rev. S. L. Pope one without reproach and one who commands the esteem of all who know him.

Resolved (2), That as the pastor of the Methodist Church here for the past four years he has been faithful and efficient, and that he shall always be lovingly remembered for what he has been and for what he has done. Under his pastorate the membership of our church has been largely increased, and our church has been made more active and aggressive in her work for the Lord.

Resolved (3), That we commend him to the people among whom he is to move and work as one worthy in every way of their highest respect.

Resolved (4), That the loss of him and his noble, Christian wife by our community will be the gain of those among whom they labor elsewhere, as all their words and works are ordered for the good of their fellow-beings.

Resolved (5), That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the Gazette, and our Christian Advocate in New Orleans for publication.

SHOOT A SOLDIER WITH A CIGARETTE.

We are scientifically correct and ethically right in opposing the use of tobacco. It seems a small thing to spend time on when men everywhere favor "Lady Nicotine." We have spoken out not because of moral conviction, but because of scientific knowledge. Recently we quoted Dr. Quackenbos, the great psychologist and physiologist, whose language was of a positive character. We have set our standard against giving cigarettes to the soldiers. Not from a moral point of view, but because they are absolutely hurtful to the human constitution.

We now have another eminent authority supporting this position. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of Battle Greek, Michigan, writing in Association Men, recently said: "The American stock is depreciating, physically, mentally, and morally. The causes are many. Among the most potent and direct are: The saloon, the brothel, and the cigarette. These three evils are the greatest causes of our growing national inefficiency and unpreparedness. The saloon is passing. John Barleycorn is dying. But we have not begun to fight the brothel, and we are encouraging the deadly cigarette.

"The cigarette is known to be an enemy of scholarship, of culture, of morals, of health and vigor, and yet it is tolerated, even encouraged. The millions of cigarettes now being fired at our soldiers will many a one hit its mark and do its mischief. More American soldiers will be damaged by the cigarette than by German bullets.

"A campaign must be waged against the cigarette, the pipe, and the cigar, until tobacco is buried in the same grave with Barleycorn." Think of it, these are not the words of a reformer, a preacher, or faddist, but of a physician, a scientist, a physiologist, a biologist, a psychologist, a man of the widest experience in dealing with sick folks as a specialist.

In opposing the use of tobacco, and especially cigarettes, fortify your position by the words of the great scientists of the country. Your opposition need not be based on sentiment. It does not need to be apologized for. Take your ground and maintain the conviction that the use of tobacco is wrong because it is physically harmful.—The Western Christian Advocate.

NO TIME TO PRAY.

D. L. Moody.

There is many a business man today who will tell you that he has no time to pray; his business is so pressing that he can not call his family around him and ask God to bless them. He is so busy that he can not ask God to keep him and them from the temptations of the present life—the temptations of every day. "Business is so pressing!". I am reminded of the words of an old Methodist minister, "If you have so much business to attend to that you have no time to pray, depend upon it that you have more business on hand than God ever intended you should have."

But look at Daniel. He had the whole, or nearly the whole, of the king's business to attend to. He was prime minister, secretary of State, secretary of the treasury, all in one. He had to attend to all his own work and to give an eye to the work of lots of other men. And yet he found time to pray—not just now and then, nor once in a day; not just when he happened to have a few moments to spare, but "three times a day."

A USE FOR HORSE CHESTNUTS.

The lack of foodstuffs in Europe has brought many hitherto neglected materials into use. Thus, both in England and in Germany ways have been found to use horse chestnuts, which, though bitter and unpalatable, contain a large amount of nutritive matter. In England the chestnuts are being collected this year for some purpose not specified, but they will replace large quantities of corn. It is estimated that a ton of chestnuts will be equivalent to half a ton of corn. As the crop of nuts this year promises to be very large, it is hoped that several thousand tons of nuts a week can be collected. A single large tree will bear on an average from three thousand to four thousand nuts, the aggregate weight of which is from sixty to eighty pounds. Even before the war, investigators had found various uses for horse chestnuts. From the shells, which are rich in tannin, an extract for tanning leather is made. The kernel contains a small quantity of oil similar to almond oil, and also aesculic acid, a saponaceous substance that has excellent lathering and cleansing properties. The residue, almost half of the kernel can be converted into white starch. After the nuts have been boiled in several changes of water and the dried kernels have been ground, almost all animals will eat the meal.—The Youth's Companion.

THE LIBERTY BELL.

Here are some things about the bell it would be well to cut out and paste in your scrapbook: July 4, 1776, the bell was rung for the proclamation of the Declaration of Independence.

October 24, 1781, the bell rang out for the surrender of Cornwallis.

April 16, 1783, it rang out for the proclamation of peace.

September 29, 1824, it rang to welcome Lafayette to the Hall of Independence.

July 4, 1826, it ushered in the year of Jubilee, fiftieth anniversary of the Republic.

July 24, 1826, it tolled for the death of Thomas Jefferson.

July 4, 1831, is the last recorded ringing of this famous bell to commemorate the day of independence.

February 22, 1832, is its last recorded ringing to commemorate the birth of Washington.

In the same year it tolled the death of the last survivor of the Declaration, Charles Carroll, of Carrollton.

July 2, 1834, it tolled once more. Lafayette was dead.

July 8, 1835, while being tolled for the death of Chief Justice John Marshall, a crack was developed, starting from the rim and inclining in a right-hand direction toward the crown.

Another attempt was made to ring it on Washington's birthday, February 22, 1843, but the fracture was so much increased that no attempt has ever been made to ring it since. Its voice is now silent, and yet it will ring in the hearts of all patriotic people so long as the name of liberty shall last. —Leaves of Light.

HIS ENGLISH.

"The King of Siam," said a diplomat, "who is the latest power to declare war on Germany, prides himself upon his English.

"When the King last visited London he met the late Lord Kitchener, whose Egyptian triumphs were still fresh.

"Desirous of telling Lord Kitchener that he was born to command, the Siamese monarch said:

"'Brave lord, you was made to order.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A BAD TEMPER.

"Do you think he is a Christian?" a native of India asked a missionary, concerning an American whose outburst of anger he had just witnessed.

"Certainly," replied the missionary, "but he has a bad temper."

The missionary did not fail to notice a look of incredulity on the face of the questioner, and it set him thinking. It was evident that to say, "This man is a Christian, but he has a bad temper," was as illogical to this native's mind as to have said, "He is a perjurer, or a blasphemer, but a Christian."

John Wesley would have agreed with the native. He said, "I would as lief swear as scold." In truth, there is much blasphemy in scolding. The Apostle James condemns the inconsistency of him who blesses God and speaks unkindly to men who are made in God's image.

Persons who have evil tempers often excuse themselves by saying, with a kind of pride:

"You know, I have such a bad temper."

Sometimes a quick temper goes with a warm and generous nature, but it also goes with narrowness of vision. The person who acknowledges a bad temper should say:

"I have a mind too narrowed either by nature or by habit to permit of my seeing both sides of a subject at once, and so lacking in control that I fly into a fury when I see only one side."

The Christian religion, unlike Oriental faiths, does not place emphasis upon mere submissiveness; it seeks to make men strong and courageous rather than negatively submissive. But it also teaches self-control, and should establish it in the lives of all who profess to believe in Christ. Greater than he that taketh a city is he who ruleth his own spirit.—The Youth's Companion.

LITERARY NOTICE.

God's Minute.—New Holiday Edition. A book of 365 daily prayers—60 seconds long arranged in calendar form—a prayer to a page, with a verse of Scripture at the top of the page on encouragement to worship. The prayers were written expressly for this book by 365 of the most eminent evangelical clergymen and laymen in the English-speaking world. Purple cloth, gold top, stamped in gold, 384 pages; price, 50 cents net; (plain cloth, 35 cents.) The Vir Publishing Company, 200 North Fifteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"Lord, teach us to pray," one of the early disciples asked the Master, and that prayer is now being repeated by millions of anxious souls in these perplexing and distressing times. To all such, this book will come as a benediction. It will quicken and inspire a devotional spirit, and will re-light the altar fires that have died out in many homes. It is packed full of devout, inspiring thoughts and aspirations. Anyone reading one of these short prayers every morning, earnestly and quietly, cannot but be the better for it during the day. It not only has value as a prayer book, but it is a mirror, unconsciously revealing the deep spiritual character of each of these many contributors. There is no book published like it, and it can have no substitute. It will be one of the choicest gift books of the season for fathers, mothers, sons, daughters and friends, and it would be fine to see that our soldier or sailor boy has a copy to read in the trenches or camp, or on the deck of the boat as it plows through the dangerous seas. Among the contributors to the book are Wilfred T. Grenfell, Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, Reverends John Clifford, F. B. Meyer, Washington Gladden, Hugh Black, Timothy Stone, Bishop Quayle, Russell H. Conwell, David J. A. L. Burrell, Ira Landrith, Floyd W. Tomkins, Bishop Woodcock, Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice, Miss Eva Booth, Maud B. Booth, President E. Y. Mullins and many others eminent in the evangelical religious world. Since its publication just one year ago, four large editions have been issued.

THE HUMAN TOUCH.

There must be the sensitive touch A visitor to a manufactory saw a man molding clay into pots. Noticing that all the molding was done by hand, he said to the workman, "Why do you not use a tool to aid you in shaping the clay?" The workman replied: "There is no tool that can do this work. We have tried different ones, but somehow it needs the human touch." And how true it is that in shaping lives for God, there is need of the human touch. We can not do the Lord's work by machinery. Jesus touched men, imparting health, cleansing, and salvation.—Biblical Recorder.

WHERE GOD CALLS.

Let us not shirk the duty because it is hard. That may be the very thing we ought to do. The story is called to mind of a preacher who had received a number of calls and who was somewhat perplexed as to which one he ought to accept. Finally, he called his old African servant and asked him what he thought. The old colored man never hesitated, but at once spoke up, "Massa, go where there is the most devil."—Christian Intelligencer.

PERTINENT.

Terrible, sorrowful things are before our eyes, but our enthusiasm may do much. Great advantages sometimes necessarily bring great evils, but it is not so with the evils of Christian civilization: they are not necessary. Jesus Christ never proposed the happiness of the greatest number; He proposed the greatest happiness of every one.—W. L. Watkinson.

The Holy Spirit will guide us into all truth, if we have the patience to be guided.—Dean Hodges.

FACTS WORTH QUOTING.

One hundred and nineteen Protestant missionary societies have work in Africa. They enroll 72,000 adult Church members and 207,000 in the Sunday schools.

In the Southern States there is an average of more than three churches to every thousand people, only one-third of whom are church members. In other parts of the world there are communities of a million people without a church or a missionary.

The Indians of Peru live more like animals than like human beings. Ignored by officials, priests, landlords, and traders, without schools, they are daily falling lower in the scale of civilization. They greatly need missionary schools to uplift them.

Christian industrial education in Africa is transforming naked heathens into intelligent Christian men and women. Formerly they knew no use for a needle and their only idea of clothing was for ornament. Consequently, a man or woman might come to school wearing only a hat.

Many Americans think vaguely of the Indians as living "somewhere out West," and would be surprised to learn that there are eight Indian reservations in New York State.

Genuine idolatry is so prevalent in Mexico that converts to evangelical Christianity, like those in India or China, bring the objects of their former worship to be destroyed.

According to police records, there are five thousand abandoned children on the streets of Buenos Aires, and their principal occupations are gambling and smoking. This is another proof of the vast field which South America offers for the Sunday school.

Turkish cruelty in recent months has been especially directed toward the Greeks, of whom there are said to be at least 500,000 in need of relief in Turkey alone.

After the destruction by an earthquake of a famous pagoda in Burma, a Buddhist nun, who had been connected with the shrine, was found among the ruins moaning, "My god has died! My god has gone!"

New problems of expansion confront a little church in Peking which seats only 230 people, and yet in which, as a result of special meetings, over 600 people indicated their desire to become Christians.

The Loo Choo Islands, in Southern Japan, with a population of over 500,000 whose standards, both educational and moral, are very low, present an almost wholly unoccupied and very needy mission field.—Missionary Review of the World.

SOME FACTS BROUGHT OUT BY THE WAR.

The great Churches in the nations that have been at war the last three years, though they have borne heavy burdens, have with few exceptions not curtailed, and without exception have not withdrawn, their foreign missionary undertakings. The London Missionary Society last year cleared off a large indebtedness and carried forward its work without diminution. The Wesleyan Society received the largest income that it has ever received in its entire history. The Methodist Church in Canada had a larger income than it had ever had in any year of peace. Adding all together, the missionary societies for the year ending March 31, 1914, exceeded considerably the income of the year before the war.

One hundred and thirty American missionary societies gave last year $24,000,000, an average of less than one dollar per capita for the Protestant membership of the Churches in the United States. Are we to be so reduced that our Protestant Church-members, cannot contribute one dollar per annum per capita to maintain these undertakings abroad? We can pay all our taxes and do all our other duties and perform this one also with no memorable sacrifice.

Have the principles changed on which the undertaking rests, or have the world facts that we face been altered by new conditions that have now arisen, except to be made more urgent? The "great commission" was not given in any time of ease, nor was it conditioned upon the softness of obedience and accomplishment. It was given in far more strenuous and difficult days even than those that we confront now. Nothing justifies us for one moment in considering that it will be necessary for us to abridge our work of world evangelization.—Robert E. Speer.

IMPRESSIONS OF JAPAN AND CHOSEN BY DR. FRED B. FISHER.

Japan shows material advancement on every hand; courtesy abounds; unique and artistic dress; smiling faces; children everywhere and always; flowers of all colors, both natural and artificial; maidens in kimonas, as though they had stepped off a fan or tea box; scenery both in mountain and plain; water plentiful; gardens clean and luxuriant; energy and vivacity evident in every action and gesture of the people. Ambition and pride mark the men, while shy obedience and smiling coquettishness show forth in the women. Their characteristics fascinated us. We fell in love with the Japanese at first sight.

Passing on to Korea, now renamed Chosen by the Japanese rulers, there was opportunity to see Japan at work as a colonizer. Here, too, material advance is the main impression. Spiritual and moral purpose and goal are absent. The Governor-General, the Minister of the Home Department, the Minister of Education, and other officials are high-minded and courteous men, justly proud of achievements during the six years since annexation. After meeting other provincial authorities, Korea students and merchants, missionaries and native pastors, Japanese travelers, European and American residents—and having questioned them all—the conclusion is that Japanese occupation has given the Koreans the best government they have ever had. It is likewise giving them the best economic and educational opportunities they have known.

One cannot get away from the feeling that economic betterment is the crying need of the Oriental peoples. What squalor in the village! It is hopeless to bring them to a better life unless the Christianity we carry them lifts the standard of living. They need to be saved not only from a future hell, but from the hell in which they now live, and not only to some future heaven, but to a heaven here on earth. For this very reason one wishes the Japanese would show educational, moral and spiritual devotion as well as material efficiency.

Efficiency and unity are the watchwords of Japan. She sees the need of Oriental uplift and feels that her position gives her the preeminent right to attempt to lead all the East along her path. She looks upon herself as the link between the Occident and the Orient. Her mission must be to take the best of each and give it to the other. It is a high ambition and worthy of a nation's devotion. If she were less selfish in her approach she could maintain the world of her sincerity. That now Japan is placing much faith in the Islam mission to the United States. If good fellowship and real cooperation are established between the United States and Japan, I believe the future tranquility and progress of the Pacific East will be assured.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of your rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

THE GRACE OF LIBERALITY NEEDED.

Dear Mr. Editor: I was much pleased to see your plea for the "collections in full" in a recent issue of your valuable paper. It seems to me it is grieving the very Spirit of God the way some do about such needful work. I was present a few weeks ago at a church in a well-to-do community. After listening to an excellent sermon, in hearing which we drank at the fountain of life, the pastor took up the Conference collections. It amounted to about $19. I don't see how any man who is worth several thousand dollars and who is making money so fast it would make your head swim, can be little enough to say, "I'll give a dollar," when a worthy cause is being presented, and pretend he is supporting the Church and its institutions. We don't really give until we have paid a tenth. Then it is that we bring offerings. I fear that there are very few who bring any real offerings.

I can't see why the people want to make a hard place to fill harder by neglecting their duty to the pastor. If they could imagine they were old and worn out in the service of the church and dependent on some one, or think of the missionaries and what they sacrifice for their Lord, while depending on us to support them, they might see differently. We can't all go to foreign fields, but it is our duty to help those who give up all and go to enlighten the benighted nations who have never heard of our loving Savior. And it was such a noble work that the Church took up when it reached out to help the orphans. I can't see how any person of means can refuse to open his purse to so noble a cause. We should all read and practice the last 12 verses of the 25th chapter of Matthew. Why pray "Thy kingdom come" and block the way it is to come?

A FRIEND TO THE CHURCH.

A Fight for Life

It has been fight or die for many of us in the past and the lucky people are those who have suffered, but who are now well because they heeded nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that wonderful new discovery of Dr. Pierce's, called "An-u-ric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as Bright's disease, diabetes or stone in the bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal, take Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of Anuric, as are thousands of neighbors.

SYLACAUGA, ALA.—"I suffered greatly with my back and kidneys. I called in doctors and they did me no good, but recommended an operation. I saw Anuric for kidneys and backache advertised so sent up to the drug store and got a package, and it cured me. This was one year ago. I was down in bed and had taken many different kinds of medicines but obtained no relief from them."—A. W. CUMBIE.

CAESAR, MISS.—"This is to certify I have been taking Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets for uric acid and kidney trouble, and would say to anyone who is afflicted with such, please, for your health's sake, try Anuric without delay. I had used several different remedies but to no avail, now I am recommending Anuric Tablets far and wide.

"I have known of Dr. Pierce's Remedies for 20 years, they are well worth using."—B. J. WILLIAMS.

Step into the drug store and ask for Anuric, or send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c. for trial pkg. Anuric—many times more potent than lithia, eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar.

You Can Tell The People Who Have Iron in Their Blood —Strong, Healthy, Vigorous Folks

Doctor Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Nervous Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"One glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood," said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European Medical institutions, in a recent discourse. They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the weakling class. Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore, nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The moment iron is supplied the multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the time, double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of every sign of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without any benefit.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. There is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and sound, healthy flesh on your bones. But you must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

NOTE—Nuxated iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Field

Cochrane, Ala.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am honored by being assigned to Cochrane, Alabama, in the Columbus (Miss.) District, which affords a different and somewhat larger opportunity than at my former place —Main Street Church, Water Valley. God is evidently with the Main Street people, and we had a year of interest and of gains. Cochrane is in a territory of successful planters and merchants of considerable wealth. Mrs. Williams has been shouting, and the pastor has not fallen from grace. We are trusting for God's benedictions, and for a year of real prosperity.—A. H. Williams.

Oxford, Miss., Nov. 25, 1917.

Greenwood, La.

Dear Advocate: Perhaps a few words concerning my work will not be amiss, as I have not used much of your war-time ink and paper this year. We have not made a failure by any means. I have had seven preaching places this year, including work at the Caddo Parish Farm. Two Sundays in the month I preach three times each Sunday, and the other two Sundays I preach four times each. Sundays are my greatest days. We have had so many interests to look after that we have not made a successful canvass for the dear Advocate, but I promise you at least 15 names soon. Our Conference collections will be in full, with perhaps a deficit on the assessments for ministerial support. We have built a splendid new church at Flournoy this year, where I had preached in a box car and under the trees previously. The church has on it only a small debt for the seating and a few other items. We began the brick work and footings for our new brick church at Greenwood several weeks ago, and, in spite of delays in the shipment of material, the bricklayers are making rapid progress. When completed, the plant will be adequate and durable, and, with the grounds, will be worth $10,000 or more. The corner-stone will be laid Sunday. All things considered, we have had a great year. Love to all the brethren.—J. Cude Rousseaux.

Nov. 23, 1917.

Bogue Chitto and Norfield, Miss. Conf.

As pastor, I am closing my second year here. There are some loyal hearts here who have stood by the Master's cause. Changing conditions, incident to mill towns and occasioned by the war, have not shaken our faith in God nor turned us from our purpose to do God's work through the organized channels of the Church. In this charge the departments of the Church may lack some elements of perfection, but we are working on them. The Sunday schools have not reached the standards of efficiency as required, but we are reaching after the ideal. At Bogue Chitto, Brother B. E. Brister is the superintendent, and his wife is the adult Bible teacher. Considering the amount of business to which Brother Brister gives his personal attention, I doubt if there is a man in our whole connection who gives more thought and attention to the Sunday school work than he does. He has not let any condition or the projection of any new cause, however important, have precedence over his school work or shake it from its moorings, but in a remarkable manner has held it steady on its way.

At Norfield, Brother N. J. Simpson is the superintendent. He is a supply, the regular superintendent having moved away in the middle of the year. He has wrought well—his teachers have stood by him, and you would not know that he is a supply unless you were told. Our Missionary Societies are far from our ideal and have not done as much local work as last year, but the pastor has used quite a number of the ladies to swell the Conference collections, and as a consequence the total amount will be raised at one of the appointments and a large increase over last year will be shown at the other appointments, and the pastor is hoping that they also will pay in full. A number of young men having left for the war and the unsettled condition existing among those left makes the working of the Epworth League almost impossible, but we are holding on and are planning for better things. Our Board of Stewards will compare favorably with any board in our Conference in their thoughtfulness of the work and their considerateness of their pastor. I wish I could tell of each one, but space forbids; and the people have not let many weeks pass in the two years that I have served as pastor without some token of love. We have had several valuable "poundings," besides continual remembrances of a substantial kind. Mr. Editor, you could hardly grant me space to name the persons and tell their deeds of kindness to me, but they are recorded in heaven and are indelibly fixed in my heart. I only wish that I could tell the world about them, and I do often talk to the Heavenly Father about them.—Waldo W. Moore, Pastor.

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

HIGHLY COMMENDED.

(Resolutions adopted by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Wainut Grove charge, Newton District, Miss. Conference, on Nov. 19, 1917.)

Whereas, by the law of our Church, our beloved pastor, Rev. E. H. Cooley, must be appointed to another charge for the coming year; therefore be it

Resolved (1), That we hereby give expression to our high esteem for him as a Christian gentleman and as a minister of Jesus Christ.

Resolved (2), That we assure him of a warm place in our hearts, and that we shall cherish him as a friend and brother, following him with our prayers and loving interest.

Resolved (3), That we commend him to the people of the charge to which he may be appointed as a tender-hearted, faithful pastor, whose attention to the old and to the young, as well as to those of middle age, prove him a true man of God.

Resolved (4), That these resolutions be spread on our Minutes and that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

THE CRISIS

There comes a time in the life of practically every man and woman when their digestive or eliminative organs, or both, fail to respond to drugs prepared by human skill. In fact drugs seem to do them about as much harm as good for their systems rebel against all drugs. These are the cases which physicians call "stubborn" and "chronic" for the reason that they persist in spite of drug treatment. I do not refer to incurable diseases such as cancer and consumption, but to that larger class of functional disorders which we meet every day, where the organs of digestion and elimination are impaired.

For this class of cases our best physicians and our big city specialists send their wealthy patients to the mineral springs where, in the great majority of cases they are permanently restored or decidedly benefited. But what about the poor man who has not the money or the busy man or woman who cannot spare the time to spend several weeks or possibly months at a health resort? Shall circumstances deny them the restoration to health which Nature has provided? Read my answer in the coupon at the bottom of this page.

I have the utmost confidence in the Shivar Mineral Spring Water for to it I owe my Restoration to Health and probably my Life. It has made me tens of thousands of friends in all parts of America and even in foreign countries, whose faces I have never seen. Yet I count them my friends for the Shivar Spring Water has bound them to me by lasting gratitude.

I ask you to read their letters, a few samples of which I publish below for your benefit, and if you find among them any encouragement as to your own health do not hesitate to accept my offer which has no limits or conditions except those shown on the coupon. If you could read the letters that come to me daily, numbering about ten thousand a year, and the vast majority of them similar to those printed below, you would not wonder that I make this offer displaying my absolute confidence in the restorative powers of Shivar Mineral Water.

INDIGESTION

Savannah, Georgia.

I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effect. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

A. L. P. AVANT, M. D.

La Grange, Ga., Nov. 25, 1914.

I feel it my duty to suffering humanity to make public announcement of the benefits I have derived from Shivar Spring Water. I have been a sufferer for the past twenty-five years from indigestion and dyspepsia. After one week's trial of Shivar Water I commenced to improve, and after drinking it for four weeks I gained fifteen pounds. I feel better and stronger than I have in twenty-five years. I strongly recommend this Water to any one with stomach trouble of any character, and truly believe it will cure ulcer of the stomach. I am writing this voluntarily and trust it will fall in the hands of many who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with indigestion and nervous dyspepsia.

C. V. TRUITT,
President Unity Cotton Mills.

Johnston, S. C.

I wish to add my testimony to the wonderful curative powers of the Shivar Mineral Water. For a number of years my wife has been a sufferer from indigestion and nervous debility, and her condition had reached such a stage as to baffle the skill of our most eminent physicians. Her extreme nervousness and heart troubles at times were alarming and she had become almost a nervous wreck. The latter part of last May she began using the Shivar Water, which she has continued to this date with most satisfactory results.

Editor Johnston News-Monitor.

DYSPEPSIA

Blaney, S. C.

I have suffered for many years from gastric troubles, stomach puffed and food sour. I have tried many remedies and a good many waters. Some have helped, but none have given me such relief as your Spring Water. I use it and recommend it to my patients.

W. D. GRIGGSBY, M. D.

Baltimore, Md., April 30, 1914.

For many years I suffered with stomach trouble as a direct result of asthma. I consulted the very best specialist in this country, and spent quite a large sum of money in my endeavor to get relief. However, I had about come to the conclusion that my case was hopeless, but by accident I happened to get hold of one of your booklets, and decided to try Shivar Spring Water. After drinking the water for about three weeks I was entirely relieved, and since that time have suffered but little inconvenience from my trouble. I cheerfully recommend the use of your Water to any one that may be suffering from stomach trouble.

OSCAR T. SMITH,
Vice-Pres. Young & Selden Co., Bank Stationers.

RHEUMATISM

Leeds, S. C.

I have used your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M. D.

Fredericksburg, Va.

Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement.

WM. C. CARTER.

Roper, N. C., Oct. 30, 1914.

I am anxious to get more of the Water. It has done me more good than anything I have ever tried for rheumatism.

MRS. H. C. EDWARDS.

Florence, S. C., Dec. 1, 1911.

I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble, and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your Spring Water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it.

MRS. THEO. KUKER.

Warrenton, Va., Nov. 24, 1914.

It is doing my rheumatism so much good. My limbs are beginning to feel like new ones.

MRS. JAMES R. CARTER.

BILIOUSNESS

Greenville, S. C., Feb. 28, 1914.

For over two years, following a nervous breakdown, I have suffered with a liver so torpid that ordinary remedies were absolutely powerless. Under such circumstances, I came to Shivar Spring, and began drinking the Water. Upon advice however, the first night I took a laxative; the second night a milder one. Since then I have taken none at all. The effect of the water has been remarkable—its action on my liver most marked, and my health and spirits greatly improved. I am satisfied that the laxative, followed by the Water, was the proper treatment in my case. My condition is now perfect.

S. A. DERIEUX.

Buena Vista, Va., Oct. 2, 1914.

It is a great pleasure to tell you that your Water has been a great benefit. I may say a great blessing, to me. My wife says it has helped me more than anything else I ever tried. I have been, for thirty years, a sufferer from stomach trouble.

REV. E. H. ROWE,
Co-President Southern Seminary.

LIVER AND KIDNEY

Ohoopee, Ga., Aug. 21, 1914.

I feel that it is due you that I should give my testimony, unsolicited, as to the benefits derived from the use of your Shivar Springs Water. I was unable to do my work, and had been under the treatment of physicians for six months for kidney and liver troubles when I decided to try your Spring Water, and now after using it for about thirty days I am able to do my work, feel good, and have gained about twenty pounds. I most heartily recommend its use to all who suffer from disorder of the liver and kidneys.

M. L. STEPHENS.

Carlisle, S. C.

It is fine for liver troubles, also for constipation. I cheerfully give you this information as to beneficial results in my case.

REV. A. McA. PITTMAN.

RENAL AND CYSTIC

Columbia, S. C.

I suffered for eight years with kidney trouble and inflammation of the bladder to the extent that I would have to get up during the night some five or six times. After using this water only a few days, I am entirely relieved, and suffer no more effect of the trouble whatever.

J. P. D.

Virginia, Va., March 26, 1914.

Your Water has done me more good than anything I ever tried for bladder trouble.

A. P. F.

Wesley, Ga., May 12, 1914.

I had been down with bladder trouble. Couldn't stand on my feet three minutes at a time. In three days after I commenced drinking your Mineral Water my pain was all gone, could walk where I pleased, and felt like a new man.

S. B. D.

High Point, N. C., Oct. 8, 1914.

My wife has had a bad kidney trouble for several years. She has been using the water only about three weeks and it has already made her a new woman. Her color is much improved, her appetite is all that she could wish for, her digestion seems to be perfect. We give Shivar Springs credit for it all.

GALLSTONES

Greenville, S. C.

Shivar Spring Water cured my mother of gallstones, or, I might say, it snatched her from the hospital door, as the doctors had said nothing short of an operation would do her any good. After drinking the Water she was able to get out of bed, and is today stout and healthy. I hope these few lines will be of help to some one suffering as my mother did.

W. J. STRAWN.

Williamston, N. C. Oct. 8, 1914.

My doctor said I would have to be operated on for gallstones, but since I have been drinking your water I haven't had to have a doctor.

W. H. EDWARDS.

Columbia, S. C.

My wife was a chronic sufferer from gallstones. She was stricken critically ill, and nothing but morphine seemed to relieve her pain by rendering her unconscious. My physician, who is a good one, seemed to do very little good. Rev. A. J. Foster, pastor of Shandon Baptist Church of Columbia, S. C., advised me to take her immediately to Shivar Spring. On consulting my physician he agreed that it would be best to do so without delay. In about three days after arriving at the Spring she was apparently relieved and had regained her appetite. She has suffered no ill effect of the trouble since. Please publish this for the benefit of sufferers.

URIC ACID & DIABETES

Chancellor, Ala.

I have been for many years affected with uric acid and kidney trouble, and the Mineral Water has helped me more than anything I have ever done for them and therefore heartily recommend same to all who need a speedy relief and cure.

W. F. MATHENY, M. D.

THE BRAVE AT HOME.

The maid who binds her warrior's sash
With smile that well her pain dissembles,
The while beneath her drooping lash
One starry teardrop hangs and trembles,
Though heaven alone records the tear,
And fame shall never know her story,
Her heart has shed a drop as dear
As e'er bedewed the field of glory!

The wife who girds her husband's sword,
'Mid little ones who weep or wonder,
And bravely speaks the cheering word,
What though her heart be rent asunder,
Doomed nightly in her dreams to hear
The bolts of death around him rattle,
Hath shed as sacred blood as e'er
Was poured upon the field of battle!

The mother who conceals her grief
While to her breast her son she presses,
Then breathes a few brave words and brief,
Kissing the patriot brow she blesses,
With no one but her secret God
To know the pain that weighs upon her,
Sheds holy blood as e'er the sod
Received on Freedom's field of honor!

AN OLD TUNE NEWLY RAISED.

There are abroad in the land many would-be saviors of the Southern Methodist Church—persons who tell us that this or that must be done or "Ichabod" will soon be written above our altars. One class of these rescuers proclaim that the only hope for our denomination in the future is in a union with the Northern Methodist Church (which they know can only come as an absorption); that if we do not consent to unification, Texas, Missouri, Oklahoma, and the Far West will desert us and that we shall "soon lose out." Oh, the pity of it! Such a representation is, in our opinion, little less than a libeling of the Southern Methodists in these States. Obviously Bishop Earl Cranston, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, does not concur in the view that the Southern Methodist Church is in danger of "losing out." In his book on unification, "Breaking Down the Walls" (page 115), he says: "Referring now to the outline Plan proposed by the General Conference of the Church, South, it is to be observed, first, that it comes from a Church of two million members to one of nearly double that number. But the smaller body is a strong, commanding, and rapidly growing Church, with every indication favorable to its continued advance in numbers and influence. Its footing is firm and sure in all its original territory."

Another class of deliverers would save our Church by a so-called "democratization." The Episcopacy in particular must be revolutionized and whittled down, etc.; but nothing is being said about despotic General Boards, some of which are seeking increasing independence of the General Conference and are endeavoring to set up an untrammeled bureaucratic reign (the secret of this omission is not hard to discover). The slogan is that unless these apostles of democracy are allowed to have their way "OTHER DENOMINATIONS WILL TAKE THE COUNTRY."

This tune has been heard in the land before. Brother O'Kelley sang it, but where to-day is his "Republican Church" that was going to set the world afire? It was sung by the agitators who wanted an elective presiding eldership and numerous other innovations in the early decades of the last century, and who, when they could not have their own way, withdrew and organized the Methodist Protestant Church; but the ecclesiastical machinery with which they were going to wake the nations did not pan out the expected results. In the language of the brilliant Walter Malone, "Its promise was the eagle's—its performance that of the sparrow." Let Bishop McTyeire speak concerning it:

"Into the Methodist Protestant Church, at Baltimore, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati, and several other places went many of the best and wealthiest laymen of the old Church; and not a few ministers (mostly local) of ability and high character cast their lot with them—Asa Shinn, Nicholas Stethen ("the silver trumpet" of Bishop Asbury), Cornelius Springer, and more. A pure doctrine has been ministered at its altars; and while the denomination has not prospered, not a few bright examples of devout congregations and of personal piety have adorned it. Its ministers and press have never been without strong men, and the members have been generous. Its polity is marked with an extreme jealousy of power, which is lodged nowhere, but 'distributed'; and there are guards and balances and checks. A break on the wheels of a railroad train is a good thing to keep from going too fast; but a railroad train constructed upon the principle of a break, will not go at all. This honor belongs to the Methodist Protestant Church: its one good, peculiar principle—lay delegation—has in late years been incorporated into the chief Methodist bodies of Europe and America. * * * An irrepressible cause of discontent and schism was thus removed by a secession (by the establishment of the Methodist Protestant Church), which carried with it ministers and members who were followed with sincere regret. Then the Church had rest for a season and entered upon an era of unprecedented prosperity. Accessions made up for secessions, and showed an increase in ministers and members every year."

We commend to those who are getting ready to preach the funeral of the Southern Methodist Church unless she hearkens to their voices the following inspiring words spoken by Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson at the last session of our General Conference at Oklahoma City:

"Our Church had to go through the calamity of the war broken, and when the war ceased there seemed but little prospect of its survival. Every force in the land was against it; and yet it gathered itself up in the strength of its great Leader and Head, determined to pursue its course unflinchingly in spite of appearances and evil conditions. And it grew steadily until in its course it outstripped every form of Methodism in its gain, its conquests over sin and the world, on the continent. It was a surprise to me, I confess, that at the Ecumenical Conference at Toronto, when the reports of the gains of Methodism on the continent in all its branches were spread out (for ten years), it was seen that our own Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had made more than half of all the gains that the Church had made. (This was only six years ago.) We may well congratulate ourselves upon such a reward of fidelity to the Church and to God. Only God could have brought us through with such measures of gain."

A NOTE FROM BISHOP HOSS.

My Dear Dr. Meek: I write this brief note to say that I was never worse disappointed in my life than I was at my inability to be present at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference. In the good providence of God, I was present at the opening of the Virginia Conference. The brethren gave me a most cordial welcome, and the business started off most smoothly. From the first hour, the Spirit of the Lord was present in the proceedings. I have never known a more auspicious opening of a Conference session. But on the third day my strength unexpectedly collapsed, and I was compelled to resign the presidency entirely into the hands of Bishop Denny, who had kindly consented, at great inconvenience to himself, to come to Lynchburg to assist me in any emergency. Fortunately, the Conference, therefore, suffered no loss whatever. My old student and good friend, Bishop Waterhouse, though in feeble health, was also present and ready to render whatever help was necessary.

I felt sure at first that I should be able to get up and meet my engagement at Minden. But my case grew so much worse that my physician, Dr. John W. Carroll, of Lynchburg, and my son, Dr. Sessler Hoss, agreed that it would be utterly out of the question for me to undertake any other duty; and in this opinion I finally but reluctantly concurred. When I reached this conclusion, I could only drop a brief note to Bishop Murrah, not being strong enough to write him at length. It was just like him to take up my task for me. He has never at any time failed in brotherly courtesy toward me.

Except very briefly, I have not yet heard from Minden, but I am sure that everything went on without me as well as it would have gone on with me. Nevertheless, I deeply grieve over the fact that I could not be there.

My journey home from Lynchburg was a hard and trying one, but I got here safely at last. My son, who was doubtful for some days about the issue with me, now assures me that I am definitely on the up-grade, and may hope to recover my health and strength. The will of God be done! Whether I come back to life and duty, or go into the eternal world, it is all right. I have never had so pronounced a sense of my personal unworthiness, coupled with so strong a faith in the abiding compassion of my Heavenly Father.

My love to all the brethren and other friends.

E. E. HOSS.

Muskogee, Okla., Dec. 7, 1917.

GOD'S WISHES.

"God wants our best. He is the lav-of ages
Love cannot be finding of the best
The finest of the wheat
And still He asks He own with gentlest pleading
To lay their highest hopes and mightiest talents at His feet.
He'll not forget the fullest service, humblest love,
He only asks that of our store, we give it Him the best we have

"And is our best too much" I freedom, let us remember
How once our Lord poured out His soul for us
And in the prime of His mysterious manhood
Gave up His precious life upon the cross
The Lord of hosts by whom the worlds were made.
Through bitter grief and tears, gave of the best He had."

SHARE YOUR GOOD THINGS.

Happiness is a cloak that is always big enough to stretch and cover two. Be sure you find some one to "go halves with," no matter what the nice thing is that happens to you. A little boy came into the house one day with a very sober face. He wanted a playmate. "All the nice games are made for two—or a lot," he said. "Even candy doesn't taste good without some one to divide it with and help you eat it."—Christian Intelligencer.

A CONTRAST IN HEREDITY.

One of the most striking illustrations of heredity is given in the following contrast between two families and their offspring: "One is that of the notorious and worthless Max Jux (born 1720). From this man there have been identified 1200 descendants, of whom 300 died in childhood, 300 went to the poorhouse, 440 were viciously diseased, 400 were physical wrecks, fifty were notorious prostitutes, seven were murderers, sixty habitual thieves, averaging twelve years in prison, 130 were convicted of crime. Not one descendant of that family ever contributed to the social welfare and uplift. Their cost to society, actual and potential, has been $1,250,000. Of the distinguished divine, Jonathan Edwards (born 1703), there have been identified 1394 descendants. Among these were 295 college graduates, twelve college presidents, sixty-five college professors, sixty physicians, 100 clergymen and musicians, seventy-five army and navy officers, sixty noted authors, 100 lawyers, thirty judges, eighty public officers, one Vice-President, and three United States Senators. Their value to society has been inestimable."—Kind Words.

"MAJESTIC SWEETNESS."

In "Majestic Sweetness" we discover this pen picture of the Christ: "How shall we describe the moral beauty of that life of lives? How shall we characterize its spotless purity? How shall we paint its matchless splendor? His character is purer than the distilled dewdrop and the falling snowflake. It is more transparent than light, for He is 'the light of the world.' It is more radiant than the sun, for He is the 'sun of righteousness.' It is brighter than the stars flashing in the heavens, for He is 'the bright and morning star.' It is more gentle and innocent than the lamb, for He is 'the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.' It is more lovely and fragrant than the rose, for He is the 'Rose of Sharon.' It is clearer than the limpid waters of a fountain, for He is the fountain opened in the house of David. It is fairer than the lily kissed by the sunbeam, for He is the whitest lily in earth's dark valleys. • • • O Christ, Thou art the holiest among the holy! Thou art surpassingly beautiful among the sons of men! Thou alone art sinless among sinful men! Thou art the guileless 'Lamb of God!' Thou art the 'Rose of Sharon!' Thou art the 'Lily of the valleys' of earth! Thou art the 'bright and morning star!' Thou art the 'dayspring from on high!' Thou art the 'desire of all nations!' Thou art the 'Prince of the kings of the earth!' Thou art the 'wonderful, the counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father!' Thou art the one altogether lovely! Thou art the chiefest among ten thousand! 'Majestic sweetness sits enthroned upon thy brow!' Thy head is crowned with radiant glories! Thy lips with grace o'erflow! Thou art fairest of all the fair that fill the heavenly train!"—Robert Elmer Smith, in The Modern Messages from Great Hymns.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

On Tuesday evening, December 4, 1917, the Historical Association of the Mississippi Conference met in the spacious auditorium of the beautiful Crawford Street Methodist Church, in the historic city of Vicksburg. Hymn No. 107, "Joy to the World," was sung, and Rev. C. H. Ellis read the Second Psalm and led in prayer. Hymn No. 604 was announced after which Rev. T. B. Holloman, President, called the meeting to order, stating that last year the Association decided that at this session of the Conference it would have something concerning the Methodism of the "old country." He then introduced Rev. R. Bradley, who was born in England and came to America in the year of 1872, as the speaker of the evening. Brother Bradley stated that since he had always been accustomed to taking a text he would do so on this occasion. Reading John 1:6, he spoke of the parentage, life, character, and work of John Wesley, with accuracy and fluency relating incidents and facts connected with the life of Mr. Wesley. He stated that Mr. Wesley was of distinguished ancestry, and that toward the close of his life had gathered about him three hundred preachers, among whom was Brother Bradley's father. The speaker mentioned the fact that Methodists had always been a singing people, and quoted from many hymns which the early Methodists sang on various occasions. The address was most excellent and delivered with such pathos that every heart in the large congregation was touched. At its close, one preacher, who sat just behind your reporter, pronounced it a masterpiece.

After the address, hymn No. 238, "A charge to keep I have," was sung. Dr. Holloman, President of the Association, then read an article taken from the Vicksburg Herald relating to some of the traditions and history of Vicksburg Methodism. He stated that the city was named for a Methodist preacher, that among its many hills was one named for a Methodist preacher, and that, in fact, one could scarcely go anywhere in the city without seeing or touching something which had had something to do with early Methodism in this section.

Following Dr. Holloman's remarks, some announcements were made, among which was the statement that there would be preaching Wednesday night, while the Board of Education would hold its anniversary in the afternoon. This announcement called forth many hearty "Amens" from the preachers present, there being quite a strong sentiment that the Conference Boards should no longer monopolize the evening hour as they have done almost from time immemorial, since that is the only hour when we can reach the people of the community with the gospel. Besides, our Conference consists largely of business routine, by which the spiritual feature is being crushed out. The time once was when people were saved during Conference, but a conversion at an Annual Conference now would be a "seven days' wonder." It is to be hoped that this session of the Conference will order that hereafter there shall be preaching at the night hour and the Conference Boards be given the afternoon for their anniversaries, if they wish to continue to have them. Whether a reporter should express an opinion is a question, but since it is already expressed, this reporter will let it stand.

First Day—Wednesday Morning.

At 9:20 o'clock Wednesday, December 5, 1917, the 104th session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Bishop W. B. Murrah, presiding. Hymn No. 210, "Glorious things of thee are spoken," was sung, and the Bishop led in prayer. While briefly addressing the Conference, the Bishop said that he was "thrilled with memories and associations as he looked into the faces of the brethren, and were he to yield to the impulses of his heart he would detain them quite awhile with a speech." Hymn No. 208, "The King of heaven his table spreads," was announced, and the Bishop requested the presiding elders to come inside the chancel to assist in the consecration of the elements and the administration of the Lord's Supper.

The Secretary of the last Conference called the roll and most of the preachers answered to their names, but only a few of the laymen were present.

Dr. A. F. Watkins was re-elected Secretary, with G. S. Hayman and Loyd Lovell as assistants, and J. L. Neill, G. P. McGeehee, and C. E. Dozier were elected Statistical Secretaries.

The time fixed for assembling and adjournment were 9 a. m. and 12 m., respectively. The main auditorium was fixed as the bar of the Conference. The usual standing committees were nominated by the presiding elders, and elected by the Conference.

Various papers and communications were referred to the appropriate Boards for consideration.

A Committee on Public Worship, consisting of M. B. Sharbrough, O. S. Lewis, T. B. Holloman, G. W. Fuller, and H. R. LaHaye, was ordered.

Dr. R. H. Bennett, representing the Correspondence School; Rev. O. W. Bradley, Rev. T. C. Curtis, and Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, the latter representing the Commercial Appeal; Rev. W. W. Holmes, of the Louisiana Conference, and Dr. Hounshell, formerly a missionary in Korea, now taking the place of Dr. E. H. Rawlings on the General Board of Missions, and Rev. J. S. Hillhouse, pastor of the local Presbyterian Church, were introduced to the Conference.

The reports of Whitworth and Port Gibson Colleges were referred to the Board of Education. The Conference Secretary read reports from Emory and Southwestern Universities, indicating that both are in a prosperous condition.

Recognizing the publicity that the secular press is now giving to the work of the Church, Rev. G. H. Thompson moved that Rev. E. H. Cunningham, representing the Commercial Appeal, of Memphis, Tenn., be elected as the official reporter for the Conference. The motion prevailed.

Question 22 was called, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" and the following presiding elders were passed in the examination of character, and made their reports: J. T. Leggett, W. B. Jones, J. M. Morse, G. H. Thompson, W. L. Linfield, M. B. Sharbrough, and John R. Jones.

Continuing Question 22, the name of W. B. Waldrop was called. His character was passed and his name referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the supernumerary relation.

The names of the following superannuates were called, their characters passed, and their names referred for the same relation: H. P. Lewis, Sr., Ira B. Robertson, W. W. Simmons, E. D. Phillips, J. H. Evans, C. M. Martin, R. F. Witt, R. Bradley, J. W. Brown, J. T. Nicholson, W. W. Cammack, G. W. Huff, L. Carley, W. D. Dominick, J. M. Massey, C. T. Noble, B. H. Rawls, and G. R. Ellis. Several of these old veterans of the Cross made brief but touching remarks when their names were called.

The name of C. H. Ellis was called, his character passed, and he, having taken charge of the Lintonia work during the year in lieu of M. A. Massey, resigned, was placed on the effective list.

The name of M. L. Burton was called, his character passed, and he was placed on the effective list.

The name of L. J. Jones was called and his name was referred to the Committee on Memoirs, he having died during the year.

A report from the Seashore Divinity School was read by Rev. H. M. Ellis. Rev. M. M. Black, Commissioner of Millsaps College, read the report of his year's work, which was referred to the Board of Education.

Resolutions coming up from the Jackson District Conference, presented by Rev. J. M. Morse, asking that the custom, hoary with old age, of devoting the night services to the anniversaries of the various Boards, be displaced by the preaching of the gospel, provoked a brief but lively discussion, and were adopted by an overwhelming majority. So mote it be. It is now to be sincerely hoped that we shall have revivals at the sessions of our Conference, resulting in recousecrations and conversions, as in the old times. Amen!

The time for adjournment having arrived, by motion the time was entended to allow the distribution of cards for reporting religious statistics.

The presence of Mr. C. O. Chalmers, publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was noted.

Many announcements of the meetings of the various Boards and Committees were made. It was also announced that Rev. P. D. Hardin, pastor of Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, would preach at 7:30 p. m.

The morning session was closed by singing the Doxology, and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Murrah.

The Anniversary of the Board of Education.

The anniversary of the Board of Education was held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Rev. W. H. Lewis, President of the Board, having charge of the exercises. Hymn No. 334, "My faith looks up to Thee," was announced, and Rev. N. B. Harmon led in prayer. Rev. J. A. Moore read a Scripture lesson from Paul's second letter to Timothy, after which W. H. Lewis stated that the interest which the Board of Education represented is one of vital importance—that of Christian Education. Following his announcement that the program of the hour would be varied, Rev. Dr. Hunt, President of the Montrose Training School, was introduced, and he addressed the audience in behalf of the institution of which he is the official head. He stated that one of the needs of the Montrose school is a new dormitory, toward which he had secured the promise of a carload of lumber, a beautiful lot, and a subscription of $700.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, President of Port Gibson College, spoke briefly of the needs and work of that institution.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, stated that some questioned the right of the Church in the field of education, forgetting that there was a time, not so very long ago, when there was no education without the Church. The Church is the mother of education.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, who has been President of Whitworth College for 16 years, spoke interestingly of that institution. He prophesied that within the next six years Whitworth would have an endowment of $100,000.

Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner of Emory University, stated that $200,000 had been secured for the University during the year, and affirmed that it is to-day the largest single interest of our Church.

Dr. R. H. Bennett, of the Correspondence School, represented the General Board of Education. In his address he asked the question, "What is a child for?" and said that the Spartans answered, to make a soldier, and the nations are giving the same answer to-day, but the answer of the Church is, to make a saint. The child, therefore, should not be trained merely for a few fleeting years of citizenship, but for everlasting companionship in the world to come.

After the singing of the Doxology, the meeting closed with the benediction by Dr. A. F. Watkins.

The Preaching Service.

According to previous announcement, a large congregation gathered at 7:30 p. m. for preaching. After singing hymn 222, "Jesus, the name high over all," the people were led in prayer by Rev. W. A. Terry, pastor of Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg. The Lewis Brothers rendered a beautiful quartet. The Scripture lesson was taken from the twelfth chapter of Paul's second letter to the Corinthians. After singing hymn No. 334, "My faith looks up to thee," Rev. P. D. Hardin announced 2 Cor. 12:9 as his text. A brief sketch of his sermon follows: Paul's "thorn in the flesh" must have been some form of physical suffering—a clear exposition of the scope and significance of prayer, based on Paul's prayer for the removal of the "thorn," was given. Calling attention to the Apostle's statement of his infirmities, the speaker indicated "Human Suffering" as his theme. He said suffering unites men in the closest of fellowship—the fellowship of suffering; it brings to man the feeling of heiplessness which makes him rely upon God; it turns man in faith to God; it is a channel through which we receive power from God. Paul so speaks of it. We are now standing on the verge of a crisis in the world's history. We are facing a crucial hour, the ultimate consequences of which are unknown to us. The future is beclouded with the smoke of battle, and for this hour of trial we need preparation—the preparation of divine power. It must come through suffering.

As the preacher closed, he asked that all who wanted to be reconsecrated to face courageously the coming baptism of suffering to come forward, and a great throng pressed toward the front. The request was made that all who desired salvation hold up their hands, and several hands were raised. Rev. W. J. Ferguson, of Meridian, led the kneeling congregation in a prayer of great power, which thrilled the great assembly of worshipers. The scene reminded one of an old-time revival. As the worshipers rose from their knees, they rose singing the old song our fathers and mothers used to sing, "O how I love Jesus." The great service came to a close with the benediction pronounced by Rev. C. W Crisler, of Brookhaven.

Second Day—Tuesday Morning.

After devotional exercises, conducted by the Bishop, the minutes of the previous day's session were read and approved.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Missions, recommending the appointment of Rev. J. S. Duke as a singing evangelist, was read and adopted.

The roll was called and the pastors responded by answering Yes or No, indicating whether they had handed their reports to the auditors.

The following laymen answered to the call of their names: Brookhaven District—W. D. Davis, P. H. Enochs; Hattiesburg District—James Hand; Jackson District—J. A. Lindsay, J. M. Sullivan; Meridian District—C. W. Cochran, D. C. Hull, W. D. Hawkins; Newton District—W. C. Mabry, R. C. Pugh; Port Gibson District—M. M. Saterfield, J. G. Parham; Seashore District—R. B. McGehee, G. L. Carley, J. C. Ross.

J. M. Sullivan, alternate, was substituted for C. L. Ray, principal.

Your reporter, by some careless oversight, neglected to record two important items of yesterday's proceedings, viz.: Rev. J. L. Neill was instructed by the Conference to send greetings to the absent superannuates; and the Bishop brought to the notice of the Conference the matter of the erection of an equestrian statue of Bishop Asbury in the city of Washington, and stated that there was a deficit of $385 on the amount apportioned to this Conference. In a few minutes $400 was subscribed, and Rev. H. A. Gatlin was appointed to collect the subscription.

Dr. R. A. Meek, the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; Dr. Paul B. Kern, representing the Epworth League cause; Rev. C. A. Battle, and Rev. Mr. Lutz, of the Louisiana Conference, were introduced to the Conference.

Prof. G. L. Harrell, of Millsaps College presented a gavel, made from a portion of the old building of Millsaps College, and Bishop Murrah, who was once President of that institution, accepted it with sppropriate remarks.

A report of the Orphans' Home for the past year, under the administration of Rev. J. B. Randolph, was read by the Secretary of the Conference.

Under question 10, the name of W. D. Barrett was called. He had not appeared before the Committee; his character was passed and he was continued in the class of the second year.

Mr. T. B. King, representing the Memphis Methodist Hospital, was introduced to the Conference.

Question 22 was resumed; the names of the following preachers were called, their reports were made and their characters passed: R. H. Barr, W. W. Murray, W. W. Moore, C. W. Crisler, H. L. Norton, H. K. McKee, C. A. Shultz, L. L. Roberts, F. B. Ormond, A. B. Barry, R. H. Kleiser, W. W. Nelson, J. C. Ellis, H. A. Gatlin, J. V. Bennett, I. W. Cooper, H. M. Ellis.

Question 10 was continued; the names of the following preachers were called, their characters passed, and, having passed a satisfactory examination, and being recommended by the proper Committee, were elected to Deacon's orders and advanced to the class of the third year: J. B. Cain, J. C. Jackson, C. P. Jones, R. A. Allums, H. C. Castles, J. H. Jolly. This splendid class of young men was then called to the chancel, whereupon the Bishop delivered to them an impressive talk on the duties of the ministry, and they, having satisfactorily answered the disciplinary questions, were received into full connection. While "O Happy Day" was being sung, the preachers pressed forward and gave these young men their hands in token of their welcome into the Conference. It was a very impressive scene.

A resolution, offered by H. M. Ellis, asking that the Board of Missions suggest to the Bishop a suitable man for religious work in the Shelby Camp at Hattiesburg, was referred to the Board of Missions.

Dr Paul B. Kern addressed the Conference in the interest of the Epworth League.

Mr. King, representing the Memphis Hospital, addressed the Conference in an impressive manner and made a favorable impression for himself, as well as for the great work which he represents.

The hour for adjournment having arrived, the time was extended by vote of the Conference.

Resolutions, expressing approval of the action of our Government in its declaration of war, and promising loyal support and prayers for our President in its successful prosecution against German ruthlessness and autocracy, were read by Dr. A. F. Watkins and adopted by a rising vote. While standing, the Conference sang, "My country, 'tis of thee" with enthusiasm.

Announcements were made and the Conference adjourned with the benediction.

Anniversary of the Board of Missions.

At 3:30 p. m., Dr. W. H. LaPrade, President of the Board of Missions, announced hymn 631. After prayer by Rev. J. L. Neill, the responsive reading of Psalm 2 was led by Rev. C. W. Crisler, Treasurer of the Board, who made a statement of the Board's finances. He said that while a complete statement could not be now made, since the reports were not all in the hands of the Board, yet it had been the best year in the Board's history in mission specials, the sum of $14,000 having been raised.

Rev. C. G. Hounshell, formerly a missionary in Korea, now representing the General Board of Missions, was the speaker of the hour, and delivered a thrilling address, illustrated with many remarkable scenes that he had witnessed on the mission field, which moved the hearts of all who were present. He said the cause of missions, as never before, is getting on the hearts of men with money, who are beginning to give their thousands. The world is saying if there is anything in our Christianity, let the Church make good. The world is learning that only the religion of Christ can satisfy. He had seen women enter heathen temples and come out with a sad look on their faces. This would be a dark world without Christ. He related the true story of a heathen woman, with whom he himself had talked, who came for miles to worship the spirit dwelling in the mountains, and said that a woman who would travel for miles on foot to worship the rocks on the mountain-side would make a great Christian, if given the gospel. He told of a woman who, when converted, exclaimed: "The long, dark night of sin is past, and I see the dawning light of the morning." She paid the price for that experience. We do not have revivals without paying the price.

Following the above address, a collection was taken to relieve the strain on our missionaries incident to the increased cost of living and the advance in the cost of exchange. Dr. Hounshell had previously stated that the Board is trying to raise for this purpose $50,000, of which about $30,000 had already been contributed. When the collection was concluded the sum of $1237 was realized.

The service closed with hymn No. 633 and the benediction.

Preaching Service.

The opening exercises were conducted by Dr. H. W. Featherstun. The first hymn was No. 411, "O Master, let me walk with thee." Mr. J. A. Swagerty, of Shreveport, La., who has been associated in revival work with our Conference Evangelist, Rev. Dan. E. Kelly, sang a solo with telling effect. The Scripture lesson from the 23d chapter of Acts was followed by hymn No. 416, and Dr. W. G. Henry, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, read for his text Acts 23:11, deducing therefrom his theme, "Our Need of God in the Present World Crisis." The sermon was forceful, and its manner of delivery, as well as its precisely constructed sentences, indicated thoughtful preparation. Some of the striking remarks follow: "Wherever God is, it is a good place for man. As a nation, we are not, in this hour, turning to God as we ought. We are still trusting in the horses and chariots. Some one asked Lincoln if he thought we were on God's side, and he replied, 'I am not so much concerned about whether we are on God's side as I am about His being on our side.' On Godlike men we build our trust. I have been looking back along life's way to see if I could find a place where I did not need God; but I have not found it. We need God always and everywhere. As the car sped down toward the east river coming nearly upon the road all, he seen but as well as the young man. The time has come when the Church must realize that a war over. In Paul one place was as good as another if God was there. Wherever God may be, we must go if we desire well and entirely Christ, all else is easy. God may be here and may speak, but we are shut in over. God is with us always if we let him be. Let us hear the voice of God and obey. Many voices in us a consciousness that we have none our own. The Holy Spirit is sensitive, and He will not insist on his way in the day of work. Close we heed it hear the voice of God, and if we obey his voice we shall come out more than conquerors through Him that loved us and gave Himself for us."

Dr. Berry's sermon was wonderfully effective and left a remarkable impression on the large congregation which listened to its message, especially the spacious auditorium. After two solos by Rev. J. S. Duke, who has been suggested as Conference Evangelistic Singer, the service closed with the benediction.

Third Day—Friday Morning.

According to previous announcement, the Conference opened at 9:00 a. m., with a prayer meeting conducted by Rev. W. E. Saunders. Promptly at 9 o'clock the Bishop appeared, and the Conference proper began with the singing of "Come, thou fount of every blessing." The Bishop read from the 25th chapter of Matthew and gave a helpful and impressive comment on the parable of the Ten Virgins, the central thought being the certainty of failure without reserve power. Hymn 421 was sung, and, after prayer by Rev. E. A. Ellis, the minutes of the previous day's session were read and approved.

The order of the day for election of delegates to the General Conference arrived. Before the balloting began the Bishop called the attention of the Conference to the fact that the election of delegates to the General Conference is always a serious matter, since the highest interests of our great Church largely depends upon the kind of men elected to represent us in our law-making body. The following clerical delegates were elected: J. T. Leggett and John R. Jones. Both are able men, and are regarded by your correspondent as sound on the unification question. The following lay delegates were elected: W. D. Davis, W. M. Bute, C. W. Cochran and M. M. Satterfield. J. A. McLeod was elected alternate.

To correct an omission of the first day's proceedings, it was noted that the following lay delegates were present: W. T. Denman, J. A. McLeod, H. V. Watts, W. P. Meador, W. M. Bute, G. R. Bennett, and D. W. Heidelberg.

Revs. W. W. Drake and C. C. Miller, of the Louisiana Conference, were introduced.

Under the call of question No. 1, C. V. Higginbotham, H. E. Raley, L. M. Sharp, J. M. Smith, and C. W. Hillman, having stood the required examination and being recommended by the Committee on Admissions, were admitted on trial.

No one needs to be told who Rev. E. A. Steel, D. D., is, but he was formally introduced to the Conference.

The names of those in the Class of the First Year were called, their characters passed, and, having stood an approved examination, they were advanced to the Class of the Second Year. The class is composed of the following: J. B. Stringer, J. L. Carter, V. C. Clifford, and G. L. McNeese.

The character of C. C. Beasley was passed, and he was discontinued at his own request. M. A. Massey not having been before the committee, his character was passed, and he was continued in the Class of the First Year.

At this point in the proceedings Dr. T. B. Holloman, the Conference host, announced that his little grandchild was at the point of death, and requested the Conference to pray for the recovery of the child; if it were God's will; otherwise, that God give the parents a submissive spirit. To this end the Conference was led in prayer by Rev. G. S. Harmon.

Rev. H. A. Wood, from the Colorado Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was received. He comes to us highly recommended.

The Class of the Third Year was called. Having stood an approved examination, their characters being passed, the following were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year: M. F. Adams, R. H. Clegg, M. W. David, S. C. Moody, M. W. Porter, A. A. Sims, W. J. Walters, and T. B. Winstead. The following, not having been before the Committee on Examination, their characters were passed, and they were continued in the Class of the Third Year: D. W. Ulmer, and J. T. Weems. G. P. Fikes was continued in the Class of the Third Year, and was transferred to the Arkansas Conference. W. D. McPherson was also continued in the Class of the Third Year, and transferred to another Conference.

The name of C. P. Jones was called, and he was advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year.

J. A. Smith, a local preacher, was elected deacon. A resolution that the Conference send a message of condolence to Rev. W. C. Lester, of the North Mississippi Conference, whose son is either killed or captured "somewhere in France," was offered by J. S. Duke. The resolution was adopted, and the Conference instructed Brother Duke to transmit the message.

L. E. Dooley, J. E. Grace, E. M. Johnson, and C. E. Smith, composing the Class of the Fourth Year having passed a satisfactory examination in their course of study, were elected elders.

The Conference having received a cordial invitation to visit both the Methodists of the city, but also from the Mayor and the Board of Trade to meet the session of 1918 in McComb City, the invitation was accepted by a rising vote.

Report No. 1 of the Sunday School Board, recommending the appointment of Rev. J. C. Champion as the Field Secretary of both the Sunday School Board and the Board of Missions, was read and adopted.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education, recommending the appointment of Rev. J. L. Neill to the Y. M. C. A. work of the A. and M. College, was considered and adopted.

Question 2 was resumed, the names of several persons were called, their characters passed, and their reports were heard. Among these names was that of Rev. T. W. Adams, who, it is understood, has been elected chaplain of the State Farms. Brother Adams has spent many useful years in the pastorate as an influential member of the Mississippi Conference, having held some of the best appointments and having served as presiding elder. We regret to see [illegible] leave the pastorate, but during these years [illegible] has acquired the habit of succeeding in whatever he undertakes, and we are assured beforehand of his success in this new field of labor.

The Conference adjourned to meet Saturday morning at the usual hour.

Anniversary of the Sunday School Board.

The devotional exercises began with Rev. H. F. Tolle, President of the Sunday School Board, in the chair. Rev. J. L. Decell read the report of the Board, which showed its present financial condition to be a decided improvement over that of last year, and the climax of the occasion came when Dr. S. A. Steel, known as one of the most fluent and eloquent platform speakers and preachers in Southern Methodism, rose to his feet to deliver, in his inimitable style, his famous lecture on "The Pioneers of Methodism." His delivery was received with laughter, hearty amens, and tears; and as, towards the close, he scaled the heights of his matchless eloquence, the enthusiasm of the great audience could no longer be restrained, and found expression in applause and hand-clapping. It would be useless to attempt to give a sketch of the lecture or to try to tell of its effect upon its hearers. It was all beyond description. After the benediction many pressed forward to shake the hand of the lecturer. Thus closed the afternoon hour.

At the evening hour, after a song and a prayer, Rev. H. B. Watkins preached from the text, "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?" (Luke 7:19). He said: "Jesus was different from John the Baptist's expectation. John was disappointed with his own life—he had not expected a prison cell. John, no doubt, sent disciples to Jesus, not to infidel sources. The New Testament is the best answer to doubt and fear. Elijah and John alike needed the same answer,—the still small voice. Christianity is the only religion that can produce a life exemplifying its teachings. Service brings joy." During the singing of the Coronation hymn the congregation pressed forward to shake hands with the preacher.

When the Conference displaced Board anniversaries from the evening hour, substituting preaching, the keynote was struck, as is indicated by the results, which mean much for the accumulation and dissemination of spiritual power.

The service closed with a solo by Rev. J. S. Duke, and the benediction was pronounced.

Fourth Day—Saturday.

The opening exercises of the fourth day's session consisted in the reading of the 15th Psalm by the Bishop, who said of the psalm that it is a description of a perfect gentleman, and that means a Christian. Hymn No. 547, "Children of the Heavenly King," was sung, and prayer was offered by Rev. M. L. White.

The minutes of Friday's session were read and approved. J. A. Smith, coming with the proper recommendation and having met the requirements, was, by vote of the Conference, admitted on trial.

P. H. Enochs was elected as reserve lay delegate to the General Conference.

Report No. 2 of the Board of Missions, recommending the appointment of Rev. R. H. Kleiser as pastor for the Methodist soldiers at Camp Shelby, was read and adopted. Dr. LaPrade stated for the Board that no funds were in the Treasury for the support and expenses of a pastor for this work and asked the Conference for $2500, and in a short while the sum of $2765 was subscribed.

Under call of question 22, the names of the pastors of the Jackson District were called, one by one their characters were passed, and reports from them indicating a prosperous condition in the district were heard.

After the character of Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, was passed, he stated that the College was doing well despite the trying times through which all colleges are now passing. He said that there are 100 students of the College in the service of their country, and that the enrollment is twenty per cent short of last year.

The Conference having passed the character of Rev. J. L. Neill, he reported the work at Sunday School Field Secretary, saying that the previous days what had been accomplished. Being now connected with the Y. M. C. A. work of the A. & M. College, he stated that the nature of the work was tremendous, that he desired young men in choosing their life's calling, and that he expected to be able to turn some to the ministry, but that first of all his business would be to lead young men to Christ.

M. M. Black, Commissioner of Millsaps College, stated that progress had been made in the important work.

Rev. G. H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Meridian District, was elected delegate to the General Conference.

In response to the message of sympathy sent by the Conference yesterday to Rev. W. C. Lester, of the North Mississippi Conference, a telegram was received from him expressing the appreciation, and cited the Conference to Psalm 46:1 as the source of his strength and comfort.

Rev. Boyd Selby, Commissioner of Emory University, with many interruptions by the pleading for the fourth delegate to the General Conference, represented the work.

The annual report of the editors of the Conference Journal was read by Dr. A. F. Watkins and adopted.

On the seventh ballot Dr. A. F. Watkins was elected fourth delegate to the General Conference.

The names of the pastors of the Brookhaven District were called, their characters passed, and their reports received.

C. W. Hillman and L. M. Sharp, the latter from the Baptist Church, were admitted on trial.

The Committee on Public Worship read the following program for the services of Sunday:

Crawford Street Methodist Church—10 a. m., love feast, conducted by Rev. C. W. Crisler, 11 a. m., preaching by Bishop W. B. Murrah, and the ordination of deacons; 7 p. m., memorial service; 7:30 p. m., Rev. J. L. Decell and the ordination of elders.

Gibson Memorial—11 a. m., Rev. W. H. Lewis; 6:45 p. m., League, conducted by Rev. L. L. Roberts; 7:30 p. m., Rev. W. M. Sullivan.

Presbyterian Church—11 a. m., Dr. A. F. Watkins; 7:30 p. m., Rev. J. L. Neill.

First Baptist Church—11 a. m., Dr. W. H. LaPrade; 7:30 p. m., Rev. B. F. Lewis.

Christian Church—11 a. m., C. F. Emery; 7:30 p. m., Rev. H. F. Tolle.

Bomar Ave. Baptist Church—11 a. m., Rev. P. D. Hardin; 7:30 p. m., Rev. J. C. Chambers.

A. M. E. Church—11 a. m., H. M. Ellis; 7:30 p. m.

Methodist Episcopal Church—11 a. m., W. J. Ferguson; 7:30 p. m., Rev. J. D. Ellis.

The time was extended to hear announcements and the Conference adjourned to meet again this afternoon.

Afternoon Session.

The Conference convened promptly at 2:30, with Bishop Murrah in the chair, and, after a song and a prayer, the business of the Conference moved forward swiftly under the guiding hand of the Bishop.

Resuming question 22, the names of the pastors in the Meridian, Jackson Port Gibson, and Seashore Districts were called, their characters were passed, and their reports were made. The reports indicated that great advancement had been made during the year in spiritual and material matters.

A report of the Y. M. C. A. work was made, which was referred to the Committee on Temperance.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America asked that December 30-Jan. 6 be set apart for special prayer.

C. W. Crisler submitted a report of the Conference Endowment Fund.

Resolutions concerning the Choctaw Indians in the State were read and adopted.

The complete list of delegates to the General Conference is as follows: Clerical—J. T. Leggett, J. R. Jones, G. H. Thompson, A. F. Watkins. Alternates—L. W. Cooper, J. M. Morse. Lay—W. D. Davis, W. M. Bute, C. W. Cochran, W. M. Satterfield. Alternates—J. A. McLeod and P. H. Enochs.

Resolutions were read by P. D. Hardin requesting the War Department to relieve the chaplains from outside duties so that they can devote their time to their real work.

The report of the Hospital Committee was read by J. L. Decell.

G. H. Thompson stated that R. T. Nolen, a local preacher, who had been serving as a supply on hard circuits for nineteen years, was now retiring, and that since he was not a member of the Conference, there was no fund upon which he could rely for support, and that we ought, as an evidence of our appreciation of his long and faithful service, to contribute something toward his support, and immediately a fund was raised for this purpose.

After the announcements had been made, the Conference adjourned to meet Sunday at 3 p. m. for the memorial service.

Preaching Service.

After the devotional exercises, consisting of song and prayer, at the preaching hour on Saturday evening, Rev. G. S. Harmon read the third chapter of John, and announced Jer. 13:23 as the text, from which he delivered a very forceful sermon on the old-time theme of Regeneration which is so much needed to-day, and yet which is so much neglected. His excellent sermon made a splendid impression upon the congregation. It is to be earnestly hoped that the preachers will follow his example and preach often upon this all-important subject until all our people shall see their great need of a change of heart. The service closed with the benediction.

(Proceedings to be concluded next week)

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

Rev. T. W. Adams, who has been presiding elder as well as having served some of the most important stations in the Mississippi Conference, has, after a long and useful life, been elected chaplain of the State penitentiary farms. We regret to see him leave the pastorate, hut we know that the habit of success acquired in the past gives assurance of successful achievements in his new field of labor. Our best wishes and prayers sball follow him.

We were glad to recognize the presence at the Conference of Dr. A. B. Partin, a loyal Methodist, faithful and true, of Chunky, Miss.

W. E. Harris, a faithful layman of Flora, who is always at his post of duty, was in daily attendance upon the sessions of the Conference.

The Conference was delighted to have Dr. S. A. Steel visit us for a short while. He is now serving a pastorate in the Louisiana Conference, but he belongs to the whole Church. If he belongs to any section more than another, that section is Mississippi, and this State places him in the long list of her distinguished sons.

The Mississippi Conference set a new precedent when it recommended the appointment of Rev. J. S. Duke as a song evangelist. It is to be boped that the brethren will keep him busy.

While serving his first circuit among the hills of Northeast Mississippi, your reporter came to know a small freckled-faced, ungainly boy with long hair, then about twelve years of age. Without any experience in the tonsorial art, your reporter proceeded, with the boy's consent, to cut his hair—with what success, you may imagine. On the first day of Conference, your reporter met that boy again after all these years, illustrating how the lines of the lives of people cross and recross, and, incidently, demonstrating the truth of the old adage, that no one can tell the outcome in a lousy calf. That boy is now the Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, who is reporting for the Commercial Appeal of Memphis, Tenn.

Rev. J. M. Morse left the Conference to-day, Dec. 8, for Washington City, where he goes to attend the Convention of the National Anti-Saloon League.

Rev. T. B. Holloman informed some of the preachers that he would have to assign some of them to homes where the children had the measles, and that if the preachers so placed had not had the measles it was their fault—they ought to have had it.

The thanks of all the brethren are due Rev. T. B. Holloman and Rev. O. S. Lewis, Conference hosts, for the good homes in which they have been entertained. They have left nothing undone to make everything pleasant and comfortable for the preachers, and laymen as well.

The preaching has evinced spiritual power, and has never been surpassed at any Conference session, and we believe that the substitution of preaching for the dry-as-dust Board anniversaries at the evening hours will mean much for the accumulation and dissemination of spiritual power throughout the bounds of the Conference.

A unique personality of the Conference is Rev. L. Fayard, formerly a Roman Catholic, now a Methodist local preacher, serving the Wolf River Mission, among a Roman Catholic population. In an interesting way he reported the conversion of many Catholics during the year, and he also said that he had baptized 96 Roman Catholic babies. He is doing a great work.

A CAMPAIGN THAT SHOULD SUCCEED.

To the Preachers and Laymen of the North Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: The Joint Board of Finance of our Conference is facing a serious problem, the adequate support of our Conference claimants. We have not been able, with the funds at our disposal, to provide for them as they deserve. The Board has decided and the Conference has approved to raise an endowment fund of $50,000. This money is to be invested with the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as a permanent loan fund, the interest to be applied annually to the Conference claimants of the North Mississippi Conference. There is no safer investment than money placed with the Board of Church Extension—not even a Liberty Loan Bond. Thus a double purpose will be accomplished—a perpetual Church loan fund will be secured and an adequate support provided for our worn-out preachers. We have secured the services of Mr. Jack C. Wilson, of Senatobia, Miss., for the important work of raising this money. He will devote the Saturday and Sunday of each week to this work without compensation. It has been his prayer and his purpose for many years to devote ten years of the prime of his life to the service of our Lord without money and without price. This work gives him the coveted opportunity. Mr. Hoover gives his whole time to the Government free of charge. Mr. Vanderlip gave up the presidency of one of the four largest banks in the world to help Uncle Sam raise money to carry on the war. His salary now is one dollar per year. Why should it be thought a thing incredible, if men make such sacrifices from patriotic motives, for a man to give his all for Christ and his cause? Jack Wilson will raise this money. Will you help him?

Now a word to the preachers. Give Brother Wilson the right of way in your charges. Help him in every way in your power; and by the time you or your family become a claimant on this fund we will be able to provide for you.

Amory, Miss. J. E. THOMAS.

THE DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGE.

Jesus spent three years teaching and training the twelve apostles before they were qualified for leadership in the Kingdom. The Apostle Paul belongs to the ten greatest men of history. The Acts of the Apostles furnishes abundant proof that the Church leaders were well instructed, able to cope in debate with Jews or Gentiles. The history of the Christian Church is an unbroken revival of the highest scholarship called to the service of Christ. Many facts focus on the indispensability of the denominational college, even if State and private schools command larger enrollment, equipment, and funds. It would be wiser to abandon any other collection than our educational collections.

Jesus put first things first. The Great Commission reads: "Go ye therefore and teach (or make disciples of) all nations." The teaching precedes baptism, and follows it up. A church is a school of Christ. The main idea is to teach them to observe all things Christ has commanded them. The conserving power of a teaching ministry is a fact writ large in credal successes. Ability to teach is one of the gifts to be coveted. Good home-teaching, Sunday school, pulpit, denominational school training, furnish all the vital elements of an organized church. You can not organize ignorance or stupidity. The gospel was not spread by mental defectives. Incompetency is a reproach in church leadership. It is destructive of spirituality.

To deny our denominational colleges the sinews of success is to commit denominational suicide.

No department of church life can be made to go, glow, or grow, without well instructed leadership.

The ignorant mind lacks initiative, versatility, variety, inventiveness, and is helpless and hopeless in the presence of emergencies.

I dined with the Bishop of a certain diocese. His attention was that the Church had so many vacant pulpits and so few candidates for the ministry because they had no denominational college in the diocese. The Baptists rallied to Howard College and that denomination is growing by leaps and bounds. The reason Alabama Methodism is fifth in numerical strength is that three denominational colleges pour forth fresh life into the churches. The Primitive Baptists ignore education and are losing ground rapidly. There are ten chances to one that a young man will be called to preach in a denominational college over the college that is not denominational. Texas, Georgia, Virginia, and North Carolina Methodisms center on denominational schools, and there is magnificent growth.

Three former students of Centenary that come to my mind became distinguished preachers and raised more money than Methodism has invested in Centenary for fifty years.

The laymen are calling for resourceful preachers. The best way to get them is to send the boys to Centenary.

BROTHER BATTLE'S ARTICLE.

It is a puzzle to me to discern how Brother Battle, in his recent article in reply to me, could put such a construction upon my explanation as he has done in his article in the Advocate of November 1. The tone of my words were conciliating, kind, and brotherly, and I tried to make it clear that I did not endorse all that was in the "Address." It is a straining of facts when he accuses me of disapproval of hard feelings and hot words, only on the part of those opposing the movement for greater democracy. He made that application himself. My words were: "I see no need of the hard feelings and hot words that I have read on the subject." How can those words be construed into referring only "to those opposing the movement?" I am as much opposed to hard feelings and hot words from one side of the discussion as from the other.

Another straining of facts is in his words: "Though standing for it, he has never read the 'Laymen's Address.'" My words were: "I do not endorse all the changes suggested in the Laymen's Address, as I gather them from the replies I read." I mentioned only one that I did endorse, that of increased lay representation in the Annual Conferences, and argued that at some length in a kindly spirit, and Brother Battle says he believes it would be wise to increase the lay representation and believes it should be done legally. So do I.

Another sentence from Brother Battle, straining the facts, is: "He has not read the document to which he subscribes, and shows no disposition to do so." I wonder what part of my letter led him to believe that I showed no disposition to read the document. I stated that I was away from home most of the summer, then very busy with the opening of school, missed my Advocates, and had had no chance to read it up to that time. Since then I have secured a copy and read it, because I wanted to see what was in that document that brought out such bitter discussion.

The worst blow of all that Brother Battle gave me is to so wrest the meaning of my words as to try to make it appear that I cast insinuations against the Bishops and preachers of our Church.

Brother Battle must have a wonderful imagination or a strange way of interpreting words. I made no accusation or insinuation against any one whatever and had no such thought in my mind. My words were: "I believe if the proper presentation by the right parties had been made at the Annual Conferences this law might have passed," meaning, of course, if the Secretary of the Laymen's Movement or a strong committee of the laymen had been appointed to argue the matter before the Annual Conferences, and in the Advocates, so as to get it properly before the Conferences, showing reasons for increasing the lay representation, and why the district lay leaders and Conference leaders should be members of the Conference in order to properly present their work, it might have passed. In our Conference the question was called for a vote, and no one made a speech. Other Conferences had voted it down, many of them, as was stated; so it naturally went in the same way. If any reproach was intended in my words it was against the laymen themselves, for making no effort to get this law ratified. How he can accuse me of "inveighing against the sense of justice in our Bishops and against the common sense of our preachers" is more than I can comprehend. I am afraid Brother Battle is looking for slights. He says: "The Bishops doubtless presented the question fairly and the preachers and laymen of the Conferences voted as they knew best." I challenge any one to find anything in my article expressing a contrary opinion. I never thought of it in any other way. I merely meant to say it is largely our own fault that this law did not pass.

A systematic propaganda of arguments against the law was sent to the Advocates before the Conferences were held, and I saw not a line written presenting its claims, though it passed the General Conference by practically a unanimous vote, and the General Conference is generally composed of a fine body of discriminating minds. They voted down the clause making the quadrennial boards ex-officio members of the Annual Conference and rightly so, but left in the clause making the Conference and District lay leaders members. Friends of the laymen's legislation felt so confident, after the law passed the scrutinizing eyes of the committee and the General Conference as a whole, that they never thought of any need for working to get it passed at the Annual Conferences.

Yet others were actively engaged to defeat it and succeeded—however I know of no unfair means being used and never suspected any. They were busy and the friends of the legislation were confident and slept on their rights, and they are to blame.

I appreciate the fatherly counsel of Brother Battle in his words of caution as to "the next time" and I shall try to get more light before I authorize my name to be signed to another document. Since reading the document I find some things in it worthy of careful consideration, but there are some things in it I cannot endorse.

I am glad Brother Battle and I are agreed on one other point and that I deem to be the most important of all. That is the need of a deepening of the spiritual life of our Church. Yet I fear the spirit manifested in his article and those of some others who have written on the subject will not be a fruitful factor in attaining the great end that both of us so greatly desire. Dealing in personalities does not strengthen a cause or deepen the spiritual life of the Church. In re-reading my explanation I cannot find one word in it that calls for the "drubbing" I have received at the hand of Brother Battle. Like many other busy laymen I authorized my signature to be placed to a document that I had not analyzed. As soon as I had time to read my Advocates, after my return, I hastened to disclaim any intention of endorsing the paper as a whole and especially emphasized the item that I considered most favorably. Many other laymen did the same—except that I also gave the history of the paragraph I championed. I was not alone in the favoring of this clause, for practically the entire General Conference by their official vote favored it. I cannot understand the reason for this attack unless it was my appeal for us all to avoid hard feelings and hot words in the discussion and, according to Sam Jones' philosophy, it is the "hit dog that hollers"—however, I had no individual in mind when I wrote those words. I still think that response to that appeal upon the part of all of us will add to the force of the argument and will not be a hindrance to the deepening of spiritual life. J. W. BEDSON.

WAR CONDITIONS

—REFLECTED IN—

TELEPHONE SERVICE

Among the unforeseen conditions which the war has imposed upon us is the necessity of practically suspending the commercial development of our business.

Confronted with an unusual increase in the use of the telephone and a strong demand for new and additional service, we cannot accept or fill orders except subject to practically an indefinite delay.

This situation is due to the importance of conserving our supplies so that the government's requirements may be promptly met by giving the War Department service anywhere and at any time the request is made.

THE RED CROSS NURSE.

She goes amid the maddened press
Of Teuton, Briton, Slav and Gaul,
Our Nation's White Ambassadress,
The foe of none, the friend of all.

Above the guns, above the cheers
For Flag, or Kaiser, Folk or King,
The common cry alone she hears—
The cry of human suffering.

Still men will play the devil's game,
Though all must lose and none may win;
And still a foolish world's acclaim
Exalts the sworded paladin;

But tears will fall and lips will pray
And hearts beat warm in every land
For her who saves, while heroes slay—
Oh, valiant soul; oh, gentle hand!

THE LIE.

Maud Louise dropped her dark head to the table. A sudden gust of sobs shook her small body. "It's no use," she wailed, disconsolately. "It's just no use, 'tall, to even try!"

It was just three weeks, Sunday, since she had joined the Church. She had thought, then, all her troubles were over. She had meant to be good; to do right always, thereafter. And with the earnest words of her pastor in her ears and the smile of her beloved Sabbath school teacher before her, it had seemed easy. Now, vacation over and at school again, her old enemy had confronted her as strongly, apparently, as ever.

It was so much more comfortable to take the easiest way. A little white lie jumped so readily to her lips. It seemed, somehow, to smooth things out so wonderfully. But during these three weeks Maud Louise had really tried to be square and true. She had prayed. More than once she had shut her lips down hard just in time. But to-day she had loitered on her way through the woods. When she finally reached the school building the yard was empty. From an open window came the soft hum of voices repeating the Lord's Prayer. With flushed cheek she tiptoed over to her seat.

The prayer ended, Miss Andrews glanced up. Her gaze traveled straight down the aisle until it reached Maud Louise. Then it stopped.

"Maud Louise," she demanded, sharply, "where is your excuse for tardiness? Or have you none?"

Her eyes dropped. "I lost it," she stammered. "I had to do an errand for my mother."

The teacher frowned. "You should be more careful," she reprimanded, severely.

The pink in Maud Louise's cheeks turned a dull red. She sat staring straight ahead through the row of waving trees just beyond the window. A cricket began to chirp. "Told a lie! Told a lie!" he seemed to say.

When noontime came she marched out with flashing eyes and head held straight and high. She had tried, she whispered to herself, defiantly—if God could do everything. He needn't have let it slip out so quickly and easily, before she even had time to think.

"It's hot!" she declared, pettishly, as she sat down for dinner. "I hate summer!" she complained, pushing back her plate.

"Why, dear!" her mother worried; "we've peas. Did you see? I thought there was nothing you liked so well."

But Maud Louise could not eat. "It's hot," she said, again.

She gave Carlo a push.

"Go 'way!" she commanded, impatiently, and started back to school.

"He just needn't have let it happen!" she declared, once more, and closed the gate with a decided bang. "And, anyhow, 'twasn't much of a lie! What difference does it make?"

Just beyond the gate she met her pastor.

"Mrs. Goss wants to form you young people into an 'I'll Try Club.'" he announced. "Come up to the parsonage this evening, will you, and let's talk it over."

She gulped. Then she turned a deep, hot red from low down on her neck to the very edge of her coal black hair. "I can't," she answered dully, and walked on.

"What's the use of trying?" she scoffed, under her breath.

She laughed more than usual during the afternoon. She whispered and lounged over her desk. Twice Miss Andrews reprimanded her sharply. And, above all, she failed absolutely in the written history test.

The same cricket, or its mate, kept up the same chirp, chirp. "Told a lie!"

Her eyes grew wider and more defiant. Every few minutes she assured herself:, "I don't care! 'Twasn't very big, anyhow!"

But in her own sweet white room at last it was no sort of use to pretend. She was miserable—just miserable!

Steps came lightly through the hall—a knock, and her mother entered.

"Lassie, lassie!" the dearest voice in all the world murmured; "don't forget God understands."

"I told a lie!" It was a despairing wail. "I can't go to communion any more. I can't join the 'I'll Try Club.' I can't be good! I've always told 'em. I thought I was through—that God wouldn't let me tell 'em if I tried. But 'tain't no use, 'tall to tr-r-r-y!"

"Darling!" The arms about her closed still closer. "It is use to try. Why, little daughter, trying is the very thing that makes you grow. The club's to help you try. Communion is to help you try. God is waiting to help you try. We all have to try and we all fail sometimes. That's why, daughter, we can't judge each other. It's not half so wrong to fail and try again as it is to sit back and not try."

In broken sentences Maud Louise poured forth all the story of the day.

When she was quite through, her mother laid her cool cheek against the hot, wet one.

"Dearie," said she, "God is always ready to forgive. But before you can win His smile you have to make the wrong right, so far as you can. Then your heart will sing again. Then you can make a fresh start, with an honest soul."

A little choking sob was the only answer.

Then Maud Louise lifted her head. Her eyes were suddenly soft; her face sweet and womanly. "I was so happy when I did try! she said. "And I guess if you understand so well God must. I'll go over right now and—tell—Miss—Andrews."

A flash of light touched her eyes. She took a long breath and the red lips drew into a determined line. "O," she whispered, clinging a little closer, "I am going to try, and I am going to win!"

Gently her mother put her down and arose.

"That's my girl," she smiled, then once more touched the small, dark head. "You can, and will, daughter," she added slowly, "if you'll remember that God knows, and understands and cares."—Baptist Boys and Girls.

ON THE WINGS OF THE WIND.

Last night it was late before I reached my House o' Dreams. Methought my spirit had taken flight, and was drifting away on a fleecy cloud, when suddenly it was overtaken by a violent wind storm.

Host of angry clouds, like an invincible army, swept up over the sky, marshaling their forces as they came, bearing my spirit on through space, swiftly ascending and descending, tossed to and fro, driven on by the unconquerable fury of the storm, until its forces were spent. My soul felt only exultation, and sang triumphant praises to the Most High, as it was carried on through limitless space. When all was quiet, I entered the dream garden, and stopped near the gate to admire the white carnations and the lilies which grew there. Instinctively I felt the presence of some one, and looking up, I saw a young man reclining against a rustic seat. Seeing me, he came forward eagerly, extending his hand.

"Angela," he whispered softly.

"Armand," I cried.

It was the playmate of my childhood, and the love of my youth; we had lived next door and played together in the garden which lay between our homes. He had been called away to the Beautiful Beyond soon after our betrothal, when all the world was rose and gold, and his going had saddened my life forever.

"Have you forgotten me, Angela?"

I held up my hand, on which shone the slender circlet of gold he had placed there so many years ago.

"You have been weeping. What troubles you, Angela?" I wept on, silently, and did not reply.

"My love has followed you through life, breaking down every barrier to guard and protect you, even when the good man you married lived. This same love shall meet your spirit in that house not made with hands. By this love I have the right to know."

Then I told him, only that morning with anguish in my heart, but with bright smiles and cheering words, I had sent my only son to fight for his country. With the aviation corps, he had gone to the battlefields of France. He was so young and inexperienced I had little hope of ever seeing his smiling face again. I had come to the upper chamber to pray for his safety.

"Don't grieve, Angelica; all will be well. 'Tis better to die for a noble cause than to live unworthily. Death is but a change from being mortal, to immortality—but the lifting of a veil which separates us from the cares of earth, upon the paradise of God's Garden. Look up, and be of good cheer, knowing the Divine Love is 'round about us."

Phychology may explain dreams, but it can never define the comfort and solace they bring, for I awaked so soothed in spirit and comforted that I went to work with renewed energy for the dear khakl lads "somewhere" in France.

THOUGHTS ON PASSING NEAR CAMP SHELBY.

W. Fred Long.

Oh, Mississippi, dear Mississippi,
With your cotton and corn,
How beautiful you look
This bright November morn!

Mississippi, yes, let her stand,
With her great women and men,
Her children, cattle, houses and land,
Her glorious achievements now and then.

Her trees kiss the sky;
'Neath her surface saints and heroes lie;
On her bosom saints and heroes trod—
May they all reach home to God.

THE NASHVILLE AGITATION DISAPPROVED.

The North Alabama Conference, one of the larger Annual Conferences in Southern Methodism, in its session at Woodlawn, Ala., a few days ago adopted the following resolutions, which were introduced by Dr. E. M. Green, of Birmingham:

"Whereas certain laymen from various sections have sent forth an 'Address' seeking certain legislation; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That this Conference will not be averse to an increase of lay representation in the Annual Conference, provided it does not make such increase greater than eight delegates from a district.

"Second, That the actions of the 'Address' dealing with other issues do not commend themselves to our judgment as wise, and are therefore to be opposed."

The Prohibition movement seems to have about spent its force. Some of its promoters are now trying to save their faces by claiming that they will at least get out of it an increased representation in the Annual Conference; but most of the Conferences virtually committed themselves to that when they voted against the ex-officio program. That was before the Nashville-Chattanooga tirade and political scheme were ever heard of.

We desire to say also that in our opinion the plan suggested in the foregoing resolutions, to have eight laymen from each presiding elder's district, is about the right number. There are able men among us who hold the view that since the Annual Conferences exercise no legislative powers, and are almost entirely administrative bodies, the chief business of which is to receive the pastors' reports, and review their work, pass their characters, and assign them to their fields of labor, there is no need for a large lay representation in them. Over against this stands the fact that the Annual Conferences usually have the care of most of the Church's educational and benevolent institutions located within their bounds, and that it devolves upon them to promote the cause of temperance and various other forms of Christian work; and hence it follows that the counsel and assistance of laymen in their deliberations and activities might prove of great value.

It may not be amiss in this connection to quote Bishop McTyeire's comment (in his peerless "History of Methodism") on the adoption of lay representation by our Church: "The great measure of 1866 was lay delegation. Its prostrate, and almost collapsed, condition required all available help the Church could command. A sentiment in favor of lay co-operation had been growing quietly for years. Once only two questions were asked in an Annual Conference: 'How many are in the Society?' 'Where are the preachers stationed this year?' There was no business for laymen then. The schedule grew to embrace a wider range of topics and a larger care. By and by, education, Sunday schools and Sunday observance, religious publications, and their dissemination, orphanage and reformed, temperance and Church extension began to occupy much time in Annual and General Conferences, and the need of laymen was felt." It is because we think that the range of interests to be conserved and carried forward has widened still more within recent decades that we favor having an increased number of laymen in the Annual Conferences; but the number should not be made too large. Since no laws are enacted by these bodies, their duties being almost wholly executive, we see no reason for insisting upon an absolute numerical equality between the clergy and laity in them.

One thing more. Along with an increased lay representation in the Annual Conference, we think a way should be found to get more laymen to attend the District Conferences, where the electing would be done. We are inclined to the view that it might be a good idea to allow a very liberal representation in these latter bodies, as some of the Annual Conferences do now, and have the delegates to them chosen directly by the congregations in the district, rather than by the Quarterly Conferences. This arrangement would at least have the merit of starting the representative principle with the people. We think that the Quarterly Conference could without injury to its usefulness be made wholly an administrative body.

HELP THE STARVING SYRIANS AND ARMENIANS.

On page 13 of this issue of the Advocate we are carrying a statement from Dr. E. B. Chappell, and also on another page one from President Wilson, which should have immediate attention. The fact that two million people, many of whom are our fellow-Christians, are at the point of actual starvation, ought certainly to be enough to arouse the citizens of America, who are surrounded by rolling plenty, to instantaneous action to give them relief. Let our Sunday school superintendents in Louisiana and Mississippi take steps at once to secure the suggested programs, that they may be able to present the needs of these destitute sufferers intelligently to the membership of our Sunday schools. Our pastors also should, without delay, bring this cause before their congregations, and take offerings for it, remitting the amounts received to Dr. Chappell. We feel sure that the Methodists of this section will respond generously to this call if it is properly presented to them. Every church and Sunday school should have a part in this great work of "rescuing the perishing."

SOME WORDS FROM BROTHER KING.

Dear Brother Meek: I have just closed a round of visits to the four Annual Conferences that united to build a Methodist Hospital in Memphis.

The North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences are indeed composed of men thoroughly alive to all the advanced movements of our great Church. They are men possessed with splendid powers of leadership, and it is indeed encouraging to know that the affairs of Methodism are in the hands of such well-equipped men. The cordial reception accorded to me and the assurances of hearty co-operation from these brethren in the building of the Methodist Hospital greatly strengthened my hopes and confirmed my faith in the absolute certainty of the success of the undertaking.

I am profoundly grateful for all the promises of help made and also for the kind words of endorsement from the editor of the Advocate. I appreciate the fact, of course, that these are bestowed because of my representative capacity, and it is in that sense that I accept them and expect them to be of great value in the work we have in hand.

I again assure the brethren that I am wholly committed to this tremendous task, and shall consider it a favor to be called upon whenever and wherever I can serve. Whatever information touching the progress of the work the brethren may want will be gladly furnished. I am sure the brethren appreciate the fact that they can render invaluable service in the undertaking by often letting their people know about the needs of such an institution and what is being done in order to secure it.

Fraternally,

THOS. S. KING, Financial Agent.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 7, 1917.

FURTHER PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. R. H. Harper.

Eight memorials to the General Conference were brought before the Louisiana Conference for consideration. A memorial asking that lay rights be granted to women; a memorial asking that the Committee on Church Publications be made a quadrennial board; a memorial asking for the appointment of two missionary Bishops, one for the Orient and one for Latin America, and also asking for the fixing of episcopal residences; a memorial asking for the merging of the quarterly conference and the church conference, under the name of church conference, which shall elect all such officers, and a memorial asking for the removal of the time limit, received a majority vote of the Conference. In the vote upon the memorial asking for the removal of the time limit, a division was called for, and the vote was 67 for, and 60 against. A memorial asking that laymen be empowered to sit in the Bishop's cabinet, a memorial asking for the election of presiding elders, and a memorial asking that laymen be allowed to assist in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, were voted down.

The Committee on Church Publications, in its report, commended the several periodicals of the Church, and especially stressed the need of a larger circulation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. A special campaign was urged, and in adopting the report, the Conference authorized such a campaign, the time to be the last week in January, 1918.

CHURCH EXTENSION NEWS NOTES.

Dr. W. F. McMurry, Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, announces the receipt of a draft for $50,000 from the hand of Dr. T. E. Sharp, presiding elder of the Memphis District, which amount is the contribution of a citizen of Memphis, Tenn., to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board, and is to be used in the interest of church and parsonage building, so far as there is need, within the bounds of the Memphis District.

The new $40,000 church at Forest City, Ark., Rev. J. F. E. Bates, pastor, was formally opened for worship by Dr. W. F. McMurry on Sunday morning, Nov. 25. At the evening hour, on the same date, Dr. McMurry dedicated the new $17,000 church at McCrory, Ark., Rev. F. A. Lark, pastor.

Mr. J. B. Duke, of New York, has sent to the Board of Church Extension his third check for $25,000 for use in his native State, North Carolina. Of this amount $15,000 is to be used in church and parsonage building, and $10,000 in the support of pastors in the rural sections.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Brookhaven, Miss., President of Whitworth College, is in Washington City this week, attending the convention of the National Anti-Saloon League.

Rev. J. L. Nators is in place at Kossuth, Miss., his new charge. He reports that all is going well with him. We pray that large success may crown his efforts in his new field.

Rev. J. W. Robertson has been pleasantly received at Hollandale, Miss., and writes hopefully of the prospect ahead there. We hope to print the whole of his communication in the next issue of the Advocate.

In a note written from Crowder, Miss., on Dec. 3, Dr. J. W. Price says: "I will be here for some months. My health is better and I hope to preach again. God bless you!" We are pleased to have this message from this noble veteran. May the Lord consciously abide with him!

From Ruleville, Miss., his new appointment, Rev. W. S. Shipman writes: "My reception here has been most cordial, and the outlook is encouraging." Our flock at Ruleville may count themselves fortunate in having Brother Shipman as their shepherd.

Dr. U. G. Foote's sermon at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference in Minden is stated to have made a fine impression. Dr. Foote is a speaker of unusual gifts.

We are indebted to the following friends for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Brother T. M. Babington, Franklinton, La., 3; Brother B F. Chambers, Beach, Miss., 3; Rev. T. B. Winstead, Burns, Miss., 10.

Dr. H. B. Johnston, of the Memphis Conference, was assigned to Paris, Tenn., at the late session of that body. He says: "This is a good field for work. The church here has over 700 members." Dr. Johnston is a delegate to the next General Conference, in which doubtless his influence will be appreciably felt.

Rev. G. B. Love, of the North Mississippi Conference, writes as follows: "We have been detained for a few days in getting moved to our new charge, the Marietta Circuit. We are hoping to get settled down soon, and to take up in earnest the work for the Master and his Church." Brother Love is making a good record in the itinerancy.

On last Sunday, Dec. 9, during the 11 o'clock service at the Methodist Church at Plaquemine, La., Miss Georgia I. White and Mr. Thomas R. Pregeant, of Baton Roge, La., were united in marriage, Rev. George P. White, father of the bride, officiating. The couple will reside in Baton Rouge. The Advocate extends congratulations and best wishes.

The Aberdeen (Mississippi) District made a notable record last year under the leadership of its capable young presiding elder, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb. There was a decided advancement on nearly all lines. Brother Lipscomb is one of the best equipped men in the Church, and he is much concerned for the welfare of the Master's cause. We predict for him a career of widening usefulness.

Rev. J. H. Felts writes optimistically of the outlook in the Holly Springs District, of which he has been appointed presiding elder for the third year. Both as a preacher and as one of the trusted leaders of his Conference, Brother Felts is giving a good account of himself. His district is well manned and the various interests of the Church may be expected to be taken good care of within its bounds.

The Publisher of the Advocate and Rev. R. H. Harper were the recipients of a very gracious hospitality during the late session of the Louisiana Conference in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Burnett and Mr and Mrs. Fort, and they desire to make grateful acknowledgment of the courtesies extended to them. Other guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burnett were Rev. A. J. Gearheard, Rev. J. D. Harper, and Prof. Upton.

The Methodists of New Orleans will give up Brother and Sister R. H. Harper with not a little reluctance. They have done a really great work at Parker Memorial Church during the past four years, and have also made many friends in other congregations in the city. Brother Harper is a scholarly and able preacher, and Sister Harper has few equals as an effective Christian worker. Much in the way of efficient service is expected of them in the coming years.

After many years of faithful service as a supply in the two Mississippi Conferences, Rev. R. T. Nolen has voluntarily laid off the active harness which he has so worthily worn. He has well earned a season of rest, and, though he will now make his home in the distant State of Indiana (where he has relatives), the brethren will hold him in loving remembrance. Brother Nolen has long been an appreciated friend of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. His address will hereafter be, care of Mr. J. A. Nolen, City Hospital, Indianapolis, Ind.

After four years at the First Methodist Church of this city, Dr S. H. Werlein has been made pastor of our church at Alexandria, where we have a congregation of approximately a thousand members, and where one of our army cantonments is located. Dr. Werlein is an able preacher. The new pastor of our First Church in New Orleans is Rev. W H. Coleman, one of the choicest men in the Louisiana Conference. Rev. F. M. Freeman is the new pastor of the Parker Memorial Church, and Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, of Epworth Church. Both of these brethren have the reputation of being good preachers and successful workers.

From a card from Rev W. M. Langley, who, because of ill health, was forced to retire from active work at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, we take the following: "I will be with my father at West Point, Miss., for the next twelve months. I have closed at Pickens one of the best years of my ministry, and it is a great grief to me to have to retire." We have never known a choicer spirit than this faithful young worker, who is a graduate of Millsaps College, and we deeply regret the failure of his health, which we trust will be only temporary. May the Heavenly Father watch over and bless him and his loved ones!

"BOYS, WE DON'T HAVE TO COME BACK."

The most dangerous point on the Atlantic coast is the life-saving station at Cape Hatteras, commanded a few years ago by Captain Pat Etheridge, a big, tall man with a splendid, strong body, keen eyes, kindly face and long, bushy beard.

The peculiar danger of this post is that the wrecked vessels are not thrown up on the beach in easy reach of the life-saving station, but go to pieces on the Diamond Shoals ten miles out to sea, and the crew must go that distance to save them.

Several years ago a vessel foundered on these shoals in a fearful storm. Her signals of distress were seen from the lighthouse and Captain Pat got ready the self-bailing life-boat, which is fitted up with mast and sails as well as oars. Meanwhile the storm grew worse and the wind, which was off shore, grew more violent every moment. He ordered the crew to launch the boat—but they hesitated. They were men who had risked their lives in a hundred brave adventures, but now they paused. They looked at the hungry sea running so high, and off to where the breakers thundered on the shoals, and they listened to the roar of the storm. Then one of them spoke: "Cap'ain Pat, it's no use with that wind. We can launch the boat and we can reach the ship, but we can never come back." There was silence, except for the wail of the storm growing louder, then Captain Pat said, "Boys, we don't have to come back."

The crew looked into the flashing eyes of their captain; they understood, and as one man they launched the boat. They reached the wreck, took off the survivors, and, the wind changing a point or two, after nine hours of the most heroic toil they got back to the station. The captain's words, "Boys, we don't have to come back," are repeated by men at all the life-saving stations on both our coasts wherever there are dangers to run, deeds to do and lives to save.

You would like to have done it, wouldn't you, boys? Not many can do a thing like that, but there is a hero's job waiting for you if you have the hero's spirit. The calling of the ministry doesn't sound as if it offered you that chance, does it? It seems rather dull and commonplace. Still, it is the hero's job, for, like every hero's work, it means a life of service.

It may send a man to the Home Mission fields in the great Southwest, where his hard work and his discomforts will far outnumber his pleasures—but did you ever hear of a hero in an easy place? It may send him to the twilight lands of Africa, to the cold north or to the hopeless and wicked of our own cities. But suppose it does, and you have to stick it out and you never come back to a life of pleasantness among friends, loved ones and easy goodness.

Boys, you don't have to come back! It will not matter, if only you have given your life in service to God and your fellow-men and joined the immortal band of the "unreturning brave."—Mildred Welch, in the Round Table.

Jesus can touch our broken hearts with a perfectly tender touch, for He has had a broken heart himself.—Bishop Moule.

MRS. VASHTI GILL (nee Webb) was born on Sept. 16, 1891, and died on Nov. 11, 1917. She was stricken with pneumonia while teaching at Mangham, and in spite of all the medical aid she grew worse until the end came. Vashti was laid peacefully to rest by the side of her father in the Athens Cemetery. Her mother, a little sister, a brother who is in the navy, and a grandmother survive her. Her mother, Mrs. Kate Webb, whose home is in Gilmland, La., was with her to the end. During her short life of twenty-one years and twenty-five days, she gave much joy and sunshine to the home, and her going hence casts shadows that only the face and voice of Jesus will brighten. She united with the M. E. Church, South, early in life.

A FRIEND.

Mrs. MARY CHILTON BEARD, wife of Mr. James Beard, of Lake Providence, La., was born on May 14, 1845, in Ouachita Parish, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. D. Holland, in Ruston, La., on Thursday morning, November 22, leaving her husband, a daughter, and four sons to suffer the bitter affliction of bereavement. Sister Beard was truly a most exemplary Christian character. Her beautiful life was an "epistle of Christ," an eloquent sermon incarnating the truth of the gospel and commending the Savior to lost and needy souls. Truly in her passing there was no death, no tragedy, but a happy translation, a joyous entering into rest, an arrival, after a weary journey, home, where she is no stranger, for she intimately knew her Lord, and many loved ones and friends awaited her there. A beautiful daughter, Mrs. J. W. Frieshman, had preceded her but five years ago to the great city. Sister Beard was one of those noble "mothers in Israel" who reared a noble Christian family, whose devotion to her in life was touchingly beautiful and who will ever "rise up and call her blessed." The writer counts it a great privilege to have been her pastor for four years and recalls many a profitable and delightful visit to her home, where he enjoyed rarest Christian fellowship and felt always the stronger for the visit. Sister Beard, though ascended to her reward, will live long in the memory of her friends and in the lives of her children who are striving to follow the path she led. Praise God for such a function of the gospel as was exemplified in her radiant life. Such exponents of holiness point to the intimacy of heaven and earth, the mystic confluence of divine and human currents into one clear, holy stream of life. J. W. LEE.

CHRISTIAN TRAINING FOR THE CHILD.

If you neglect the early religious training of the child, does he choose later a religious life? Such cases are few. If you do not bring the child up in the Church as a member of it from infancy, is he apt to join the Church when he grows up? It would only be natural for him to go on as his life began—treating religion as a matter of no particular importance. This age is reaping the harvest that results from the neglect of infant baptism, and the training that act implies.

Religious training lasts — forever. Physical training and mental training last only for a time. The one trains the soul, the other flesh and blood—perishing materials. Which deserves the greatest attention? Christ said: "Seek first the Kingdom of God"—seek it for your child as well as yourself.

"Baptism doth represent unto us our profession, which is to follow the example of our Savior Christ, and to be made like unto Him. . . . continually mortifying all our evil and corrupt affections and daily proceeding in all virtue and godliness of living." "Continually" and "daily proceeding" imply training.—The Witness.

COMMENDATORY OF REV. AND MRS. E. S. LEWIS.

(The following resolutions of appreciation were adopted by the Woman's Missionary Society, at Oxford, Miss., on Nov. 15, 1917.)

We the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of this church desire to express in this manner our genuine appreciation of our pastor, Rev. E. S. Lewis, and his family, who according to the rule of Methodism must soon cast their lot in another part of the "Master's vineyard;" therefore, be it resolved:

1. That it is with a keen sense of regret that we must say good-by, and we herewith vouchsafe to them our loving interest and pray that their most useful and happy days may yet be in the future.

2. That we thank Him whom they delight to honor for the uplifting and encouraging influences that they have exerted in this Missionary Society.

3. That we feel ourselves to be a more sincere and useful band by having labored together with them for our common Lord.

4. That we pray that His richest blessings may attend them, and that a home eternal may be their final reward.

Signed: Mrs. A. F. Calloway, Mrs. F. B. Patton, Mrs. W. A. Steinbeck, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF COMMENDATION.

Whereas, this quarterly conference closes the fourth year of the pastorate of Rev. A. M. Broadfoot at the Hawkin's Memorial Church; resolved

1. That we hereby express our appreciation of Brother Broadfoot as a consecrated Christian man, a Scriptural preacher, and a tender, sympathetic, faithful pastor, who was untiring in his efforts for the advancement of the interests of the Church in all its departments. He was ever mindful of the work of the Church, interested in the spiritual development of each member of the Church, and very solicitous for the salvation of the unsaved.

2. That, while we are willing to submit to the law of the Church, yet we regret to lose him and his lovable family from our city, community, and Church; but that we are thankful for the four years' delightful association and fellowship, and pray God's richest blessings upon him and his family in their new field of labor.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be furnished Brother Broadfoot, a copy given the Advocate for publication, and a copy spread upon the records of this quartqerly conference.

The above resolutions were unanimously adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Hawkins Memorial Church.

Signed: E. T. Hayes, Secretary.

A PERSONAL GOD NEEDED.

I am a person, and only a person can satisfy me. I am a spirit, and only the spiritual can meet my mighty longings. I am immortal, and only the eternal can be enough for me. And so it comes to pass, the moment a man discovers himself he feels that no earthly portion can cover the whole of his necessity, can slake the whole of his thirst, and so he looks heavenward, stretches out his little hand to grasp the hands of the Infinite One, and cries, whom have I in heaven but Thee; there is none upon the earth that I desire beside Thee. My flesh and my heart faileth, but God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever.—W. Pearce.

"BUT ONE THING THAT COUNTS."

What is the 'one thing that counts?" Would it be health, or money, or a good time? Multitudes of our brothers and sisters are giving just such answers—not in words, perhaps, but in their ordering of life. So much that we do is not worth doing—judged afterward. Said a soldier to his mother, after he returned from the trenches: "I have learned at the front that there is but one thing that counts, and that is God." Fortunate for us, in this favored land, if without the horrors of war or the shock of social upheavel, we determine for ourselves what things really count.—New York Advocate.

SOME WISE WORDS.

The following sensible utterances are from a communication in the St. Louis "Christian Advocate," and are by Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga.:

"In recent years the churches have been hindered and hurt by all sorts of 'movements.' Specialists, not to say faddists, have exerted themselves to draw all the churches to the support of their peculiar schemes and plans. They have inaugurated all sorts of reforms and they are constantly calling for 'conferences' and 'conventions' to further these enterprises.

"It is to be feared that there is much vanity, if nothing worse, in many of these schemes. Petty promoters wish to hold office and occupy place in the public eye. They enjoy running to and fro, holding conventions and conferences and having their utterances paraded in the newspapers. A subtle temptation may penetrate even the best work and pride may permeate the noblest endeavors.

"An injurious result which has followed these spectacular 'movements' is the growing distaste of many people for any other sort of work. The prayer meeting is neglected; the ordinary services of the church are ignored; the study of the Bible in the Sunday school is abandoned. All these plain and highly necessary things are becoming insipid to men and women who have become enamored of picturesque 'movements' and spectacular reforms. But without these plain things religion will cease to exist in the land. It is perfectly obvious, therefore, that the Christianity of our country is not promoted, but is rather injured by these manifold movements."

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 65 cents and gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, be sure to ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

The United States Supreme Court handed down a decision some days ago on a case coming up from Louisville Ky., in which the court holds that the law segregating the negroes in cities is unconstitutional. This decision will affect several cities of the South since hey have segregation laws similar to hat in Louisville. The court in rendering the decision states that the decision does raise some very serious questions for the South, but that the law is clear. The law forbade any negro living as a resident in a block in which the majority of the residents are white, and any white resident from living in a block in which the majority are negroes.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

THE LORD IS GOOD.

The Lord is good. Sometimes we forget this. Sometimes we feel it. Always we know it. Very few people are really skeptical as to the goodness, the loving-kindness of the great God who is at the heart of hings, who is at the heart of the whole niverse as its Author and Upholder We pity the man who has lost all faith n goodness and in God. The Lord is good. Let us fix this thought more firmly in our minds than ever before And because he is good we owe Him gratitude. We receive His blessings herefore we ought to thank Him. As some one has well said, "Thankfulness is politeness toward God." Thanksgiving ought to be a habit. It ought to be annual, not in the sense of occurring once in November, but annual in the sense of extending the whole year through. St. Paul says, "In every hing give thanks; for this is the wil of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."—New York Observer.

WORKERS TOGETHER WITH GOD.

What a new complexion it would lend to life if, as we stepped out from our homes, we could realize that we were going forth, not to make a living, as a primary object, but to discover what God is doing in the world, and to give Him such help as we could! It may seem a high and impossible idea, but the more one thinks of it, the more it grows upon the mind. We are bidden by the Apostle to abide with God in every calling in which we are called. We know that he claimed to be a fellow-worker or co-laborer with God—and why should the significance of such a conception be reserved for the missionary or minister of religion alone?—F. B. Meyer.

TRUE HUMILITY.

"Humility is the lowly and true estimate of self; it is acceptance of the place appointed by God, whether it be in the front or the rear; it is simple acquiescence in God's order to suffer or to act without thought of rights or of reputation. It is the emptiness of self which God fills."—Canon Barnett.

HOW MAY REMEMBERED.

May Mathews was a dear little girl, but she very often forgot to say "Thank you," or "Please," and many other things.

One day mother said: "How can you make yourself stop doing these naughty things, and learn to do right and polite things?"

"I know," said May. "I'll name each one of my fingers and thumbs then I'll be sure to remember."

So she named one "Thank You," and one "If You Please," and one "Put Away Your Playthings," and one "Be Kind to Baby," and one "Don't Make a Noise."

So, after that, when she forgot to observe these little rules, she made believe that that particular finger grew sore over it, and she would cure it by being careful of it next time.

MOTHER'S RIGHT-HAND MAN

Throughout the day in the household the mother must face the burns, stings cuts, bruises, sores, boils, etc., of the children. Gray's Ointment gives immediate relief, soothes the pain, wards off blood poison and immediately begins its healing effect. Its constant use for ninety-seven years has made it a family word in every household. Its instantaneous healing effect and its soothing relief to skin infections make it almost indispensable in the home. Telephone your druggist. If he hasn't it send his name to W. F. TO-MORROW.

Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe.

Would it not be better to leave to-morrow with God? That is what is troubling men; to-morrow's temptations, to-morrow's difficulties, to-morrow's burdens, to-morrow's duties. Martin Luther, in his autobiography says: "I have one preacher that I love better than any other on earth; it is my little tame robin, which preaches to me daily. I put his crumbs upon my window-sill, especially at night. He hops to the sill when he wants his supply, and takes as much as he desires to satisfy his need. From thence he always hops to a little tree close by and lifts up his voice to God and sings his carol of praise and gratitude, tucks his little head under his wing, and goes fast to sleep, and leaves to-morrow to look after itself. He is the best preacher that I have on earth."

Constipation

You are apt to think lightly of a slight case of constipation. Did you know that constipation is incipient auto-intoxication or self-poisoning? You cannot be too careful for constipation without treatment is liable to become the source of far more serious ills. To be entirely healthy and have a clean body, it is necessary to keep the bowels clean and the liver active. When constipated, take Van Lax, for it is the ideal treatment for constipation. Contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. Does not gripe or nauseate. It is pleasant in taste and results. Sold everywhere by the best dealers. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Prayer is not overcoming God's reluctance; it is laying hold of His highest willingness.—Trench.

Women Suffer at Home.

WOODFORD, TENN.—"This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription also the Golden Medical Discovery and find them to be as represented. When suffering with nervous prostration 'Favorite Prescription' cured me when other medicines failed. I think it is a grand medicine and never fail to recommend it to suffering women."—MRS. ROSA LEE HOGAN, Route 1.

SYLACAUGA, ALA.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Remedies and they are fine. I used the Cough Remedy myself and my wife has used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with good results. More than once she used this medicine when in a delicate condition."—W. B. GRANT.

"Favorite Prescription," the ever-famous friend to ailing women, and "Golden Medical Discovery," the greatest general tonic, are both put up in liquid and tablets, and are to be found in nearly all drug stores. They have enjoyed an immense sale for nearly 50 years, which proves their merits as well as the statements made by users. If not obtainable at your dealer's send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and he will mail trial package of either tablets.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 903D Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

MIXED DRINKS.

(From the Christian Intelligencer.)

Milk is good and water is good. Put them together, and the result is nauseating. Oh, what a call to-day! "I would ye were cold or hot." God does not forget our right to our personality, but He wants it at its best. He insists on our taking Him as He is offered in the Bible. The Western Christian Advocate says:

"Denaturized religion is a deception and a crime against humanity. Pastors and teachers who serve that kind to their people will have their place where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. Men may water down religion into a sentiment, a ritual, a soul allegiance, a personal loyalty affair that means nothing for personal power, self-mastery, and a growing knowledge of God. Christianity so delivered is an infamous dilution. Listen: the religion of Christ is a conviction, an obligation, a constraint of the soul, an allegiance of the faculties, which make a man. It is personal life translated into its highest speech.

MAKES HAPPY FACES.

In a recent report of a mission in China, a traveler is quoted who comments on the striking change in the faces of the Chinese converts. The Chinese face is frequently dull, apathetic, uninteresting, hopeless. But when some man, with features lacking in attractiveness, begins to walk in newness of life, a light gleams in his eye, a brightness shines on his brow, and the whole face is illumined with a new intelligence.—Dr. Clow.

BACK TO HEALTH BY NATURE'S ROUTE.

This is the title of a most interesting booklet issued by the celebrated Shivar Mineral Spring. The booklet contains the strongest letters of testimonial from men eminent in the professions of medicine, law and theology, from bankers, merchants, manufacturers and others, telling how this remarkable water has relieved them of dyspepsia and indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, kidney and liver diseases, uric acid poisoning and other ailments due to impure blood. Sign and mail the following letter and you will have no cause to regret it.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-G, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

CUTTING THE HYMN.

"Newspaper Reader," in the Methodist Recorder, gives some very valuable advice when he says: "One other hint I would give the young preacher: Never cut the hymns. Cut the sermon. That is yours to cut. But the hymns belong to the ages, to the congregation, and to the choir."

Having had a little experience in compiling a hymn book, we cannot refuse any amateur the right to do as we have done. Few hymns were directly written for the purpose and few are handed down in complete form as written. Verses are changed in order and altered in phraseology; many lines have long since died to the glory of God. No choir ever sighs because the hymn is shortened and no pastor is averse to omitting a verse because the composer had more time at his command than the modern worshiper. Perhaps it would be better to use fewer hymns and use them in their entirety just as printed. To omit might be "the unkindest cut of all."—Christian Intelligencer.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Alexandria District was held in the Methodist Church of Jena on Nov. 15 and 16, Mrs. Winstead, District Secretary, presiding.

The first session opened on Thursday morning with devotional exercises conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Bennett; and as he spoke to us from the first chapter of Romans we felt that it was indeed his desire to impart unto us some spiritual gift, and the fervor of his message remained with us throughout the conference.

The first subject under discussion was the organization of young people's work, and much stress was put upon this special phase, all seeming to realize this as one of our most difficult problems. The goal to be reached for the young people being a 10 per cent increase in organizations, membership and collections, much emphasis was placed upon striving to obtain this goal. There were reported only four Y. P. auxiliaries in the district—Alexandria, Bunkie, Campti, and Jena. There are six Junior auxiliaries—Alexandria, Bunkie, Jena, Campti, Lecompte, and Good Pine—and all are doing a good work.

The adult goal was presented in a very impressive manner, emphasis being placed upon the organization of new auxiliaries and upon an increase in membership through united prayer, the forming of seven new mission study classes, paying of pledge by Harvest Day, observing Week of Prayer, definite social work for auxiliaries, and sending of seven boxes of supplies to the institutions designated earlier in the year. The fulfilment of this goal will mark a wonderful advance in the work of the district.

The pledge for the Alexandria District is $550, all of which has been paid in except $137.25. Two auxiliaries report being overpaid — Lecompte and Merrivilie. Alexandria pledged $175, all paid except $43.05; Bunkie $31, all paid but $2.75; Colfax paid in full; Carson pledged, but has nothing paid yet; Jena due on pledge $8.50; Natchitoches due $30. All auxiliaries have responded except one. Two new auxiliaries have been organized during the year, one at Pineville, the other at Glenmora.

At the afternoon session the subject of finances was taken up and Mrs. W. D. Haas was asked to read a paper written by Mrs. Hyams, of Natchitoches, entiled, "Just a Reminder." It touched on the duty of the members of auxiliaries, the support of the Scarritt Training School, our pledges, and how to give that it might prove a blessing to all.

Following this was an interesting program conducted by Mrs. Cunningham, State officer of young people's work. The young people pledged $200 for the support of the work and report $160.09 paid on same. "What Is a Pledge?" was thoroughly explained to the young people, and, being a special pledge, it was interesting to them to know that it went towards the support of the Japanese in our own country and Japan. The plan of sending "valentines" proved quite a success, as all auxiliaries were heard from; and the Ruston Orphanage being one in the lead, made our hearts glad to know of the excellent work being done by the young people there.

An appeal was made to the mothers to encourage the young people in their work, and a suggestion was made to the presidents of all societies to let the young people choose their own leader, feeling that more interest would be manifested. A poster placed in all churches to advertise their meetings was another suggestion. Many ways were discussed to enlarge the attendance. The duty of the different officers in the young people's society was presented; also a letter from John James Young, which was interesting to the Juniors, as he is working in the interest of "The Young Christian Worker." Two meetings a month were recommended for the young people, a business meeting with program from year book, and a social meeting combined with mission study.

The evening session was one of uplift and enjoyment. The Junior Society presented their week of prayer program, several of their number impersonating the following deaconesses and missionaries:

Mary Hasler from Biloxi Wesley House; Helen Gibson from St. Mark's Hall; Lillie Fox from Tampa Wesley House; Mary Hood from Mary Black Hospital, Soochow; Dr. Ethel Polk from Mary Black Hospital. At the close of this touching impersonation a beatiful and appropriate song was sung by the choir and the Juniors, after which these children prayed for special blessings on all missions and missionaries in our own and foreign fields.

Rev. Mr. Breithaupt had an earnest, graphic message from his work, the Houma Mission. He said this mission was the idol of his heart, and as he poured forth his impassioned words, telling of his work there and of the many hardships his people have to endure, no one could doubt it.

The last session of the Conference was held Friday morning. After the devotional exercises, Mrs. Winstead made an appeal, urging the members to subscribe to the "Missionary Voice" and "Young Christian Worker." So successful was her effort that every woman in the house not a subscriber subscribed at once to one or both. Mission study was ably presented by Mrs. A. C. Simmonds, and a list of the books in use for this year was given. Some strong points were brought out on the successful conducting of a mission study class.

A rising vote of thanks was extended the hostesses of the Conference by the delegates, expressing their appreciation of their gracious hospitality. Mrs. Cunningham read a very touching poem, also a story of Lizzie Johnson's missionary quilt, at the close of which she asked each one present to resolve to devote more time to the young people's work, to work and pray more. Another request was that each pray for some individual missionary in the foreign field, cut out their pictures, place them where they can be seen and ask God's blessings on them daily. Mrs. TOM OWEN, Secretary.

GIFT TO BREVARD INSTITUTE.

A good friend of Brevard Institute sent to the General Treasurer a check for one thousand dollars to be used in the carpentry department. Never was a gift more timely nor a people more grateful than for this gift. The carpentry shop will now be moved into a building of its own, which will reduce the crowded conditions in the administration hall and give room for the laboratory work, which has been crowded out of place by the use of two rooms for the carpentry work.

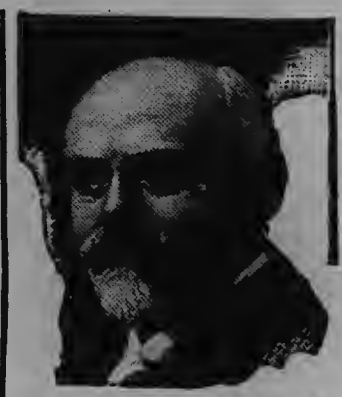
Former Health Commissioner Says Nuxated Iron

Should Be Used in Every Hospital and Prescribed by Every Physician—Attributes His own Great Physical Activity Today at Over 60 Years of Age Largely to His Personal Use of Nuxated Iron

WHAT FORMER HEALTH COMMISSIONER KERR SAYS

"As Health Commissioner of the City of Chicago, I was importuned many times to recommend different medicines, mineral waters, etc. Never yet have I gone on record as favoring any particular remedy, but I feel that in Nuxated Iron an exception should be made to the rule. I have taken Nuxated Iron myself and experienced its health-giving strength-building effect, and in the interest of the public welfare, I feel it my duty to make known the results of its use. I am well past my three-score years and want to say that I believe that my own great physical activity is due largely today to my personal use of Nuxated Iron, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the wonderful tonic benefits which I have received, I shall feel greatly gratified that I made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending it. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron, I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

Former Health Commissioner, City of Chicago.



Former Health Commissioner Kerr has given years of his life fighting for public health in his own and other cities. It was he who introduced Anti-toxin for Diphtheria in Chicago's Health Department. He purified the milk for the Consumers and thereby helped to save the lives of thousands of babies. He introduced the anti-spitting ordinance which has been copied all over the country and also took care of the sewers and garbage in the interest of public health. He is positive that the widespread use of Nuxated Iron would greatly lessen the worries and troubles of Health Commissioners in keeping up a high standard of public health.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Former Health Commissioner Kerr with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

THE GIFT OF GRATITUDE.

Gratitude is a capacity, and like all capacities it can be expanded; it is a faculty, and like all faculties it can be trained; it is an instinct, and like all instincts it can be developed; it is a plant, and like all plants it can be cultivated; it is a gift, and like all gifts it can be lost. It can become atrophied through disuse; it can be extinguished by abuse. By wrong habits of thinking and feeling we can gradually strangle it. By heedlessness and hurry we can harden and deaden the heart. The fine tempers of the soul are built up only by effort. If we wish right dispositions we must work for them.—Charles E. Jefferson.

HAVE AN AIM.

Many a man drifts through life not knowing, because not asking, whither he is going. There are more purposeless people with whom we daily meet than we are aware of, who are so to be described, not because they are not doing a host of little things for various temporary ends, but for the reason that they are doing nothing in obedience to some one overmastering heavenly purpose, dominating all their endeavors. Unless a man labors for a "chief end" of all living, loving, hoping, and striving, he is truly adrift upon a sea of circumstance, and the prey of now one chance impulse and again another. We should cherish a great purpose—and then allow that great purpose to impel us to our best, as it surely will.—Zion's Herald.

A STEWARD'S BANK.

The value of establishing early in life the habit of giving cannot be doubted. As soon as young people become wage-earners, or in any way have a definite allowance, they should set aside a certain amount regularly for the Lord's work. The Tenth Legion seeks to enroll those who give at least one tenth to the Lord. There are those who regularly give more, those who regularly give less, and those who give in a haphazard way. But while thousands have determined to give a fixed proportion of their income, many have failed to live up to their determination, because some one has failed to give sufficient moral backing and practical help. Some have failed to make even a start in regular giving because they have not been helped to make such a decision.

Here is one practical way to enlist and help young people who desire to do their Christian duty as stewards of the Lord. The plan centers in the establishment of a Steward's Bank. The Missionary Committee, the Finance Committee, or perhaps some one person may be responsible for launching the plan. No fewer than three adults should be asked to serve on the committee responsible for carrying out the plans. If possible, choose at least one person who is in a bank. Organize a bank. If it seems best, have officers. Make arrangements with some regular bank to be the depository of the funds of your little Steward's Bank.

Secure for depositors all those in the society or church who pledge to give a stated proportion of their income to the Lord's work, and who will deposit that proportion regularly in the Steward's Bank. For young people's society members, it would be well to urge all who are now tithers—members of the Tenth Legion—to become depositors. Then launch an educational campaign to get others to give at least a tenth to the Lord, and put that tenth in the Steward's Bank. For a good example to the young people, it would be well to get some adults outside the society to become depositors.

Secure depositors' books. This may be done through the regular bank that receives the funds, or special books may be secured. The latter is the better method. Books of blank checks will have to be secured also. These may be so printed that they will be good in a regular bank. Those who are depositors pay their benevolent pledges and other gifts to the Lord's work by drawing on their accounts in the Steward's Bank.

The plan has the following good points:

1. It is unusual, and gives considerable publicity to the matter of systematic giving.

2. By calling for their deposits regularly, and by keeping the money where it is not easily spent for other causes, it helps young people to be faithful.

3. It gives the young people a sense of responsibility which is good for them.—William Ralph Hall.

A SATISFYING RELIGION.

There is a religion which is satisfying. I will call your attention to four features of it:

First—A sense of the conscious favor of God. You feel that God loves you, that he holds you in his arms.

Second—The consciousness that he has made you good. If the world pours into your lap all its wealth and honors, you would still be a miserable creature unless you knew that you were good and honest and true and pure.

Third—The consciousness that you are doing your duty to the Lord and to those about you.

Fourth—The assurance that all is going to be well. There may be difficulties in the way now, but if we have the assurance in our hearts that all will be well in the end, it will bring satisfaction.

And this satisfying religion you can have without money and without price on the simple conditions that you go right down and submit yourself to Christ, believe in Him, and trust in Him.—General Booth.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste products be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver failing to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the action of the liver and the bowels, and with careful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular action.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, constipation and indigestion: Because they do not cause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Because their use does not derange the stomach, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

When the Skin Seems Ablaze With Itching and Burning

There's just one thing to do.

If your skin seems ablaze with the fiery burning and itching of Eczema, real and lasting relief can only come from treatment that goes below the surface—that reaches down to the very source of the trouble. So-called skin-diseases come from a disordered condition of the blood, and the proper treatment is through the blood.

Search far and near, and you cannot find a blood remedy that approaches S. S. S. for real efficiency. It has been on the market for fifty years, during which time it has been giving uniform satisfaction for all manner of blood disorders. If you want prompt and lasting relief, you can rely upon S. S. Editorial

"As with gladness men of old
Did the guiding star behold;
As with joy they hailed its light,
Leading onward, beaming bright;
So, most gracious God, may we Evermore be led by thee."

* * *

The nations of the world will have a stable peace when the spirit of Christ is regnant in them—and not until then.

* * *

It is worth while to build up the prayer meeting. The congregation that prays is pretty certain to measure up well on other lines.

* * *

For the Christian, the best year should ever be the one ahead, for with the passing months he should come more fully into possession of the things that God has prepared for them that love him.

* * *

The Church should not allow any other organization to outstrip it in looking after the poor, the sick, and others in distress of any kind. The Master showed special concern for all such throughout his earthly ministry, and so should his disciples. The General Rules of our denomination attest how close this work was to the heart of Mr. Wesley. Great are the opportunities for service which it furnishes.

* * *

The indications are that some of the chaplains in the great army that our Nation is now building up may have a pretty strenuous time. The Church News Association (New York) says: "The new rule in this war is that the chaplains stay with the men at all times—in the trenches, and over the top, under fire, no matter how hot. Hence some of them will probably be compelled to learn to fly, or at least to ride in airplanes and hydroplanes while others direct them." It would seem that the Government believes that one who is thoroughly identified with a body of soldiers in all their campaign experiences is best capacitated to minister to them religiously. We think that this principle is a good one for a preacher to follow wherever his sphere of labor may be—in peace as well as in war.

* * *

Men who stand for principle are far too rare. Expediency is the guiding star of most persons, and success is the shrine at which the multitude worships. There are comparatively few who had rather be right than to hold high place and have the applause of the populace, but those who make this higher choice, though it may bring obscurity and loneliness on earth, will be the heroes of eternity. Enduring as seeing Him who is invisible, they can well afford to wait for the nobler vindication and richer reward that the future will bring. That its teachings hold out inspiration to such a course, is one of the glories of Christianity. And what a splendid exemplar in this respect was its mighty founder, who preferred fidelity to the truth and crucifixion upon the cross to all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them! "Wherefore God hath highly exalted him and given him a name which is above every name."

A WAR-TIME CHRISTMAS HOMILY.

For the fourth consecutive time Christmas comes with far the larger portion of the world engaged in the most colossal war of the ages. That such a state of things should exist nineteen centuries after the birth of the Prince of Peace, in spite of the influences that his incarnation, teachings, death, resurrection, and ascension set in motion for the uplifting of humanity, ought surely to be enough to awaken earnest thought upon the part of Christians everywhere as to the causes and significance of this terrible catastrophe. Some have argued that this frightful development proves that Christianity is a failure—that it is inadequate to create and maintain a civilization in which justice, righteousness, and peace shall prevail. Such a conclusion has no basis in sound reason. Christianity is a voluntary religion; it must be accepted and put to the test before it can logically be adjudged to be weak and insufficient. The lack of it is responsible for the present deplorable situation; it is the miserable substitutes for it which have shown their impotence to repress the forces of evil in the world and sustain the enlarging fabric of human society.

It is nothing new for nations to turn away from God and reap the terrible consequences of forsaking him. No truth is writ larger in human history than the fact that the path of apostasy leads to disaster. It was sin that brought the flood and the well-nigh universal destruction of the human family. It was unfaithfulness to the teachings of Jehovah that stripped the Jewish people of their spiritual perception, so that they rejected and crucified the Messiah and pressed forward upon a course that wrought their ruin. It was disobedience to the commandments of God and indulgence in worldliness and wickedness that nearly extinguished the light of pure Christianity in Europe after it had become widespread and ushered in "the Dark Ages." A notorious era of infidelity preceded the bloody "Reign of Terror" in France and the desolating Napoleonic wars, and it is very generally conceded that but for the timely coming of the Wesleyan revival the fires of revolutionary violence would have broken out in Great Britain also. So, the substitution in the German Empire of a materialistic rationalism for the true Christian faith has brought only such a harvest as might have been expected, being more horrifying than the consequences of former apostasies from God, in proportion to the mightier powers now wielded by men as a result of their wider knowledge of the universe and its utilizable forces.

Nor was it Germany alone that was sin-stricken when the tocsin of the present fearful conflict sounded. Other nations were infected and were drifting in the wrong direction. France was famed for her prurient literature and the sensuousness of her people; the Russian Church was in the grip of a deadly formalism and the tide of spirituality was distressingly low, and German theology was fast becoming rooted in England and the United States. It is as true of nations as of individuals, that whatsoever they sow they must also reap. This law is as inexorable in the spiritual as it is in the natural world.

There are some who contend that the successes of Christianity have brought on the present world cataclysm—that it is but an orderly step in God's program for carrying the peoples of earth forward to higher and better things. We cannot accept any such view. Such a teaching is pretty much on a parity with the Malthusian doctrine in political economy, which holds that the population of the earth increases in a geometrical ratio, and the means of subsistence only in arithmetical ratio, and thus fastens upon God the responsibility for all the poverty and want in the world. War is an appalling evil, and of evil God is never the direct and responsible author. This is not saying that some good may not come of the stupendous conflict now raging—that is quite probable—but we cannot agree to the contention that the Heavenly Father desired the strife and that it was, according to his purposes, an unavoidable necessity for the progress of the human race. As we see it, the nations are drinking this bitter cup and learning in the hard school of experience what God would fain have taught them in easier and less violent ways, because they would not hear and hearken to his voice.

Do we hold that all the nations participating in the great war are equally responsible for it? Nay, not so. In our opinion, Germany is the chief offender; it was she who did most toward setting the world on fire. We believe thoroughly in the justice of the cause of the Allies and that the best interests of humanity would be promoted by their success—indeed, it is our conviction that any other outcome would be calamitous. But is there a country engaged in the struggle which, with its sins of omission, to say nothing of its other doings, can disclaim all responsibility for the conditions out of which this fearful eruption came? Surely the United States can not do so, while all the Protestant Churches within her bounds are giving less than $25,000,000 dollars a year for foreign missions, and her people are spending billions of dollars for whiskey, tobacco, and other needless self-indulgences. Nor can England say that either, by example or by evangelistic effort, she did her best to keep Germany true to Apostolic Christianity. The nations of the earth are now so closely related that when one suffers, they all suffer, and that when one is morally diseased, all are in danger of being thereby contaminated. A striking illustration of this is seen in the fact that the old-world superstitions are rearing their temples of worship on these American shores.

The great outstanding lesson of the raging world-war is the one that has been repeatedly taught by the calamities of human history, namely, that an uncorrupted Christianity, in its deep and full significance, is the only adequate safeguard of mankind anywhere. An emasculated Christianity has always failed to create a safe, progressive, and enduring social order, as have also all the false religions, and it must ever do so. The world's true lifting agency is the Gospel of Christ, and its saving power is not merely in its academic teachings and theoretical ethics and ideals, but in the life-giving power of the Holy Spirit that it sets to work in human hearts, destroying the CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD.

By John M. Morse.

We see in Christ—the Lord of all the earth!
The Son of God! We see Him at His birth—
When, to the wise men, came the wondrous star;
We see Him, as it led them from afar.
We see Him, as the star above Him shone;
For them, it led the way, and made Him known.
They saw—they knew; their gifts they gladly brought
And laid them at the feet of Him they sought:
How great a revelation this—to sinful man!
Most wonderful of all things known, since time began.

The glory of the Lord to shepherds came;
The Angel of the Lord revealed His name.
He brought good tidings of the Savior's birth,
Of Christ the Lord! God's greatest Gift to earth.
A multitude—a heavenly host appeared,
And by their praises, all were greatly cheered.
They sang—"God's glory in the highest"—then
They sang of "peace on earth, good-will toward men."
Their joyous songs of praise for Babe of Bethlehem,
Forerunners were of "Cross and Kingly Diadem."

The son of Mary, from His humble home
Went forth to serve—for that the Christ had come.
With small supply of fishes and of bread,
The hungry, waiting multitude, He fed!
He healed the sick! He gave sight to sightless eyes!
He stilled the waves! He caused the dead to rise!
Him they despised! that lowly Nazarene
They crucified! No Christ in him was seen.
They nailed Him to a cross! they saw Him in His grave!
They triumphed then, and said, "Himself He cannot save!"

Jesus appears—the "Son of God" indeed!
As, rising from the tomb! from bondage freed!
His wrappings laid aside, without He stands,
And with His well-known voice, He gives commands.
And Mary hears, and sees, and quickly flies
To tell the disciples of the glad surprise.
With powers of darkness, He had fought and won;
He was the Christ, God's well-beloved Son!
When from Mount Olivet, He took His upward flight,
His work on earth was done; He passed from mortal sight.

"AND ADD...."

Peter gives his own list in familiar phrase, "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge." His list of additions is a timeless one. Douhtful if any modern apostle could improve upon Peter's catalogue. Chief emphasis needs to be put, not upon the specific list of virtues, hut upon the fact that there must always be some such list. Christian growth is a sum in addition. We are never permitted to rest content with any particular footing. We must always add new qualities. To yesterday's courage, we must add to-day's patience, and to-morrow's gentleness. Our high-water mark must continually be raised. There is record of an artist who one day burst into tears saying, "I have achieved my ideal." To do that is tragedy. The moment we begin to catch up with our dreams, we must move our dreams forward.—George Clarke Peck.

WHY JOIN THE CHURCH:

Why, indeed? How often the question is put: "If I am already living to the hest of my ahility a Christian life, actively assisting by my presence, contributions and personal labor in the worship and work of the Church, and thereby showing my sympathy therewith, is it necessary that I should go further and formally join the Church? Cannot a man be saved though he be not a church member?"

Newell Dwight Hillis has made answer to this sort of query in this striking manner: "This is a question between you and God, not between you and the Church. We set no limits to His mercy, but if you will put your argument in the form of a prayer, saying in suhstance, 'Our Father, we have followed Thy Son (to a certain extent); we have obeyed His commands (with certain exceptions); we have kept company with His disciples (taking care not to be counted among them); we have done something to forward His kingdom on earth (declining to he naturalized as its citizens); in short, we have tried to do our duty to everybody except Jesus Christ, and we think we ought to be excused for our failure to honor Him openly!' what answer do you think ought to he made to such a plea?"—N. W. Christian Advocate.

FEAST OF THE CHRIST-CHILD.

The Church of God has ever had its feasts. They have celebrated great events either in its own history, or marked epochs in the revelations of God. The Jews had four great feasts, perhaps the greatest of all celebrating their deliverance from Egytian bondage; or to be more accurate, the passing over hy the death angel of the first born in the homes of the Hebrews, while the first born in the homes of the Egyptians was taken—an event which led to their being ushered out of Egypt in haste. They celebrated this feast through all their generations, and every student of the Bible is familiar with the manner in which it was done. A religious feast is not an unseemly thing in itself, hut it must not partake of the nature of a bacchanalian revel.

The birth of Jesus Christ is the greatest event in the history of the world. It marked the beginning of a human-divine life about which hang all the hopes of a fallen race. It was an event that ought to be kept fresh in the memories of men, and that ought to sweep through the generations of men as an element of cheer and swelling joy to every heart. It would be an exhibition of basest ingratitude for the Church or the world to let the memory of that date fade. It does not matter so much whether the date celebrated is historically accurate or not. It is the event that is important, rather than the exact date upon which it may have occurred; and it is the event that needs to he cherished and kept green in the hearts of men.

But how should this event be celebrated? We have no divinely prescribed method, as did the Jews for the celebration of the Passover; nor does it partake of the nature of a sacrament, as did that celebration. The hirth of Christ should not he used as an occasion for indulgences that strike down all the higher possihilities of a human life. Christ came to take away our sin, and it is a fearful perversion to pretend to celebrate His hirth and do it in such a way as to defeat the very purpose for which He came. How dare men use such an occasion for reveling in drunken orgies that blacken the heart and blast the joys of the home? Why should such an event he made the occasion of a lecherous dance that eats at the very heart of the purity of our youth? Why should Christian society give way at such times to the light and the frivolous, the whole tendency of which is to destroy the foundations of character? These practices that have gathered about the Christmas festivities are a desecration of the holy feast; and, when viewed in the light of what this Christian festival should mean, it amounts to a sacrilege.

It was a different spirit that filled the hearts of those shepherds as they hurried over the hills and across the valleys that surround Bethlehem to get a personal view of the new-born King. After the shock of the first announcement had passed, it was an hour of great joy to them. They praised God for the wonderful thing which they had seen, and the old pasture lands that they had trodden a thousand times were lighted with the sheen of a new glory. They were serious, but not sombre; they were thoughtful, but not morose; their thoughts had to do with two worlds, but they did not therefore regard pain in this one a virtue. How this age needs to make some better distinctions than it does!

The celebration of Christmas needs to have in it the element of worship. The wise men traveled from the far distant east, following the guiding light of the star of Bethlehem, that they might have the privilege of worshiping at His feet. "We have come to worship Him," was their declaration to King Herod. Here was God manifest in the flesh, and we dare not approach God in any other spirit than that of worship. We are treading upon holy ground, as truly as Moses was when he approached the bush that burned with fire, and yet was not consumed. How this Christmas season ought to bring to us anew the realization of the divine presence with us! We need to think over again the actuality of the incarnation. It ought to serve to make this great truth of our holy religion more real to us, and inspire within us a spirit of deeper reverence and worship.

The celebration of Christmas should have in it the element of making joyous the earth; and yet we never give that admonition that we do not feel the peril of being misunderstood. The world's notion of joy is so perverted and distorted that it is difficult to get men to understand its true significance. Paul was frequent in his exhortations to rejoice, and the Christian religion is one of joy; but it is not the joy of the world. But it is the Christmas spirit to impart to men that which will make life glad and happy. Material gifts hestowed in the spirit of love are in perfect accord with the spirit of the day; especially when they are made to the poor and the destitute. It belongs to our religion to chase the shadows from earth, and it is more effective for this than all other agencies combined. The tokens of love one for another do more to cheer the heart and make life worth the living than all the parade of pomp and earthly power. Get into heart-touch with your neighbor, and make your life an inspiration to him—and do this for as many as possible. This is the true Christmas spirit, and let us hope that many will so celebrate it this year.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The new year, with us, has begun. Let's begin to plan for It. I want to say just a word about the revival part of the plans, as at no point have we failed so much in the past as in this. We sometimes hear of some brother having an all-the-year revival, but we are persuaded that what such hrother calls an all-the-year revival is but what ought to be the usual condition for a Methodist Church. Our hirth as an organization was in a revival, and what we sometimes call a Methodist Church, which is a congregation filled with and manifesting high-church ideas, is a misnomer. Let's claim the blessings so richly and freely given to our fathers and people in past days, and, the Lord helping, make this a banner year in spiritual things.

1. Let's plan early. I find that few meetings are great unless they are well and carefully planned for in advance. It is not too early to hegin our plans, even though the meeting should be held next fall.

2. Let's plan sufficiently. Our results will be co-extensive with the magnitude of our plans. Allow plenty of time in your plans. Most revival meetings are closed just when they are really getting started. The old "close while the tide is high" method has robhed us of many great victories. If the "tide" is really high, there is no danger of it getting lowered so long as there are still multitudes of unsaved people in the community to be reached and the preachers and people are burdened for their salvation. Most meetings should continue for nearer four weeks than ten days or two weeks.

3. Let's plan fully. The entire congregation should be members of our council. I find sometimes that in the entire plans of some for their annual revival but few or none have been consulted or advised with. As a result, I have found a spirit of hostility and resentment existing that, of course, must he overcome hefore the greater work of the revival could be attended to. Not only should the entire congregation be consulted, but there should be special plans, which would include the co-operation of the official board, the missionary society, the Sunday school superintendent, and each teacher of the school.

4. Let's plan prayerfully and faithfully. Get as many as possible to agree to make a prayer list and pray for individuals by name. Of course, nobody need know whom they are praying for but God, but get them to make a written list and to place thereon none but those for whom they feel moved to pray, adding to it as they may feel like doing from time to time. No meeting can fail when consecrated people are really praying for their loved ones and friends. "Faith is the victory." We can not please God without it. All of our plans and prayers are vain unless there is real faith in God and His plans and means for salvation. I find too many people with a secret list of hopeless ones in their respective communities. There are no hopeless cases for our Lord. For "whosoever believeth" there is a remedy, and I am persuaded that all can believe.

5. Let's plan together. Most of the brethren can give a week or more from time to time. I do not mean that they should donate this time, either. I find that people everywhere are willing and able to remunerate, to some extent at least, the man who brings to them the real message of salvation. Such people ought to be permitted to embrace such an opportunity. When we pauperize people we do them an injustice. Some of the brethren who would hold a three weeks' meeting may have to use two or three different preachers, but that's all right. Another old fallacy has been exploded, and that is, "you can't change horses in the middle of the stream." If pastors and people are really in earnest about a meeting, you could change preachers every night and have a revival, provided those doing the preaching have the work on their hearts equally with the pastor and people. It is better, however, for one man to do all the preaching.

6. Let's plan adequately. No better plans can be laid than to arrange for two meetings in the same church where such plans can be carried out. I find the second meeting usually the better in such cases. For the country churches I find it best to have one meeting to embrace a group or number of churches. Build a brush arbor or a tabernacle in an accessible and central place. The bringing of the congregations together and the religious rivalry that arises from this is in itself very helpful. Besides, in two or more congregations you usually find enough consecrated people to have a full working force from the very start.

Finally, I will say that I am ready to help in any way I can. Of course, I can't personally assist all the brethren, even though all should want or need me, which, of course, would not be the case, but I can and will be glad to help by suggestions or by such information as I may be able to give or offer. Brethren, let's put ourselves as really and fully into this warfare as our boys do in "going over the top" in Europe. Conference claims and salaries in full will follow in the wake of real revivals. God, in Christ, is with us. Bless His holy name!

Fraternally yours,

HENRY T. YOUNG,

Conference Evangelist of the Louisiana Conf.

Jena, La., Dec. 11, 1917.

THE HABIT OF PRAYER.

A minister of some experience lately made the assertion that out of every ten church members as far as he had been able to find out, only three have a fixed daily habit of sincere prayer. It is to be hoped that his experience is misleading. Yet many Christians, it is certain, neglect prayer in a manner most dangerous to their souls; and too many more merely "say their prayers" daily, and never really pray at all, except in times of crisis. The habit of earnest prayer is a habit of strength and peace.

We kneel, how weak! we rise, how full of power!
Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong,
That we should ever weak or heartless be,
Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer,
And joy and strength and courage are with thee?"

The young Christian needs prayer even more vitally than older disciples. Let us early form the habit of thus seeking God daily, and never let it go.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

THE CHURCH IN THE WAR.

(An address by the College of Bishops to the ministers and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.)

When at the recent meeting of the College of Bishops in Jackson, Tenn., the Bishops had under consideration the religious work in behalf of the soldiers within our territory, a motion was passed constituting the undersigned a committee to issue an address to the Church touching this most important field of religious activity. Concurrently with this discussion another paper was adopted containing three resolutions of the following substance: First, that the Committee on Chaplains be requested to take in hand the added work of evangelism and such other lines of effort at home and abroad as that committee may deem expedient; and, second, that the committee be authorized to raise the sum of one hundred thousand dollars for war work, apportioning the same to the Church for voluntary contributions; and, third, that the Chairman of the Chaplains' Committee, the Secretaries of the Home Department of the Board of Missions and of Church Extension should be released for the present from other duties for the organization and execution of this work in so far as the demands of their respective fields may permit.

The Issue.

In order that the Church may in the prosecution of this work more fully realize its duties and privileges, it is necessary to glance at the issues involved. The rationale of any situation or process is by far the most important element in its consideration. The rationale of this world upheaval is complex in the extreme. It embraces every domain of human interest. It is world-wide, but it has other dimensions; it is as high and as deep as the range of human thinking can carry. But there are in it certain simple and fundamental elements which it is not so difficult to see and measure.

The question has been asked: Is this a religious war? Technically and avowedly, no; truly and essentially, yes. This has been true of many of the great wars of the past, but of none perhaps so much as of this. In truth, rationalism as a form of belief is, more than anything else, the source of all this trouble. Rationalism is the most occult and insidious form of unbelief the Christian Church has ever had to encounter. It has gained the adherence of a controlling number of the ablest and most learned of the German teachers, preachers, philosophers, statesmen, and rulers until it has dominated the life of Germany and is now tugging at the very foundations of the world in this titanic struggle for supremacy. While the agnostic is a sort of honorary member of this same cult, he is at bottom nothing more than a common atheist turned coward and running for coverture. The rationalist, on the other hand, stands boldly forth clad in a coat of impenetrable egoism and challenges all the faiths of mankind; and rationalism as a religious cult has so little to lose that it can afford to occupy any form of religious organization as the organ of its hypocrisy in order to gain the ends at which it aims. Its aim, in short, is to establish a kingdom of man in the earth instead of a kingdom of God. This is the real issue which is now being fought out on the fields of Europe and Asia. But rationalism given, materialism follows as inevitably as any other effect follows its cause. Materialism is a form of philosophy which locates the causation and processes of this earthly life in the forms and forces of matter, in what Christianity calls the creature, instead of in God the Creator. It is easy to see that materialism calls for militarism. If these earthly resources are to be controlled, they must be controlled by men; and if so, the men must be controlled. And the best instrument by which to control men, says this heartless system, is the gun. It becomes, then, a question only of the best gun in the hands of the equal or superior man. In short, the gospel of materialism is the gospel of saltpeter and gun cotton, of which the Kaiser and Krupp are just now the chief apostles. It requires no strain of logic to see that out of these three preceding causes comes a state which can best be described as sheer diabolism. The world saw and was horrified by it at the beginning and is seeing more and more of it with the progress of events. This diabolism has revealed itself in the mutilation and crucifixion of babes, the torturing and slaying of decrepit old men, the wanton murder of devoted nurses, the outraging of girls and women by thousands, the sending of other thousands into a permanent state of enforced white slavery, the subjection of noncombatants to the labors and hardships of galley slaves, the murder on the high seas of thousands of innocent victims, including helpless women and children, the subjection of other thousands to suffering and death in the open boats regardless of the weather and the running of the seas, the butchery of millions on the field of battle, the mutilation for life of many more millions, the killing of many innocent and helpless citizens by bombs dropped without military aim or justification, the dastardly and treacherous betrayal of relations of friendship and trust, and the filling of all lands with a system of espionage and incendiarism, and the constant practicing of forms of official infidelity and falsehood hitherto undreamed of in the lives of savage men. Already a verified record of outrages committed in one land alone fills a volume. When the full record is written, the world will stand aghast, and all men will see what it means for the German people to make and sing the "hymn of hate."

Rationalism, materialism, militarism, diabolism—this is the quartet of inevitables born of unbelief and tending toward the destruction of all human civilization.

The Opportunity.

Against that tide of iniquity the Entente Allies are standing with all their powers and resources, and of late our own beloved nation is among them. Our government did not enter this struggle out of a present military necessity, but from a higher compulsion—by a compelling sense of comradeship with all that is highest and best in human civilization. She thus stands somewhat as an apostle among the nations, teaching that the law of self-sacrifice for the well-being of men is the law which shall at last direct not only the moral but the material forces of mankind.

It was said at the outbreak of the conflict that it was a commercial war. This was doubtless true of our enemies, but far otherwise with our allies and ourselves. It was seen from the outset to be a fight to the death for the maintenance of the ideals which save and glorify men and nations—the ideals of righteousness which are born alone of the gospel of Christ. It is a fight on the one hand for the enslavement of mankind to the few for grossly material ends and, on the other, for the universal freedom of the race from the base-born ideals which spring from the "gospel of dirt." It is a conflict of Christianity with its love of the universal good, its altruism, and its charities against a kultur of the rankest barbarism, against the old-time Hun, who in the same spirit of savagery and armed with the implements and powers of modern science seeks to subvert existing civilizations and found his own empire upon the wreck of all those higher things for which humanity has striven upward through thousands of years. It is to save a genuine democracy to the world, in order that that democracy may civically save the world, that men of all nations and nations of all sizes may be allowed to work out their destinies unimpeded and unafraid. It is, in other words, the final strife of the Hun and the Anglo-Saxon for the supremacy of the race. As this war goes, so will the world thereafter go for many centuries at least. It is, therefore, unthinkable that the Protestant Church should be on any other side than that of the soldiers of human freedom.

It is not, in view of these things, difficult to see that the opportunities brought to American citizens and especially to the Churches of America are greater than any that have come in all our past history. The elements in the situation are so numerous as to forbid even a mention of them in so short a paper as this, but there are a few regnancy of sin within them and making them pure and upright. And this power operates only as sound doctrines, setting forth the conditions of its bestowment, are taught, and the terms laid down by almighty God are faithfully met. There is but one plan of salvation. As Bishop Candler strikingly said at the last Enumenical Methodist Conference in Toronto, it is not "eugenics, but regenics" that the millions of the human race need.

The clarion call of the hour, therefore, if the world is to be saved, is not for a combination of huge ecclesiasticisms) shot through with worldliness and teaching "the new theology," that they may more strenuously apply their trumped-up and un-Scriptural processes, which can only fail in the end, no matter upon how large a scale they may be conducted. The call that really needs to be heard and heeded is for a return to the simple, old-time Gospel of the great Galilean teacher and to the holiness of heart and life to which it opens the way, and for such a preachment of this glorious Gospel to all the sons of men as shall make them Christians indeed and in truth, and not merely in name. Such a Christianity alone can bring into existence a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness and peace—thus both making "the world safe for democracy," and democracy safe for the world. It was such a conviction as this that led the great William E. Gladstone, the foremost Christian statesman of the nineteenth century, to say to Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, in a memorable conversation: "We may talk about questions of the day here and there; but there is but one question, and that is how to apply the Gospel to all circumstances and conditions. It can and will correct all that is wrong."

Humanity's only hope being in Him who was born in Bethlehem more than nineteen hundred years ago, well may we celebrate with joy and thanksgiving the recurring anniversaries of his advent into the world. Depressing as the present period may be, Jesus did not live and teach and die in vain. From his incarnation has come all that is best and most heartening in earth's civilization. Think of what it is worth to Christian fathers and mothers whose sons have been called to the colors to know that Christ lives, and that, whatever may betide them, the rich blessings of his atonement may be theirs! And though dark are the clouds now hovering over us, behind them the Sun of righteousness is still shining, with healing in his wings, and he will yet bathe the world in the light of millennial glory. The redemption of this fallen planet may not be as speedily wrought out as we should like; but, in spite of the follies of men and the machinations of Satan, it will finally be accomplished, and—

"Jesus shall reign wher'er the sun
Doth his successive Journeys run;
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more."

UNIFICATION—SOME POINTS WORTH NOTING.

By Rev. John W. Boswell, D.D.

During the war between the States—1861-1865—the people of the South were almost solidly united in upholding the Confederacy. They believed that we were right. Very many confidently affirmed that we were right, and didn't hesitate to plead the cause before God on that ground. I knew a good brother, a sensible preacher, who, in a daily prayer-meeting, with a list of a company of soldiers in his hands, would hold it up and ask God's blessings on the boys—a thing perfectly right—but he would invariably say with all the emphasis at his command: "O Lord, we know we are right!" His prayer was based on presumption.

Those among us to-day who advocate the unification of Methodism and plead for it on the ground that God desires it, is a party to it, and that the Lord's prayer for unity "among other things, involves the unification of American Methodism," bring vividly to my mind the enthusiastic brother of 1861. They stand on the same footing, presuming to determine the mind and attitude of God.

How can any man determine the mind of God concerning a matter that keeps Christians in two separate organizations, both of which are spreading Scriptural holiness and leading the world to Christ? One man has quite as much right, and quite as good ground to say that it is God's will for them to remain apart as another man has to say that it is God's desire for them to come together. Much is said in the Holy Scriptures about the Church and God's relation to it; but it would be hard for any man to prove by the Word that God is on one side or the other of any question affecting the interests of Methodism. Since the division of the Church in 1844 we have had peace among ourselves, and have achieved under the blessing of God, as we believe, remarkable success. We are persuaded that the Lord is still blessing us. We see no indication that he is displeased, and that he will take our crown if we do not renounce our heritage and consent to have our names stricken from the list of Churches.

Those who plead for the unification of Methodism (which has come to mean union rather than unity), and appeal to the Scriptures for help, invariably turn to our Lord's prayer: "That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us" (John xvii, 21). That prayer was not uttered in view of the division of the Church into different denominations with distinguishing peculiarities such as exist to-day, for there were no such divisions at that time, unless the Pharisees, and Sadducees, and Essenes and other sects were branches of the Church, and Jesus desired them to come together. Nor could it have been a prayer for the continued organic union of all believers throughout all time, else Christians could never have separated into so many different branches without knowingly and wilfully subjecting themselves to divine censure.

But if the organic union of Christendom is what our Lord prayed for, then our brethren who are so zealously seeking the union of the two Methodisms, which together constitute but a fraction of the Christian world, are greatly at fault in not spending their time and energy in efforts to blot out differences and effect the union of all the Churches of earth. Their efforts might be extended so as to bring Romanists and Protestants together. That effected, if the millennium did not immediately dawn, its coming would be greatly accelerated.

Our Lord's prayer was without doubt an expression of the divine will, not to say the divine purpose, that the disciples might be of one mind and aim among themselves, and one with himself and the Father. If Methodists have renounced the lead of the Spirit, and are not only in two divisions, but at enmity, we may consistently pray for the return of unity; but to adopt the prayer on the supposition that "among other things" it "involves the unification of American Methodism" is a presumption, and adapted to deceive persons who are unlearned in the Scriptures.

Were either branch of Methodism a "schism," our unionist brethren could with some degree of justification base their appeal on our Lord's prayer. But schism is a sin with which neither body is charged. True, there was a separation of the original body—a separation like that of Abraham and Lot, by mutual consent for the sake of peace. It was not only a separation by consent, but a separation according to a plan that conserved the interests of all the parties involved. That plan adopted by the General Conference, and confirmed and enforced by the courts of the country, forever estops the mouth of any man that would dare to charge either party with schism or secession. If we parted for the sake of peace, reason dictates that, for the sake of peace, we should remain apart. I say this as an argument against that form of union now before the Commission, and as we understand in part agreed upon, and not against a unification that will preserve the autonomy of the two Churches.

My good Brother Werlein is of the opinion that we who desire to maintain the autonomy of Southern Methodism are sadly misguided, and asks, "Are we working for the autonomy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, or for the kingdom of God?" My answer is, we are working for the kingdom of God under the polity and policy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and do not desire to turn over our Church in whole or in part to the government of those who, by reason of nature and environment, are not in sympathy with Southern men and Southern ways. To do so will bring us under the rule of a big majority composed in part of more than one-third of a million negroes who have little or no confidence in the Southern white man.

If any one asks what I mean by preserving the autonomy of Southern Methodism, I reply by saying: I mean, not only the preservation of our self-government, but the maintenance of the polity of our Church, especially the Episcopacy handed down to us by Asbury and McKendree, and maintained by the Southern delegates in the General Conference of 1844. If I am not mistaken, this is what the Oklahoma plan of unification contemplates. I never did, and do not now, understand that our General Conference intended to tear our Church to pieces and build it over, or to go bodily into the Methodist Episcopal Church—the Northern wing of Methodism—either by way of unification or organic union.

There is soon to be a meeting of the Bishops of the three leading colored Methodist Churches, representing 1,500,000 members. The meeting is to be in the interest of Colored Methodism. They may advise the union of their forces, and go unconditionally into the Methodist Episcopal Church. Then—well, "we shall see what we shall see."

TO THE MOTHERS OF OUR SOLDIER BOYS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you kindly grant the mother of a soldier boy space to speak a word in behalf of our boys?

I have just read a notice from Washington in The Commercial Appeal stating that the authorities had decided that, owing to the demoralization that would naturally result in the camps and the congested railway conditions, soldier boys would not be allowed to go home for the holidays. Now this, of course, will mean very sore disappointment to them as well as to the loved ones at home.

In the face of this disappointment and the probability of many of them being called to the front at a very early day, I beg every mother who may chance to scan these lines and who has a son enlisted to join me in a covenant to hold these, the best of our hearts, our homes, and our country, constantly before our Heavenly Father. Let's consign them wholly and unreservedly to his keeping, as Abraham did when he offered his son as a sacrifice. If the sacrifice of our precious sons in this awful struggle is for God's glory, the price is small compared to what he gave for us; and if in his all-wise judgment the end will not justify the means, I have faith to believe that somehow, somewhere, God will, as in Abraham's case, provide a sacrifice less dear to go upon the altar, instead of these true children of the covenant. "Them that honor Me I will honor." This promise held good in Samuel's time. It is just as dependable to-day. God's promises are always sure. He has never failed in one jot or one tittle of all that he has promised to the children of men. And that which He has promised he is able to perform. So let us as mothers take him at his word and launch out upon these blessed promises by hedging our absent loved ones about with our daily prayers, strengthened with loving epistles, pledging them our love and encouraging them to be faithful, admonishing them above every other thing to hold on to Him who alone is able to keep them from failing and lead them to victory as God sees it.

"Crowns and thrones may perish, kingdoms rise and wane;
But the reign of Jesus constant will remain."

I am so glad that there is no limit to the influence of the prayers, precepts, and examples of God-fearing and God-honoring parents. Distressing times like these make us appreciate more than ever before in history the Christian religion.

Human nature is weak and vacillating. Our boys will have their seasons of unrest, discouragement and disappointment. They will long oftentimes for the companionship of the fireside at home and for a glimpse of mother's face. There will doubtless be temptations upon every side, calling them to appease their unrest. So it behooves every mother of us to concentrate our efforts during the holidays, and all the days that may follow to reinforce them with missives and tokens of our constant love for and faith in them, embellished with good cheer and encouragement.

Oh, mothers, we cannot afford to let distance or circumstances sever the precious ties that bind us to these whom God in his wisdom only a short while ago entrusted to our care. Many a man has returned from carnage, bringing his sheaves with him, through the influence of a faithful and true mother.

Will you not, then, mother friends, join me in this covenant to follow up in every practicable way and keep in touch with these, our loyal, noble soldier boys till the war is over and our Lord Christ reigns supremely in the hearts of the men? How glorious 'twill be when the strife is ended, if all we mothers can go bearing the sons God gave us safely back to his fold. Methinks I can hear the Good Shepherd, as we gather with one accord, whisper, "Well done, faithful servants; enter into the joy of thy Lord."

SECULAR NEWS AND COMMENT.

It is stated that during the year ending June 30, 1917, China consumed $9,000,000 worth of American cigarettes.

Italy has drawn upon the $500,000,000 war credit allowed her by the United States Government to the amount of $320,000,000.

The Federal Farm Loan Banks have decided to raise their rate of interest from 5 per cent to 5½ per cent. This change has been made necessary by the fact that interest rates generally are increasing.

Conditions in Russia continue to be chaotic and uncertain. A recent press dispatch reported that there were 7000 naked corpses in Petrograd, which had been gathered from near-by canals and rivers. The armistice with the Central Powers is in force and there is talk of the initiation of peace negotiations.

Louis Kopelin, Editor of the Appeal to Reason, one of the oldest Socialist papers in the United States, has become an advocate of the Nation's war against Germany and Austria, which his publication will henceforth outspokenly support. He is said to have been convinced of the righteousness of America's cause by President Wilson's illuminating address to Congress a few days ago.

BOGALUSA METHODISM.

Methodism in the "magic city" of Bogalusa is still progressive and aggressive. The tenth anniversary celebrated in November, with fitting ceremonies, was a great day for us. Just think of it, a church only ten years old and well organized and with a growing membership of 433! Can you beat it in the State of Louisiana?

Great and inspiring pulpit messages were enjoyed by our people on our tenth anniversary from Presiding Elder W. W. Holmes and Rev. E. N. Evans, the founder of Bogalusa Methodism. Both preachers have many warm friends among us.

For patriotism, we doubt if our church is surpassed in the State of Louisiana. Already we have 43 names of our boys who have volunteered in the Army or Navy, to say nothing of the drafted men. Others are enlisting every week. The pastor has offered his services to the U. S. Government as a chaplain.

Plans are already matured for a $25,000 brick church, to be erected on a popular avenue in the center of the city. Mr. W. H. Sullivan, General Manager of the Great Southern Lumber Co., is chairman of the building committee.

Last year 161 new members were received with a net gain in membership of 111 members. Other gains were made on all lines of church activity.

The Great Battle

TWO IMPORTANT LEGAL DECISIONS.

The Supreme Court of the United States handed down two very important opinions bearing upon certain phases of the liquor problem on Monday of last week. These two decisions are thus referred to in a press dispatch sent out from Washington:

"With a decision upholding the Idaho prohibition law, the Supreme Court to-day gave an opinion which may be one of the most far-reaching victories for 'bone-dry' prohibition yet recorded. It was held that a citizen has no constitutional right to possess liquors for his personal use if a State wishes to forbid it. Justice McReynolds gave the Court's opinion that a State has power absolutely to prohibit the manufacture, gift, purchase, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within its borders without violating the Constitution. 'We further think,' he added, 'it clearly follows from our numerous decisions upholding prohibition legislation that the right to hold intoxicating liquors for personal use is not one of those fundamental privileges of a citizen of the United States which no State may abridge.'"

Liquor Shipments Must Be Recorded.

"The constitutionality of the North Carolina liquor law requiring railroads and express companies to keep for public inspection records showing liquor shipments received in the State was upheld to-day by the Supreme Court."

Comment of the Daily States.

The New Orleans Daily States, in a recent issue, commented as follows on the first of the two decisions mentioned above:

"Of all the decisions rendered with respect to the power of States to control the liquor traffic by long odds the most far-reaching is that handed down Monday by the United States Supreme Court, holding that it is not an invasion of a citizen's constitutional rights for a State to say that he shall not possess intoxicants for personal use.

"Heretofore most prohibition statutes, while prohibiting the sale of liquors and in some cases their transportation by freight or express, have stopped at attempting to forbid the private citizen from having them in his possession. Generally the lawmaker, however extreme in his views upon the subject, has been in doubt whether in going that far he would be infringing on the personal liberty guaranteed by the constitution. But the Idaho Legislature took the position that the surest way of having real prohibition would be to penalize the possession of liquor for personal use and the high court has now said that the Idaho lawmakers were entirely within their constitutional privileges.

"The decision is a hard blow to the beer and liquor interests, for it means that hereafter, as the States take the cue from the Idaho decision and amend their laws accordingly, these interests will have to confine themselves to wet territory. There will be an end to the shipment of liquors to private persons in dry territory."

QUEBEC CITY GOES DRY.

There will be general rejoicing all over the Dominion that Canada's historic gateway city has won the fight for temperance and will shortly be numbered amongst the many dry municipalities of the Province of Quebec. The details of the fight are not yet to hand, but we understand that the whole weight of the Roman Catholic clergy, reinforced by the much smaller numbers of the Protestant clergy, was thrown into the scale against the liquor trade. But even so the contest was no walk-over, and the majority of over 2000, while substantial enough, at the same time indicates the strength of the opposing forces. We must congratulate our temperance friends in the sister province upon their great victory, and we trust the day is not far distant when even Montreal, Canada's largest city, and at the same time the chief stronghold of the liquor trade, will feel the force of the temperance movement, and will, by its own vote, expel the deadly traffic which it now fosters.—Christian Guardian.

AN APPEAL TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

The White House, Washington.

One year ago, in compliance with resolutions passed by the Senate and by the House of Representatives, I appointed days upon which the people of the United States might make such contributions as they felt disposed for the aid of the stricken Armenian and Syrian peoples.

American diplomatic and consular representatives and other American residents, recently returned from Western Asia, assure me that many thousands of lives were saved from starvation by the gifts of the American people last winter. They also bring full assurance of the continued effective distribution of relief and report that the suffering and death from exposure and starvation will inevitably be very much greater this winter than last unless the survivors can be helped by further contributions from America.

Reports indicate that of orphans alone there are more than 400,000, besides women and other dependent children, reaching a total of more than 2,000,000 destitute survivors. The situation is so distressing as to make a special appeal to the sympathies of all.

In view of the urgent need I call again upon the people of the United States to make such further contributions as they feel disposed, in their sympathy and generosity, for the aid of these suffering peoples. Contributions may be made through the American Red Cross, Washington, D. C., or direct to the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, Cleveland H. Dodge, Treasurer, One Madison Avenue, New York City.

WOODROW WILSON.

RELIGIOUS WORK IN THE CAMPS.

The declaration of a state of war by our President was followed by a swift response upon the part of the people of the United States. Nor did they act in the spirit of malice. It was the deep and unquestioned conviction of millions of men and women that "the conflict into which we have been irresistibly drawn is one that is so manifestly for the maintenance of righteousness and in behalf of humanity that it should command the courageous and unreserved support of all our people." It has commanded such support and will continue to do so until the world is made safe for democracy, and democracy is written large in terms of service by the strong to the weak, whether that be the individual or the State. Such a task will not be finished until this has been done in the fear of God, in the strength of righteousness, and the spirit of a true brotherhood. This places a grave responsibility upon the Church, as well as the nation, since the Church is primarily responsible for the moral principles and spiritual forces which make for cleanness of life and nobility of character, of the tens of thousands of young men who under the call of the President and the action of Congress have gathered in our training camps.

At the meeting of the College of Bishops in Jackson, Tenn., the following resolutions were adopted:

"In view of the insistent call which comes from soldiers, chaplains, and pastors of churches near the cantonments, and, moreover, in view of the heavy responsibility suddenly thrust upon us, as a Church, by the presence in the South and West of two-thirds of all the officers and soldiers in training for the United States army and navy, many of whom are our own boys;

"Resolved, 1, That the Committee on Chaplains be instructed to take in hand the added work of evangelism, and such other lines of effort, at home and abroad, as they may deem necessary and expedient, and

"Resolved, 2, That the Committee be authorized to raise the sum of One Hundred Thousand ($100,000) Dollars for war work, by apportioning the same to the Church for voluntary contributions.

"Resolved, 3, That, brought face to face with this sudden emergency, it is the sense of the College of Bishops that the Chairman of the Committee, and the Secretaries of the Home Department of the Board of Missions and of Church Extension should be released, for the present, from other duties for the organization and prosecution of this work, and for the raising of funds, so far as the demands of their respective fields and departments may permit, the Executive Committees of the Board arranging for and being agreeable to the same."

An address to the ministers and members of the Church was prepared concerning this important field of religious activity, in which the issue was discussed, and the opportunity and obligation interpreted in terms of "a higher compulsion—a compelling sense of comradeship, with all that is highest and best in human civilization."

The war is on. Our boys are assembled in cantonments. It will not be long before they will be ordered to the front. Now is the golden opportunity. They are open to approach as never in their lives. We need experienced men in addition to chaplains and Y. M. C. A. secretaries who "are capable of furnishing genuine spiritual guidance." Conditions are not the same in all the communities adjoining the cantonments. In a few cases no outside help seems to be required. In the majority, however, conditions are favorable and the field of evangelism ripe. Let us enter at once. To do it will require men and money. Both must be forthcoming. and without delay.

In some sections where there are large camps the need was anticipated. The presiding elders of the several Texas Annual Conferences assembled in Dallas the last of September, resolved to raise the sum of fifty thousand dollars. The New Mexico Conference took action favorable to the raising of $100,000 and agreed to contribute its quota. The Los Angeles pledged $600, the Pacific $2000; Central Texas $20,000, Texas $18,000, Virginia $15,000. Others have fallen into line, but the specific amounts have not reached the writer. It is to be hoped that prompt reports will be made to Dr. J. M. Moore, Secretary.

There is one important point which should not be overlooked. Some of the largest camps are within the bounds of the weaker Conferences. The fund should, therefore, be made available, for application by the General Committee, without as well as within the bounds of the respective Conferences making these contributions. In every case such application should be subject to the approval of the Annual Conference Committee appointed for this purpose. Soldiers are also being shifted from one State to another or from one camp to another. This is another reason why there should be some elasticity in the application of the fund, and it brings out as well the necessity for a general supervision. Hence the action of the College of Bishops.

The time is short. There is much to be done. It may be now or never with many of these splendid young fellows. Let us act promptly, with a free, open hand, and act together, taking to heart the almost fatal policy of the allies in Europe during the earlier years of this war. Let there not only be unity in aim, but hearty co-operation in effort.

GET THE MOST OUT OF YOUR FOOD.

The digestive organs absolutely need the influence of pure blood for the proper performance of their functions. Persons that sleep in small, ill-ventilated rooms complain of little or no appetite in the morning and of disagreeable dryness of the mouth and throat. Why? Because, as a result of breathing air that is impure, their blood is impure and fails to give their digestive organs the stimulus they must have for perfect work. It is necessary that we should have pure blood if we want to get all the good out of what we eat that there is in it and to get it comfortably. Hood's Sarsaparilla is distinguished for making pure, rich, vitalized blood, perfecting the digestion and building up the whole system. Get it to-day.—Adv.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR SANTA.

Mrs. A. M. Starkweather.

I'm watching now for Christmas,
I'm sure it must be near;
I wonder what old Santa
Will have for me this year.

Dear Santa Claus, do hurry,
For I can hardly walt;
I've made a list of playthings,
You'll find it on the gate.

I want the very nicest
You've got for little Ned,
He's sick and lame and has to
Most always lie in bed.

And then I want my mamma
To have the bestest, too,
And baby wants a rattle,
And leave a book for Sue.

O, bring some gloves for papa,
Great, thick ones, nice and warm,
To keep his hands from freezing,
When he's out in the storm.

Then there is little Tommy,
Who never has things nice,
Bring him a sled and mittens,
To play out on the ice.

Old Grandpa Lee and Grandma,
They live across the street,
O please do bring them something
That's nice and good to eat!

O dear! There are so many
I most forgotted me!
So just fill up my stocking
With anything you see!

SANTA CLAUS IN TEARS.

Helen Elizabeth Coolidge.

"Now, Grandma, that is just the queerest name for a story," said Nellie Morton one cold, rainy evening, when she and all the other little Mortons were gathered by the open fire at "Twin Oaks."

"Well! Don't interrupt Grandma," lisped Madge, who prided herself on using big words and didn't like to be laughed at by Max when he caught her reading a book upside down.

"I thought old Santa was always jolly. Grandma, with twinkling eyes, and a great hearty laugh," broke in Frank.

But Grace said the best word of all:

"Please, go on, Grandma, or Santa Claus will cry his eyes out;" and then they all sat as quiet as mice, and rather resented the sputtering of the fire, so anxious were they not to miss a word.

"Well, my dears, you know a year ago at this time we were all talking, as we are now, about the big and terrible war, and although we did not see the wounded and dying soldiers, or know the little orphans crying for bread as they shivered with the bitter cold, we were reading about all of them, and knew the accounts in the papers were only too true, and as Christmas drew near ever so many girls and boys wondered if their stockings would be as full as usual, and whether mamma would say: 'I can't afford, darlings, to give you a tree.'

"Then it was that Santa Claus had a bright idea—he formed a new company of assistants, and their uniform was wonderfully gotten up. Each wore a cloak that was slipped on at a moment's notice, and had the magic power of making its wearer invisible; slippers with soles that made every footfall noiseless; and I was told these fairy helpers had the most marvelous ears—they could have heard my watch ticking if I had been in San Francisco and they had been right here in the lovely old Virginia home. They were named 'The Recorders,' and carried little note-books and fountain-pens strapped around their waists, and were ordered to be like Cap'en Cuttle, and 'make a note of' all they saw and heard, while they watched children all over this land getting ready for Christmas. It was what Santa read in one of these note-books that made him cry.

"Oh, Grandma, I think I can guess what it was!" and Nellie caught grandma's hand and pressed it to her cheek. "I think the fairies found a letter some little orphan wrote, something like this:

"Dear Santa Claus: My papa went away all well in his new uniform, and he came home wrapped in a flag, and mamma said I couldn't never see him again. I'm so hungry I can't write any more."

"No," said Gracie, "I don't believe that was what made the tears come. It must have been about some naughty little pigs that run about on two legs, and spend all their pennies for candy instead of giving them to the Red Cross."

Here Madge lifted her hand. "It's my turn. I'm sure Santa Claus lost his specs like you do sometimes, Grandma, and couldn't read no letters while he was sitting on the chimney-top, so his tears runned down and put the fire out;" and Madge looked very woebegone, until Frank exclaimed: "Well, don't let us cry, too, or there will be a deluge."

"Grandma, I vote you tell us what was the matter," he added after Madge seemed comforted; "what really ailed the old chap?"

Then Grandma wiped her specs (which she had not lost this time), and taking from her writing-table a bundle of letters, said: "Here are the reasons—three reasons—three little letters, or rather three little copies of letters, which I found in my stocking marked this way: 'These are copies; the real letters are blotted by my tears; but if you know any little people who like stories, I hope you will show them these little notes, and I guess they will do a little thinking.'"

"Oh, Grandma, how in'tresting!" lisped Madge, but Nellie put her hand over her mouth as Grandma read:

"Dear Santa Claus: You know there is an awful war and lots of little children are hungry and cold, and haven't any toys. Please take the money that was for me and buy something for some of them. I don't 'spec anything this year—that's why I've tied my stocking in a hard nott. M. C. M."

"Dear Santa Claus: My old dolly is good enuf for me this year. 'Sted of bringing a new one to me, with elegunt close, please take her to some little girl whose daddy has been killed by the soljers. Tell her to name her Isabel for me, and not to cry any more. Your little friend, I. C. F.

"Dear St. Nick: Mother has read about the boys whose fathers went to the war and—didn't come home. I am awfully sorry for those fellers; I get a lump in my throat thinking about them. So—please leave me out this year, and take all you can to some boy who hasn't got a dad like mine. I've hung my stocking upside down to remind you not to fill it. F. M. A."

Grandma put down the letters and looked into each little face. I think she was wondering whether any one of her children wanted to write Santa.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

"JINKS."

Virgil M. Harris.

During the Christmas holidays of 1913 I entered one of the well known restaurants in the city of St. Louis. It was brilliantly lighted and beautifully decorated. Here, there and everywhere I found canary-birds caged, and their voices added to the joyousness of the occasion.

Upon inquiry I ascertained that these birds were for sale, and asked the manager to select a good singer for me. In due time the bird reached my home, and I have never regretted my purchase or his selection.

Just why he was named "Jinks" I do not recall. At first he was very shy, but after a few days he would peck my finger, and our close friendship and intimacy has daily increased. He is possessed of rare intelligence, and is an exquisite singer.

He was soon given the freedom of my rooms by day, and acquainted himself with every coign of vantage. On being released from his cage in the morning he comes directly to my pillow for play, greeting me with every evidence of affection. To the bathroom he follows me, and from a little shelf before the mirror he watches my ablutions and tonsorial efforts.

When I read he perches upon my book or finds a snug place on my shoulder. When I wish him to sing, I only have to direct his attention to one of two places which have been selected by him as favorite seats for this performance, and he promptly sings and continues to sing until he is notified that it is time for the concert to end.

He is particularly fond of the ring of the telephone, and responds promptly to each call, either sitting upon the instrument itself or upon my hand or shoulder.

It is sometimes difficult to tell whether he is black or yellow, for in his flights about the room he comes in contact with dust, that somehow or other he finds in his nooks and corners.

It is impossible to express the amount of comfort and pleasure which I have derived from the company of this bird. No amount of money could induce me to part with him. I never realized until now that birds had genuine affection for their human friends, nor the priceless boon of its possession.

So far I have found but one fault in him, and that is almost a childish failing: he dislikes to go to bed, and prefers to sleep anywhere in preference to his cage; it frequently becomes necessary to catch him and conduct him to that snug harbor for the night.

He delights in my whistling, and will sit on my finger for any length of time, if I but favor him with this form of entertainment.

Jinks was born in the Tyrol, and if instinct causes him to yearn for his native mountains, he has given no outward sign of his desire to return. —Our Dumb Animals.

CHRISTMAS IN OTHER LANDS.

In Spain, we are told, many of the children are in the habit of hiding their shoes in the bushes on Christmas Eve, and early on Christmas morning they visit them, sure to find them filled with fruit and candy. It is not so cold out of doors on Christmas morning in Spain, however, as it is in some parts of the United States.

In France, also, the young folks take their shoes and put them in any convenient place, confident that they will be found.

In Porto Rico the Christmas decorations are not holly and mistletoe, as in colder climes, but poinsettias (those beautiful, large red flowers), and bushes of ripe oranges.—The Presbyterian.

NOW UP TO THE STATES.

On last Monday, December 17, by a vote of 282 to 128 the Lower House of Congress passed a prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution, this being eight more than the necessary two-thirds vote. The measure adopted differs from that passed by the Senate some months ago in that it allows seven years instead of six to secure the ratification of the required three-fourths of the States. It is expected that an agreement will be quickly reached concerning this one divergence, and that the battle for Nation-wide prohibition will then be shifted to the State Legislatures. The prospect of ridding our entire country of the accursed liquor traffic was never so bright as it is to-day. Surely we have cause to "thank God and take courage." On with the struggle!

CONGRESSMAN VENABLE'S VIEW.

The Mississippi Society in Washington, D. C., held a meeting on Monday evening, December 10, to commemorate the hundredth anniversary of the admission of the State of Mississippi into the Union. One of the speakers on that occasion was Representative Venable, one of the brightest young Congressmen that the South now has at the National Capital. Referring to his address, a correspondent of the Times-Picayune says: "In the course of his remarks before the Society, Mr. Venable took occasion to decry the oft-expressed conclusion that a conflict between the races in the South is certain to come. He pointed out, however, that there is increasing reason for serious thought on race matters."

This utterance is in rather striking contrast with the affirmations of some preachers that race conditions in the Southern States have reached such a stage that there is no longer any need for much concern respecting them.

BROTHER YOUNG'S MESSAGE.

The letter to the members of the Louisiana Conference from Rev. H. T. Young, which we are carrying on another page, is a message that is well worth reading and meditating upon. The most important, the most telling, work of the Church is that of soul-winning and the building up spiritually of those who are of the household of faith, and yet of all her tasks this is perhaps being the least successfully done. Neither the Church nor the world needs anything so much in these troublous times as a sweeping revival, showing the forth-flashing of Divine power—the Holy Spirit at work in human hearts and lives. Shall we not pray and labor to make the year now beginning one that shall be rich in spiritual fruitage? Surely we could have no loftier aim.

DON'T NEGLECT IT.

On page 6 of this issue of the Advocate will be found President Wilson's appeal in behalf of the starving Syrians and Armenians, to which we referred last week, but which was inadvertently omitted from our columns. No Sunday school superintendent or pastor should fail to take an offering for this cause at the earliest possible moment. The Christian Churches of America have perhaps never had a more pathetic call for assistance than this. Think of two million people in danger of actually perishing for the want of food! And many of these destitute sufferers are disciples of our Lord. Let every Sunday school and church in Louisiana and Mississippi take up a collection for these needy ones and forward the amount to Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D., 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., between now and January 1. There is no time to lose if these dying fellow-Christians are to be helped before it is too late. We should also be glad to have any persons sending funds to Dr. Chappell to report to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, that we may be able to form some idea of what the Methodists of this section are doing in response to this cry of distress from over the seas.

NEED FOR CAUTION.

On page 15 of this issue of the Advocate there is a statement from Rev. J. W. Shackford concerning the joint issuance of certain Sunday school publications by the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Ordinarily, such co-operation would be a thing to be commended without reservation; but, in view of the extent to which the Sunday school literature of the Northern Methodist Church is being criticised for doctrinal unsoundness, it is to be hoped that Dr. Chappell and his associate workers will be on their guard and see that no subtle poison is scattered abroad among our young people as a result of this combination. As a sample of some of the statements that are being made about the Sunday school output of the Church, North, we take the following from the Eastern Methodist of November 29, which is from the pen of Dr. L. W. Munhall, one of its editors:

"One of our Bishops, residing in a distant part of the country, said to a friend of mine recently: 'Brother Munhall is right in what he says about our Sunday school literature.' They would all say the same if they were informed as to what I have said, and would express themselves, or they would not be good, loyal Methodists. I unhesitatingly declare that the best thing that could possibly happen to our Sunday schools would be to stop taking this literature—throw it all out, and study and teach the Bible, and the Catechism. There are numerous lesson helps published in the country that are loyal to the Bible and the doctrines of the historic faith, as ours most certainly is not; but these helps should be used at home, and never taken to the Sunday school."

A PERTINENT INCIDENT.

We have many times stressed in these columns the importance of preaching to soldiers, when the opportunity comes, upon the great essential themes of the Gospel, instead of discussing from the pulpit the various phases of the great war, which, though they ought to be elucidated, may be handled in numerous other forums. The following quotation from The Sunday School Times bears most pertinently on this point:

"After a recent concert given for the entertainment of soldiers, one of them was asked to propose a vote of thanks. He arose and said: 'We are very grateful for the amusement afforded us to-night; and we appreciate all the musical talent brought for our enjoyment. But we are off to the front to-morrow; and I do not know how to die. I am not prepared to meet God. I only wish there had been something for our souls.'"

It behooves the Christian minister and worker in these critical times to be true to Jesus as well as to their country. If they do not witness for him and set forth insistently the higher spiritual needs of the soul they are certain to be thrust into the background.

"STAY IN SCHOOL."

The following editorial utterance, contained in a recent issue of The Jackson (Miss.) Daily News, is, we think, timely and worth passing on:

"Since so many men have been drafted or have volunteered to enter the army or navy, a good many positions have been thrown open—for the period of the war at least. It has become noticeable lately that a number of high school and even grammar school students are quitting their studies to accept employment. This practice of leaving school in the midst of the school session to go to work should be discontinued, unless circumstances are such that a school student is forced to abandon his studies and accept employment. Although a school lad may now obtain a pretty fair position with good pay attached, it has been proven by statisticians that the boy who stays in school the longest is more capable of holding a good position and commanding a good salary than the boy who drops out of school and goes to work. In other words, a boy is largely repaid for every day he spends in school. At this time the boys of the school age, especially those of the high school age, are rendering just as patriotic a service to their country as the men of the draft age who fight the battles in the trenches. It behooves the schoolboy at present to stay in school and pursue diligently his studies."

WIDE OF THE MARK.

The statement that ours is the only Methodist Church that has a time limit has for some time been going the rounds of the Church press. This representation is glaringly erroneous. Canadian Methodism has a four-year time limit; the British Wesleyan Church, the mother Methodism of the world, has a time limit of three years, and, if we are not mistaken, Australian Methodism and most of the colored Methodist bodies have a restricted pastoral term. There is no time limit in the Northern Methodist Church, but a large minority in that communion hold the view that its removal has not had a wholesome effect. It cannot be denied that exchanges of charges are now secured by advertising among Northern Methodists and that apparently there is in that denomination a decided drift toward settled pastorates.

Southern Methodists would, we think, do well to weigh carefully all that may be involved before they break away from having any time limit. We would not particularly object to seeing the possible pastoral term extended to six years, but we do not hesitate to say that we do not favor opening the way for it to become indefinitely long. To be sure, the Bishop would still have theoretically the power to move a man, but would not cases arise where there ought to be changes, but which it would be exceedingly difficult for him to make? We think there would, and we confess that we are distrustful of a wholly optional exercise of the appointing power. But enough for the present. We started out to correct an error—not to discuss anything like fully the question of the proposed removal of the time limit.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Writing from Many, La., Rev. J. B. Williams says: "I am in my new home, and am well pleased with it. I am looking forward to a good year."

Rev. John Tillery Lewis has been cordially received at Aberdeen, Miss., his new pastoral charge, and has made a fine impression upon the people of that progressive city.

Rev. W. H. Saunders expected to leave Fernwood, Miss., for Natchez, his new appointment, this week. Our church in Natchez will find Brother Saunders an uncommonly strong and suggestive preacher, and a pastor who has the Master's work at heart.

Brother W. L. Tucker, of Tucker, La., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, takes time to add a few kindly words concerning our paper. He is traveling man, who endeavored to serve the Master, while caring for the business interests committed to his hands. Would that we had more such laymen!

Rev. Briscoe Carter looked in on the Little Rock Conference during its recent session at Arkadelphia, Ark.

For the first time since 1517, Jerusalem is in the hands of a Christian power. May it forever so remain!

Brother W. A. Price, of Carpenter, Miss., was in New Orleans last week, and called at the Advocate office. The Editor regrets having missed seeing Brother Price, whose occasional visits he highly appreciates.

Rev. F. M. Freeman opened his pastorate at the Parker Memorial Church of this city last Sunday morning, taking his text from John 14:6, "I am the way." His impressive message was heard by a good congregation.

Rev. A. Gordon Bakewell, a well known minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church in New Orleans, celebrated his 95th birthday on Sunday, Dec. 16. He is remarkably preserved physically, and is still serving a pastorate.

Bishop Candler's platform and pulpit work at the late sessions of the Upper South Carolina and North Carolina Conferences made a profound impression. It is doubtful whether Southern Methodism has ever had a greater preacher than is he.

The new Field Secretary for the Sunday School and Mission Boards of the Mississippi Conference is Rev. J. C. Chambers, whose address will be Shubuta, Miss. We predict that Brother Chambers will give a good account of himself in this new sphere of service.

Rev. A. F. Vaughan, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church, this city, delivered an able discourse in the interest of the Red Cross work last Sunday at the morning hour. He used as a text the Master's words in the Sermon on the Mount, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

President Wilson, the official head of the American Red Cross, issued a few days ago a stirring address, appealing for ten million additional members for that organization. Every man and woman should join this noble order in this war period, when the work that it proposes to do is so much needed.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, one of the Conference evangelists of the Mississippi Conference, writes: "My address hereafter will be Brookhaven, Miss. Any of the brethren who may wish to communicate with me may write me there." Brother Bennett is an effective revivalist and the brethren should keep him busy.

Sister J. C. McElroy, the wife of our pastor at Sturgis, Miss., in a note to the editor, says: "We are now entering upon our third year in this charge, and we view the prospect hopefully. Many of the people seem pleased with our reassignment. Please join us in prayer that we may yet accomplish much for the Master in this field."

Brother W. W. Williams, a well known Louisiana layman, who formerly resided at Alexandria, and later at Baton Rouge, was in New Orleans last week en route to Central America, where he expects to reside in the future. He is connected with the Troy-Honduras Export and Import Co., and his address will be Puerto Cortez, Honduras, C. A.

From Itta Bena, Miss., his new field of labor, Rev. W. M. Campbell writes: "Just as I told you, the water here is fine, but some of it has been frozen recently. The people have welcomed us and given us a 'pounding' to boot." The fishing about Itta Bena is also said to be good; so it is no wonder that Brother Campbell is happy over what is in prospect.

We have learned with sorrow of the death of Miss Corinne Belk, the accomplished daughter of Hon. W. A. Belk, of Holly Springs, Miss., which occurred on November 20, 1917, as a result of pneumonia. We extend sympathy to Brother Belk and the other grief-stricken loved ones in their sore bereavement. May the priceless consolations of the religion of Christ be theirs!

The Mississippi Conference, in its recent session at Vicksburg, wisely made provision to have a pastor assigned to the United States Army cantonment, Camp Shelby, near Hattiesburg. The man designated for this service is Rev. R. H. Kleiser. Let the readers of the Advocate pray that he may have Divine guidance in the responsible work to which he has been commissioned.

The election of Rev. T. W. Adams to the chaplaincy of the Mississippi State Penitentiary, and his appointment to that position by Bishop Murrah, places that important service in most capable hands. Brother Adams was educated at Emory and Henry College and is a minister of far more than ordinary equipment. Let the brethren not forget him and his work in their prayers.

Rev. Thomas I. Beck, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, in a letter to our office written from Prairie Grove, Ark., his new appointment, says: "This is one of the best small stations in the North Arkansas Conference. We are looking forward to a pleasant and profitable year." His many Louisiana friends will be pleased to know that Brother Beck is so agreeably situated.

From a personal letter from Rev. H. S. Spragins, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Memphis, Tenn., we take the following: "I was deeply disappointed not to get to the session of the North Mississippi Conference. I had looked forward to it with much pleasure, but one thing and another held me here." The brethren would have been delighted to see Brother Spragins, whom they hold in high esteem.

The following dispatch appeared in a recent issue of the Memphis Commercial Appeal: "Lake Village, Ark., Dec. 11.—Rev. N. G. Augustus, pastor of the Methodist Church here, has been transferred to the pastorate at Coldwater, Miss. Many people here deplore the change, as this excellent gentleman and splendid, manly character drew the good-will of a host of citizens—members and non-members of his flock."

We acknowledge, with appreciation, the reception of an attractive wedding invitation, which reads as follows: "Doctor and Mrs. Inman Williams Cooper invite you to be present at the marriage of their daughter, S. Lucile, to Mr. J. Will Yon, on Saturday afternoon, December 22, 1917, at 4 o'clock, at the Methodist Church in Brookhaven, Miss." We extend in advance congratulations, and wish the prospective bride and groom much happiness.

Rev. R. F. Harrell has been transferred from the Mississippi to the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Waterproof, in the Monroe District. Brother and Sister Harrell make a fine team, and the people of the Waterproof charge should count themselves fortunate in having secured their services. The copy for our Woman's Missionary Department failed to reach us this week, due, we infer, to the fact that Mrs. Harrell has been taxed with the task of helping to pack and move.

The New Orleans Methodist Preachers' Association (M. E. Church, South) held its first meeting since the beginning of the new Conference year at First Church last Monday morning. Rev. W. W. Holmes was elected Chairman; Rev. W. H. Coleman, Vice-Chairman, and Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, Secretary. Besides the Methodist ministers residing in the city, Rev. A. I. Townsley of Bogalusa and Rev. J. E. Seife of Covington were present. Ways and means for an aggressive evangelistic campaign were specially considered.

Rev. J. L. Neill, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. work at the Mississippi A. and M. College, writes us as follows: "Since reaching home from Conference I have received invitations to teach two classes at the Southern Student Conference at Blue Ridge, N. C., June 13-23, one a Bible class, in 'Students' Standard of Action,' and the other in 'Personal Evangelism.' This is a great opportunity to reach the student life of the South, and I have accepted both invitations." Besides his Y. M. C. A. work, Brother Neill is at present rendering the National Council for Defense valuable service among the farmers of Mississippi.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, of the Mississippi Conference, wrote us as follows some days ago from Camp Pike, near Little Rock, Ark.: "Camp Pike is very interesting with its whirring motor cars and honking trucks. Men are coming and going by regiments, and our personnel is constantly changing. We chaplains are somewhat handicapped by the transfer of troops. We are relying upon the ubiquitous Y. M. C. A. buildings for preaching places. Chaplains are furnished no song books. I should be very glad if some big-hearted layman would send me 500 copies of our hymnal that has been arranged for evangelistic services. A good revival song book is what soldiers would appreciate. My regiment is the 312th Engineers. They are a picked group of officers and men, and I count my assignment a most delightful one." Many of our readers will be happy to see this message from Brother Hogg.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, the new pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of this city, preached his initial sermon last Sunday at 11 o'clock a.m. Among other things, he is reported as having said: "I have served other pastorates larger perhaps than this, but from what I have observed since my arrival here and from what I know of the conditions generally, I know that I have never been called to a charge that offered a greater opportunity." We think that Brother Coleman is right in his estimate of the possibilities that First Church has. In some respects it is perhaps the most important appointment in the Louisiana Conference, being practically the only church that we have in this city of nearly 400,000 people that can be quickly reached from its large hotels. This congregation has an excellent plant in which to worship and work, but is not strong financially. It ought, in our opinion, to be backed up for the present, at least, by the Home Department of our Board of Missions. A church so splendidly situated to do a telling work should not be permitted to remain handicapped by an insufficiency of funds to attain to the highest possible efficiency.

We have on our table a very attractive pamphlet, entitled "The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, around San Francisco Bay," which was published by our General Board of Church Extension. It gives a very interesting brief history of our Church in San Francisco and the section immediately surrounding it. It describes somewhat in detail the plan for our new San Francisco house of worship, to be known as Fitzgerald Memorial, which will be located on Bush Street and which is expected to cost not less than $90,000, and also gives pictures of our new property in Oakland, worth $75,000 or $80,000, of our Epworth Church in Berkeley, and of the Mary Elizabeth Inn and the Wesley House in San Francisco. From the "Foreword" of this pamphlet, we take the following: "The present equipment about the Bay of San Francisco removes our shame at the point of inadequate equipment, and should make it possible for us to go forward, taking our place among the other Protestant denominations in ministering to a dense population of some of the most interesting people in the world, who, for the most part, have not been brought under the influence of the Church of Jesus Christ."

TWO PREACHERS WANTED.

Two preachers wanted for circuits in the Meridian District. These charges have furnished parsonages, and each will pay about $600 to the pastor. Applicants must furnish testimonials.

GEO. H. THOMPSON,
Meridian, Miss. Presiding Elder.

NEW CHURCH TO BE OPENED.

Every Methodist in the city of New Orleans is cordially invited to be present at the opening of our new church at Rampart and Governor Nicholls Streets on Sunday, Dec. 23, at 3 o'clock p.m.

W. E. THOMAS, Pastor.

(The consummation of this enterprise is a notable achievement. This church is located in a section of the city where there is great need for work among the Italians and foreigners of other nationalities. It is to be hoped that a large number of the Methodists of New Orleans will be present on this interesting occasion.—Editor of the Advocate.)

A MATTER OF MUCH IMPORTANCE.

By request of Mr. S. H. Meyer, Treasurer of the Board of Missions of the Louisiana Conference, we print the following self-explanatory letter:

"Dear Brother: The end of our fiscal year, December 31st, is fast approaching and finds us in need of every dollar that can possibly be had to meet the urgent demands of our work at home and beyond the seas. Please reach out after any funds in sight and let us have remittance by the above date. There may be money raised for 'Specials' in the hands of churches, Sunday schools and Leagues that might be had for the asking. Assured that you will do your best to aid us in this time of need, Fraternally yours,

J. D. HAMILTON,
Treasurer, Gen'l Board of Missions."

Any brother having such funds should send them in at once.

THE ORIGIN OF CHRISTMAS CARDS.

The Christmas card as we know it has an origin easily traceable, and it is now quite seventy years since the first was designed.

The artist who claimed to be its originator and who was at any rate the first to see its possibilities was W. C. T. Dodson, R.A., an Englishman who when quite a young man in 1844 was prompted at Christmas to make a little sketch representing the season's joys and festivities and to send it to a friend. It seemed to give great pleasure, and the next year Mr. Dodson determined to follow up the idea on a larger scale, and by having his card lithographed was enabled to send copies to twenty-five or thirty friends.—The Christian Intelligencer.

GIVING WITH PROPRIETY.

"A gift should contain something of one's self, urges Emerson. 'Let the sailor give of his shells and corals, the farmer of his grain.' Whenever we make a present let it mean something to ourselves as well as to the one to whom we give. Nothing beautifies a gift more than to have it show thoughtfulness and discrimination."

CONTENTMENT NEEDED.

Let us learn to be content with what we have. Let us rid ourselves of our false estimates, set up all the higher ideals—a quiet home; vines of our own planting; a few books full of the inspiration of genius; a few friends worthy of heing loved, and ahle to love us in return; a hundred innocent pleasures that bring no pain or sorrow; a devotion to the right that will never swerve; a simple religion, empty of all bigotry, full of trust and hope and love—and to such a philosophy the world will give up all the empty joy it has.—David Swing.

THE BEST PREPARATION.

In every human life there is a Rubicon to cross, a critical moment in which we have to pass from the old life to the new. It will come in the shape of temptation, sorrow, or change, and the way in which this crowning trial will be met will be determined by the training previously received. The best preparation is wrestling with God in prayer iike our Lord.—H. Macmillan.

"The good pastor talks more to God than to man, about his people."

"He who is born for the crown is bound for the cross."

Mrs. MAY EICHELBERGER (nee Friday) was born on Oct. 3, 1873, and died on Oct. 1, 1916. In early womanhood she was married to Mr. Dismukes. Two bright, noble boys blessed this union of only a few years, which was brought to an end by the death of Mr. Dismukes. After a few years she was married to Mr. Jack Eichelberger, of Mashulaville, Miss. This union was blessed with a little girl and boy, both too young to realize their great loss. None knew Sister Eicheiberger but to love her. The writer (her former pastor's wife) knew and loved her for two years. She was a noble woman, a loyal wife, a loving mother, and a good neighbor. She was aiways loyal and true to her Church and made sacrifices far heyond her strength to carry on the work she loved so much. She was President of the Woman's Work of Mashulaville, and did the work of her Christ well. Sister Eichelberger joined the Baptist Church in early girlhood, but later in life united with the M. E. Church, South, and was a faithful memher until death claimed her. She was tenderiy iald to rest on Oct. 3, 1916, in Mashulaville cemetery, in the midst of a host of sorrowing friends, to await the resurrection morn. The funeral service was conducted by Brother A. W. O'Bryant.

Your place is vacant; your chair is empty,
How much we miss you no one can tell;
But your Savior called you, May,
And he doeth all things well.

Mrs. J. C. McELROY.
Sturgis, Miss.

Mrs. FLORENCE ELIZABETH BATTLE NAUGLE, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Battle, was born in Lee County, near Verona, Miss., on June 21, 1854, sixty-three years ago, and passed to her reward on October 7, 1917. In the early days of her girlhood she gave her heart to God, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which she was a most consistent member to the day of her death. On March 7, 1878, she was happily married to J. B. Naugle, then a citizen of Lee County, but who now resides in Clay County, near McCondy, Miss. This union was blessed of God with nine children, two of whom preceded their mother to the good world. The surviving children are: Dr. Andrew Kincannon Naugle, Abbott, Miss.; Mrs. William V. Connell, Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. I. B. Donaldson, West Point, Miss.; Eunice, William, Clara, and Inez Naugle, who reside with their father near McCondy, Miss. Such are the outstanding events in a life of singular beauty and worth. Few women have heen so richly endowed by nature as was the subject of this appreciation. Beautiful in person, happy in disposition, quick in mental perception, and generous toward all men, she was one who carried sunshine wherever she went. Her outlook on the world was so optimistic, and there was such a glad melody in her laugh that it was impossible for one to remain gloomy in her presence. She was a lover of good books, especially the Book of all books—the Word of God. Her devotion to her Church was most pronounced, and in the days of her physical strength she was a most regular attendant upon its services. The latter years of her life were years of great suffering. Like many another Christian she passed through the school of affiiction. Why one so good and happy should have been calied upon to suffer as she did we cannot fully understand. We know, however, that God's greatest saints are developed in the school of adversity. The Bihle teiis us that "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose," and God's Word is true. Out of ail of her afflictions, she has passed triumphantly into the Father's presence, where there are "fuiness of joy" and "pleasures forevermore."

IN MEMORIAM.

(Tribute of respect from the Woman's Missionary Society at Brookhaven, Miss.)

We would pause in the rounds of our unceasing activities to think of the life of our sister, Mrs. PRISCILLA FORE, who hy the decree of our heavenly Father has gone on to life eternal. We shall miss her gentle presence in our meeting, her tender smile of greeting, and her wise counsel. We shall long for her cheerful companionship, hut in our longing we shall rejoice that her trials are ended, that her pain has ceased, and that she rests from her labors; therefore be it

Resolved, That we will hold in remembrance her hright Christian character, her unselfish devotion to duty, her modest, unassuming helpfuiness; and that we shall strive as she did to foiiow closely in the steps of our Master, that we may merit the "Well Done," which we confidently believe is her reward.

Resolved, further, That we hereby extend to her children our deep sympathy in their bereavement, praying that the Savior whom she loved may be their comforter.

Signed: Mrs. W. A. Brewer, Mrs. R. W. Brown, Mrs. L. H. Bowen.

AN APPRECIATION.

While glancing over the pages of the Christian Advocate of Nov. 22 a few days ago, my heart was made sad and my eyes grew dim as I read an account of the death of Mrs MARY ELIZABETH KING. I wish to add a few words to the noble tribute that was paid her in that issue. I have known Mrs. King all my life In iooking back over my childhood days, her face was the first that I remember seeing, and next to my own dear and now sainted mother, I owe to Mrs. King and her noble husband my first impression of Christ and a Christian life. A noble Christian woman has gone, and the world has been made better by her having ilved in it. Her life has touched the lives of many for good, and now we are sad because she is gone. Very often since my life work has called me away from the old home church (Bethel), words that Mrs. King spoke and prayers that Mr. King prayed when I was a young girl have encouraged and helped me to cross over some very dark and hard places. Yes, if we live the life she lived, and follow the example she taught, all will be well with us in the end. May God comfort and sustain her heart-broken companion and her children in their bereavement. She is not dead, but sleepeth.

Mrs. J. C. McELROY.
Sturgis, Miss.

WISE CHARITY NEEDED.

How often it is difficult to be wisely charitable, to do good without multiplying the sources of evil. To give alms is nothing unless you give thought also. It is written, not "Biessed is he that feedeth the poor," but "Blessed is he that considereth the poor." A iittie thought and a iittle kindness are often worth more than a great deal of money.—Ruskin.

"The pursuit of pleasure is but the polishing of pehbles, while Christ is offering the pearl of great price."

"Some folks think they are Christians because they want to go to heaven."

J. L. Sells: Accessions 95, professions of faith 50; finances in full.

H. W. Van Hook spoke impressively of the purpose and ideals of his school.

The reporter, believing that the pastors, the men who have borne the heat and burden of the day, should receive more consideration for the work they are doing, has tried, as is shown above, to give a brief report of their work, as given by them on the floor of the Conference room. There are mistakes; sometimes the pastors did not speak loud enough for the reporter to hear their reports; sometimes their words were spoken indistinctly; at times some confusion in the room prevented him from hearing, and there are a few oversights. The reports of the presiding elders are also given in brief.

Sunday Services.

The services of Sunday morning began with the usual annual love feast, which, as all Methodists know, is a unique feature of our Church. It was conducted by Rev. C. W. Crisler, many of the brethren participating, and the occasion was enjoyed by all.

Promptly at 11 o'clock Bishop Murrah entered the pulpit. Hymn No. 1 was sung, Dr. Mounger led in prayer, the First Psalm was read responsively, and the Bishop read the eighth chapter of Romans, remarking that it is a most remarkable portrayal of the glorious inheritance of the children of God. After hymn No. 330, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus' blood," the Bishop announced as his theme, "The Superior Claims of the Eternal as Contrasted With That Which is Temporary," taking Psalm 1:3 as his text, and, to an audience which filled the main auditorium, the galleries, and the Sunday school annex, delivered a discourse which, being full of sublime thought and throbbing with spiritual power, thrilled the hearts of his hearers. Some of the suggestive and inspiring thoughts were: "Whatsoever a righteous man doeth shall prosper is not so—in a superficial sense. If by that is meant accumulation of wealth, exemption from sickness and toil and sorrow, the text is not true; but in the profoundest sense, meaning that which comes to man out of his relations with God, it is true. Life is too short to fritter away the energies of our being on things not worth while. The mistake of the age is to estimate values in terms of the material. I do not presume to enter the divine councils, but it may be that God knows the time has come when the world must have a shock to make it realize that 'riches do not consist in the abundance of the things which man possesses.' I know but little about the war, and what the final results will be; but one thing is certain—when it is over we are going to have a different world in which to live; God is going to bring out of it a better and a happier world. I do not know how a Christian can be pessimistic. The Christian life is the highest expression of the God-life. There never was a fairer conception than that religion was intended to abridge human happiness; this conception is fostered and generated by the idea that religion is a thing apart from the common things of life—only intended to fit us for the life of heaven; the contrary is true—religion is the business of life. Oh, that we could get away from the old idea that the Church is an ark of safety and know that her purpose is to fit us for life. The ox comes from browsing on the meadow, drinks a draught of refreshing water, and throws himself down under the shadow of the overhanging branches of the oak—a picture of supreme satisfaction—that is some folks' conception of happiness; but the musings of the ox can not invalidate man's capacity for a higher happiness. So long as man is capable of lofty aspirations, so long will that life, regulated by his relations with God, be the best life for him. The philosophy of all religion is to bring about harmony between man and God; and the only religion which can accomplish this end is the religion of Christ. The cry of the soul for harmony with God can not be hushed by the voice of false philosophy—every sacrifice that ever smoked on Jewish or heathen altar gives testimony to the truth that the godless soul is desolate. There is no true prosperity without right relations with God. All possessions and learning will avail you nothing unless by faith in Jesus Christ you are brought into right relations with God. We talk much of the dignity of man, but what is man if you leave God and eternity out of the question? Man without God is naught, but put Jesus Christ by the side of him and you multiply all his potentialities by infinity. Take the ungodly in his best advantages and the Christian in his greatest disadvantages, yet the life of the Christian is to be preferred."

At the close of the sermon the following young men were ordained to the office of deacon: J. B. Cain, C. P. Jones, R. A. Allums, H. C. Castles, J. A. Smith.

Memorial Service.

At 3 p.m. the regular memorial service was held. In the good providence of God only one had passed away during the year—Rev. L. J. Jones, one of the veterans of the Conference. After the memorial paper was read, several of the brethren spoke feelingly in terms of praise and affection of faithful service given the Church during his active ministry.

The following brethren occupied the various pulpits of the churches during the day: J. L. Deceli, W. H. Lewis, W. M. Sullivan, W. H. LaPrade, J. T. Leggett, A. F. Watkins, J. L. Neill, W. J. Ferguson, J. D. Ellis, C. F. Emery, H. F. Tolle, H. M. Ellis, J. C. Chambers, P. D. Hardin, C. M. Chapman.

At the close of the night service at the Crawford Street Church the following class of young men were ordained elders: E. H. Cooley, P. H. Grice, H. M. Johnson, C. H. Strait.

After glancing at the foregoing record of Sunday's services and worship, the reader will not be mistaken if he reaches the conclusion that this has been a great day religiously for the city of Vicksburg—a day on which the gospel has been preached with fervor and earnestness by the brethren who have filled the pulpits of the city; and no doubt it has been a day which will be remembered for years to come by the different congregations, and when these preachers and their audiences enter into the eternal Sabbath of rest, spoken of by the great apostle, may the glorious light of that day remind them of the brightness of this day of service and worship!

Last Session—Monday Morning.

The Conference met in its final session Monday morning at the appointed hour with Rev. W. H. LaPrade in the chair. Later the Bishop appeared and took the chair. The session was devoted mainly to the hearing of reports from the various Boards and Committees, and there was more or less nervousness among some of the preachers who knew that they were going to move.

A resolution of thanks was read and adopted, as were also the minutes of the preceding session.

It was announced that Mrs. Wright has been selected as Field Secretary for the Orphans' Home to aid in selecting homes for the orphan children. Mrs. Wright addressed the Conference.

Rev. J. L. Neill read a list of the sons of the preachers of the Conference who are now in the service of their country. The list was a long one and was ordered printed in the Journal as the Honor Roll of the Conference.

Dr. A. F. Watkins exhibited to the Conference a certificate of ordination of Rev. Lewis Garrett to Deacon's orders, signed by Bishop Asbury.

To-day being the 100th anniversary of the State of Mississippi into the Union (our Conference being a little older), Rev. J. L. Neill moved that the Conference send a telegram to the Governor, pledging our co-operation in an effort to make Mississippi a better State.

A resolution asking for a certain change in the ritual came from the Jackson District, the Conference being requested to memorialize the General Conference to that effect, which was done.

After making a few appropriate remarks, the Bishop read to an interested audience the appointments of the preachers for the coming year. Thus passed into history the 104th session of the Mississippi Conference, as did the Conference year of 1917, with its mistakes and failures and successes and achievements, and the preachers, like a marching host under the leadership of its commander, took the outgoing trains for their respective fields of labor with the past behind them and their faces, lighted with the glow of the spirit of devotion and resolve, turned toward the future. Their firm step, as they wended their way toward the depot indicated their strong purpose to turn every seeming defeat into glorious victory by the help and grace of God. As they departed from Vicksburg no doubt they were singing in their hearts, "Am I a soldier of the cross," and when the months of the new year, with its grief and joys, its defeats and victories, shall have come and gone, may they all go up to McComb City singing in their hearts the coronation, "All hail the power of Jesus' name!"

WAR CONDITIONS

— REFLECTED IN —

TELEPHONE SERVICE

Among the unforeseen conditions which the war has imposed upon us is the necessity of practically suspending the commercial development of our business.

Confronted with an unusual increase in the use of the telephone and a strong demand for new and additional service, we cannot accept or fill orders except subject to practically an indefinite delay.

This situation is due to the importance of conserving our supplies so that the government's requirements may be promptly met by giving the War Department service anywhere and at any time the request is made.

THE OLD RELIABLE BLOOD BUILDER

Still retains its supremacy. People still take Hood's Sarsaparilla because it is an old family friend, has proved its merit to three gencrations—in purified blood, expelled humors, restored appetite, relieved rheumatism, banished tired feelings.

It long ago became recognized as the standard blood purifier and general tonic. It originated in a Boston physician's successful prescription, and comprises medicinal roots, herbs, barks and berries such as are often prescribed for ailments of the blood, stomach, liver and kidneys. Buy it in the same style package your mother bought it in,—same fine appearance, same pleasant taste, same certainty of good results.

"WHAT BEAUTIFUL HAIR!"

Have you ever heard that remark made as some one passed by who had carefully kept hair? Did it not make you envious and did it not make you ashamed of every coarse, stiff or gray hair in your head? Did it not make you wish that you, too, had kept your hair carefully and could hear similar compliments passed on ou? Don't envy a beautiful head of hair. It is your privilege to have one. The beauty of the hair depends entirely on its care; and its luster depends on the food on which it subsists. Hair must be fed. Every single hair is a distinctly individual living thing and it demande food. Unless you feed it, it is going to be stiff and coarse and void of beauty. Follow the example of the Creoles of Louisiana, who pride themselves on their hair. Get their recipe. It was kept as a race secret for many years but you can get it now by asking our dealer for "La Creole," the natural hair dressing, or by sending one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

"HE IS FAITHFUL THAT PROMISED."

Every promise of Scripture is a writing of God, which may be pleaded before Him with this reasonable request: "Do as thou hast said." The Creator will not cheat his creature who depends upon his truth; and, far more, the Heavenly Father will not break His word to His own child. "Remember the word unto thy servant, on which thou hast caused me to hope," is a most prevailing pleading. It is a double argument: It is thy word, wilt thou not keep it? Why hast thou spoken of it if thou will not make it good? Thou hast caused me to hope in it; wilt thou disappoint the hope which thou hast thyself begotten in me?—C. H. Spurgeon.

PIANOS PRICED AT TRAIN-LOAD RATES.

Since the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club was formed, many years ago, the Managers, Ludden & Bates, have been distributing these Club pianos at the rate of about thirty-two carloads a year. By having these splendid instruments made in tremendous numbers without the expense of changing patterns and designs; and by selling them in clubs of one hundred buyers (about four clubs each year) we are able to give Club members the most attractive prices, terms, quality and guarantees that it has ever been possible to offer.

Long experience and the utmost of care were exercised in the selection of the patterns and designs. The Specifications are exacting, for the Club must guarantee perfect satisfaction to every one who places an order through it. The object of the Club is to make piano buying economical, safe, convenient and permanently satisfactory.

The management of the Club has studied your problems and difficulties more thoroughly than you have, and is prepared to help you in every detail of piano buying. Write for illustrated catalogue and full particulars to-day. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Note.—In addition to the numerous styles of new Pianos and Player-Pianos, we are now able to offer Club members some rare bargains in used instruments which have been thoroughly renewed in our Atlanta Repair Factory. Write for special descriptive price list if interested.—Adv.

TO RESIST THE ATTACK of the germs of many diseases such as

Grip, Malaria, means for all of us—fight or die. These germs are everywhere in the air we breathe. The odds are in favor of the germs, if the liver is inactive and the blood impure.

What is needed most is an increase in the germ-fighting strength. To do this successfully you need to put on healthy flesh, rouse the liver to vigorous action, so it will throw off these germs, and purify the blood so that there will be no "weak spots," or soil for germ-growth.

We claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery that it does all this in a way peculiar to itself.

It cures troubles caused by torpid liver or impure blood.

HAMPTON, GA.—"I have used Doctor Pierce's medicines in my home for over 40 years, and can say to those suffering with torpid liver, it will pay you to use Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. You will find it all he claims it to be."—THOMAS C. JONES.

WOODFORD, TENN.—"This is to certify that I have used Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for my two little boys. One had night sweats, poor appetite, sallow complexion, and had quit growing, but after giving him part of a bottle of the 'Discovery' he again started to grow. He dosen't have the night sweats and looks much better. My other little boy had scrofula and this medicine cured him after the doctor's medicine had failed. I do not hesitate to recommend the 'Discovery' at all times."—MRS. ROSA LEE HOGAN, Route 1.

MRS. C. L. RAMAGE.

Died in Winnsboro, La., Mrs. C. L. RAMAGE. She was born in Jefferson County, Miss., on Dec. 19, 1825, and fell asleep in Jesus on July 30, 1917, in her old home, where 41 years ago she adopted me. I was homesick, having just left my father's home for the first time. I spent the second night after leaving in her home and she found me crying, and slipped her dear arms around me and asked me "to let her be my second mother," and she was. After my own father and mother, Maj. E. K. W. Rop and wife, left us for heaven, she seemed to think she must love me more and she did, and I praise the dear Lord for her life and example. Oh, how we miss our dear friends as they leave us, and at Christmas time we look for the sweet token of love; but alas! the dear hands are at rest. They were always so busy working for others. As I sat by her last August and saw her crocheting, I felt like the end was near. She had weakened greatly in the six years we were away. Thank God for her love, and that of so many others who have gone—especially for that of Sister M M. Hayes, of Opelousas, La., who was like our dear friend—the preacher's friend (her home was our home), and that of dear Sister Foster of the same place. All three had always a welcome for ministers and their wives, even if they had children. God bless all of our dear friends in Louisiana. Mother Ramage's daughter writes: "I go a dozen times a day to ask her something, only to realize with a pang that I cannot find her. I do not rebel against God's will, but it does hurt me so to give up my dear mother. It is like a stab when I see her vacant chair. I find myself looking for the dear, white head and sweet, loving smile, but they can no longer be seen. She was so patient, so gentle, so loving." May her dear children and grandchildren and friends meet her where there will be no more sorrow and no more dying!

From one who loved her,

Sister T. S. RANDLE.

STOP THAT PAIN!

The few misguided people who argue against the relief of pain as a first step in treatment, either have never suffered from any pain themselves or else they do not know what they are talking about.

It is all right to realize that pain may be the danger signal for some more serious complaint and it is well to look deep into the reason for pain, but the first step is to gain as speedy relief as possible in a safe way.

Pain is the greatest ally that disease has. Pain is the artillery, it batters down the nervous defenses of the body so that disease can safely take hold of the body.

But not only does pain do physical harm to the body, but it also does moral harm which may be tremendously far-reaching in its effects.

The nagging effect of pain is such that it will change the disposition of a person to such an extent that they will become a burden to themselves and to everybody else. The person who has normally the sweetest temper may be readily turned into an irritable crank by a succession of unrelieved headaches or pains.

Stop that pain by using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills according to directions. They are effective, safe and harmless. They can be purchased at any drug store, and the druggist is always willing to return the purchase price if the pills fail to relieve pain. You are the judge yourself. It will cost you nothing to try.

STRONGS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: It was quite a disappointment to me to miss the late session of the North Mississippi Conference. But it was impossible for me to be there, on account of Mrs. Baley being in the hospital at West Point, Miss. However, I am glad to say she is back at home and that she is getting along nicely. James McCoy Baley was born to us on Nov. 26, 1917, but was born dead. So, for the first time, we have had to make in the cemetery at West Point, Miss., a little mound for one of our children.

I was returned for another year to Prairie and Strongs, and our hearts are glad. The people at both places have been very hearty in their expressions of delight at our return, and this causes me to resolve to do my very best during the year. The past year was a very happy and fruitful one with us. You never saw such a corn crop as was made in the prairie belt this year, and the people showed their appreciation of the same by doing greater things for the Church. The work payed nearly 100 per cent more on the benevolences than for several years. The work overpaid the preacher's salary, and gave the preacher a nice pounding, besides. Strongs put about 65 bushels of corn in the barn and plenty of good alfalfa to feed the preacher's horse during the coming year. Prairie sent the preacher a nice box for Thanksgiving and Christmas, and besides gave him a nobby suit, dressing him up from head to foot. So, you see, it is no wonder the preacher is happy and kept quiet until after Conference. No other man can now roll him for his job for another year at least. We are now in the midst of the worst freeze for years and can hardly get coal or wood, either. We are having to send to Aberdeen, twelve miles away, for coal. However, it looks to-day like the freeze is about over.

THE CHURCH IN THE WAR.

which cannot be omitted. The first of these is that millions of our picked men are placing their lives at the disposal of this holy cause, and in doing so are enduring the most complete isolation possible, going from three to five thousand miles from their homes and homeland. There they can be reached only through the offices of patriotism and religion. Whatever can be done to alleviate that situation is certainly due.

But the supreme element is the fact that the magnitude and extremeness of the struggle as already seen is producing a sense of universal self-sacrifice. This purpose of self-immolation on the part of millions of stalwart men in the behalf of the good of others, even of millions yet unborn, has thrown a consciousness of these men wide open to the approach of the powers of the spiritual world. It prepares them as nothing else can for a correct and sympathetic view of the atonement. It disposes them powerfully toward religion; and as they see not only fortification but civilizations crumbling under the terrific machinery of war, they look with new favor upon the things which remain only because they cannot be shaken. They are witnessing the horrible outcome of anti-Christian theories of life and are thus being led to see more clearly than ever before the need of entering the only impregnable fortress, that of personal religious character. It seems impossible but that Christians everywhere should be deeply aroused by a situation so full of need and of opportunity for immediate religious results.

It is gratifying to note that much work has already been undertaken in the cantonments in the South where about two-thirds of the soldiers in training are located, but there is need of much more and of varied kinds. The government recognizes two forms of Protestant religious service to the men. One of them is the chaplaincy and the other the Young Men's Christian Association. The Y. M. C. A. is, of course, an interdenominational institution and stands for most of the Churches. It is a creature of the Church. Its various grades of work are all valuable, but its largest value just now is probably found in the fact that it furnishes within the camp the opportunity for many forms of religious instruction and gives entree to the sustaining Churches to furnish an order of spiritual service, which is of the first importance. It is to the right occupancy of this privilege that the Church is called just now. There is need for men who by equipment and experience are capable of furnishing genuine spiritual guidance to enter through this organization into this most inviting and fruitful field of evangelism. The funds called for are for sustaining such men, the building of tabernacles, the furnishing of literature, and the doing of such other work as makes a well-equipped organization. Let it be noted that, while the value of this work for the time the war lasts is extremely important, it is much more far-reaching than that. The men who survive, which will doubtless be most of them, will return a thoroughly disciplined host to have charge in a large measure of the affairs of American life, and the supreme question will be that of their preparedness for exerting the right kind of influence upon our civilization. But, apart from these considerations, the need is very great. Many and severe temptations assail men in the camp. Kipling has expressed the results of his observations in the statement that "single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints." Even the religious among them are subjected to severe tests, and the irreligious are made bolder and harder by companionship in wickedness. It is much better to save a young man from the wreck of his faith and character than to save him from being shot, and this is the work to which the Church is called at a time when the situation makes the soldier peculiarly sensitive to religious influences. That such sensitiveness exists is the testimony from all the camps. This opportunity missed cannot be brought back at any price. The immortal destiny of multiplied thousands hangs upon what the Churches do while the boys are still within our reach, and they are constantly going by shiploads beyond the reach of all but our love and our prayers.

Let there be no lagging in the gift of funds and men for this work on the ground that the war will soon be over. No man can yet see the end of it, and no informed and prudent man will dare to prophesy as to the time of its closing. If Russia had stood full four-square to the shock, and if the recent invasion of Italy had not heartened the people of the Central Powers, the end might have come within a year or two; but as the case now stands there is the prospect of a very prolonged and desperate struggle. It will happen on this account that these military cities which have sprung up, as it were, in a night shall have greater permanency than men think. As their present populations go out, others will come in; so that some of these camps will stand through many years. The Church should, therefore, effect such organization and provide such funds as will meet this demand for years to come. If the men can give their lives to insure human freedom, which is distinctly a doctrine of the Christian faith, cannot the members of the Church give the small fund necessary to do the work needed for the spiritual welfare of the soldiers? To ask this question is to answer it. And the Church will give a noble response.

WHERE DRUGS FAIL.

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from Shivar Mineral Water. If you suffer from chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer as printed below. His records show that only two in a hundred on the average, have reported "no beneficial results." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful spring. Simply sign the following letter:

A BOOK YOU NEED.

God's Minute.—New Holiday Edition. A book of 365 daily prayers—60 seconds long arranged in calendar form—a prayer to a page, with a verse of Scripture at the top of the page on encouragement to worship. The prayers were written expressly for this book by 365 of the most eminent evangelical clergymen and laymen in the English-speaking world. Purple cloth, gold top, stamped in gold, 384 pages; price, 50 cents net; (plain cloth, 35 cents.) The Vir Publishing Company, 200 North Fifteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"Lord, teach us to pray," one of the early disciples asked the Master, and that prayer is now being repeated by millions of anxious souls in these perplexing and distressing times. To all such, this book will come as a benediction. It will quicken and inspire a devotional spirit, and will re-light the altar fires that have died out in many homes. It is packed full of devout, inspiring thoughts and aspirations. Anyone reading one of these short prayers every morning, earnestly and quietly, cannot but be the better for it during the day. It not only has value as a prayer book, but it is a mirror, unconsciously revealing the deep spiritual character of each of these many contributors. There is no book published like it, and it can have no substitute. It will be one of the choicest gift books of the season for fathers, mothers, sons, daughters and friends, and it would be fine to see that our soldier or sailor boy has a copy to read in the trenches or camp, or on the deck of the boat as it plows through the dangerous seas. Among the contributors to the book are Wilfred T. Grenfell, Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, Reverends John Clifford, F. B. Meyer, Washington Gladden, Hugh Black, Timothy Stone, Bishop Quayle, Russell H. Conwell, David J. A. L. Burrell, Ira Landrith, Floyd W. Tomkins, Bishop Woodcock, Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice, Miss Eva Booth, Maud B. Booth, President E. Y. Mullins and many others eminent in the evangelical religious world. Since its publication just one year ago, four large editions have been issued.

Why I Believe in Nuxated Iron

A Strength-Builder For The Nation

BY E. SAUER, M. D.

Probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron. It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress; Physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monseigneur Nannini, a prominent Catholic Clergyman, recommends it to all members of the Catholic Church. Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician. Sarah Bernhardt—"the Divine Sarah," the world's most noted actress, has ordered a large quantity sent to the French soldiers to help give them strength, power and endurance.

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly physician in the Baltimore Hospital and Medical Examiner, says that time and again he has prescribed Nuxated Iron and surprised patients at the rapidity with which the weakness and general debility were replaced by a renewed feeling of strength and vitality.

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Note:—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by former Members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and other prominent people with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron, that they offer to forfeit $100 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

"When It Pours, It Reigns"

From the Field

Sallis, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been indisposed with la grippe since Conference. We arrived here last Friday. The good ladies of the church had provided for us a sumptuous dinner, to which each of us did ample justice. I know that I have the best people and the best charge in the Durant District to serve. No bigger-hearted and more loyal people are to be found anywhere. Of course, I am going to give them the best that there is in me.—T. L. Oakes, P. C.

Hollandale, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Just a note to let you know that I have arrived at my new appointment. We, that is our entire family, arrived in Hollandale on Wednesday evening, and were accorded a royal welcome at the depot, and from there were escorted to our new home, a most delightful, new parsonage. In fact, I don't feel that I am exaggerating when I say that it is one of the neatest and best arranged parsonages in the North Mississippi Conference. We have also found our work to be among a most delightful people. They had anticipated the needs of a preacher's larder; so the pantry was bountifully supplied with lots of good things to eat. Rev. V. C. Curtis, I found, is in high favor with these people, both as a preacher and as a presiding elder, and I am indeed glad of the privilege of serving under his administration. We ask your prayers for a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon me and this important work.—Jno. W. Robertson, Pastor.

REV. W. H. COLEMAN COMMENDED.

(Resolutions adopted by the First Methodist Church at Alexandria, La., on Dec. 9, 1917.)

Whereas in the wisdom of the appointing powers of our Church, our pastor has been removed to another field of labor, and another pastor has been assigned to us; therefore be it

Resolved, That we loyally accept the action of the Bishop and pledge ourselves to our utmost endeavors to promote the success of the work of the new Conference year.

Resolved (2), That we will cordially receive and support our new pastor.

Resolved (3), That we part with regret from our pastor, the Rev. W. H. Coleman, and that we express our love for and confidence in him and commend him and his family to his new charge as an able, devoted, consecrated pastor and Christian minister.

Resolved (4), That these resolutions be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, in the daily press, and that a copy be given to the Rev. W. H. Coleman, and a copy to Dr. S. H. Werlein. H. H. WHITE, Chairman Board of Stewards.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN.

William Jennings Bryan, addressing the "officers-to-be" at Fort Benjamin Harrison, put the distinguishing values of human worth in this striking manner:

"'Out of the heart are the issues of life.' 'As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.' I am more gratified to find that you measure high by religious standards than I am gratified by your intellectual measurement. You never know what a man is until you measure him in units of spiritual power. Measure him in units of horse-power, and he is not as strong as some beasts. Measure him in units of intellectual power, and you soon reach his limitations, but measure him in units of spiritual power, and there is no ratio that can describe the difference between man at his best and man at his worst."—New York Christian Advocate.

SHINING.

The loftiest gifts, the most conspicuous position, have no other purpose than that which the lowliest powers in the obscurest corner are meant to subserve. The one distributing Spirit divides to each man severally as He will; and whether He endows him with starlike gifts, which soar above and blaze over half the world with luster that lives through the centuries, or whether He set him in some cottage window to send out a tiny cone of light that pierces a little way into the night for an hour or two, and then is quenched—it is all one. The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man for the same purpose—to do good with. And we have all one office and function to be discharged by each in his own fashion, namely, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.—H. C. Trumbull.

INTER-METHODIST TEXTS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL LEADERSHIP.

Rev. J. W. Shackford

A year and a half ago it was arranged by the General Sunday School Board and the Board of Sunday Schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church that a new series of books for training classes and Sunday school workers should be prepared jointly by the two Boards. The Inter-Methodist Curriculum Committee representing these two Boards has outlined a number of books covering the field of Sunday school work. Two books of this series, "Life in the Making," and "The Program of the Christian Religion," are just from the press. "Learning and Teaching," "Sunday School Administration," "Training the Devotional Life," and "A Methodist Church at Work" are expected to be ready in a short while. Still others are in process of preparation.

Thus, as rapidly as possible the Church will be supplied with the needed texts for the training of its Sunday school teachers and officers. With this new equipment it is expected that training work will become an established feature in the schedule of every live Sunday school in the Church.

The new books have been prepared with a special view to use in young people's training classes at the Sunday school hour. Henceforth no school should rest content until one or more classes of future teachers have been launched on the study of these books.

For full information regarding text books and plans of study, etc., address Department of Teacher-Training, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Instead of wonders ceasing when we enter heaven, they will but increase, for the more we know the more wonderful does everything become. Wonder belongs to knowledge, not to ignorance. The learned man wonders at a flower, or at an insect, while the ignorant man or the child sees nothing to attract his attention.—N. Macleod.

CARROLLTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I arrived at Carrollton, my new charge, on Dec. 5 at 8 o'clock p. m. We were met at the depot by the Chancery Clerk in an automobile and were conveyed to the parsonage, where we were welcomed by Mrs. Sudduth and her daughters. The house was lighted, the fires were burning, and a good, hot supper was on the table awaiting us, to which, with gratitude, we did full justice. After supper we were shown through the house, which is well furnished. The pantry was well stocked with good things to eat. The next day more good things came, and the next, and they have not stopped coming in yet. Now, if I can only measure up to what these people deserve as a preacher and leader, you may expect to hear good news from Carrollton as the year goes by. Out of a heart full of love and gratitude to God and the people, I make a vow to give them my best service.

Editorial

"Yet do thy work: it shall succeed
In thine or in another's day;
And if denied the victor's meed,
Thou shalt not lack the toiler's pay.
Then faint not, falter not, nor plead
Thy weakness: truth itself is strong;
The lion's strength, the eagle's speed,
Are not alone vouchsafed to wrong."

* * *

What could be more incongruous than a saloon decorated for Christmas?

* * *

Among the last utterances of Edith Cavill, who was executed by the Germans, was this suggestive statement: "Standing as I do in the view of God and eternity, I realize that patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness toward any one."

* * *

Faith is the key that unlocks the store-house of God's spiritual treasures and brings them into one's heart and life. "According to your faith, be it unto you," is the great law of the Divine Kingdom. Therefore, whatever weakens a man's faith tends to impoverish his soul and to lessen his power for achievement in the Master's service. Men of great faith are the need of the Church and of the world.

* * *

No clap-trap methods can long give ministerial efficiency in the absence of real and regular study. Mental laziness is acquired more easily than physical indolence, and it is one of the things that every pastor needs to guard resolutely against. The best way for a preacher to keep fresh in thought is to hold himself steadily to the habit of making and preaching new sermons. This suggestion applies to all itinerants, from circuit riders to Bishops.

* * *

A good New Year resolve: "My place in the pew shall not be vacant at the preaching services during 1918 unless it is really impossible for me to be present." We need to magnify the regular hours of public worship in our congregations. They should be the great occasions of a church—recognized by all as outweighing in importance all other religious meetings. Effective preaching by men truly called of God has ever been the mightiest agency on earth for the extension of the Divine Kingdom.

* * *

It has now become quite the fashion in this country to denounce the rationalistic theology that obtains in Germany; but some who are pouring forth torrents of invective against it abroad are saying not a word about its prevalence in some of the theological schools of our own land. If it has proven bad for the people of the German Empire, how can it be good for the people of America? It may take more courage to strike at a near-by evil than one which is far away; but proximity increases responsibility, and it would seem to be the first duty of a reformer to clean up his own premises. Fighting rationalism in the Kaiser's domain and training with it beneath the Stars and Stripes is rather too inconsistent to command the respect of people who can see and think.

CONCERNING THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

There has been a vast amount of writing within recent years about the country church and what must be done to save it—some of which was wise, and much of which was otherwise. There are sections of our Republic where the problem of the rural church is very acute, but happily such a state of things does not yet exist in the Southern States, in which the population is still overwhelmingly American and the orthodox Southern Baptist and Methodist Churches are largely in the ascendency. We do not mean by this statement that religious work in the interior is everywhere in this section in a satisfactory condition and that there are not partculars in which it might be improved; but we do hold the conviction that there is no need for violently revolutionizing it according to the schemes of vagarists who know little of the true situation in the South. For instance, the country presiding elders' districts of Southern Methodism are not as a rule sparsely settled, as many imagine, but still embrace the major portion of our membership. We yet have many excellent congregations in the rural districts, and they are continuing to furnish to the Church the majority of her converts and the larger number of her ministers. There are some localities that should have special attention and the work generally needs to be pushed and developed; but, in our judgment, there is no cause for pessimism concerning it.

We are largely indebted to our country churches, and they have an appealing claim upon us, which we can not afford to disregard. The following poetic tribute to the rural church is a fine setting forth of the scenes about many such houses of worship and of the far-reaching influence that they have exercised:

"Clear-eyed and prim, with walls of white
Among the leaves of birch
That tinged but did not stem the light,
Nestled the little church—
All summer open to the air
And all the green a-quiver there.

"About were tender, dreamy sounds;
The stamp of horses' feet,
The mumbling bees upon their rounds
Where clover nodded sweet,
A piping quail—the grain low bent
Showed where her furtive flutterings went.

"Next father in the pew's long row
Came urchins sternly shod;
Next mother—for she planned it so—
The child who first would nod,
Laying, when sermon-time oppressed,
His poppy cheek upon her breast.

"Bare stretched your aisle and long your hour
To many a childish wight,
Wee churches, yet rich in holy power,
You blessed as angels might.
Long years have gone—our faith is true;
Long years we've prayed, because of you."

A PERNICIOUS TOADYISM.

In an address delivered at Little Rock, Ark., a few days ago, Bishop Quayle, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is quoted as having said: "Some one wrote in a Sunday school publication a few years ago that the Kaiser was the most eminent Christian in the world. If that is true, let the Lord dismiss us with the benediction."

This leads us to say that the toadyism that is given to glorifying and making saints of men in high official position who happen to belong to the Church and now and then utter publicly a Christian sentiment, without having a correct regard for their true status spirituality, is both harmful and contemptible. The Kaiser is by no means the only dignitary who, without due warant, has been thus canonized and lifted to an exalted religious pinnacle. Such an exhibition of obsequiousness is a thing of very common occurrence. Only a few days since we noted an instance of a Methodist minister holding up a certain public man as a great Christian exemplar and an asset of incalculable value to the Kingdom of God, when only a day or two before the newspapers had blazoned abroad that he and his wife were scheduled at a designated date to grace a notable public ball with their presence. If what the preacher referred to said was true, then as a Church we should lift our ban against the lascivious dance.

The Kingdom of Christ does not need the condescending patronage of the world's great and illustrious personages, nor the prestige of their names to prop and sustain it. God is no respecter of persons, and his requirements for salvation apply impartially to all the millions of the race. The only nobility that he recognizes is that of virtue, and earthly pomp and power count for little in the sight of Him whose glory fills the universe and the foundations of whose lofty throne can never be shaken. Sainthood is equally meritorious, whether it be found in a hovel or in a palace. Christ was more divinely regal in the carpenter shop at Nazareth than was the reigning Caesar with the crown of imperial Rome upon his head. The Church's appraisement of men and women should be according to spiritual weight—not according to the wealth and honors that they may have acquired in the world.

A NOBLE UNDERTAKING.

The plan of Dr. I. W. Cooper and some of his friends to start a movement to send twenty young ministers to college this fall, an announcement of which appears in this issue of the Advocate, is certainly a most commendable one. It would be difficult to conceive of any undertaking with larger possibilities for good, and its successful accomplishment will mean much to the Mississippi Conference. Dr. Cooper has done a great work for the Church in the days agone, but obviously he has no notion of slacking up in his labors to extend the Master's kingdom. He has the faith and courage to attempt great things for God, and to expect great things from Him. We know of no choicer spirit in Southern Methodism that this big-hearted Mississippian. Let the brethren lend him an active helping hand in this latest of the many excellent enterprises that he has set on foot.

Why not start the year with a revival? Nothing else can so strengthen all the activities of a church as a season of spiritual quickening.

THE CLOSING YEAR.

Rev. Charles S. Nutter, D.D.

Yes, day by day the year has passed—
How short the time appears!—
And, blessing burdened, first and last,
'Tis gone like other years.

The seasons came and went apace,
Stretching their line along;
With days of darkness, days of grace,
Of sorrow and of song.

Our birthdays all of us have had,
Work days to make us blest,
And holidays to make us glad,
And holy days for rest.

Gone is the year beyond recall,
With all its hopes and fears;
It brought us blessing, one and all,
As well as former years.

With thanks we look upon the past,
With thanks upon the fore;
Let present blessing always last,
And increase more and more.

God of the flying years, to Thee
We dedicate our days;
We trust some day Thy face to see
And celebrate Thy praise.

Brookline, Mass.

NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS.

The above phrase is very familiar to the ears of most people all over the world. We find that the people are wont to, occasionally, "swear off" some bad habit.

We do not discourage a man's breaking off his old bad habits and following after a new, clean life, but we would ask one question: "Suppose you do 'swear off,' and are able to keep the pledge—which is not at all likely—walking in uprightness (before men) the rest of your days, what about the past record? All the past, with its multitude of sins, many of which are covered from the view of man, what about it? Do you think that the future straight line will atone for the past crooked path? Do you think good works in the future will cover up the past?"

Every sin that has ever been committed is "written in the books" kept against the great day. Try to forget, if you will; but all the works, be they ever so good, you could do from now to the judgment-day would not wipe out one black mark of sin, for it is written: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy, he hath saved us by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost" (Titus 3:5). Could you command all the wealth of the world, it could not buy you a ransom, for it is written: "They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches; none of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him" (Psalm 49:6, 7).

Ah, the straight line ahead is all very good, but the Scriptures declare "the crooked shall be made straight" (Luke 3. 5). Ah, the past, the past—if it were only blotted out, how happy you would be! Let me repeat, if it were possible for you to begin anew now in your own strength, you would not be happy; the past would haunt you to the grave; the sins of early days come flitting back—memory refuses to obliterate them.

In a few days a new year will open, and with it a new book. O, beloved, let me tell you a secret; let me tell you a story, that sweet old story of the Judean hills: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day . . . a Savior, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10-11). "And thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matt. 1:21).

Ah, here is the secret! No more 'swearing off;' no more broken pledges; no more failure—"He shall save his people from their sins." Hallelujah! Sins that are past? Yes, bless God, past sins; present victory, future enjoyment. "Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God" (Rom. 3:24-25).

Cleansed by the blood, your past record blotted out, you may open the new book with the assurance of a "Happy New Year" and with the promise, "Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy" (Jude 24).—Revivalist.

THE POWER OF INFLUENCE.

An atheist who spent a few days with the saintly Fenelon said: "If I stay here much longer I shall become a Christian in spite of myself." Fenelon had used no word of controversy or solicitation. It was but the quiet, convincing argument of a holy life, a consistent walk and conversation.

"I tried to be a skeptic when I was a young man," said Cecil, "but my mother's life was too much for me."

"My brethren," said an old African preacher, "a good example is the tallest kind of preaching." And he was right.

"There is an energy of moral suasion in a good man's life," says Dr. Chalmers, "passing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen beauty of holiness speaks more eloquently of God and duty than the tongues of men and angels."—Michigan Presbyterian.

A ONE-MINUTE REASON WHY I BELIEVE THE BIBLE TO BE THE WORD OF GOD.

Rev. Henry Ostrom, D.D.

Because of Jesus. He is the best authority ever known. He is scientific not only to the extent of controlling natural laws, but of conquering death. He refers repeatedly to the Old Testament essentially as we now have it and says, "The Scripture can not be broken." He never hints at a doubt about it. The New Testament is the temple of Jesus' Testament, built together, roofed in, and lit up by the Holy Spirit.

The Bible deals resolutely with the universe, sin, death, and eternity, and shows man the way home.

The Bible ennobles woman as well as man, of all races and ages.

The Bible is like sixty-six different battalions of soldiers drilled in different nations at widely separated intervals, but when assembled they all keep step and move in perfect unison under one crimson banner.

Its enemies have been many, but the longer the battle the stronger the Book.

Unlike man, its aim, its method, and its results are holy.

Accurate, faithful, and impregnable, every test I have made of it, it has proven true and given joy.

TIMELY ADVICE.

If you are impatient, sit down quietly and talk with Job.

If you are just a little headstrong, see Moses.

If you are getting weak-kneed, take a good look at Elijah.

If there is no song in your heart, listen to David.

If you are a policy man, read Daniel.

If you are getting sordid, spend a while with Isaiah.

If you feel chilly, get the beloved disciple to put his arms around you.

If your faith is below par, read Paul.

If you are getting lazy, watch James.

If you are losing sight of the future, climb up the stairs of revelation and get a glimpse of the promised land.—Christian Workers' Magazine.

AN INCALCULABLE CONTRAST.

It was the infamous Tiberius Caesar who ruled the mightiest empire on the earth while the true monarch of the world was living as a peasant in a lowly village of Galilee.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

THE MISSIONARY CENTENARY.

By Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D.

The year 1819 marks the beginning of organized missionary work in American Methodism. Both branches of Episcopal Methodism are to celebrate the first missionary century of the Church in 1919. The Board of Missions at its annual session in 1916 adopted a resolution favoring such a celebration and appointed a Committee of Preparation and Publicity which is composed of Bishop James Atkins, D.D., Miss Belle Bennett, Dr. E. B. Chappell, Dr. John M. Moore, Dr. W. W. Pinson, Bishop J. H. McCoy, D.D., Mr. J. R. Pepper, Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, Dr. E. H. Rawlings, Rev. Jno. S. Jenkins, Col. J. E. Edgerton, Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, Dr. W. F. McMurry, Bishop W. R. Lambuth, D.D., Dr. F. S. Parker and Dr. T. N. Ivey.

This Committee has been busy with preliminary preparations and will be ready to present plans to the General Conference next May for its consideration.

Our Bishops in their meeting in September, 1917, took the following action relative to this matter: "The College of Bishops is in heartiest sympathy with the movement under the direction of the Board of Missions to celebrate in conjunction with the Methodist Episcopal Church the one hundredth anniversary of the beginning of foreign missions by the Methodists of the United States, and this College will do all within its power to advance this work throughout the Church."

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which met in Saratoga, New York, in May, 1916, gave strong endorsement to the proposed centenary. The General Secretary of the Mission Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was present by authority of that Board, hearing a proposition looking to a joint celebration by the two Episcopal Methodisms. This proposition met a most courteous reception and hearty response. Since that time, a joint committee has been formed consisting of Dr. S. Earl Taylor, Dr. D. D. Forsythe, Mr. Cyrus D. Foss, Mr. Jno. T. Stone, Dr. Jno. F. Goucher, Dr. L. C. Murdock, Rev. R. A. Ward, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Bishop James Atkins, D.D., Miss Belle H. Bennett, Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, Dr. W. W. Pinson, Dr. John M. Moore, Dr. E. B. Chappell, Mr. Jno. R. Pepper, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

This committee has had several meetings and plans are well under way for making the celebration nation-wide and for full co-operation in such phases as are of common interest.

That our own Methodism may worthily keep this missionary jubilee the Committee has undertaken to make adequate preparation. A complete survey of the fields, foreign and home, is being made; the making of a suitable literature has been undertaken; preliminary meetings of leaders will be held to work out plans for the occasion, and other things necessary will require the whole of 1918 and the co-operation of the entire Church.

Methodism has been from the beginning a missionary Church. A consideration of its first century of organized missions will include the complete survey of its marvelous expansion and extension in home and foreign lands. Any adequate and worthy celebration of this Centenary, therefore, must be carried out by the entire Church. The most obscure church in the connection should share in the thanksgiving, the intercession and the girding for service which the occasion will inspire. It should be the earnest purpose of all our leaders in every department of the Church to secure this result.

The Centenary proper will be in 1919 and 1920. Two years' time is all too brief for bringing our 2,000,000 members and the people among whom we labor face to face with a century of missionary achievement and the opportunities and responsibilities that are on the threshold of the new century.

There could not be a more auspicious time for such a celebration. The world is in the agonies of transformation. Christianity is facing the severest test the world has yet offered. It is a time to rediscover the fundamental sources of power and efficiency, to seek the light of history to guide us in the overwhelming task that is upon us. If this world-war has called for the spirit of heroic sacrifice to a new ideal of world-wide service, how much louder will the call be at its close for giving to a stricken and heart-sick world the Gospel on a scale of which we have not yet dreamed.

If Methodism is to bear her part in this great task of world reconstruction she must be strong beyond mere human resources. Her spiritual life must be purified and strengthened. Our aim should be, therefore, first of all to call the Church to her knees. We must remember that every great movement in the history of the Church has been grounded in prayer, and our first aim should be to recover for our Church what has been called "the lost art of intercession." The first desire and request of the Committee, therefore, is that unceasing prayer be made that a great spiritual awakening may characterize the Centenary. The Church has never in its history had such an opportunity nor such a call as this historic review of a century and this facing up to the task of the new century present. Shall we have the wisdom to "know what Israel ought to do," and the "power to will and to do it?"

DR. J. W. BEESON ONCE MORE.

Dear Dr. Meek: In a recent number of your valuable paper Dr. Beeson replies to my comments upon his "explanation" of a few weeks ago of why he signed the "Laymen's Address."

May I say in the beginning, as I asserted in my former article, that "Dr. Beeson is one of the signatories of the 'Address.' his name has been circulated as such, he is fully aware of the fact, and he has made no attempt to deny it." Now, however, he tries to evade the issue by quoting from his former deliverance the words: "I do not endorse all the changes suggested by the 'Laymen's Address,' as I gather them from the replies I read." The repetition of this assertion shows him to be more in sympathy with Mr. Eleazer and his associates than I thought; for Mr. Eleazer, in writing to Dr. Beeson about his contemplated revolution, stated, in his letter of May 24: "It will probably not meet your approval at every point, but I feel sure you will be in hearty accord with the general principles involved, and that you will be glad to add the weight of your name to the movement." Further, in the first revolutionary letter issued from Chattanooga under date of May 26, this statement appears: "The legislative program suggested may not be exactly as you would have it, but we are sure you will approve its general purpose." So the attitude of Dr. Beeson at present is in direct accord with the spirit of the proposed revolution. He seems to be endeavoring to gain favor by being on both sides of the question; for he asserts he is for some changes advocated in the "Address," thereby holding the favor of the radicals, and he opposes other features therein advocated, thereby holding the favor of the conservatives. But Dr. Beeson should know that it is impossible to assume such an attitude to a paper one has signed, for after one's signature is attached to a document one is morally and legally bound to the whole of its utterances. It seemed to have a winning effect to put these cunning sentences in the revolutionary campaign letters, but this does not detach responsibility from any signer of the "Address;" for if the sponsors are not responsible for it, then nobody is. Dr. Beeson must stand for the whole radical program or withdraw his name entirely; and nowhere have I seen that he has withdrawn his name. It is still understood to be attached to the "Address," and he does not attempt to change the status of affairs. For him to say in the latter part of his paper that "many other laymen did the same (meaning they pursued the same course he did) except to give the history of the paragraph I championed," is entirely misleading.

An excerpt from the first paragraph of Dr. Beeson's article reads thus: "It is a straining of the facts when he accuses me of disapproval of 'hard feelings and hot words' only on the part of those opposing the movement for greater democracy. He made that application himself. My words were: 'I see no need for the hard feelings and hot words that I read on the subject.' How can these words be construed into referring only 'to those opposing the movement?'" To this, I desire merely to say that if I have strained the facts, the following sentence from Dr. Beeson's former utterance caused me to be misled: "I don't even know what was in it (the 'Laymen's Address'). It must be something 'dreadful,' judging from the anathemas brought down upon it in the papers." The word "anathema" is a strong term, and means a curse, an imprecation, a malediction. When Dr. Beeson said "hard feelings and hot words" were evident and referred in the same paper to those opposing the movement as "cursing" it, I naturally thought the "hard feelings and hot words" were to be applied to the objectors.

"Another sentence from Brother Battle, straining the facts," says Dr. Beeson, is: 'Has not read the document to which he subscribes, and shows no disposition to do so.' I wonder what part of my letter led him to believe that I showed no disposition to read the document. I stated that I was away from home most of the summer, then very busy with the opening of school, missed my Advocates, and had no chance to read it up to that time. Since then I have secured a copy and read it." I suppose he means by "up to that time," some time after he wrote his lengthy "explanation:" for in the "explanation" he distinctly states "I have never yet read the 'Address;'" and further remarks, "I do not endorse all the changes suggested by the 'Laymen's Address,' as I gather them from the replies I read." It seems reasonable to suppose that any man, who will presume to write a lengthy "explanation" why he signed a revolutionary paper before having read it, and then will refer to his knowledge of its contents as being "gathered from the replies I read," has no intention whatever of ever reading the document in all his life-time. It is evident that no facts were strained when it was said that Dr. Beeson showed no disposition to read the "Address." When he stated in his last article that he had actually read the "Address" I confess I was profoundly shocked!

Dr. Beeson says, "The worst blow of all that Brother Battle gave me is to so wrest the meaning of my words as to try to make it appear that I cast insinuations against the Bishops and preachers of our Church." If his feelings in the matter were misunderstood, Dr. Beeson must blame his own words, for he distinctly stated he thought if the "proper presentation (of the matter of making lay leaders members of the Annual Conference) by the right parties had been made at the Annual Conferences this law might have been passed." The Bishops, according to the General Conference, must present the matter, and the preachers, I think, were intelligent enough to vote upon it, and this is the reason it seemed to me Dr. Beeson was unintentionally inveighing somewhat against the Bishops and preachers. Further, he should not lose sight of the fact that his former article contained other words which might lead one to think Dr. Beeson was trying to make out a case against the preachers, for he stated that "the laymen are clamoring for the night services at the Annual Conferences to be used for the deepened of spiritual life. If left to the laymen, Dr. Plato Durham would have continued those deeply spiritual addresses or sermons ot our last Conference. The preachers voted it down." Dr. Beeson's words here seem to imply that the preachers of his Conference are not looking to the spiritual side of their work as they ought, but I would not think of saying this is the Doctor's real sentiment and only call attention to this little point to demonstrate that I was not so unkind as he thought I was. He certainly must know that it is the law of the Church that the Boards must celebrate their anniversaries at the Annual Conference, and doubtless the preachers over there were just trying to follow the instructions of the Discipline. By the way, Dr. Beeson speaks pretty dogmatically when he says "the laymen are clamoring for the night services at Annual Conferences" to be used in a certain way; I wonder if he has taken a vote among them.

"I appreciate the fatherly counsel," says Dr. Beeson, "of Brother Batle in his words of caution as to 'the next time,' and I shall try to get more light before I authorize my name to be signed to another document." Of course, this is a little joyful prod my Mississippi friend is giving me because I am not as old as he. But it can scarcely be a crime to be young, especially when it is evident that some people remain quite youthful in wisdom even though their heads become bald with age. In any case, I shall try to profit by the advice of Paul to Timothy: "Let no man despise thy youth."

Dr. Beeson says he cannot understand why I "attacked" him unless it be for the reason that since he appealed for us all to avoid "hard feelings and hot words" the "hit dog hollers." This is another bit of pleasantry upon the part of my brother, as he refers to me as a hollowing canine, but I am perfectly able to bear it if he is free in conscience to utter it. Further, I have written only one article concerning the "Laymen's Address" and the attending agitation; this appeared a few weeks ago in the Nashville Advocate, and I challenge Dr. Beeson to show where I have used one sentence which suggests "hard feelings and hot words."

In all seriousness, let me say that there was no intention whatever in writing my reply to Dr. Beeson's "explanation" to "attack" him, or to give him a "drubbing." It just appeared so ridiculous to see a school man saying he had signed a revolutionary paper without reading it, to see his "explanation," which he wrote still before reading it, of why he had signed it, and to see every indication in his article that he had no intention whatever of reading it, that I could not refrain from calling attention to these anomalies in a good-humored manner. Dr. Beeson now admits that he has read the paper; so I believe that my "fatherly" attitude toward him has at least done that much good toward enlightenment.

Dr. Beeson's heart is in the right place, and we all know it. He, as we all do, greatly desires to see the Church uplifted and spiritualized. Let us set out to the task with all our strength. When the days of the unification agitation and the revolutionary programs are over, we shall feel very much more in a mood to go at the real work of the Church.

Yours sincerely,
C. A. BATTLE.

NOTICE.

I take this means of thanking all the brethren who have been so kind in the matter of the fund for Dr. Peebles. All but a few have made arrangements about their payments on the fund. I was glad to hear that arrangements have been made by which Dr. Peebles could make payments at all times on the principal of this indebtedness, thereby saving him interest. If there are any who feel able to make future payments now or to pay in full, as some of the brethren were able to do, it would be greatly appreciated by him, as it would save him the interest.

TO LOUISIANA PASTORS.

A resolution was passed by our last Conference providing for the publication in the "Annual" of a list of the boys in the Army, Navy, and other forms of military service, including chaplains and Y. M. C. A. workers, who are sons or brothers or wards of preachers in the Louisiana Conference. Kindly mail me all information which you may have in hand, and do it immediately. Also mail me statements of your post-office.

THE NEGRO AND UNIFICATION.

Rev. James Cannon, Jr., D.D.

In the issue of the Nashville Advocate of October 12, Dr. S. H. Werlein, in his article on "Unification," says: "On the contrary, some of the friends of union take the position of Dr. Cannon, of the Richmond Christian Advocate, that in order to effect a real union the Negro must be eliminated from the new organization. We all know that Dr. Cannon is an earnest advocate of union."

Dr. Werlein is entirely correct in his statement that "Dr. Cannon is an earnest advocate of union." He is hardly in favor of unification—UNIFICATION spelled with capital letters. Unification is greatly to be desired if it is genuine unification—unification in fact as well as in name. It is not to be desired if it unifies in some quarters and among some people and divides elsewhere. The indispensable requisite for any plan is that the plan shall be so satisfactory to the overwhelming majority of the preachers and laymen of the Churches that no considerable number will oppose the plan when finally adopted, and no clearly defined portion of the membership of either Church will set np an organization separate from that of the united Church.

Of course, greatly as it may be desired, it is hardly to be expected that any plan can be adopted which will be satisfactory to every single member or that union can be consummated without the loss of a few preachers and laymen, who for one reason or another may leave the Methodist Church and join a Church of some other denomination. And unification should not be abandoned because there may be a few members here and there who cannot agree with the great majority. But on the other hand, unification should not be forced through by the bare constitutional majority of three-fourths. If as many as approximately one-fourth of our people should be opposed to a proposed plan of union, it ought not to be consummated, even if it could be legally adopted. Better to have present division between the two Methodisms than to have future serious division among our own people.

While, therefore, the writer is personally earnestly in favor of union, he is for it only on such conditions as will produce the genuine union of the overwhelming majority of both Churches.

Personally, he believes that the Negro question is the only question which presents such serious difficulties as to jeopardize unification. The other questions pertain entirely to church polity, the methods of administration, and touch no question of doctrine and should be possible of adjustment by wise and brotherly counsel. But the Negro question is of a different character. It is a question of the wisest treatment of a problem which involves racial and social as well as religious elements. What plan is best for the moral and spiritual welfare of both races? Without any hesitation our Church has declared with practical unanimity that a separate church organization with fraternal relations is the best plan for both races and that it would be a very grave blunder, if not worse than a blunder, for our Church to unite with the Northern Methodist Church if the Negro membership and the Negro Conferences of that Church should retain the same relation to the United Church that they now sustain to the Northern Methodist Church. They are practically the only considerable body of Negroes who do sustain such relation to a white Church in the United States. All the facts indicate that it would be better for them to be separated from the white membership; and, furthermore, it appears that a very large portion, if not a majority, of the Northern Church membership think that the time has come for such a separation.

With our own Church almost, if not quite, unanimous for separate Churches for the two races, with over four-fifths of all the Negro Methodists in American in favor of separate Churches for the two races, with the white membership of the Northern Church itself greatly divided as to the wise policy to be pursued, it would be a great mistake for our Church to agree to a plan of union which retained as part of the united Church in the same relation it now holds the present Negro membership of the Northern Methodist Church simply because that Negro membership insisted upon it. That would mean that our Church, with its more than two million members, would surrender its carefully matured, conscientious Christian judgment as to the best plan to deal with an exceedingly grave question to the wishes of about one-seventh as many Negro members of the Northern Church who are insisting upon the maintenance of their present relations, although they must know that their own voluntary retirement would remove the greatest stumbling-block to unification.

To attempt to override the conscientious judgment of a very large majority of our people on this question and to force a union with the Northern Church, including its present Negro membership, would inevitably fail unless the relation of the Negro membership should be changed, and it is doubtful whether that could be arranged satisfactorily.

The writer is favorable to unification, but not at the price of division among our own people or of the surrender of convictions concerning a most important social and moral question, which convictions are the result of the most careful observation and experience of the leaders of our Church since the division of 1844.

It is possible that some form of missionary relation may be arranged which would work satisfactorily; but the writer does not hesitate to say that he believes the wiser plan is for all the colored Methodists in the United States to be united in one independent body, holding fraternal relations with the united white Methodist Church, or, if the Negroes do not desire to unite, that all of them be in independent organizations, holding fraternal relations with the united white Methodist Church and with each other.

If the commissioners of our own Church and the majority of the commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church report back to their respective General Conferences that all other questions but the Negro question have been adjusted and that the majority of both Commissions believe that the Negro membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church should be requested to withdraw and form an independent organization with fraternal relations to the united white Methodist Church, then the question will be squarely before both General Conferences for action.

There is little doubt what will be the action of our General Conference. If the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church is not willing to ask its colored membership to withdraw to form a separate organization, then the writer believes that unification will not be wise at the present time unless, as indicated above, some form of missionary relationship could be established which would be acceptable to both the Northern and Southern Churches. If the Northern Methodist General Conference shall request the Negro membership to withdraw and form a separate organization; and, notwithstanding this joint request from both the General Conferences, the Negro membership of the Northern Church should still refuse to withdraw, it would then be a question for the General Conference of the Northern Methodist Church to decide whether the question of unification should be dropped for the present or whether it would take further action to secure a favorable response to the requests of the two General Conferences from the colored membership of their Church.

But the writer believes that the colored membership of the Northern Church should be told positively what action the white membership of the Northern Church desires the colored membership to take, and, having been told, the responsibility will then rest upon the colored membership for final action.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

Church News

Dallas, Texas, has eight Southern Methodist churches paying salaries of $2500 or more.

No memorials were sent to the General Conference from the Alabama Conference during its recent session.

The sum of $3000 was subscribed at the session of the Florida Conference for Christian work among the soldiers encamped at Jacksonville, Fla.

Bishop James Atkins, according to report, is considerably improved in health, being decidedly stronger than he was when he began his round of Annual Conferences.

The Southern Churchman (Protestant Episcopal), published at Richmond, Va., has announced that its subscription price will be advanced from $2 to $3 per annum.

Rev. John P. Ley, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Orlando, Fla., died in Orlando on Sunday, December 9, while the Florida Conference was in session at Miami. He was a largely useful and much beloved minister.

The Alabama Methodists have decided to unite Birmingham College and the Southern University at Greensboro, thus having only one male college in the State. It seems to be the understanding that Birmingham will be the site of the institution formed by this union.

The Texas Christian Advocate reports that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, despite the distraction of the raging world-war, had last year a net gain of 10,536 members in its patronizing territory, distributed by States as follows: Texas, 9934; New Mexico, 1375; Oklahoma, 602.

Miss Maude Bonnell, who was for seventeen years a missionary to Japan, died at Los Angeles, Calif., on November 30, 1917, and was buried at Denver, Colo., on December 5. She was in the United States on a furlough and was expecting to leave soon to resume her work in the Far East.

It has been announced that Miss Fannie Kilgo, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. J. C. Kilgo, and Mr. B. T. Groome, a son of Rev. and Mrs. P. L. Groome and City Editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, will be married on December 27, 1917. Miss Kilgo is a graduate of Trinity College, and Mr. Groome is an alumnus of the University of North Carolina.

It was stated at the Mississippi Baptist State Convention that, due to war conditions, the attendance upon Mississippi College, at Clinton, had shrunk about 40 per cent, and that the ministerial students there this year number 42, against 62 last year. Clarke Memorial College, at Newton, reported 15 ministerial students at this time, against 21 at the last session.

A STATEMENT BY BISHOP MORRISON.

In the usual order of succession, it was Bishop H. C. Morrison's time to write the Episcopal Address to the General Conference. The Bishop has made the following statement bearing upon this matter:

"This address will be written by Bishop Hoss at my request, it being my time, in the order of election, to prepare the address. But inasmuch as I shall, if living, ask of the General Conference permission to retire from my office, and knowing that Bishop Hoss, with his editorial experience and forceful pen, could give the Conference a far better paper than I could, therefore I made the request, to which he kindly consented.

"Moreover, I desired the Church to have an address from one of the best-equipped and best-qualified of her chief servants. And while we hope that Bishop Hoss may serve in office for coming quadrenniums, yet this we do not know. Hence we thought better to have the address at this time. And while I am under lasting obligation to Bishop Hoss, the General Conference will be indebted to me for securing his services rather than offering my own."

MINDEN.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

I have been going to Annual Conferences for many years, Meek, but I do not remember ever going to one where I enjoyed myself more than the one recently held at Minden. Being a "transfer," I had nothing to do but enjoy the occasion, was not on any committee, or assigned to any work, or called on for any service, except to preach for the Presbyterians on Sunday—was entirely free. Then I had one of the nicest homes in the land, being the guest of Mr. Webb, with Dr. Coleman for my room-mate, and Dr. F. N. Parker, of Emory University, and Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League, for fellow-guests. I had a bed to myself, and if Coleman snored I didn't hear him; and if I snored he was too polite to remind me of it. I fell in love with Coleman. If he keeps on in the way he is going, I expect to meet him "away over in the Promised Land." I was especially glad to get better acquainted with that fine pair of Parkers. I voted for the father of these men for Bishop. I will not have a chance to vote for either of the sons for the same office; but no mistake will be made if one or the other of them is called to wear the Episcopal mantle next May. Dr. Frank Parker was elected by a decided majority to preside until the Bishop arrived, and did it with such ease and dignity that he seemed already a Bishop. He is solid as oak, quiet, doesn't talk much, but talks sense when he does speak. Dr. Fitz is an accomplished gentleman, polished in his manners; his talk sparkles, and it is not the fizzle of a pop cracker, but the flash of an electric current. He is much more animated as a speaker than his brother. I imagine that Dr. Frank is the steadier of the two, and takes more deliberate and accurate aim, while Dr. Fitz is quicker on the trigger. But there was nothing tho matter with Dr. Fitz's aim in that speech he made about our young people going to the devil. If that was a fair sample of the Secretary's style, he would have made Demosthenes sit up and listen.

I heard old Halsey Werlein—O I call him old Halsey, with no reference to his hair, but because I love the scamp. By invitation, he preached the Thanksgiving sermon, and spoke most irreverently of His Imperial Majesty, the Kaiser. His message was a strong and patriotic utterance. He has convictions, and they are not skin-deep, either. I am not surprised that he was a thorn in the side of the devil in New Orleans. And I am not surprised that some churches I know don't want him as their pastor; but my, how they need him! He will keep things moving at Alexandria. He says I write too much, and I think he writes too little; so there we are.

Bennett was there with his entertaining, instructive, and forceful speech about "more and better preachers." I told Dr. Parker to tell him to change his tune. There is a discord in the music. The men who rule the roost over in Shreveport said I had Almanac-itis, and they wanted another preacher; so I began to look around to see where I could light. Bishop Mouzon said his conferences were "congested;" Bishop McCoy said he had difficulty in finding places for his men; Bishop Candler said he "saw no opening;" and poor Bishop Murrah had more pegs than he had holes. And yet Bennett had the nerve to stand there and tell us our ranks are thin and we need more preachers. I asked one brother how he reconciled Dr. Bennett's statements with the positions of the Bishops, and he said, "Bennett means a certain class of preachers." As I was one they did not know where to put, that was pretty hard on me. They can't say that I asked for anything in particular; all I wanted was a place to work without stepping outside the regular system. I can do that, and find plenty of work, and big work; but I love my Church, and am happiest in the pastorate. I have had the biggest things we have, and have had some of the smaller work, and then had none at all; and I have never asked for an appointment, or declined one, or growled about what I received. But it seems there is no room on the driver's seat, and now they are crowding one another off the coupling pole. Dick must get his fiddle in tune with the Episcopal organ if we are to have good music. But his speech rings true to the high spirit of the Methodist ministry.

While it was a great disappointment that Bishop Hoss was unable to hold the Conference, Bshop Murrah was a welcome substitute to every one, I think. As I understand it, a Bishop now has very little to do with making the appointments, anyhow. The "Beloveds," as Lafferty used to call the presiding elders, fix things up at their meeting, and the Bishop simply O. K.'s the "appointments" they make. I suppose by tho time they get through "reforming" the system, thero won't be much left of a Bishop, except his name. But, perhaps, by relieving them of so much executive work it will enable them to give more time to constructive leadership. I know it would be a good thing if the Bishop who is to hold tho Louisiana Conference next year could spend a month in its bounds, acquainting himself with the people and the work.

We are at Mansfield and are delighted with the outlook. There are no finer people in the State. They have given us a cordial welcome, and we expect to be very happy among them. The back yard of the parsonage opens upon the College campus, where President Bobbitt and his hundred fine girls do their work. And judging from the program of the Christmas Sacred Concert held last night, it is most excellent work. Meek, I get disgusted and feel like kicking loose from the whole business when I see such an opportunity for our Methodist educational work as Mansfield College presents, and think of the great lack of money necessary to do the work. We are playing at our task. All honor to the men and women who are doing the work under the cramping limitations about them; but if it is possible, put some dynamite under the rich Methodists of Louisiana, and induce them to build the additional quarters needed by these girls, and endow this fine school.

Here in Mansfield we literally look down on Shreveport from our airy perch in the pines; and, thank the Lord, Almanac-itis does not affect the vocal chords. My bugle blows clear, and you may expect to hear its notes. Come to see us. We missed you at Minden.

INFIDELITY IN HIGH PLACES.

L. W. Munhall, in the Eastern Methodist.

One of the most glaring instances of modern infidel writings is an article in a recent issue of "The Biblical World," the organ of the Theological Department of the great Baptist University of Chicago, which bears the startling title, "Christianizing the Bible." That this was written by an infidel—though bearing the title of D. D.—goes without saying, and the blasphemous nature of the work is plainly shown by the following extracts:

"No truth is more clearly written across the long epoch of human history than development. But however impressively the law of development summons us to reduce the Bible by eliminating all that has clearly become obsolete, we are summoned to the task in a no less impressive manner. But if loyalty to the Master demands, as it always demanded, a new and distinctly Christian Canon of the Scriptures, how is it that the Church has never regarded this demand? We have given them (non-Christian people) the sacred literature of ancient Israel and of the early church—an extensive, heterogenous library. The demand for this great reform has not yet been completely outlined. It would be approximately about one-twelfth the size of our Bible."

So this scholar (?) boldly proposes to throw away about eleven-twelfths of the Scriptures, and then attempts to cover up his infamy by saying, "They must all bo brought up to the standard of Jesus." This is simply throwing dust in the eyes of his readers; for our Lord placed the seal of His own approval upon the Scriptures of the Old Testament, and accepted and taught them as God's holy Word. As has been well said in a review of this article: "This man, with wicked hands, would destroy the Word of God. His work has one object, that is, to do away with the Lord Jesus Christ as the Son of God, revealed as such in both Testaments."

When the highest wisdom of a great denomination can send forth such foolish and wicked utterances as these, how well does it illustrate the statement of tho Apostle to the Gentiles, "That not many wise men after tho flesh * * * are called!" And much of the course of study our Bishops have unloaded upon the Methodist Episcopal Church is in harmony with the infidel teachings of the University of Chicago. What will the harvest be?

A HOLY TALK.

A missionary from South Africa said he one morning saw a converted African chieftain sitting under a palm tree, with his Bible open before him. Every now and then he cast his eyes on his Book and read a passage. Then he paused and looked up a little while, and his lips were seen to be in motion. Thus he continued, alternately to look down on the Scriptures and to turn his eyes upward toward Heaven.

The missionary passed by without disturbing the good man, but after a little while he mentioned to him what he had seen, and asked him why it was that sometimes he read and sometimes he looked up.

This was the African's reply: "I look down to the Book, and God speaks to me. Then I look up in prayer, and I speak to the Lord. So we keep up, this way, a holy talk with each other."

As I read the account of this touching little scene, the words of Psalm 27:8 flashed over me. This picture is but a mirror to reflect the eighth verse of the twenty-seventh Psalm: "When Thou saidst, Seek ye My face, my heart said unto Thee, Thy face, Lord, will I seek." First we see God talking to us; and then comes our talking to God.

One cannot carry on a conversation alone. If we wish the Lord to listen to us, we must listen to him. How many people tell the Lord what they wish to say to him, but do not listen to what he says to them? How can they expect God to answer their petitions, when they will not listen to his commands? Let us hear what God the Lord will speak to us.—Canadian Churchman.

UNSURPASSED HEROINES.

"There are over two thousand American Red Cross nurses at the front in France. All honor to these brave girls to whom war might bring horrors worse than death or wounds. When the Roll of Honor is put up in the church at home their names should be inscribed on it along with those of the soldiers."

"The Cross seen through the tears of penitent faith is the soul's only ground of peace and trust and hope. It is God's way to save and sanctify."

WAR CONDITIONS

— REFLECTED IN —

TELEPHONE SERVICE

Among the unforeseen conditions which the war has imposed upon us is the necessity of practically suspending the commercial development of our business.

Confronted with an unusual increase in the use of the telephone and a strong demand for new and additional service, we cannot accept or fill orders except subject to practically an indefinite delay.

This situation is due to the importance of conserving our supplies so that the government's requirements may be promptly met by giving the War Department service anywhere and at any time the request is made.

TWO GLASSES—REVISED VERSION.

There sat two glasses, filled to the brim,
On a rich man's table, rim to rim;
One was ruddy and red as blood—
The other was clear as the crystal flood;
The one was water—as you have guessed—
The other one—it must be confessed—
Was strawberry soda—for nothing stronger
Stands on the sideboard any longer.

CONGRESSIONAL ACTION NOW COMPLETE.

The folloiwng dispatch, sent out last week, announced the agreement of the United States Senate to accept the House's limit of seven years as the time for the acceptance by the States of the proposed prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution instead of its former limitation to six years:

"Washington, Dec. 18.—The proposed Constitutional amendment for national prohibition was to-day finally submitted by Congress to the States, for ratification or rejection within seven years.

"The Senate completed congressional action by accepting the House's amendment to the resolution of submission on a rising vote of 47 to 8 without a roll call.

"Senator Borah objected to accepting the House amendment, contending that Congress had no authority to specify the time in which the amendment is to be ratified and that the Constitution gives no authority for providing that prohibition shall become effective within one year after being accepted by the States.

" 'We have no such power as to say the amendment shall be ratified within seven years after being submitted to the States by Congress,' said he. 'It is either to be submitted to the States or not to be submitted at all. If it ever goes to the States, they can ratify it whenever they desire."

(The Editor of the Advocate is not a lawyer, but all the opinions on the question that he has heard expressed in past years by attorneys were in harmony with Senator Borah's contention, who is considered a very able legal authority. If Mr. Borah's position is correct, it will inure greatly to the advantage of the prohibitionists, as in that event they will have an indefinite time to secure the needed ratification by three-fourths of the States.—The Editor.)

TEXT OF THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The following is the text of the resolution pertaining to National prohibition passed by Congress last week and of the proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution relating thereto which is now before the country:

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives, That the following amendment to the Constitution be, and hereby is, proposed to the States, to become valid as a part of the Constitution when ratified by the Legislatures of the several States as provided by the Constitution:

"Article—Section 1. After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from, the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

"Section 2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

"Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress."

THE OUTLOOK AS SEEN BY A SECULAR DAILY.

(The New Orleans Times-Picayune, which has never been a supporter of the prohibition cause, recently discussed at considerable length the pending prohibition amendment to the National Constitution and the outlook for its adoption. We give below a somewhat extended extract from this interesting and suggestive utterance, which comes from outside the anti-saloon ranks.)

"There has always been a strong temperance sentiment in the country. The present war has greatly stimulated it, as it brought out the fact that drinking interfered, more or less, with army efficiency and that a country embarking in war has generally found it advisable to limit or restrict the consumption of liquor. Great Britain put on some restrictions, but not without much opposition; Russia went even further. In the United States, the Army and Navy Departments found it necessary to keep liquor out of the camps and to close big districts around them on the ground that drinking seriously affected the efficiency of the men. Thousands of saloons were closed by the Federal Government. This action greatly encouraged the prohibition element, who wanted to close or suppress all saloons whether we were at war or not as a consequence. In nearly all the recent local option and State liquor elections, there was a marked increase in the 'dry' vote.

Many of the saloon men have fanned this flame of opposition by their methods. While some obeyed the laws, hundreds of others mixed in local politics in the interest of their saloons, defied the Sunday or local option laws and violated them repeatedly. No attention was paid to the wishes of the people of a State or county who undertook to shut out intoxicants, and the 'jug and bottie' business flourished in violation of local statutes. This defiance of local demands and laws gave strength to the prohibition movement, and finally drew down on the liquor trade the hostiiity of Congress, which undertook to suppress the business and brought from the United States Supreme Court an adverse decision.

"The folly of these lawless men who never couid be made to understand that the control of the liquor traffic is under the police powers of the State or city practically without limitation led ali of those dealing in whiskey, wine and beer into their present troubles and is responsible for forcing the prohibition question into national politics, where no one imagined, a few years ago, it wouid ever find its way.

"The question is not settied yet by the action of Congress, and the prohibitionists will have to carry on a vigorous campaign to pass the amendment. This would have been deemed impossible a few years ago, but it is far easier to-day, as the American people think and act more swiftly than of old. For forty-three years no amendment to the Federal Constitution was adopted, but in 1913 we placed two new amendments on the statute book. Congress has given the States seven years in which to express their approval or disapproval. Within that time three-fourths of the States, or thirty-six out of the total of forty-eight, must pass and approve the amendment in both branches of their legislatures to make it effective. Twenty-six States already have state-wide prohibition, and they can be counted on to approve the amendment at an early day. There are, in addition, many States under local option, where a large proportion of the counties are dry, as in Texas. Altogether, in the non-prohibition States, a large majority of the counties, nearly two to one, are under prohibition, voted by their people, and which send prohibition members to the legisiatures.

Under these circumstances it is impossible to predict the result of this amendment, except to say that it will be determined largely by the conditions developing during the war, which has been a great stimulus to prohibition, and by the attitude of the liquor men themselves snd their ability to keep the lawless element which has brought such injury to the country and discredit to themselves, under thorough control and obedience to all our laws. With these large majorities in the Senate and House of more than two to one, the prohibitionists start off the struggle with much to encourage and strengthen their cause."

Through the will of the late Rev. George Buffington, of the Kentucky Conference, the General Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, has come into possession of property valued at $25,000 or more.

BROTHER UPTON SPEAKS.

Dear Doctor Meek: I want to tender you my personal thanks for your article giving the doings of the sub-committee of the Commission on Unification. I want further to thank you for the brave and manly stand you have taken all along relative to every question affecting Southern Methodism. For one, I feel most grateful to you. For the interests and defense of Southern Methodism, you have shown yourself our watchman on the tower and bulldog at the gate.

I state the case mildly when I say that, as a Methodist concerned, I am both surprised and disgusted at the propositions offered by the said sub-committee as a basis of unification. Surely that committee must consider us either a set of incompetents, not abie to understand the effect of such propositions and where they would put us, if accepted, or they must think us so down and out and so sweetiy submissive as to justify them in an early display of that spirit of autocratic domination that they wouid certainly exercise later. I am indeed surprised that those who consider themselves fair men, brave men, and withal OUR representatives, couid so far forget or lay aside these characteristics as to aliow themselves to offer such an insuit to the inteiiigence and such an affront to the self-respect and loyalty of the Southern Methodist peopie.

Possibly that committee was opposed to unification, and thought the best way to put a quietus on the whoie matter was to make propositions they knew would be deeply obnoxious to our inteiligence. If the M. E. Church is sincere in a desire for reai unity, why is she not wiiiing to offer or accept it on a fair basis? Wouid they have "peace at any price," or unification at any sacrifice by the Southern Methodist Church? For one, I am tired of the soothing-syrup dose of a senseless and sickiy sentimentaiity. We are aii tired of the gushing talk about conserving money and energy, about brotherly iove and dweliing in unity, while those who would soothe us are at the same time grappling at our throats, or, consciously or unconsciously, are aiding and abetting a propaganda that wouid resuit in the destruction of the Southern Methodist Church. It is high time for the unification people in both Churches either to put up the right thing or quiet down. So iong as it is proposed for us to agree to that which is tantamount to a fuii surrender of all rights, ail equalities, ali self-respect, all that we have been, are, or hope to be, even to dragging out our Lares and Penates—the household gods that are sacred to us—and piie them, too, upon the sacrificial aitar, just so iong wiii unification be impossible to Southern Methodism. The General Conference has the power to accept such a basis and such conditions and to refer the same to the Annual Conferences. The Annual Conferences may indorse it in spite of all the indignation and the protest of the Southern Methodist peopie. Then and there wiii be sounded the death kneli of the Southern Methodist Church. But is any one so obtuse as to think that two miiions of peopie wiii submit to such a compiete absorption? Nay, verily. A sacred trust may be betrayed; dishonest advantage may be taken of some hypothetical skeleton of legal technicality, and thereby a Church may be robbed of an institution; but when it comes to betraying the trust and sacred rights of miiiions of people, and stripping these millions of peopie of what has cost them their labors, their sacrifices, their blood, and their hearts' best love, 1 teii you Southern Methodists wiii resent such a betrayal, and they wiil pour out their righteous indignation upon those who have betrayed their confidence and sacrificed them. 1 am confident that a strenuous effort has been made to send delegates to the General Conference who will do aii they can to bring about unification on almost any basis. I may be in error, but 1 think that I am speaking advisediy. What I said before, I repeat. Let the question be put to a vote of the members, every Southern Methodist being a qualified elector. Nothing short of that wouid be just.

Yours for right and for Southern Methodism.

THINK OF OTHERS.

"Some children roam the fields and hills,
And others work in noisy mills;
Some dress in silks, and dance and play,
While others drudge their lives away;
Some glow with health and bound with song,
And some must suffer all day long.

"Which is your lot, my girl and boy?
Is it a life of ease and joy?
Ah, if it is, its glowing sun
The poorer life should shine upon.
Make glad one little heart to-day,
And help one burdened child to play."

—Mary Mapes Dodge.

CHESTER'S NEW YEAR'S EVE.

The streets were gay with holiday cheer. Chester found it hard to keep from skipping and prancing for very joy. And who could wonder? Skates at home, and books and games and sled (all brand new seven days ago), besides a big, big turkey ready to stuff, and an immense plum pudding and any quantity of goodies.

As if this were not enough, there was the crowning joy that was going to happen this very day—Gladys Raymond's birthday party.

Gladys was Chester's very best friend, to begin with, and the prettiest little girl that ever wore dainty white dresses—at least Chester would have said so. And because her birhtday came on New Year's eve, she was to have old Father Time himself—or, at all events, some one who looked like him—to distribute to her guests the nicest boxes made like hour-glasses and filled with chocolates.

Chester knew about the plans, because he and Gladys were such very good friends. Why, he had even helped her address the invitations. He had wondered then how he could wait, and now the time had really come and he was on his way, all dressed up in his very best suit and collar, gloves and his shiny buttoned shoes.

He stopped before a big plate glass window to see the fine things. The big store stood at the corner of an alley, and Chester had hardly stopped before he heard something that sounded like a sob. He pricked up his ears. Who in the world could be crying this happy day? There it was again, not very loud, but dreadfully sad among the gay sounds all about.

Chester stepped to the corner and glanced down the alley. At first he didn't see anybody, but soon there was a movement, and then another sob from behind a packing box. He went up to it, and there, in a heap, sat a poor little ragged waif, with an armful of afternoon papers and a broken crutch beside him.

"Why, hello! What's the matter?" said Chester.

The newsboy looked up and blurted out:

"Stocked up heavy with this New Year's edition, an' got mixed up in the jam out there in the street, an'—an' a wagon ran over my crutch, an' now I can't sell anything—an' I paid my last copper for 'em."

Chester was very sorry for the boy.

"Why can't you sell 'em without your crutch, boy?" he asked.

The only answer was an empty, flopping, ragged little trouser-leg dragged out to view. Chester sat suddenly down on the curb. That trouser leg was just about the size of his own.

"Oh, I say, can't your father get you another crutch? I'll—I'll go get him," he said, trying to forget that it was time for the party, and that Gladys had told him not to be late.

"I hain't got a father—or anybody else. If I can't earn a new crutch I'll never get one, or my supper, or a place to sleep," and the grimy little face went down once more on the tattered sleeves.

For at least five minutes Chester sat there thinking hard. Then he said:

"Give 'em here, boy; I'll sell 'em every one before I stop. I was goin' to a party, but I've got my father and my mother and my legs—all of 'em. Lean on me, and I'll help you round to Pietro's. He'll let you sit by his fire till I come back. We're good friends, Pietro and I; he sells me lots of peanuts. Lean harder, boy; I'm awful strong."

It was quite dark when Chester got home that night. The new gloves were very much the worse for wear, the shiny buttoned shoes were splashed with mud.

"Some fellows pitched into me because I was a greeny," he explained, "but they didn't keep me from selling 'em, every one. It took pretty long, but I promised Stump I would, so I had to. Pietro's going to keep him all night. I told him my father'd pay him, and buy Stump a new crutch, and my father and I'd be round to see him first thing after breakfast to-morrow morning."

"Yes'm, I missed the party. Yes'm, I hated to like sixty, but, of course, a fellow couldn't be mean enough to think about the party when I had things and he didn't."

That was the way Chester learned his first real lesson of unselfishness, and he never forgot it.

Gladys was rather cross with Chester, and his hour-glass of chocolates never came to join the left-over Christmas goodies. But somehow Chester was happier than a dozen birthday parties rolled into one could have made him.—Unidentified.

WHAT BECOMES OF THE DAYS?

"Where do the days come from, mother?" asked Robert Carr one morning, as he was looking over some books.

"The days come from God," answered his mother quietly. "A new day comes to us each morning. It is God's gift to us. Each day comes new and clean and fresh, so that we may fill it full of golden deeds, happy thoughts, and kind words. Nobody's days are alike; your day is different from mine, and mine is not the same as yours. I can't fill your day for you. I can help you and father can help you, but that is all we can do. Your day is your very own—God's gift to you—and you must fill it yourself in your own way."

Robert was very quiet for a few minutes, and then, "Where do the days go, mother?" he asked.

"They go back to God," answered mother. "They go back to Him just as we have filled them. Each morning comes to us like a clean, white sheet of paper, and at night it goes back to God, filled with the pictures and the stories that we have lived into it."

Robert stood and looked out of the window for a long time before he spoke again. His mother saw that he was thinking, and she did not interrupt him. At length he turned with a sigh and looked up at his mother and smiled.

"What is it, dear, that troubles you?" asked his mother.

"I was just thinking," answered Robert, gravely, "that I wish I could get back some of the days I have lived. I am sorry for every ugly thing that I ever put into any of my days that went back to God. I didn't think about it."

Mother understood just how he felt, for she very often felt so herself.

"Yes, dear," she said, as she kissed the troubled face, "mother understands and loves you, and I am sure that God understands, too, and will forgive and go on loving you just as mother does, only more, because He understands better. I am sure it will help us all, though, to stop and think each morning that the day is the gift of God, and that at night it will be folded up and sent back to God for Him to see how we have spent His day."

"I am sure it is going to help me to think about it," said Robert, "and I mean to try to have my days better than they have ever been."—The Sunbeam.

NOT FAR TO GO.

Tom and Georgie were in trouble. They had started out bravely with a load of apples in their small wagon, which Mrs. Casey had promised to buy, and all had gone well until a wheel struck a snag of some kind, and off it went.

Of course there was "something decidedly like a spill," and two boys stood looking at each other, not knowing what to do.

"We could gather up the apples," said Tom, "but we couldn't carry them if we tried. If we can't get that wheel mended, we can't go on, that's all."

"And we can't mend it ourselves!" said Georgie, dolefully.

But suddenly Tom's face brightened, and he exclaimed, "Why, Georgie, there's grandpa crossing the street down there. He'll fix things, and we can catch him in a minute. It isn't far to go." And off they both ran, not afraid to leave things as they were for a few moments, for they had not far to go.

"I'm so glad you were so near!" said Georgie, afterward, looking gratefully at grandpa after he had repaired the damage done, and the boys were ready to set forth again.

"Yes," said grandpa, "when you want help, it is a good thing to have it near."

When you think of it, isn't that one of the most important things of all, to have the help just at hand? What a comfort it is not to have to go far, when one is in trouble! It is always so with heavenly help. It is near. Never forget that God says that he is not far from every one of us.—The Presbyterian.

SHE WASN'T SO SURE.

He was a very unruly youngster. A writer in the New York Sun says that he had not been in the car five minutes before all the women present and most of the men were explaining to anybody who would listen what they would do with the boy if he belonged to them. To the general babel there was one woman who contributed nothing. She was a gentle, gray-haired body, who remained unruffled by the small tempest raging.

"If that child belonged to me," said the woman beside her, "I'd make him mind if I had to half kill him, wouldn't you?"

"I don't know said the quiet woman. "I don't know what I should do."

"You don't!" exclaimed the positive woman. "Well, I know. But then, maybe you are not used to children? Maybe you never had any of your own?"

"Oh, yes," said the little woman. I brought up thirteen. That's why I don't know what I should do."

It is stated that the Methodist Episcopal Church had a decrease in the Atlanta and New Orleans Episcopal areas during the past year.

OUR ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN.

At the meeting of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate last October a plan was started to put on an aggressive campaign for 4000 new subscriptions: 1500 from each of the two Mississippi Conferences, and 1000 from the Louisiana Conference. This movement was endorsed by the three Conferences, and an apportionment of the number expected of it was made to each presiding elder's district, with a request that each Board of District stewards should indicate to each pastoral charge its pro rata of new subscribers upon a basis regarded as equitable. This has been, or soon will be, done, and everything will be ready for the campaign to go forward. The Louisiana and North Mississippi Conferences named January 20 to 27 as "Advocate Week," when it is desired that a vigorous canvass shall be made in every charge to secure new subscriptions and the renewal of old ones; and the Mississippi Conference named the first two weeks in February as the time for a similar effort throughout its bounds.

The Publisher and the Publishing Committee, instead of advancing the price of the Advocate to meet war-time conditions, preferred to try to stem the tide by giving it a larger circulation, the only other alternative. So this call is a most urgent one, and we earnestly appeal to every friend of the Conference organ to rally to its support in this period of extreme exigency. May we count on you, dear brother?

Notes.

Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, cheers us with the following message: "I shall endeavor to make 'Advocate Week' all it should be in my territory."

Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis District, says: "We hope to roll up our number of new subscriptions." Thank you, Brother Holder.

AN INTERESTING BIT OF HISTORY.

The term Protestant is now used throughout the world, but there are probably quite a few who have never taken time to acquaint themselves with the exact historical origin of the word. The following inquiry and answer bearing on this subject, that recently appeared in the New Orleans Times-Picayune, will doubtless prove of interest at this time which marks the four-hundredth anniversary of great Reformation that centered about Martin Luther:

"'Kindly inform me when the term Protestant was first applied to those who do not conform to the doctrines of the Roman Catholic and Greek Catholic Churches, and against what teachings of those Churches the protests were made.'

"H. J. R., Jackson, Miss.

"The name Protestant, first applied to the Lutherans who protested at the Diet of Spires in 1529, came to be applied to Lutherans generally, and afterwards was extended to Calvinists and other opponents of the papacy in countries where the papacy had been formerly in power.

"The Diet of Spires denounced the Reformation, and the essential principles involved in the protest of the Lutherans against the decree of the Diet were: (a) That the Roman Catholic Church could not judge the Reformed Churches because they were no longer in communion with her; (b) that the authority of the Bible is supreme, and above that of councils and Bishops; (c) that the Bible is not to be interpreted according to tradition, but is to be interpreted by means of itself."

DR. CANNON ON UNIFICATION.

We are reproducing this week an editorial utterance on the question of Unification from the pen of Rev. James Cannon, Jr., D.D., the editor of the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate. Dr. Cannon is one of the ablest and most forceful leaders in Southern Methodism and what he has to say on any subject merits careful consideration. As will be seen, he favors the unification of the two Episcopal Methodisms in the United States, but is not willing, as some among us seem to be, to take it upon just any kind of terms.

The Doctor's position that only such a form of unification as would keep the Methodists of the South substantially united, is desirable, is, we think, thoroughly sound and wise. The whole argument in favor of bringing the two Churches together is predicated upon the assumption that such a consummation would lessen the friction and duplication of effort now existing and bring increased harmony and co-operation in Christian work. Therefore, if the uniting of them would fail to achieve this end—if it can come only in such a form as would stir up discord and division in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, it is difficult to see upon what reasonable and Christian ground it could be justified. The people of this section have had a striking object lesson of what may result from seeking to effect Church union by high-pressure methods. The Cumberland Presbyterian Church was thus rent half in twain, being thereby nearly ruined, while the Northern Presbyterian Church was but little helped. A repetition of that mournful history among Southern Methodists would, indeed, be a deplorable tragedy. Our denomination has had too splendid a part in the religious upbuilding of the South thus to weaken, if not wreck itself, and surrender to other communions the sublime opportunities that now lie out before it. The chief thing that should be considered in the determination of this vital issue is the sentiment of the great masses of our people. Nothing could be more unwise than for a few persons in influential positions to conclude that we ought to have unification and undertake to force it, regardless of what may be the will of the vast body of our membership, who have no voice or vote in our Annual and General Conferences. The rank and file of Southern Methodists are not yet awake concerning this question and have given but little expression to their views, but what the convictions of the people of the South are, as they have been embodied in the laws that they have enacted and the institutions that they have builded, is well known; and well may any Commission or General Conference beware of undertaking to ignore or override them.

Dr. Cannon's statement as to why the Negro Methodists should be placed in a separate Church, holding fraternal relations with the united white Church, is, in our opinion, a remarkably strong and convincing one. As will be noted, he shows that the logic of history and success, the practically unanimous sentiment of our people, the sentiment of a large majority of the Negro Methodists of the country, and that of a considerable contingent in the Northern Methodist Church are all on the side of such an arrangement.

And since the action that our last General Conference took bearing on this matter was at the direct instance of Dr. Cannon, who inspired this phase of the Committee's report, his utterance ought to put forever at rest the question as to whether that body meant to declare for having the Negroes in a separate and independent Church. The effort of some of our ultra-unionist Commissioners to torture that deliverance into meaning something else has not been at all to their credit. Indeed, it was not until it began to be felt that there was need to break away from the Oklahoma City enactment at this point that anything to the conrary was even so much as hinted at by any one.

To be sure, Dr. Cannon speaks of the possible alternative of placing the Negroes in some kind of missionary relation "acceptable to both the Northern and Southern Churches," but he does claim the sanction of the General Conference for such a procedure. Nor is this what he considers wisest and best, and we infer from the tenor of his utterance that he has no great faith in such an adjustment being effected.

We think that Dr. Cannon's insistence that the Negroes in the Methodist Episcopal Church shall be plainly and unequivocally dealt with is much to be commended—especially so, since there is a report current that an effort is to be made to gather them into a regional jurisdiction, with a whittled down and disproportionate representation in the white General Conference, with a view to creating such dissatisfaction among them that they will ultimately want to betake themselves into a Church of their own. The adoption of tactics so disingenuous would be unfair to the Negroes involved and utterly unworthy of the representatives of two great Christian denominations. Moreover, to embark upon so uncertain a course might result in deceiving and ensnaring our own people. What is done by the Commissioners should be open and above board, and if we enter into a union with the Church, North, it should be upon terms that are definite and explicit, and not upon conditions that involve conjectural expectations.

We scarcely need to say that we do not fully concur in what seems to be Dr. Cannon's view, that if the Negroes in the Northern Church were gathered into a separate and independent ecclesiasticism, it would not be difficult to surmount all other obstacles in the way of the unification of the two Methodisms. As we see it, the Negro would still be in the South, in which section his future status in the social and political order would have to be worked out, and the Southern Church could hardly under the circumstances merge with a denomination nearly twice as large, holding such views as the Methodist Episcopal Church does, without stable and adequate means of self-protection. So to arrange the Regional Conferences as to boundaries and fix their constitutional relations to the General Conference that the needed protection would be indestructibly guaranteed to the smaller body and the endangered people that it would represent, and also satisfy the Northern Church, would, in our opinion, be a stupendous task. As we have already shown in these columns, the arrangement now pending before the Joint Commission on Unification would practically amount to a complete surrender of the Church, South, to the domination of the Northern Methodists. Of course, some other more satisfactory adjustment might be evolved in the deliberations, but the fact that it has not yet been done, after six years of planning, we think undoubtedly indicates that the undertaking is a most perplexing one.

There are other difficulties of which we might speak, but we forbear for the present. We have been pleased to see Dr. Cannon's vigorous and illuminating discussion, in which we think he has rendered Southern Methodism a distinct service.

MR. ROCKEFELLER AND THE BAPTISTS.

The followng is from the Church News Association (New York):

"Baptists have performed a distinct service, it is said, for all churches during the wor. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., started the movement, although it is known he did not so intend. Speaking at the Baptist Social Union of New York Mr. Rockefeller called for a Baptist denomination on new lines, in which most things that were old should be forgotten. He declared primarily for service, but added that in the rendering of it forms of baptism are unimportant. Immediately the Rev. G. W. McPherson, a well known Baptist evangelist, the Rev Dr. Frank M. Goodchild, of Central Baptist Church, New York, and the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, a former Rockefeller pastor of Cleveland, entered into the controversy. Hard names were called, and charges of religious slacker tendencies were made. Mr. Rockefeller was said to have no religion worth mentioning, and invited to get out of the Baptist denomination."

This interesting piece of Church news leaves us somewhat in a quandary as to which side of the controversy described we are on. We agree with Mr. Rockefeller that the form of baptism is a matter of no great importance and we are very much disposed to the view that it might help our Baptist brethren to broaden out somewhat; but we must confess that it challenges our admiration to see that there were men present on this occasion with strong enough convictions about religious matters to tell a multi-millionaire that if he did not like the teachings of their Church he ought to get out. This is better than fawning at the feet of men of large means as some churchmen are given to doing.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. M. Alford, writing from Mangham, La., says: "I am well pleased with my new charge. The outlook is hopeful."

Have you joined the Red Cross? If not, you should do so at once. We must prepare to care for our soldier boys when they need nursing and medical attention.

In a note to the Editor last week, Bishop Hoss stated that his health was continuing to improve. This will be gratifying news to thousands within the bounds of Southern Methodism.

Our First Church at Baton Rouge, La., has advanced the pastor's salary from $2000 to $2400. This church is being served by Rev. C. A. Batle, who is now entering upon his fourth year.

Rev. J. H. Moore thus reports, under date of December 20: "We have just arrived at Gloster, our new field of labor, and the people have given us a nice reception. The outlook is encouraging, and we hope to have the situation in hand soon."

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not elsewhere been made, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Mrs. Bettie Diggs, Acona, Miss., 10; Brother J. A. Regan, Humphreys, Miss., 4.

A correspondent sends us the following wedding notice: "Miss Emma Hooper and Mr. Eddie Spence, of East Baton Rouge Parish, were married at the Amite River bridge, near Baton Rouge, on December 18, at 8 o'clock p. m., Rev. J. S. Rutledge officiating."

Rev. Thomas Mills, of Pickes, Miss., in a business letter to our office, appends the following note: "We have reached our new home and have been received in a royal manner. We have never been thrown with a more cordial and lovable people. Everything indicates a good year."

A note from Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh orders his Advocate sent to Biloxi, Miss. We are pleased to know that our esteemed brother, who, since he left New England, has been tarrying at Huntsville, Ala., is again near New Orleans, and we hope soon to meet him face to face.

Sister Laura L. DeLap, of Natchez, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, takes time to add a few kindly words concerning the paper, which are highly appreciated. May Heaven's richest blessings be vouchsafed to her and the other inmates of her home during the coming year.

"We are on the job, and are getting started off nicely, though the extremely cold weather shut us in for a time." So writes Rev. E. B. Daniel, of Cedar Grove, La. Brother Daniel calls for some extra copies of the Advocate, which means, of course, that he is interested in the circulation of the Conference organ.

It is stated that a plan has been agreed upon by the Southern Methodist pastors in New Orleans by which there will be an exchange of pulpits on the second Sunday night in each month. It is proposed in this way to let all the Methodists of the city become acquainted with the several ministers of our Church serving charges here.

Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge (La.) District, writes: "I am now snugly housed in the district parsonage and will soon begin work." The Methodists in the Baton Rouge District are fortunate in having Brother May for their leader. He does not spare himself in promoting the interests of the Church and Kingdom.

Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis (Miss.) District, in forwarding his first round of appointments, says: "I have been busily at work since the Annual Conference, except for a few days when I was sick and shut in. After Christmas every day will be taken. I think that we are getting well started now. I hope that things will run smoothly."

Mrs. R. F. Harrell writes as follows from Waterproof, La.: "We are now about settled in our new home. We found here a comfortable, well-furnished parsonage, and a very cordial, hospitable people." We feel sure that the Methodists of the Waterproof charge will be delighted with Brother and Sister Harrell when they have come to know them.

We are indebted to Rev. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Greenville (Miss.) District, for the following item of news: "Rev. W. R. Lott, the popular pastor at Merigold, Miss., is the first preacher in the district to report concerning his assessments for Home Missions and Delegates to the General Conference, both claims being paid in full." Good for Brother Lott!

From Ackerman, Miss., Rev. C. A. Parks writes: "The people of this charge have received us very kindly. We are domiciled in the parsonage, and, while housekeeping is a new experience with us, we are thoroughly enjoying it. The people of Ackerman gave us a 'pounding' a few nights ago, and from the way things look they do not expect us to 'Hooverize.' The outlook for a good year seems promising."

We take the following from a letter to our office from Rev. A. T. McIlwain, of Senatobia, Miss.: "We landed here on Saturday, December 1, and we find that we are in a fine town and among choice people. All the other churches dismissed their congregations last night, that they might worship with us, and we had a large crowd in attendance at our service. There is a broad field here, and we are pleased with the outlook.'

We acknowledge, with thanks, the reception from our church at Deerford, La., of an invitation to the union Christmas service to be held in that community, on December 25. The service was arranged to consist of appropriate exercises by the young people, beginning at 10:30 o'clock a. m., and a sermon at 11 a. m. by Rev. S. E. Wasson. This invitation was happily worded, and had attached to it a small holly leaf. We dare say that the occasion was an enjoyable and profitable one.

December 19 marked the tenth wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes, of New Orleans. Quite a number of members of the Carrollton Avenue Church, which Brother Holmes once served as pastor and near which he now resides, called to pay their respects in honor of the occasion, bringing with them a considerable assortment of tin ware. Mrs. Holmes was a New Orleans young lady, having been reared in the section of the city known as Carrollton.

Millsaps College will hereafter have a quarterly bulletin—a capital idea. The first issue is on our table, brimful of interesting matter. We congratulate President Watkins and his co-workers on this forward movement, which will doubtless prove to be greatly beneficial to the College. One of the most interesting features of this first number is an article by Prof. Harrell, entitled "Millsaps Men in the Service of Their Country," which gives a long list of sons of the institution who have been called to the colors.

We take from a New Orleans paper the following dispatch: "Dr. J. C. Ballard, of Biloxi, Miss., who was assigned to a medical corps at Honolulu with the rank of captain several months ago, has been promoted to the rank of major and assigned to duties at Fort Ruger, Honolulu. Major Ballard saw service in the Philippines." Dr. Ballard, as he is known in these parts, is an active Christian worker, being at the time that he re-entered the military service the lay leader of the Seashore District.

Mrs. A. A. Brewer, of Liberty, Miss., renews her subscription to the Advocate and thus writes: "We are urged by the government to 'Hooverize' and economize, but I cannot begin with my Church paper. I passed my 74th birthday on December 14, and I cannot tell how long I have been a subscriber to the Advocate; but I now feel that my family need its weekly visits more than ever. We have been vitally interested in the question of unification, and are with you on that issue, which we hope will soon be settled for good."

Rev. L. L. McCain, our pastor at Hammond, La., was in the city last Monday, and paid the Advocate office a visit. He reports that "the Hammond Methodist Church has just completed its most prosperous year. There were seventy additions to the Church during the year. More than twice as much was paid for all purposes as in any preceding year. Our Hammond Church enjoys the distinction of being one of the two churches in the Baton Rouge District to pay everything in full, First Church, Baton Rouge being the other. Our denomination is the only Protestant denomination of thirteen operating there a self-supporting church, judging from all information available."

TWENTY YOUNG MINISTERS TO BE EDUCATED.

To the Methodists within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference:

With the assistance of a few princely laymen, we shall inaugurate a plan to keep at least twenty young ministers at college, giving each $150 a session. We are maturing the plans so that we will have the men and the cash by September, 1918. Our desire is that each young minister assisted shall be able to graduate. I shall give at least eight years to this work. By God's help, this shall he the work of my humble life. I am very happy over the prospect. Prepare to help us.

I. W. COOPER.

Brookhaven, Miss., December 17, 1917.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

(Rev. A. W. Turner, Supt. of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, sends us the following letter from a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, with a request for its publication. The brother in question has certainly set a fine example for others. We should now rally to the support of the Anti-Saloon League in this State, with a view to getting the national prohibition amendment adopted by the State Legislature.—Editor of Advocate.)

"Rev. A. W. Turner, Shreveport, La.

"Dear Brother Turner: "You will find enclosed for the Anti-Saloon League $3.50. The Conference being liberal to me this year, I desire to show my appreciation of their kindness hy adding some more to my usual contribution to the cause you represent.

"I pray that you may have abundant success in your noble work. Sincerely yours."

AS DR. LOVETT SEES IT.

Pretty soon all of the Annual Conferences of our Church will have heen held except the Baltimore, which comes along in March of next year. It is noticeable how few, comparatively, have been the memorials sent up to the General Conference. Among those that have been passed hy Annual Conferences are some that concern matters on which the General Conference has acted. It is not probable that these will stand any better chance next may than they have in the past. It is also noticeable that last year almost every Conference had something to say in the form of resolutions concerning naification. Some of the papers adopted were very colorless and really meant nothing except that the bodies adopting them stood by the Oklahoma recommendations concerning unification. At this round of the Conferences, so far as we now recall, the question of unification has not been brought up. The interest in that matter has been of late months confined chiefly to the columns of newspapers and the mention made has been mostly along the lines of prophecy as to what is going to take place. It looks very much as if the plans proposed and agreed upon by the Joint Commission will not go. Some other plan may, but the plan agreed upon now will hardly be favored by either the Methodist Episcopal or the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. And as we have more than once before said, the Negro will not be the only obstacle in the way of the accomplishment of what some of the members of the Joint Commission desire. When the matter is pnt squarely before the Churches some men will hear voices they have not heard. If out of the present status either Church emerges without irritations that will seriously hurt, it will he cause for much thanksgiving.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A GREAT RECORD.

The Salvation Army, which has just completed a drive for $200,000 for war work, will open another campaign in January for a million dollars. Each State will be called upon for a quota and good prospects are announced. In the last drive it was stated that the mail carriers had gathered $47,000 of the $200,000 secured.

THE OBJECTS OF THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

Briefly stated, the object of the Club is to knock the bottom out of piano prices without knocking the Quality out of the Pianos. Cheap instruments, as ordinarily marketed, are unfortunately cheap in Quality as well as in Price. The difficult problem which confronted the founders of the Club was "How can we supply 'Quality' Pianos to our Club members at 'Cheap Prices?" The problem would have staggered the average piano dealer who sells pianos in the same old way that his father and grandfather sold them.

The Club has proven a tremendous success because its organizers had faith in the power of the principle of co-operation, intelligently and honorably conducted. They knew that quite a large part of the money paid for pianos represented waste, pure and simple. They therefore built their plans with a view to cutting out the waste in marketing pianos, for they knew that the piano-buyer was paying for that waste.

If your home needs a good Piano or Player-Piano you can make a tremendous saving by clubbing your order with those of ninety-nine other members in a big wholesale factory transaction which will give you the lowest price and the most convenient terms that are possible under and considerations. Write for your copy of the Club's catalogue, which contains full particulars, descriptions of the numerous styles of instruments and letters of commendation from those who have secured their instruments through the Club in former years. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club, Atlanta, Ga.

Note: In addition to the numerous styles of new Pianos and Player-Pianos, we are now able to offer Club members some rare bargains in used instruments which have been thoroughly renewed in our Atlanta Repair Factory. Write for descriptive price list if interested.—Adv.

Mrs. ANNA R. SMITH, wife of W. S. Smith, was born on July 17, 1867, and departed this life on October 25, 1917. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1876. She leaves a husband and seven children to mourn her departure. Mrs. Smith was loved by all who knew her. She had been in failing health for several years. No one had more to live for than this pure, noble woman. Sister Smith was a public-spirited woman, having interested herself in the advancement of the public welfare and in the success of every worthy cause. She was an ardent Methodist. She loved her Church and did much to extend the kingdom of God. Her days are numbered, but her work is not ended. It will "follow." We have buried the frail body of our sainted dead and beloved friend, but the music of her useful and beautiful life can never be silenced. Our aching hearts go out in tender sympathy to the deceased husband and children. May the God she loved and worshiped comfort and sustain them in this sad hour of trial!

Her pastor,
R. H. BARR.

ALTON TUCKER MILLICAN was born on October 11, 1902, near Deerford, La., and died on September 23, 1917. He possessed a patient, sunny disposition, and had many friends of his own age, among whom he was a general favorite; but he was never boisterous or rude. There was a quiet dignity about him and a manliness far beyond his years. He had been reared almost in the shadow of the Deerford Methodist Church, and was a member of the Sunday school, and a Boy Scout. He had in him the elements of success. He had already captured some fine prizes at agricultural fairs. His was a life of quiet helpfulness. He did his part in life manfully and well. We laid his body away in the family lot in the Deerford cemetery, amid a host of sorrowing friends and loved ones. His patrol of Boy Scouts were the pallbearers. His going away grieves our hearts, for we miss the brightness of his presence and his manly little form and face, but we comfort one another with the thought that he is with the Master. He leaves his mother, four sisters, and a brother, with a host of friends and relatives, to mourn their loss. May God in his abundant mercy comfort them!

His friend and pastor,
J. B. FULTON.

"WHO IS TO BLAME?"

Having been a member of the Louisiana Conference for ten years, and having been a close observer and student of human nature, the above question has come to my mind hundreds of times. That our Church is falling far short of her duty in Louisiana, I believe no one will douht, and that there are thousands of souls being lost every year because of this fact, I think all will admit.

Our system of Church government is the best in existence, hut it is very greatly abused. There are often unrest and dissatisfaction among the laity and ministry. Is this right? Should it be? Is there a remedy?

To the first question, I should say it is wholly wrong.

To the second, let me venture the assertion that hy all means it should not he; and to the third question, I verily helleve there is a remedy.

Who is to blame? Some, for example, will say our Bishops are to blame; others are inclined to put the blame on our presiding elders. I don't helieve either the Bishops or presiding elders are very much at fault. I think that the appointments are made hy the Bishops and presiding elders with no other thought than to do the hest they can under the existing conditions, hoping to advance the kingdom of our Lord.

I suppose that while I am writing this article, Bishop Murrah is reading the appointments of the Louisiana Conference. And woe be unto him and his cabinet when they have read and heard from them! Some preachers will feel sorely afflicted. They will, no doubt, think that the Bishop and his cabinet have made many mistakes, and have been unjust to many a pastor, all of which, I think, is untrue.

But who is to hlame? I am persuaded that the chief reason why our Methodism is failing to do her duty in advancing the kingdom of our Lord is that neither the laity nor ministry of our Church are not as pious as they should be. Where is the layman who prays daily for his pastor, and who does his best to help the pastor in his work? Are there not too many laymen who look for the shortcomings and failures of their pastor, and who, when they discover a mistake, run to Brother A. B. and others and speak of it in an unbrotherly way? And when the presiding elder comes around, are there not some who go to him with complaints against the pastor, and yet who, when they meet the pastor, are all smiles—everything is lovely and harmonious, and the pastor is the greatest fellow in the land? And does not the pastor sometimes, after listening to the flattery of the king official of his charge, go away patting himself on the hack, feeling assured that he is doing very great work? Poor hlind man! He fails to detect the deceit that is heing shown.

Again, have not instances been known where the stewards made a hard pull at the end of the year, and who, after everything was paid in full, bragged on the pastor, telling him he ought to return by all means; and yet they made it a point to see the presiding elder or write him and his colleagues at Conference that it would never do to send Brother A. back?

Just here is the only criticism I would make, if any, of our presiding elders. I sometimes think it would be best if they would make the officials talk to the pastors as they do to them.

But I verily helieve that practically all of the trouble will he over when we come to the point where we, as pastor and laymen, can work together, understanding each other, praying for each other, loving one another and doing good one to the other.

If we he hrethren, why not work together as such. Hypocrisy and flattery will never advance the kingdom of our Lord. Souls are never saved hy the laymen of our Church making the pastors as Jullus Caesar, or Christ, and themselves playing the part of Brutus or Judas Iscariot.

Brethren of the minlstry and the laity, the inevitahle has heen done in our Louisiana Conference. Let us as pastors not blame the good Bishops and his cahinet, but go to our fields of labor, have an understanding with our officials, then pray and lahor, and have faith in God, as if every unsaved man in our charge depended on us. May our good Lord abundantly hless us during the coming year!

Brethren, pray for me.
Yours fraternally,
F. R. POWER.

SELF DEFENSE

DEFEAT BACKACHE AND KIDNEY TROUBLE WITH ANURIC.

Many people in this section, as elsewhere, have suffered from rheumatism and kidney trouble and have found Anuric to be the most successful remedy to overcome these painful and dangerous ailments.

The lucky people are those who have suffered, but who are now well because they heeded Nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that wonderful new discovery of Dr. Pierce's called "Anuric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as Bright's disease, diabetes or stone in the bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions you should take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal take Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of An-u-ric, as are many of your neighbors.

Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package.

SYLACAUGA, ALA.—"I have used the Anuric Tablets for the kidneys and they surely did give good results. I have also used the 'Pleasant Pellets' for the liver and they have done me a great deal of good. I can recommend Doctor Pierce's medicine as mighty fine." —G. A. RAGSDALE.

ATHENS, GA.—"I had been complaining with my back for 10 years and had tried a great many remedies. Of course, I was not completely down but it was very painful through my spine. I tried Anuric and found complete relief. Now I can lift 100 lbs. and over, where before I could scarcely get up when I stooped to tie my shoe."—J. W. ANDERSON, 347 Augusta Ave.

CLEANS THE BLOOD TONES THE NERVES

The gratifying results attending the faithful use of the new medicinal combination, Hood's Sarsaparilla before eating and Peptiron after eating, are seen in purer blood, stronger nerves, improved condition of the whole system.

They are results that make this course of treatment the most economical for sufferers from impure, impoverished blood, weak, unsteady nerves—no other accomplishes so much for each cent expended.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron aid each other, and to take both is to derive a four-fold benefit.

If a laxative is needed in connection with them, the gentle and thorough Hood's Pills should be used.

Sunday School

NEW TEXT BOOKS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Japan is to be the special subject for missionary lessons and programs in the seventeen thousand Sunday schools in Southern Methodism in 1918. A series of three text books, each covering a quarter's work, has been prepared for this purpose and will be widely used. "Japan, the Key to the East," is the book for Seniors: "Heroes of Faith in Japan" is for Intermediates; and "Boys and Girls of an Island Empire" will delight the Juniors.

Expense and labor have not been spared in the production of these studies. Dr. Pell, of Richmond, Va., the well known Sunday school writer and commentator, was employed to produce them, and spent months in collecting the necessary data and putting it in the most striking and attractive form. There has been prepared also a book of programs for primaries entitled "About Litle Folks in Japan," which will be invaluable in laying the foundations of missionary interest in the hearts of the little tots.

The books for Seniors and Intermediates are 20 cents each, pupils and teachers using the same book. Those for Juniors and Primaries are 10 cents each, and 25 cents for Teachers' Handbooks to correspond. No class or Sunday school will make a mistake in substituting one or more of these books for one quarter of the regular lessons. Last year a similar series on China was studied and more than 20,000 copies were sold. A much wider use of the series on Japan is expected. They are printed and sold by Smith & Lamar, our publishing agents.

"A Handful of Facts About Japan" is prepared for the use of missionary workers, Sunday school officers and teachers. It is for free distribution. Write the Board of Missions, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Calendar for the Sunday School.

A beautiful and attractive calendar, setting forth Japan as the Sunday school field for 1918, has been prepared for our seventeen thousand Sunday schools and will be mailed to each before the beginning of the new year. The Board of Missions searched everywhere to secure the most beautiful pictures of Japanese scenes, and one of these choice illustrations will appear on each page of the calendar. This calendar will meet a long felt need. It will call attention to all special days in the Sunday school—Mothers' Day, Children's Day, Rally Day, Missionary Day, Promotion Day, Christmas, Easter, etc. It will tell what special literature and supplies are available for use on these special days and where they may be had. On every page will appear a statement of some missionary need to which Sunday schools may make their contributions. These should be frequently read and emphasized. Home Mission Day for the Mexicans in Texas will also have special attention. The calendar will tell us of the needs of that great company of people and how the Sunday school can help. It is desired that every school make large use of the calendar and that it may bring a pointed missionary message to two millions of people each month.

IT MAY BE SO.

A certain old colored man was complaining bitterly of the extravagance of his wife. "Dat ole woman," said he, "is allus askin' fo' money. She is de mos' 'stravagant woman dat ever lived. Ev'ry day she want money fer somethin' or other—now this, now that, now somethin' else. She make me poor dis way, dat's what she will." "Why, Uncle Josh," queried his listener, in a surprised tone, "your wife doesn't appear to be extravagant. She dresses plainly. What does she spend so much money for?" "Well, boss," replied the old darky, "you see, it's dis way. I aint give her any yet!" Every congregation has its chronic complainer who thinks the Church is entirely too costly an institution, that it makes too many demands, financially, upon him. It is quite within the bounds of the possible that were the truth known such would be found to bear some spirit of kinship to Uncle Josh.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

A SOUTHERN PRODUCT.

Originated in North Carolina, manufactured in Tennessee, by Southern men, from Southern products, sold to the nation and soothing and healing the cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and sores of the world, is the record of the well known Family Salve, Gray's Ointment. Its instantaneous healing effect and its soothing relief to skin infections make it almost indispensable in the home. It is antiseptic as well as healing. Telephone your druggist. If he hasn't it send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and you will receive a liberal sample FREE by return mail postpaid.—Adv.

AN ILLUSTRATION.

In crossing the Atlantic some years ago we were overtaken by a gale of wind. The roar and confusion was terrific. The spray from the crests of the waves blew upon the face with almost force enough to blister it. The noise of the waves howling and roaring and foaming was almost deafening. But when I stepped into the engine-room everything was quiet. The mighty engine was moving with quietness and stillness in striking contrast with the roar without. It reminded me of the peace that can reign in the soul while storms and tempests are roaring without.—C. G. Finney.

Skin Diseases

such as Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter, Itch, Acne, etc., are caused by parasites. To properly treat these diseases, you must kill the parasites. Tetterine is extensively prescribed by the best physicians because it kills these parasitic germs, thereby putting an end to skin troubles. It is a fragrant salve and is absolutely harmless. Ask your druggist for it. 50c a box. By mail from SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

A PROGRESSIVE PESSIMIST.

A pessimist was enumerating the trials and troubles of the Church. Speaking of the problem of attendance upon prayer meeting, he said: "Some years ago it was the bicycle that kept folks away from Church; later it was the automobile, while in the future it will be the flying machine. Then Church members, as they fly over the church spire, will look down—

" 'And shout while passing through the air,
Farewell, farewell, sweet hour of prayer.' "

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's.

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 60 cents.

SOME THINGS NEEDED.

Teachers and parents need three P's in their lives: prayer, patience, and perseverance. In guiding the lives of their children they will find three other P's of very real help: preparation, purpose, and presentation. We suggest that you spend a few minutes upon each of these words, in connection with your troublesome children, and what you want to develop in their souls, and see how greatly they widen your conception of their needs and your power to help them.—Christ Church Messenger.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth), into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have a full pint—a family supply—of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

RECIPROCITY.

There is an intimate and vital connection between the grateful and the trusting spirit. The thankful becomes the trustful spirit in view of what seems privations, losses and adversities. The plains of sand seem to be in more need of rains than the cultivated fields and gardens. Yet when the rains fall on the sandy plain, there are no signs of refreshing there; but when they fall on the grass or grain or flowers, all these things, as if responsive, revive and rejoice in the blessing—which is an emblem of human life.—Edwin Pond Parker.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the ruptnre has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pulleu, Carpenter, 862D Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Watch the Baby!

If he is fretful, restless and out of sorts, you can trace the cause to his stomach and liver. If the bowels do not act regularly there is a possible danger of serious illness. Constipation, if allowed to continue, may produce self-poisoning or auto-intoxication, and this condition should be promptly rectified. The best general tonic for the baby or for the older folks is Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, a purely vegetable compound. It contains no Calomel or other injurious drugs. Highly recommended for babies and growing children. It excites and invigorates sluggish livers and puts you on your feet again. Buy a bottle and keep it handy. Price 50c. For sale by the best druggists. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

ELECTRIC FAN IMPROVED.

In a new type of electric fan, the usual propeller blades are replaced by coils of sheet metal forming one cylinder within another. When in use near the ceiling, it gently sucks up the cool air near the floor and rapidly circulates it throughout the room. Its action is strikingly different from that of the propeller fan, which drives violently downward the heated air near the top of the room. The ventilating effect is claimed to be greatly increased, while the gentle draught, though cooling so effectively, is scarcely perceptible, and raises no dust from the floor. In halls and factories, or other closed spaces containing many persons, it is expected to yield especially favorable results.—Times-Picayune.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT OF STUDY AND PUBLICITY FOR NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Miss Margaret Leach, of Holly Springs, has been selected to succeed Mrs. S. F. Riley as Superintendent of Study and Publicity. It was with deep regret that we learned of Mrs. Riley's resignation from the work, for she was so capable and always so ready to render any assistance to us. We shall miss her efficient service as well as the cheeriness which radiated from all of her communications. We pray God's richest blessings upon her in her new field of labor.

To the new Superintendent, Miss Leach, we extend a hearty welcome, and we feel sure that her work in this department will prove helpful, and that she will be of especial value to the women of her Conference.

PROGRESS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The Uninted States took over the Philippine Islands about seventeen years ago, and almost immediately Protestant missionaries entered the newly-opened door. Twelve years ago the Evangelical Union was organized for the purpose of securing economy, comity and efficiency in the service of God in the archipelago. Some of the results of this effort are revealed in the following figures: There are today 160 evangelical missionaries in the islands, and a large number of Filipino native helpers. Over 200 young men are in the mission schools preparing for Christian work. There are six mission schools exclusively for women; four boarding schools for boys; six mission printing plants, and twenty student dormitories. There are now over 75,000 evangelical church members and as many more adherents. There is a Young Men's Christian Association building for Americans; one for Filipinos in Manila, another for Filipino students, and a very successful army branch at Fort McKinley. There are two Protestant orphanages, eight hospitals and twenty dispensaries in the islands, operated by the evangelical missions. The American and the British Foreign Bible Societies distributed over 100,000 Bibles and Testaments last year in the Philippines, printed in twenty languages and dialects. This is in a land where, twenty years ago, it was a crime for Filipinos to own or read a copy of the Bible, and where a colporteur was imprisoned and then deported for selling the Scriptures.—The Missionary Review of the World.

Nov. 6.—A Junior Campfire group was organized from the younger members of the senior group.

Nov. 11.—Thirty-three members of the Sunday school attended the great Sunday School Rally at the First Methodist Church on St. Charles Ave. They were delighted with the beautiful building and the inspiring program.

Nov. 19.—The students of the "Home Service Institute" of the Red Cross visited St. Mark's Hall. A lecture on the work was given by the head resident, after which they were personally conducted through the building.

Nov. 20.—All of the volunteer helpers were entertained at St. Mark's Hall. It was the first meeting of all the groups. There were present the pastor, Sunday school superintendent, teachers, physicians, musicians, scoutmaster, Industrial School workers, and those of the Domestic Science Department. Besides the program arranged, other interesting features were given. Before leaving, all joined in singing "America."

Nov. 25.—The Junior Missionary Society gave its Week of Prayer program. Fourteen children had a part in the exercises. The Gulf Coast work and Medical Missions in China were well presented by children dressed as deaconesses and missionaries.

Supplies.

A box of towels was received from the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of Slidell, La. Two subscriptions for magazines have been received for the new reading room. The supply of clothes in the store-room is very low. A hint to the wise.

SOME ACTIVITIES FOR WAR RELIEF.

The St. Joseph Wesley House reports the following: "At the first call for knitters in the early spring a club was organized at the Wesley House. Through hot weather and everything else that has come, pressing demands for both time and money, the work of knitting for the Navy League has been going on. Until the first of August yarn was supplied by the club, but since that time it has been furnished by the League. During the last two months the following garments have been finished and sent in: Twenty-eight vests, five scarfs, eight helmets, six pairs of wristlets.

THE MERIDIAN WESLEY HOUSE.

The Mothers' Club of the Wesley House at Meridian, Miss., with other mothers of the neighborhood, are knitting and sewing for the Red Cross. The meetings are held at the Wesley House, but some take their work home with them. The Hearthfire girls are knitting squares for the soldiers' blankets. This shows the heart of the women of our cotton mill districts.

You Needn't keep on feeling distressed after eating, nor belching, nor experiencing nausea between meals. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures dyspepsia—it strengthens the stomach and other digestive organs for the proper performance of their functions. Take Hood's.—Adv.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS.

Spouting drinking fountains have been hailed as a great sanitary advance, but tests at the University of Minnesota of seventy-seven fountains of fifteen different types have shown all to be possible sources of infection. H. A. Whittaker, of the Minnesota State Board of Health, reports that in eighteen buildings piped with germ-free water 80 per cent of the fountains and the water from 11% of them contained streptococci, the genus of microorganisms that includes germs of pneumonia, erysipelas and other diseases. All fountains having vertical discharges, the lips of users came in contact with them or the water fell from the user's lips back into the supply. A new kind of fountain projects the water at an incline, and has an overhanging shield, and this prevents the drinker from touching either the fountain or the water falling near the supply. This fountain and all water from it were kept free from streptococci.—Times-Picayune.

Cleanliness.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." We are too prone to think that "cleanliness" refers only to the exterior of our bodies. But unless your bowels are kept open and your liver active, you cannot expect to keep your body clean. The perspiration through skin pores is forced to carry off more than its share of the body's impurities. Do not allow constipation to poison you. Cleanse your entire system with Van Lax, which contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to the taste and produces pleasant results. For sale by the best dealers everywhere. In bottles—price 50c. Manufactured by the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

EXCHANGE YOUR OLD BODY FOR A NEW ONE.

You can do it in three weeks and thereby renew your health. This article is written by a physician who has seen it demonstrated in numerous cases and explains how it is done.

Listen: If your weight is one hundred and thirty-three pounds your body contains eighty pounds of water, for according to standard medical books, the human body contains sixty-seven and one-half per cent of water. Now disease is invariably caused by impurities which we call poisons, and these are readily dissolved by the right kind of natural mineral water. Drink ten gallons (eighty pounds) of Shivar mineral water (use no other water for twenty-one days), and you will have exchanged your old body for a new one, so far as the soluble part of it is concerned. The impurities will be dissolved and pass away. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other curable conditions due to impure blood, accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer which appears below. Read the following letter carefully; then sign and mail it:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-J, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

LUZIANNE coffee and Good Cheer go together like Possum and Sweet Potatoes

"When It Pours, It Reigns"

BECAUSE Luzianne makes the best-tasting cup of coffee you ever drank. It's roasted just right. The fragrance—you can't forget it. And the flavor is delicious.

Coffee-lovers know that Luzianne just hits the spot, for it's full of punch and pep.

If you don't think that this good old Luzianne is worth what you paid, then tell your grocer and he'll give you back every cent.
